Blend cream cheese with lemon juice and add 2 tablespoons butter to each package (1-ounce) of cream cheese. To this add one or more of the following: chopped watercress, green pepper or celery; pimiento, green olives, or nuts.

Sardine Spread.

Cream 2 tablespoons lemon juice with ½ pound sweet butter. Spread this on toast or plain whole wheat bread. On top of this place tiny sardines, sprinkle with lemon juice and top with slice of toast or plain whole wheat bread.

"Make-your-own" sandwiches are loads of fun for picnics. Just pack your lunch box with meat loaf or ham loaf already baked at home. Provide the crowd with bread and butter, and let them slice the meat for their own sandwiches:

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Your best bargains during the present can be found in eggs and cheese, so plan to fortify your meals generously with both of these foods.

The campaign to save fats is really getting under way, and it's good policy on your part to turn all excess fats to your butcher.

Economy's yours if you use a variety of meat cuts in planning your menus. Best bargains can be found in the less used cuts such as liver, sweetbreads, heart, kidneys, rump roasts, etc.

Primary or unlimited production in canned fruits is decreed for the following items: peaches and pears (not whole), pectin, fruit cocktail, fruit for salad, and concentrates of grapefruit, lemon, lime and orange.

Ham Picnic Loaf.
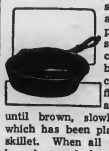
(Serves 10)

½ cup quick-cooking tapioca
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 pound lean ham, ground
1 pound lean pork, ground
2 cups milk



Combine tapioca with remaining ingredients in order given. Bake in a loaf pan in a hot (450-degree) oven 15 minutes, then decrease heat to moderate (350 degrees) and bake 45 minutes longer or until done. Serve hot or cold.

Munching on golden, crisply fried, cold chicken is many a picnicker's dream of the perfect outing. This is easily managed if you fry the chicken the night before, let it stand in the refrigerator, then wrap in waxed paper to take to the picnic the next day:

Country-Fried Chicken.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 3-pound chickens
¾ cup flour
1½ tablespoons salt
1 teaspoon pepper
Lard or shortening for frying
¼ cup butter

Clean chickens and cut in pieces suitable for serving. Mix flour with salt and pepper and place in paper bag. Place several pieces of chicken in the bag, and shake to coat evenly with flour. Take out and fry chicken until brown, slowly, in the lard which has been placed in a heavy skillet. When all the chicken has been browned, dot with butter, cover closely and let cook for about an hour over low heat. Or, if you prefer, after chicken is fried, let cook in a moderate (350-degree) oven until done. Uncover during last 15 minutes of cooking time to brown and crisp chicken.

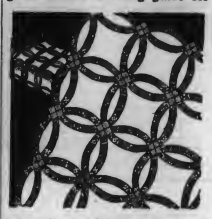
Potato salad made the old-fashioned way with home-cooked dressing is guaranteed to go over big with the family:

Potato Salad.
(Serves 8)

6 potatoes, cooked in jackets
¼ cup french dressing
1 onion, chopped fine
1 cup celery, chopped fine
1½ teaspoons salt
1 recipe cooked dressing

Peel potatoes, and cube. Marinate in french dressing for ½ hour. Combine with other ingredients, and chill thoroughly before serving. Garnish with paprika.

Cooked Dressing.



¼ teaspoon salt
½ tablespoon sugar
3 tablespoons flour
1½ tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon dry mustard
2 egg yolks
¾ cup milk
¼ cup vinegar

Combine dry ingredients. Add egg yolks, blending carefully, then mix in butter, milk and vinegar slowly. Cook until thick in double boiler. Let cool before adding to salad.

In memory of my dear Mother, beloved wife of Rev. A. K. Johnson, who departed this life June 22, 1942—

A REAL MOTHER

There is one who loves you, whatever you do,
In joy or in sorrow, she shares it with you;
She risked her life that you might live
So love and kindness to her you should give;
I am sure you agree, there is no other
Can ever compare with your own dear Mother.

God came one morning and took Mother away,
Our hearts are still sad from that terrible day;
We try to say we know t'was God's will
But our home here is broken and things are so still;
When I think of the past, I can find no other
Like the wonderful home made by dear little Mother.

When we were small she kept us from harm,
We felt so safe, nestled close in her arm;
She taught us to love one another at play
And before going to bed she would lead us to pray;
Her four little girls and their baby brother
Were truly loved by their own dear Mother.

She tried so hard to raise us right,
And we know she spent many a sleepless night;
But she trusted in God to lead her each day
For to live close to Him she knew it would pay;
Her heart was made sad when God took little brother
For he was the only son of our dear little Mother.

She was truly devoted to our dearest Dad
And when he was sick she would feel so sad;
There was nothing for her family she wouldn't do,
As a wife and Mother she was sure true blue;
We might search the world to find another
But none could be sweeter than our own dear Mother.

She believed in everything clean and right
And things that were wrong she liked out of her sight;
She read her Bible and lived it each day
And she walked close to God each step of the way;
She thought not of self, but her motto was "Others,"
Oh why can't this world have more Christian Mothers?

We know we shall meet her if we live close to God
And we want to be led the path she hath trod;
Her life shall live on in hearts every day
For she taught us to live God and not cease to pray;
I am sure we agree there is no other
Can ever compare with a dear Christian Mother.

—Nell Johnson Hunt.

YOUR ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR is working harder than ever right now

Summer's heat means extra duty for your electric refrigerator. The hotter the weather, the longer and harder it works to protect your perishables and to provide you with the added quantities of ice cubes, frozen desserts and cold drinks you need.

No matter how high the temperature soars, you can depend upon your economical electric refrigerator to provide constant, food-saving cold. And although it may be using a little more electricity now, the small added cost is far outweighed by the food savings it makes possible.

ON GUARD 'ROUND THE CLOCK

to safe-guard your food supply. Help your refrigerator do its job more efficiently by defrosting regularly, opening the door as little as possible and allowing leftovers to cool before storing them.

JUNK needed for War

In the attics and cellars of homes, in garages, tool sheds, and on farms, is a lot of Junk which is doing no good where it is, but which is needed at once to help smash the Japs and Nazis.

Scrap iron and steel, for example. Old radiators, lengths of pipe, refrigerators, garbage pails, broken garden tools...

It may be rusty, old "scrap" to you, but it is actually refined steel, with most impurities removed—and can be quickly melted with new metal in the form of pig iron to produce highest quality steel for our war machines.

Even in peacetime our Nation relied on scrap to provide about 50% of the raw material for steel. Now production of steel has gone up, up, UP, until today America is turning out as much steel as all the rest of the world combined.

But unless at least 6,000,000 additional tons of scrap steel is uncovered promptly, the full rate of production cannot be attained or increased; the necessary tanks, guns, and ships cannot be produced.

The rubber situation is also critical. In spite of the recent rubber drive, there is a continuing need for large quantities of scrap rubber. Also for other waste materials and metals like brass, copper, zinc, lead, and tin.

America needs your active assistance in rounding up these materials. The Junk which you collect is bought by industry from scrap dealers at established, government-controlled prices.

Will you help?

First—collect all your waste material and pile it up.

Then—sell it to a Junk dealer, give it to a charity, take it yourself to the nearest collection point, or get in touch with your Local Salvage Committee.

If you live on a farm, consult your County War Board or your farm implement dealer.

Throw YOUR scrap into the fight!

JUNK MAKES FIGHTING WEAPONS

MATERIALS NEEDED

Scrap iron and steel.
Other metals of all kinds.
Old rubber.
Rags, Mani. rope, burlap bags.

Waste Cooking Fats—Strain into a large tin can and when you get a pound or more, sell to your meat dealer.

NEEDED ONLY IN CERTAIN LOCALITIES: Waste paper and tin cans, as announced locally.

NOT NEEDED at this time: Razor blades—glass.

Kidneys Must Work Well-
For You To Feel Well
24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.
Why not try Doan's Pills! You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

CONTROL OF INSECTS

Rotenone can be used for all insects on all vegetables, and although such a program would be somewhat more expensive than using the cheaper arsenicals for the leaf eaters, it might pay in the end. At least, the simplicity of such a program lends itself to consideration.

Rotenone also suffices for the sucking insects. Use in ready-mixed dust, 3/4 or 1% strength. Or, liquid spray may be used, made of rotenone "cream" or concentrate. Rotenone is not poisonous to humans.

PLUTOCRACY vs. DEMOCRACY
—by R. B. Parsley—

Every time a producer allows his logs to be inspected and classified and the price fixed by the manufacturer or his agent, the chances are he (the producer) has lost his opportunity to get the difference in actual commercial values between an average price level of his high grade Veneer logs and the common grades. In other words your Veneer logs are averaged and included with the common grades, at an averaged price level, without regard for the high grades your logs may contain, if any. Do you catch the point?

How much longer will the producer be content to accept an average of 8c per board foot, including his high grade veneer logs, which, as a rule, has an actual commercial value of $4.60 per board foot and upward, depending on mode of manufacture, grade and species involved. It's always too late to lock the barn door after the horse has been stolen.

Pulp and extract woods with a Government price level of $50 a ton of 2,000 lbs. each, 4,480 lbs. per unit of 160 cu. ft. each or two standard cords, now being purchased by the manufacturers at $3.25 per cord, or $6.50 to $8 per unit, f.o.b. cars.

After your logs are cut and delivered to railroad loading point, it means you are bound to accept any price and classification or let them lay and rot, and you are helpless.

How can these conditions be avoided? Answer: Organize as they did many years ago, and hire a competent, experienced grader. I am not seeking that position myself, however, it is my greatest ambition to see thé day when my fellow producers are in a position to demand, and get, at least a fair share of the actual commercial value of their product, based on either board feet or veneer volume contents. A fair and honest classification of grades. This should be at least 1/2S, 2/2S and 5/2S or 1¼, 2¾ and 5½, or actual commercial values, which represent approximately 28c, 60c and $1.50 per board foot, or an average of 3 percent return on commercial values for materials, labor costs and transportation costs.

We boast of free democratic principles and free individual enterprize in America. But our present economic "setup" and social conditions are in a disgraceful state, as I see them, when profiteers are in a position to fix our commodity prices both ways for us, as I have indisputable records to prove—and which is open for anybody's personal inspection.

Are we determined to remain completely and uncompromisingly at the mercy of profiteers, as above stated, and allow our products to be carted away under our eyes without the privilege of even a protest? This is not the case when we are doing business individually with each other. Why then should we fix prices to these manufacturers on all our commodities, including wood products as well as on livestock, etc., between our immediate neighbors and ourselves? Why should we submit to organized economic dictators to fix our prices on what we sell to them, and at the same time insist on fixing prices on our next-door neighbor, when we sell to him? Are we living under Democracy in America, as we so joyfully boast, or Plutocracy — government "of, by and for the rich?" "Coupon Clippers" of untaxed bonds and securities? Think the matter over and then act for your future interests and personal protection.

To the above extent, we producers are being robbed of our Constitutional individual guaranteed privileges, rights and freedom of action by organized economic profiteers, autocrats, etc.

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when Jeff receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. Jeff is to be chief engineer for a newly organized fruit company. They arrive in Tierra Libre to find both Zora and her husband dead, and Jeff suspects they were murdered. Conversations with his employer, Senor Montaya, and with his friends Jerry McInnis, Bill Henderson and Slats Monahan confirm his suspicions that there is something strange going on and that Mitchell and Zora were killed because they knew too much. Now on a tour of inspection with Montaya he is troubled by the apparently unfriendly attitude of Henderson and Monahan. A talk with Monahan reveals that he, too, suspects something is wrong.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VII

The trip down river to Tempujo was a quick one, running with the current. In the car going back to San Alejo they stopped but once—at the culvert and cribbing on which Henderson's crew was still at work.

Curt had to talk with Henderson, get behind that reserve he'd met with yesterday, learn some facts he could get his teeth into. Getting warnings was no good unless you knew what they were aimed against.

But he needed a reason for stopping, for the senor was reluctant. Curt told Montaya he wasn't satisfied about the size of culvert being installed.

"It wouldn't take too much strain to wash out that fill," he pointed out. "Better to be safe than sorry."

"Mr. Mitchell passed on the size," the senor remarked.

"And I have respect for his judgment," Curt answered. "Nevertheless, on work for which I'm responsible, I take no one's word until I'm satisfied myself."

Curt clambered down the steep embankment to examine the concrete pipe. He squatted on his heels, Henderson beside him, to make jottings in his little notebook. He measured the flume and hammered on it. An act for "The Dark Lily," for they were not many feet from Montaya. By lowering their heads they could speak in tones that wouldn't carry to the man above.

Curt wasted no time. "You put a note in my bag yesterday?"

"Yes, Curt. Look, Curt, I've got to have a long talk with you. But not here and now, not in front of Montaya."

"We'll manage it soon. Bill, Slats Monahan tells me Mitch was worried for days before his murder. That right?"

"Well-I, yes, Curt, he was."

"What about?"

"I—uh, don't know. He didn't let me in on it."

Henderson's voice had gone flat, lifeless. Curt considered, tried again.

"Why was he in a dither about getting to the Zone?"

Henderson looked startled.

"He wasn't," the lanky man said slowly. "He only . . . I know a fellow there, name of Collins, comes from my home town, and Mitch . . . oh, hell, Curt," Henderson let go disgustedly, "this's why I want to talk to you, to tell you just enough to keep you from messing around about Mitch's murder. I know you from way back when something dirty pops up.

"Anyway, what's done is done and it's no skin off your nose. You keep out of it and I'll give you some darn' good reasons why, soon's we can have a talk. You leave it to me. I know what to do and how to do it, and there's nobody waiting for me with a candle in the window."

"It's no skin off my nose," Curt growled, "unless whatever did for Mitch is a danger to me by taking over his job."

"It won't be if you watch yourself—"

Montaya's feet, shove, crunched on crushed rock as he tested a foothold for the easiest descent.

Curt rocked back on his heels, made another note in his little book, then rose and climbed the embankment. Montaya was patently annoyed but got into the car without a word.

Curt, his foot on the running board, called down to Henderson. "By the way, Bill, try to get up to San Alejo this week-end. Come to dinner Saturday night and meet the kids."

Montaya regained his suavity in a few minutes and began to talk of the work in general and plans for the morrow.

"You have yet to go over the rest of the tract before getting down to work. I should like you to cover it tomorrow and the next day. Unfortunately, I shall not be free."

"It's a lot of territory," Curt said thoughtfully. "Would you use a plane? Is there a place to land on the flats?"

"No," was the snap answer to this. "It will be fatiguing but you can do it by mule. The main drainage canal will take you one full day, and there you can use an outboard motorboat. You can catch the rest on the second day."

"That will bring you to Friday, no? Friday and Saturday you can study what you have seen, then we can get together — say Sunday? There is so much to be done, no time to lose."

"Sunday will do very well."

"I am giving you a—ah, a sort of secretary - bodyguard," Montaya went on, carefully. "But you must not be alarmed. I simply do not want anything to happen to you, Mr. Curtis, that is all. Engineers with your background in this work we do not find—you say?—growing on bushes."

Curt waited.

"The man's name is Emilio Vargas. Tomorrow he will report to you. It is my wish that he go everywhere with you when you are out on the job. Everywhere. Please, Mr. Curtis, observe this closely. You will find him a competent stenographer and quite helpful in relieving you of minor details."

Curt pondered. A bodyguard for himself! That seemed to hint at danger to the Chief Engineer. Danger with its roots in business rivalry? Danger, as he'd thought briefly last night, from a personal enemy of Montaya, striking through an important subordinate? That would be a subtle sort of vengeance.

In the morning Emilio Vargas reported at Curt's office. He was a slick looking hombre, with sharp features, olive-tinted skin, snapping eyes. He had pointed teeth, and perfumed pomade glued his black hair flat to his skull. A revolver, a fancy chased affair in a holster that had seen service, hung at his side. From his mouth drooped one of the native, sickly-sweet, brown-jacketed cigarettes.

Curt found Emilio a good guide and untiring in the saddle. Furthermore, the young man was as good at taking dictation—in English—as Montaya had said. So he was an asset. He was also company—of a sort.

In the two days allotted to it, Curt completed his inspection of the engineering work throughout the tract.

On the drainage job he met two more old-timers he'd known when with Associated. They were cut off from contact and hadn't heard of Zora Mitchell's death until Curt spoke of it. However, Emilio was close at hand and there was no discussion to be had with either Steve Harvey or Herb Lawson aside from shop talk.

Friday morning he settled down in his office to a study of maps and progress reports, hydrographic charts, and various data of his own, hoarded from his tour of work north of the Negro a few years ago. Much of it applied here.

By noon on Saturday he was ready to start dictating memoranda to Emilio. This took three hours, during every minute of which the native smoked his brown cigarettes. Loosely packed, they burned fast, ash flew about at the slightest breath of air. He ran through two packages of them in this time, and Curt marveled that the man was able to work with his right eye constantly screwed against the smoke which curled up.

First impressions, suggestions, questions of the work at last on paper and out of the way, Curt phoned Montaya for an appointment early on Sunday, then went home. It was the first breathing space since arriving six days ago.

He played with the children for two hours. Curt took quickly to Zora Mitchell's small daughter. The shyness of her first few days had worn off in the lively company of Buddy and Chuck, and her loneliness for her mother was gradually fading. Lee had seen to that.

When it came time for the children's supper, Lee broke up the play in brisk fashion. She sent Curt to the shower, took charge of the children, and by the time Curt had had his bath and a cocktail, and was stretched out on the bed for a few minutes of relaxation before dressing, the youngsters were out of the way for the night.

Dinner time approached. This was the night Bill Henderson would be in for dinner. And that talk! Curt was thinking, as he blew smoke rings ceilingward. He'd make the mug talk! But how to do it without Lee wising up?

Thought of Lee was his Nemesis. She came breezing into the room, shooed him off the bed, made him dress.

"We'll give Bill Henderson one hour, no more," said she firmly, laying out a print dress. "I've planned dinner so. Unless he's changed . . ."

"Wrong this time, honey," Curt said cheerfully. He tucked a clean sport shirt inside his fresh white ducks. "Tell you what, I'll bet you the evening at the clubhouse that Bill gets here in one piece and sober. I'll even dance with you without an argument."

Lee snapped him up on that. "It's a bet and I'll hold you to it, Mastermind, see if I don't! I can get Ines to stay this evening, in case the kids wake up." She whipped up the print dress, put it back, and pushed hangers back and forth. "Let's see, something to dance in . . ."

She selected a pastel organdie and Curt found himself pressed into service, to fasten the rhinestone shoulder buckles.

The hour passed and Bill Henderson hadn't arrived. Curt became gradually quieter during that time, fiddling unconsciously with his pipe. Lee knew the signs, knew he was puzzled and disturbed. She ragged him some about giving her the evening so glibly, and made a show of getting out his coat and panama—"Just to be ready." But they sat down to dinner alone.

The meal was not yet over when the phone rang. Lee answered.

"For you, dear," she said, one hand over the transmitter. Her nose wrinkled as at a bad odor. "The Dark Lily.' And you're not to go back to the office tonight, you hear me? You lost fair and square, and it's my evening. We're going to the club!"

Curt frowned as he took the receiver from her. Montaya's words were crisp and direct.

"I have just been told from Tempujo that Mr. Henderson has had an accident. He is unconscious and sinking rapidly. As you are an old friend—"

"I'll be right along. You're going, of course? Can we use a plane?"

"Sorry, we have no lights at the Tempujo field for night landing. You can get to the station in five minutes, no? Bueno. Dr. Berry has been notified—"

"I'll be there!"

Curt sprinted to the bedroom and returned huckling on his gun belt. He grabbed up his coat and hat, gave Lee a flying kiss and explained on the way to the door.

"Henderson. Accident. Tempujo. Be back when I get here."

Besides the mestizo driver in the car that clanked down the mountainside, there was Montaya, spotless as usual from fresh white shoes to panama; Dr. Berry, the American head of the hospital; a young burnt-blond fellow named Lister, carrying camera, flash, tripod and finally, Curt.

Montaya was saying: "It would appear he was drunk . . . you know his failing, Mr. Curtis. So long as he did his job I had no objection, but this . . ."

There had been a brief rain tonight, clearing the atmosphere. Though the airfield was a full kilometer away, grinding around a curve Curt saw plainly the lighted swimming pool and could make out tiny figures diving. Two more human units were at tennis on the bright court.

Very little was said during the run to Tempujo, which took scarcely thirty minutes. On the lower badly ballasted stretches the car rocked dangerously. Young Lister chewed gum incessantly, vigorously; Montaya smoked his oversize Turkish cigarettes, lighting one from another—he was on his third as they hit the many switches of the storage yards. Dr. Berry dozed.

Henderson was stretched out on an examination table in the dispensary, in charge of Dr. Fisher, a newly graduated intern from the States. Dr. Fisher's chief duties at Tempujo had been dishing out quinine or handaging minor hurts of the laboring force, and the present case seemed to be beyond him.

But so was it beyond his superior. Dr. Berry straightened up after an examination of only a few seconds, to shake his head.

"Hopeless," he said bluntly. "Both legs broken, and several ribs—at least five or six; a blow on the back of the head that has probably fractured the skull; the chest caved in, one lung punctured. It's a wonder he wasn't killed instantly—or that he's lived this long."

Bill Henderson was still alive, though unconscious, and frothing pink at the mouth in his wracking efforts to breathe. He'd lost a great deal of blood. Young Fisher kept swabbing the lips clean with gauze.

"He can't last more than a few minutes at most."

Still about Henderson was the smell of raw whiskey. Curt's thoughts were bitter. He'd seen so many men — good men, clean of heart—lose out here in the tropics because of drink. Now, Bill Henderson. And only a few days ago Bill had said he'd been on the wagon for some time. To be sure, "some time" with him might not mean what it would to another, but would he have gone to drinking tonight, when expected for dinner at San Alejo? That wasn't like the old Bill.

POISON IVY

Shortly after I graduated, while on a vacation I was called from the mainland to an island in one of our northern lakes.

Dr. Barton

No word was sent as to the nature of the illness but as I had my bag with me I felt reasonably sure of giving the patient some help.

On arrival, I found that it was a youngster of ten with a well developed case of poison ivy. I found in my bag some carron oil—equal parts of lime water and linseed oil—used at that time for the treatment of burns. I reasoned that the lime water would relieve the itching and that the linseed oil, itself also soothing, would hold the lime water against the skin for a longer time. I also prescribed small doses of Epsom salts which would not only get some of the poison out of the system but would draw a lot of water out of the eruptive blisters in the skin.

When I went over to the island a few days later, the skin was almost clear and the itching had stopped. The mother told me that this was the quickest recovery the child had ever made. Since that time I have heard of other physicians who have had success with carron oil in the treatment of poison ivy.

The old method of treating burns with carron oil is not in use now, as tannic acid has been found more effective. And what is most interesting to me is that this new remedy for burns is now being used with great success in the treatment of poison ivy, as reported by the United States public health service. After several experiments it has been found that a 10 per cent solution of tannic acid in water, applied to the inflamed skin, after skin has been cleansed with alcohol, stops the itching and discomfort within one or two days and all symptoms disappear within the end of a week. The application should be made by a physician or one qualified to recognize poison ivy, as "it might do harm if it were used on some skin inflammation that was not poison ivy."

What about preventing poison ivy?

Science News Letter reports that the National Institute of Health has developed a vanishing cream containing 10 per cent sodium perborate. The cream is rubbed into the skin before going into the fields or woods all day. The vanishing cream should be made up fresh every two weeks. Cream is washed off with soap and water every four hours and fresh cream applied.

Electrocardiograms For Heart Patients

Until recently if an individual had a heart stroke—coronary thrombosis—he was considered doomed and if he carried sickness insurance the company expected to pay this insurance until he passed away. However, as so many of these heart patients recover, some never having a second attack and others having several attacks, the insurance companies are stressing the clause in the contract which states that the disability must be total and permanent.

In an article in Medical Record, Arthur J. Brothers, New York city, advises the lawyer and the physician representing the patient that an electrocardiogram of the heart and also X-rays (fluoroscope) examination should be made as soon as possible after attack occurs as this would not only show the actual condition of the heart but would be necessary and valuable evidence should court proceedings follow later.

"In representing a heart patient an attorney is usually confronted with two problems. He must first prove that there has been a thrombosis (blockage of the blood vessels supplying heart muscle) and next that the patient cannot or must not return to work. It often happens that a physician was not consulted at the time of the thrombosis and when he does enter the case, the evidence of the event is no longer fresh and clear. The attorney may also find that a physician was promptly consulted but did not realize the need of obtaining and preserving an electrocardiogram which is 'objective' evidence of the damage done to the heart."

Electrocardiograms should be taken five days and again ten days after the event.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What can I do to increase my height? I am nineteen years of age and am only five feet four inches tall.

A.—All you can do is get more rest. If the parent you most resemble is short, you are likely to be short. However, there are methods of making yourself taller by use of certain types of shoes, etc. Machines used for straightening spines sometimes add an inch to the height.

Lesson for August 9

ABRAHAM'S INTERCESSORY PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 18:23-33.

GOLDEN TEXT—The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.—James 5:16.

Prayer has been the subject of thousands of hooks of sermons without end; yet how little it is actually practiced. Conferences are held to discuss it, and they attract large audiences, but at prayer meetings we find only a handful.

We are sura that "prayer changes things," and we agree that it is the most powerful force at man's disposal, but we go right ahead trying to change things in our own strength "O what peace we often forfeit,

O what needless pain we bear,
All because we do not carry
Everything to God in prayer!"

Our lesson from the life of Abraham stresses one important phase of prayer—prayer for others.

I. The Nature of Intercessory Prayer.

1. It Is a Privilege.

We speak of the burden of prayer, but let us also recall that it is a privilege. Abraham had been honored by a visit from the Lord. The covenant had been renewed and a son promised (Gen. 18:1-16). Then the Lord, because of His friendship with Abraham, shared with him (v. 17) His purpose of judgment on wicked Sodom and Gomorrah.

How glorious to be on such intimate terms with God—to know Him and to know His plans and purposes. Would you enjoy having such fellowship? You may through Jesus Christ and through the study of God's holy Word.

2. It Is a Duty.

Privilege brings corresponding responsibility. The two men went toward Sodom, but "Abraham stood yet before the Lord" (v. 22), to pray for the wicked cities.

Those who know God's plans are to share them in prayer. Those who have audience with the King of Kings are those to carry the blessed burden of prayer for others as well as for themselves.

Are we praying for our nation, for its President and leaders; for our city, for our church, our families, our children, our friends? The deeper the need, the greater the wickedness, the more we need to pray. If we as Christians do not pray, who will pray?

3. It Is a Reality.

Some modern religious leaders would take all reality out of prayer by making it a sort of spiritual exercise which operates only on the soul of the one who prays, giving him new strength and a sense of well being. Undoubtedly the very fellowship with God which is inherent in true prayer is spiritually beneficial; but prayer is objective, not merely subjective. It deals with nations and cities, men and women, problems and sin and sorrow. It concerns every need of man—physical, mental and spiritual.

II. The Spirit of Intercessory Prayer.

1. Unselfish.

Abraham had the assured blessing and promises of God. The cities were wicked and unrepentant. If he had taken the attitude of many church folk, he would have said, "It serves them right. Wipe out their wickedness." But Abraham prayed for them in complete unselfishness. Can those who know the spirit of Christ be selfish in prayer?

2. Bold and Courageous.

Note the reverent boldness with which Abraham pleaded the cause of the cities. God is not displeased to have us press our cause in prayer; in fact, the Bible reveals that He frequently answers according to the earnestness with which men pray. He has always honored and used men of holy courage.

3. Persistent.

No one—not even God—likes a "quitter." Remember those who were heard for their importunity? (Luke 11:8; 18:1-8). Many pray like the little boys on Halloween. They ring the bell and run.

Abraham persisted; fifty, forty-five, forty, thirty, twenty, ten—perhaps he should not have stopped even there. God who saw his persistent faith went the rest of the way and saved the only four who could he saved, and even of those, three were infected with the wickedness of the place.

"Let us not be weary in well doing" as we pray, "for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not" (Gal. 6:9).

III. The Result of Intercessory Prayer.

God had to destroy the cities. There are some kinds of violent infection which must be destroyed by fire for the sake of others. Out of the destruction, however, God did deliver the righteous Lot.

God hears and answers prayers. That is not only the testimony of His Word, but of countless Christian men and women down through the ages even to our day. The one who would deny the efficacy of prayer must face an overwhelming flood of authenticated answers.

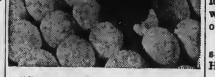
Potato Breeders Make Test Plantings



Disease-Free Potatoes Only Control of Ring Rot

How new knowledge of plant science can lift some of the load from the mind of a worried farmer is illustrated by results of test plantings reported by potato breeders of the U. S. department of agriculture.

Ring rot is a serious potato disease. It appeared in Canada in 1931, in Maine in 1932, and spread rapidly causing serious crop losses. The only effective control is to plant nothing but disease-free seed potatoes. Traces of the disease in seed stock are difficult to detect and may lead to serious losses. Ring rot has been reported from 37 states.

If scientific knowledge had not advanced in the last 100 years, says Dr. E. M. Salter, chief of the bureau of plant industry, the potato industry and the country generally might well worry over the possibility of a potato famine such as Ireland had in the Hungry Forties.

Potato specialists do not know of a gold commercial variety that will grow in spite of ring rot. But authors of the article report a trial of

"Come on out, guys and gals, see what's cookin'," says this newly hatched chick waiting for pals.

54 varieties artificially inoculated to insure a thorough test. Nearly all were severely diseased, but a precious few came through uninjured.

Various Spuds Tested.

These include two imported varieties "not commercially promising" and several seedlings. Half the hybrids of the cross between "President"—imported from England—and the valuable American variety, Katahdin, showed no infection. Several other seedlings showed signs of resistance.

These tests indicate that resistance to ring rot can be inherited by the potato. The "President" variety is not commercially valuable, but from a breeding standpoint it looks to be almost priceless. Based on these tests and their experience it should not be very difficult to produce varieties resistant to ring rot with good commercial qualities.

Alfalfa

Although alfalfa is a fairly recent arrival in the fields of the United States and Canada, it is one of the oldest crops known to man and flourished in Asia and Europe for centuries. For the last 20 years, our farmers have given it great preference and the acreage has nearly doubled.

Being especially rich in vitamins, it seems to offer good possibilities for industrial uses. A pilot plant is soon to be set up to extract pigments from dried alfalfa leaves. These will be used in coloring soaps and foods and in preparing medicines.

Some experiments also have been made in extracting alfalfa juice for human consumption so it may sometime appear on our breakfast tables. At Michigan State college, scientists have been working on the problem on making plastics out of alfalfa in the same way that soybeans are utilized.

At present, the chief industrial product is alfalfa meal which is merely hay ground into coarse particles which can be fed to animals without loss, and can be shipped more cheaply than baled hay. It can be used in mixed feeds for such small animals as rabbits and poultry. Some of the meal in refined form has been used in breakfast foods for humans and experiments have been made to add carotene extraction to tonics and candy.

THESE soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen and coast guardsmen have all the work they can handle, but they still have time enough left for arguments, debates and rebuttals of one sort or another.

Grantland Rice

Here is a camp query that covers practically every detail of baseball:

"To help clear up a lot of arguments we've had in this camp would you mind answering the following: Who is (1) the fastest pitcher baseball ever knew; (2) the hardest hitter; (3) the best natural hitter; (4) the best base runner; (5) the best infielder, fielding and hitting?"

Here are the answers from this lookout:

1. Fastest ball pitcher—Walter Johnson, with Lefty Grove second.

2. Hardest hitter—Babe Ruth.

3. Best Natural hitter—Joe Jackson, with Nap Lajoie close.

4. Best base runner—Ty Cobb, going away. Max Carey next.

5. Best infielder—Honus Wagner, great infielder and greater hitter.

Ranking Golfers

Here's another barracks request, this time from a group of golfers:

"How would you rank the golfers from the viewpoint of stroke-making, all-around skill, winning or losing temperaments, putting? If we can get this settled it will shut off a lot of noise in this camp."

1. The best stroke-maker I ever saw, the straightest player, was Harry Vardon.

2. The best combination of stroke-making, hard work and putting belonged to Bobby Jones.

3. The best golfing temperaments I ever ran across were Johnny McDermott, Jerry Travers and Walter Hagen. McDermott and Travers were marvels at concentration. Hagen had less tension. He also had as much golf smartness.

The two best putters I ever saw were Walter Travis and Jerry Travers. In modern play this distinction goes to Horton Smith. Paul Runyan is close.

I've seen Harry Vardon play many rounds of championship golf and I can't recall ever seeing him play a shot from the rough or from a bunker. He was a bad putter, with a nervous stab. It was nothing unusual to see him take three putts from 10 or 12 feet.

About Bobby Jones

Capt. Bobby Jones, taking his training at Mitchel Field before being stationed in a southern sector, believes he worked harder around a course in championship play than anyone else. He was supposed to be "The Machine."

"I was far from this," he said recently. "Machines don't take sevens. Gene Sarazen used to say you can't take a seven on any hole and win. I had three sevens in my last round at Winged Foot in the National Open of 1929. I've had a flock of sevens, which meant I had to work my head off on the other holes.

Gene Sarazen

"The oddest seven I ever took was at Hoylake in the 1930 British Open. I was only 20 yards off the green in two, got into no trouble, actually didn't miss a shot, and yet took five strokes to get down for my seven here. How could this happen? The cup was on a mound. My first chip shot ran up fairly close, stopped, and then rolled back. My second one slipped by the cup, caught a deep slant and trickled 30 feet on beyond. Then I took three putts.

The Worst Temptation

"Championship golf," Bobby said, "is largely resisting the temptation to quit after one or two bad holes. You begin to feel you can't win, so why keep on punishing yourself? The winner has to work for it all the way, take his beating here and there, and then continue to work, harder than ever.

"I believe the hardest-working golfer I ever saw is Ben Hogan. Ben works over every type of shot, even the ones that look simple. He takes nothing for granted.

"Hogan has made no attempt to master any variety of shots. He sticks to a few simple ones, concentrates on these, and never gets discouraged. Byron Nelson is another hard worker, although Byron can play more shots. But no one works quite as hard, round after round, month after month, as Hogan works.

"I had 18 years of tournament golf, from 12 to 30, and I know the nerve and mental besting one has to take if you are out to win. Just one lapse is enough to cost two strokes. There never was a golf shot that played itself."

Children's Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

TO COMFORT GRANDFATHER FROG

WHEN the Merry Little Breezes of Old Mother West Wind had left Grandfather Frog in the Long Lane where Farmer Brown's Boy had dropped him they had hurried as fast as ever they could to try to find some of his friends to come help him. Not one of them had been successful. No one was at home and no one was in any of the places where they usually were to be found. The Merry Little Breezes looked and looked. Then one by one they sadly turned back to the Long Lane.

When they got there they found Striped Chipmunk, who had cut the string with which Grandfather Frog's legs had been tied, and who now was scolding Farmer Brown's Boy as fast as his tongue could go.

"Where is he?" cried the Merry Little Breezes excitedly.

Striped Chipmunk stopped scolding long enough to point to Farmer Brown's Boy.

"We don't mean him, you stupid; we can see him for ourselves! Where's Grandfather Frog?" cried the Merry Little Breezes, all speaking at once.

"I don't know," replied Striped Chipmunk, "and what's more I don't care! He wouldn't take my advice and go back to the Smiling Pool where he belongs, and now I don't care what becomes of him."

However, they did manage to blow an old shingle in.

Now, this wasn't true, for Striped Chipmunk isn't that kind. It was mostly talk, and the Merry Little Breezes knew it. They knew that Striped Chipmunk really thinks a great deal of Grandfather Frog, just as they do. So they pretended not to notice what he said or how put out he seemed. After a while he told them that he had set Grandfather Frog free and that he then had started for the spring on the other side of the Long Lane.

"Hello, Grandfather Frog!" they shouted as they peeped into the spring. "How do you like your new home?"

Grandfather Frog made no reply. He just rolled his great goggly eyes up at them, and they were full of tears.

"Why — why — Grandfather Frog, what is the matter now?" they cried.

"Chugarum," said Grandfather Frog, and his voice sounded all choky, "I can't get out."

Then they noticed for the first time how straight and smooth the walls of the spring were and how far down Grandfather Frog was and they knew that he spoke the truth. They tried bending down the grasses that grew around the edge of the spring, but none were long enough to reach the water. If they had stopped to think they would have known that Grandfather Frog couldn't have climbed up by them anyway. Then they tried to lift a big stick into the spring, but it was too heavy for them and they couldn't move it. However, they did manage to blow an old shingle in, and this gave Grandfather Frog something to sit on, so that he began to feel a little better. Then they said all the comforting things they could think of. They told him no harm could come to him there unless Farmer Brown's Boy should happen to see him.

"That's just what I am afraid of!" croaked Grandfather Frog. "He is sure to see me if he comes for a drink, for there is no place for me to hide."

"Perhaps he won't come," said one of the Little Breezes hopefully, but all the time he knew better.

"If he does come you can hide under the piece of shingle and then he won't know you are here at all," said another.

Grandfather Frog brightened up. "That's so!" said he. "That's a good idea, and I'll try it."

Then the Merry Little Breezes promised that one of them would keep watch and let him know when Farmer Brown's Boy was coming, and all the others started off to have another hunt for someone to help Grandfather Frog out of this new trouble.

Select Young Hawthorn

If you plan to move a native hawthorn from the pasture to the yard, select a young plant as indicated by a small stem and one which shows no signs of grazing by livestock. Very often the native hawthorn has a strong and long lateral root system. One should dig well away from the plant to locate roots. Save as much of the lateral roots as possible and move the tree with a ball of earth in early fall after frost, or in the spring as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

Telling time in the Navy is on the 24-hour system. Morning hours are from one to twelve, but afternoon hours are from 1300 to 2400 (midnight). So if you ask a sailor the time and he says "seventeen," subtract 12 and you get five o'clock in the afternoon. It's simpler if you ask him what cigarette he smokes. Chances are he'll say: "Camel," for Camel is the favorite cigarette among Navy men as well as among men in the Army, Marines, Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) Local dealers are featuring Camel cartons as gifts for men in the service from the folks back home.—Adv.

HORSE SHOW IS A FEATURE OF FAIR

A horse show "open to the world" will be a feature of the 1942 4-H and Utopia Club Free Fair, according to Frank Kelly and A. H. (Pete) Jones, Chairmen of the Horse Show committee.

The show will include a Plantation walking horse class, best draft team, best draft horse, best draft stallion, best pony, best girl rider and best boy rider.

The horse show this year is planned mainly for exhibition of pleasure and using horses, and for the best draft stock that will ordinarily be found on our farms. The exhibits are open to everybody and all who can are urged to compete. There are no entry fees and the prizes are in line for those who may want to exhibit for the sport of showing and for those who want to see better stock in the county.

WITH THE REDS

Cincinnati,O.—The Red's next appearance at Crosley Field will be next Tuesday night, and Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, when they entertain the Pittsburgh Pirates. Thursday, Aug. 20 will be ladies' and girls' day. Wedesday will be Knothole day.

Preceding Tuesday's night contest, the A. A. U. will conduct a five-event track meet, consisting of 100-yard dash, quarter mile, half mile, one mile, and 880-yard relay.

In Fulton county it is estimated that there will be 50 percent more pullets than last year.

Verona Church To Observe Anniversary

Former parishioners living in Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky communities will be asked to join in the reunion outing to be held on the St. Patrick Church grounds, Verona, on Labor Day, September 7th. The Rev. John T. Jobst, pastor of the church at Verona, which also has a mission church in Walton, has announced that the celebration will observe the 85th anniversary of the parish.

Edward J. Walton is general chairman of the outing-celebration committee.

There will be a chicken dinner served from 11 a. m. to 8 p. m., and card and social parties at 2 and 8 p. m.

Father Jobst says that men and women who were born in the parish and now live in other communities are being asked to organize "family parties" for the celebration.

There will be a midway of booths and entertainment pavilions.

Magistrate Thomas Carr of Verona will be chairman of the refreshment center. Other committee executives will be announced later.

SURPRISE SHOWER

Mr. and Mrs. George Knox and Mr. and Mrs. Sherrid Wright were recently pleasantly surprised with a shower at their home at Richwood by several of theirfriends.

After gifts were opened, refreshments were served to the following: Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Alford, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Rector and Irma Winifred, of Walton; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lucas, Phyllis Lucas, Mr. and Mrs. Art Blank and daughter Barbara J., Mrs. Lela Hall, Mrs. Charles Doll, Misses Edythe Finnell, Jenny Carter and Ruth Farrell, Mr. and Mrs. John Laubisch of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Barnes of Ft. Mitchell; Mr. and Mrs. Berry Watson and Mr. and Mrs. Herman Shinker of Cincinnati; Master Jackie Hornbeck of Jackson, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Sherold Wright and daughter, Donna Joy, and Mrs. Emma Kemper.

Thomas Smith, Carroll county, and Harris Park, Madison county, Kentucky 4-H club boys, took part in the August 1 National Farm and Home Hour.

Ft. McClellan, Ala.
July 30, 1942.

Misses Anna and Mollie Chapman
Walton, Kentucky.

Dear Folks—

I was commissioned July 6th and ordered to active duty the next day. I checked in here Thursday, just one week ago today. This has been one of the busiest and happiest weeks of my life. Of course I miss my family and friends. But we have a job to do. All of us have. It is my duty to fulfill my obligation. I have built up a tolerance for the inconveniences to which we must submit. I am upheld by a feeling that I am doing my part.

The second day I was here I was made Regimental Chaplain. We have about three thousand men in the Regiment. I have three fine enlisted men who are Chaplains' Assistants, and I have two Chaplains assigned to assist me. They are both Baptists from Texas.

My day begins at 5:30. I am at the office at seven or before and I work until ten at night. There is a lot of correspondence to do. Many conferences with the other officers. Many hours of conferences with men in trouble, homesick, and heartsick. Many hospital visits to make.

I preached Sunday morning to a fine crowd of men in the Regimental Chapel. We have a pipe organ and a fine choir. We preached in the First Baptist Church of Anniston, Alabama, which is near here. We had fifty soldiers and a large crowd of civilians in that service. In the morning service, in the Chapel, we had one man saved.

I have been on the rifle range one day and went to the gas field for a gas attack another day.

I have won three soldiers to Christ this week. One from Michigan, one from New York, and one from Virginia.

I am happy in the Lords' service. It seems all of my life God's hand has been shaping and molding me for the great task to which he has called me in this hour of world upheaval.

Greater and better things are about to be thrust upon me. I cannot tell you what they are, but the responsibilities and burden of the tasks pointing in my directions overwhelm me.

With love to all my friends.

John G. Chapman,
1st Lt., Chaplain

In Weekly News Analysis, six timely topics will give you something to think and talk about, as well as informing you on matters of national and international importance.

Taxes and Inflation are two vital subjects over which more than 2,000 business men drafted into service, are burning the midnight oil in Washington. News Analyst Baukhage's comment under Washington Digest in this issue of the Advertiser, says that history's biggest tax bill can't meet War Demands. In addition to his own comment he gives pertinent suggestions by some of the higherups.

One pound of turnips will serve 28 persons! Don't believe it, eh? And of course you remember the "Candy Mountain" song. Well two and a half million pounds of candy should make a sizeable mountain; but read about these things in The Washington Merry-Go-Round, by Drew Pearson.

In order to pamper that 'Sweet Tooth' for the duration, read Lynn Chambers' recipes, under Household News, for making sweet, but sugarless pies and cakes. Included are recipes for some other "mouth watering" dishes.

In this week's Sunday School lesson Dr. Harold Lundquist has taken for his text, "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God."—Mat. 5:9. He has interpreted this text in a most interesting manner, applying it in some measure to the present world's conflict. It is worth reading.

Farmers Urged To Buy Coal Now

Farmers who depend on coal for fuel may assure themselves of uninterrupted supplies next winter by placing orders now for delivery as soon as available.

The Office of the Solid Fuels Coordinator for War declares that, due to the effect of war on coal production and transportation, failure to build up stockpiles of coal this summer is risking difficulties in obtaining coal when needed.

Farmers who have wood supplies which can be used as a substitute for other fuel, or to supplement other fuel stocks, have already been urged to do so. But for those who must depend on coal, ordering supplies this summer is the best insurance against winter shortages.

There is enough coal available now especially soft coal which provides th ebulk of the nation's solid fuel, if orders are placed immediately. Indications are that soft coal will not be as readily available after September 1, and that various factors will lessen the opportunity to build up stockpiles. The hard coal industry is already behind in filling orders, but expects to catch up before the fall heating season begins.

A number of factors threaten the future of coal supplies this year:

(1) Transportation.

(2) Labor shortages in the mines.

(3) Shortages of mine equipment.

(4) Shortages of other fuels.

(5) Exceptional demands from unexpected sources.

(6) Difficulties of retail distribution, due to shortages of gasoline, rubber, trucks and truck parts.

SOW GRASS IN THE FALL

Fall seeding of grasses is more certain to give a good stand than spring seeding. The Kentucky Experiment Station recommends that where land is to be seeded in grasses, the seeding be done in the fall. Grasses seeded this fall will furnish considerable pasturage next year, particularly if lespedeza or some other legume is added in the spring.

SPINE INJURED IN FALL

T. C. Pruett fell while working on a building for a Mr. Bank near Boone Lake, last Wednesday. He was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, in the Chambers & Grubbs ambulance, where X-ray pictures revealed a fracture of Mr. Pruett's spine, making it necessary for him to be placed in a cast for about three months.

W. C. T. U. MEETS

The August meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held in the Walton Christian Church on Friday, Aug. 7th. Mrs. J. H. Talley was the leader. The president, Mrs. R. E. Ryle, was not present, due to the illness of Dr. Ryle.

Rev. George S. Caroland gave the devotional. Rev. C. J. Alford and Rev. J. H. Talley were the speakers.

We were glad to welcome four new members and three honorary members. Those who attended were Mrs. Lucy Breeden, Mrs. Thos. Percival, Mrs. R. O. Hughes, Mrs. D. E. Bedinger, Mrs. Grover Young, Mrs. Emma Vest, Mrs. D. K. Johnson, Mrs. Elnora Hodges, Mrs. Wm. Sturgeon, Mrs. Lotta Powers, Mrs. J. H. Talley, Jimmie Talley, Rev. Talley, Rev. Caroland and Rev. Alford.—Rec. Secy.

FATHER OF LOCAL WOMAN DIES AUG. 6

William S. Collins, 82, passed away at his home at Elliston, Ky., on Thursday, August 6th, after an illness of only 41 days. He was born at Elliston, and had spent his entire life in that section. He was a member of the Vine Run Baptist Church.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday morning, Aug. 9, in the Vine Run Church, with the Rev. Ransdall officiating. Burial was in the church cemetery.

Mr. Collins is survived by four daughters, Mrs. J. S. Thornton of Walton, Mrs. Geneva Sipple of Louisville, Mrs. C. W. Salmons of Zion Station, Mrs. Ruth Beach of Elliston; one son, Robert Collins of Elliston; six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

KENTUCKY EXCEEDS JULY'S BOND QUOTA

Ashland, Ky., Aug. 8—Kentucky exceeded its July quota in the sale of war bonds by more than 6 percent, Ben Williamson, chairman of the state committee for sale of the bonds, announced yesterday.

According to official figures received from the Treasury Department, total sales in Kentucky for July were $10,082,999. The quota was $9,594,000. Bond sales amounted to $5,431,000, re reported.

MRS. MARIE KINMAN LEADS IN BOND SALES

Mrs. Marie Kinman, one of the efficient sales ladies of the John R. Coppin Co., Covington, sold $9,873 worth of War Bonds and Stamps during July. Executives of the company awarded Mrs. Kinman a $25.00 bond for her efforts. Mrs. Virginia Murray, second highest in bond sales, received $10.00 in War Stamps.

Coppin employee salse amounted $26,711 during July.

Men Sentenced For Highway Robbery

Judge Ward Yeager sentenced two men to 21 years in LaGrange State Prison Farm on a charge of highway robbery in Boone County Circuit Court at Burlington, Monday.

The men, registered as Harding Mallicot, 23, Burlington, and Bennis Turner, 20, Florence, were apprehended on June 9 by Sheriff Jake Williams between Idlewild and Petersburg. They were charged with having robbed Bailey Johnson of Elsmere, Feb. 19 of $12 and supplies from his moving grocery on the Union and Rabbit Hash road, five miles west of Burlington.

The convicted men, identified by Johnson in court, were said to have been out of the state after the robbery. Sheriff Williams is holding the men in the Boone County jail until their removal to LaGrange.

STOCK BRINGS GOOD PRICES

R. G. Moore, Walton, sold 17 hogs at the Cincinnati Union Stock Yards that averaged 222 pounds at $15.10.

Clayton Percival, Walton, sold 27 lambs at the Cincinnati Union Stock ards that averaged 70 lbs. and brought $14.25.

NEW HAVEN CLASS IN FIRST AID IS COMPLETED

The class in Standard First Aid held at the New Haven school, and taught by Mrs. James C. Layne, has been completed. This class was started on May 28th, and the last class period and final examination was held onJuly28th.

The following people received certificates: Mrs. Ben Perry Tanner, Mrs. Martha L. Huey, John Masters, Mrs. John Masters, Mrs. Marie Pennington, James T. Hatfield, Jr., Mrs. James T. Hatfield, Jr., Mrs. Emily Cleek, John Oliver, Mrs. John Oliver, Austin Gschwind, Mrs. Marie Gschwind.

Throw Your Scrap Into The Fight!

A new Salvage Drive is being launched here, and an urgent appeal is made for scrap materials.

To meet the nation's war needs for scrap iron and steel and other salvage materials, a new intensive drive is being conducted in Boone County to obtain more scrap materials.

As the war becomes more intensive on the various foreign fronts, the need for scrap materials has steadily increased. Although the collection of various types of salvage have already been made, the expanding requirements of the war program have made it necessary to obtain much larger amounts of materials.

In addition to scrap iron and steel, the materials to be collected are brass and other non-ferrous metals, rubber, rope, bags, fats, waste paper and tin cans.

See "junk" ad on page 5.

Waste Fats

Strain your waste fats into wide mouthed tin cans, which are spotlessly clean. Keep in a cool place until you have a pound or more. Then sell to your meat dealer. However, it would be well to inquire from your grocer just when he would rather for you to brinf him your fat.

Tin Cans

See the display of tin cans which have been washed, opened at both ends, flattened and stripped of labels at the following Walton grocerys: D. L. Lusby's, Dan Roberts', Clyde Chipman's, and O. P. Mann's. The big box in the windows is there to receive your cans, which are needed for babbitt metal in the bearings of airplane engines, and for solder. Cans with cone-shaped tops or with special rims, such as evaporated milk cans, which cannot be opened at both ends, or which have had oil, paint or grease in them, are not wanted.

Bring all fats and cans which have been properly prepared to your grocer.

All grocerys in Boone County who are willing to cooperate please call Walton 33.

Mrs. A. H. Gaines and Joe Heiser, chairmen of this campaign, are putting forth every effort to have every article collected. More information will be given next week.

AMERICA! WAKE UP!

A preacher in Bournemouth, England, wrote recently:

"We have been a pleasure-loving people, dishonoring God's day, picnicking, and bathing. Now the seashores are barred; no picnics, no bathing.

"We have preferred motor travel to churchgoing. Now there is a shortage of motor fuel.

"We have ignored the ringing of the church bells calling us to worship. Now the bells cannot ring except to warn of invasion.

"We have left the churches half empty when they should have been filled with worshippers. Now they are in ruins.

"We would not listen to the way of peace. Now we are forced to listen to the way of war.

"The money we would not give to the Lord's work — now it is taken from us in taxes and higher prices.

"The food for which we forgot to return thanks—now is unobtainable.

"The service we refused to give to God—now is conscripted for the country.

"Lives we refused to live under God's control—now are under the nation's control.

"Nights we would not spend in 'watching unto prayer'—now are spent in anxious air-raid precautions.

"The evils of modernism we would not fight—now, see what Germany, the seat of this teaching, has produced!"

There is a solemn warning in this account of conditions in England.

VERONA HOMEMAKERS HOLD ANNUAL OUTING

The Verona Homemakers met for their annual outing at the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. McCormick, Friday, August 7th. The morning hour was spent in happy greetings and pleasant conversation. At noon a most delicious lunch was served. In the afternoon the members were called together for a short business session, at which it was decided that the club sponsor a fish supper, which the public be invited to attend. The date of the event to be Saturday evening, August 29 at the school house. Proceeds of the supper will be used primarily to help defray the cost of the Floral Hall being erected at the new 4-H Club Fair grounds at Burlington.

This business being disposed of the members and guests were invited to participate in some interesting games, which Mrs. McCormick had prepared. A prize was given to Mrs. Pearl Lamn for showing greatest ingenuity in constructing a model of some animal out of certain given materials.

It was a day of happy association and will hold pleasant memories for all who attended. Mrs. G. C. Ransom has invited the club to meet at her home for the September meeting.

Those present to enjoy the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Weaver, Miss Betty Jo Weaver, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Arch Noel, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Lamn, Mrs. Raymond Stephenson and sons, Mrs. Jerdie Harris, Mrs. Ira Harris, Mrs. John Boyer, Mrs. Pearl Allphin, Mrs. Gilbert Stewart, Mrs. Relda Powers and the host and hostess.

RETURNS AFTER 36 YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Whitwam (nee Bernice Johnson) of Houston, Texas, are visiting relatives and friends in Verona, Walton, and Covington this week. Mrs. Whitwam comes back to her native state after an absence of about 36 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dillingham and Mrs. Carl Dill of Louisville, Miss Mayme Lou Mason of Allensville, and James Thomas Mason of Guthrie were weekend guests of their father, T. C. Mason, who is ill, and Mrs. Mason.

Are you entitled to wear a "target" lapel button? You are if you are investing at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay day. It's your badge of patriotism.

Red Communiques Admit Grave Peril As New Flank Attacks Harass Nazis; CIO President Proposes Peace Plan; Cargo Planes Get Qualified Approval

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

One of Uncle Sam's newest weapons for the armored force, the M4 tank, is shown on special demonstration at Fort Knox, Ky. Here the 28-ton tank plows through a barn to demonstrate its ability to negotiate obstacles. It has a 75-mm. cannon in a revolving turret and a completely welded hull.

RUSSIA:
Flank Tactics

While Moscow's official radio was telling the Germans in their own language that the United States and Russia had come to their agreement on the creation of the second front in 1942, Soviet troops were busy with flank attacks on the Nazi forces all along the 300-mile Don river front.

German drives had pushed far beyond Rostov, toward the Caucasus, but the Russians were claiming that their new flank attacks were netting a terrific toll of Nazi tanks and men. At Voronezh, northern anchor of the Don front, the Russians had been holding out doggedly while their columns were being pushed back in the other sectors.

If Germans in the homeland had been listening to the Russian radio tell of the coming of the second front, they heard too that their country would be confronted with 15,000,000 men, 85,000 tanks, 100,000 guns, and 50,000 airplanes. But this was brave talk for even the official Russian communiques admitted the gravity of their nation's peril. Most feared was a Nazi break-through in the center of the Caucasus front. This would more than likely mean that the so-far orderly Russian retreat would stand a chance of being turned into a rout—a result that would be disastrous for the cause of the United Nations.

Soviet officials had other troubles, too. There were reports out of the Don valley that large rings of fifth columnists had been uncovered. Many of the spies in these groups were quickly executed as they were caught trying to co-operate with Nazi parachute troops who were dropping behind the Soviet main lines.

Meanwhile, through England and the United States the cry was getting louder for military officials to establish the much-discussed second front. From widely diversified groups and sections came the urging. There was considerable agitation for this move for many people feared the United Nations would suffer a most severe blow should Russia fail to last the year on the European side of the Ural mountains.

ALEUTIANS:
10,000 Japs

Breaking an official silence, a navy spokesman officially estimated that the Japanese have succeeded in putting "not more than 10,000" troops into the Aleutian island area and at the same time announced there was no evidence that the Pribilof island to the north had been occupied by the Nipponese.

The statement came in answer to a report made by the Alaskan delegate to congress, Anthony J. Dimond, that between 20,000 and 25,000 Jap troops were on the Aleutians and that the Pribilofs had been occupied.

Questioned about Dimond's reports, the spokesman said that "we believe that not more than 10,000 Japanese are in the Aleutians, probably one-half ashore and one-half afloat."

The Japs gained a foothold in the Aleutians on June 3. So far, the navy has confirmed the presence of Japs only on three of the islands: Attu, Agattu and Kiska, at the western end of the chain. The Pribilofs are in the Bering sea, and consist of four islands: St. Paul, St. George, Otter and Waldrus. The latter two are small and uninhabited.

PETRILLO SAYS 'NO':
To Davis Plea

"I cannot grant your request to cancel the notice that the AFM members will not play for transcriptions or records."

With those words, James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, refused a request by Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, to rescind his ban against the making of new phonograph records or radio transcriptions for commercial purposes by union members.

PEACE PLAN: For CIO-AFL

A proposal that the Congress for Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor "initiate discussions regarding possible establishment of organic unity" was made by Philip Murray, CIO president, in a letter to William Green, AFL chief.

Peace proposals between the two organizations have been discussed for several months as a step toward speeding war production. In his letter, Murray proposed the establishment of a committee composed of representatives of both organizations, with an impartial arbitrator, to settle all jurisdictional disputes between the two groups.

Murray named a committee of three to discuss the problem of "organic unity." He named himself, R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO United Automobile Workers, and Julius Emspak, secretary of the United Radio and Machine Workers union.

BEEF:
Two Varieties

In butchershops from the Bronx to Boise there was considerable beefing about beef. Beef was high. Beef was hard to get. What was the trouble?

President Roosevelt told his press conference there were three main reasons for the current meat shortage: (1) this is the off-season for beef; (2) people have more purchasing power now, with which to buy better cuts of meat; and (3) around 4,000,000 men under arms are now eating much more meat than they ever ate on their own dinner tables at home.

Meanwhile Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard reported that there may be some relief in the temporary beef shortage this fall when more cattle are brought in off the range. But other sources looked with disfavor on what effect this would have on the normal spring beef market.

GIANT PLANES:
From Shipyards

There was a new answer to the shipping problems of the United Nations looming on the horizon. It was an unofficial agreement from the War Production board to give the "green light" to plans of Henry K. Kaiser, West Coast shipbuilder, to build giant cargo and troop transport planes in nine of the nation's shipyards.

First hitch to be overcome in the suggested set-up was the granting of authority by military officials to release engines and other parts needed in the building of aircraft for the army and navy.

Donald Nelson, WPB head, appeared to be willing to proceed with the plan if these materials could be obtained without hampering the war effort. This came as a surprise as WPB first voiced skepticism on the plan.

Kaiser's idea calls for the conversion of three shipyards on each coast to produce 5,000 flying boats a year. The ships would be of 100-ton design fashioned after the 70-ton flying boat Mars, now in active use. Support of Glenn Martin, Baltimore bomber builder, Tom Girdler, steel magnate and all others with knowledge of production problems of plane building would be sought, according to Kaiser.

After Kaiser had discussed the idea with Nelson he appeared before a senate military subcommittee to testify and Nelson later issued a statement stating that the WPB was willing to "co-operate to the limit in any practical way for increasing the effectiveness of our . . . transportation systems."

At the same time, James H. R. Cromwell, former U. S. minister to Canada, was proposing that Kaiser be made "czar of air transportation." He said: "If we can't get supplies to the fronts by air transport we are going to lose this war."

AIR MONSTERS:
Things to Come

Reading like a tale from the pen of Jules Verne, the story of two super-gigantic cargo planes was unfolded in Washington by aviation engineers. Senate committees heard the stories.

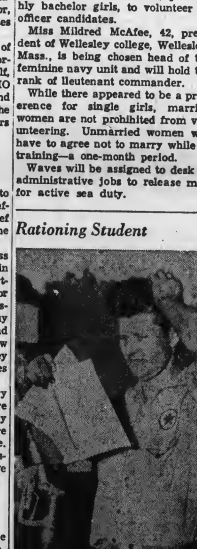
Details of a huge plywood plane were disclosed by Dr. W. W. Christmas, technical aviation engineer. The plywood carrier, weighing 1,120,000 pounds, would be both a cargo and battle plane. It would be a 60,000 horsepower, two hull plane with 400 foot wingspread and with wings 16 feet thick, with a speed of about 350 miles an hour. It would carry 3,000 men. It would carry a rack of torpedoes weighing 20,000 pounds. Dr. Christmas pointed out that the torpedoes would have a striking force of 19,000,000 pounds when dropped. "A battleship deck would be like wet paper when one of these bombs hit it," he said.

The second plane was a revolutionary type of amphibian flying cargo plane, which would be lifted and propelled by a combination of engines, helium gas and air tunnels. The engineers are Horace Chapman Young and Eric Langlands of the Aerodynamics Research corporation.

A single wing combination cargo-fighter-carrier, the plane would have a flying deck of approximately 200 feet, from which 12 fighter planes could take off. It would carry enough helium gas to lift 36 tons and with its engines could lift 70 tons. Four tunnels would run through the wing. Engineers in these tunnels would create a semi-vacuum, whose suction would supply pulling power while the propellers gave it thrusting power. Its speed would be about 200 miles an hour.

LADIES:
Of the Navy

"Waves" is not a new word to U. S. navy men but in the future sailors will have to think twice before using it. For this is the name being given to the Navy's woman's auxiliary, counter-part of the army's WAAC.



Now officially organized, the Waves plan to enlist 10,000. First call was for 1,000 women, preferably bachelor girls, to volunteer as officer candidates.

Miss Mildred McAfee, 42, president of Wellesley college, Wellesley, Mass., is being chosen head of the feminine navy unit and will hold the rank of lieutenant commander.

While there appeared to be a preference for single girls, married women are not prohibited from volunteering. Unmarried women will have to agree not to marry while in training—a one-month period.

Waves will be assigned to desk or administrative jobs to release men for active sea duty.

Rationing Student

John Leigh, gas station attendant in Washington, is pictured studying rationing rules. When Price Administrator Leon Henderson ran out of gas, Leigh refused to fill a can for him. Henderson later proved that such an act would not be a violation of the regulations, but his proof came too late. He already had been forced to take a taxi.

MISCELLANY:

COUSINS: Conklin Mann, New York genealogist who discovered last month that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill are eighth cousins once removed, announced that he had found the President to be a sixth cousin once removed of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

MARKETING: U. S. farmers in the first half of 1942 marketed products totaling $5,773,000,000, according to a department of agriculture estimate. This compares with $4,012,000,000 for the same period in 1941.

FATS: The Office of Price Administration has set a ceiling of four cents a pound on waste kitchen fats now being sold by housewives to retail meat markets in the national salvage campaign.

GASLESS: Pleasure driving is practically a thing of the past in Britain. As of August 1, gasoline is sold only to business and professional automobiles.

DEATH: Maj. Gen. Julius von Berhauth, German tank expert, was killed in action on the Russian front, it was announced on a Nazi broadcast.

VITAMINS

You are reading about vitamins every day, about their importance in the diet, and their effect upon the general health, yet if you were to be asked to describe a vitamin you might find it difficult to do so. I have been somewhat familiar with vitamins since the last war but I also would have difficulty in defining them.

Dr. Barton

In this book "Vitamins," Dr. Henry Borsook, professor of biochemistry, California Institute of Technology, says: "The fact is that the discovery of vitamins and of the role they play in human health is the most important medical advance so far made in this century. It has taught us what the essentials are in food. It has given us new insights into the chemistry of the body. But most important, it has given us the means of greatly raising the standard of health and well-being of all of us."

Everywhere we are seeing newspaper and magazine articles about the value of the vitamins in certain diseases. Thus, vitamin A is used in eye disease, B in neuritis, arthritis, lack of appetite, C in scurvy, D in rickets, and E in certain gland deficiencies. However, while this is important, not more than a fraction of the population is suffering with these diseases and Dr. Borsook points out that even larger groups need vitamins although they have no special disease.

"The really serious problem is that the general level of health is lower than it needs to be. Defective vision in dim light, most constipation and dyspepsia, the small aches and pains of middle age, poor teeth, thinning bones, general fatigue and lack of tone—these are all very often caused by insufficient amounts of vitamins in our ordinary diets over a period of many years."

How can we be sure of getting enough vitamins for our daily needs?

Diet experts have worked out tables of the everyday requirements of each vitamin for children and adults but if, in addition to our regular diet of bread, potatoes and meat, we make sure every day of average servings of dairy products—milk, butter, cheese — and green vegetables — lettuce, spinach, cabbage, beet and carrot tops—we will get all the vitamins we need.

Purpose of Liver And Gall Bladder

What may be hard to understand is why fat foods must be avoided in liver and gall bladder disturbances; yet it is known that fat food helps to empty the gall bladder promptly, thus preventing gall bladder symptoms such as pain and gas formation.

While it is true that fat foods—butter, cream, bacon—help empty the gall bladder, it requires but a small amount of these fat foods to do this, and eating more fat foods than the liver can handle properly brings about the sluggishness of liver and gall bladder with the usual symptoms arising from this sluggishness—pain in upper right side of abdomen, gas pressure, bloating and sometimes nausea and vomiting.

When man was created his body was, and still is, covered with huge masses of muscle. These muscles were not meant to simply carry him about and reach for his food. These huge muscles were meant to work, to help man hunt for food, carry burdens, fight or run as necessity arose. To keep these huge muscles healthy, man was meant to use them every day. And to keep these muscles nourished man was meant to eat all kinds of food including fat foods.

What we find, however, is that man eats plenty of food but because modern life makes it unnecessary to work or carry burdens, the circulation of the blood in the liver is not stimulated to action as much as it should be and so enough bile is not manufactured to take care of the fats and sugars eaten.

An active liver manufacturing bile in large quantities gives a buoyant feeling, whereas a sluggish liver makes one discouraged or even a "quitter."

As man was meant to use his muscles, take deep breaths and bend his body, simple daily exercises—walking, bending, deep breathing—will stimulate the flow of bile in liver and keep gall bladder emptying regularly.

History's Biggest Tax Bill Can't Meet War Demands

Required Savings, Smaller Tax Exemptions Seen as Partial Solution to Inflation Threat.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

"Why don't you commentators quit trying to wake the people up to the war and try to wake Washington up?"

That's a question which repeats itself in my listener mail day after day. So help me, I know the people don't need waking up. And who am I to decide whether Washington is snoring or just breathing deeply?

Let me say, first of all, that I know that a large part of "Washington" is awake and burning the midnight oil. And remember that means 2,000 business men drafted into service as well as the government officials the MAJORITY of whom are non-partisan men who have worked through both Republican and Democratic regimes.

But let me go on from there and talk about some of the slumberers whom you nor I nor Big Ben nor an air-raid alarm could wake up if they had gone to bed after six cups of coffee and the radio on.

I am talking (again) about what Washington is talking about today—specifically the tax bill now in congress, and inflation, in general.

The biggest tax bill in our history any calm, cool, instructed thinker thinks isn't nearly big enough. Why? Well, some say because the fiscal policy makers of the nation don't seem to be much more war conscious than the home guard before Pearl Harbor.

Now let's get a few facts straight. There are men in the treasury department and sitting on congressional committees dealing with fiscal matters who know their monetary onions as well as a farmer knows the rows he hoes.

But let us proceed from there.

About a year and a half ago, Leon Henderson who, no matter what you may think of his neckties, his manners or his tactfulness, is pretty good at foresight, echoed the thoughts of perhaps a hundred other men in Washington when he warned against inflation.

One of the many brakes on inflation is taxation. Taxation, of course, is an ancient process. Another method, not so ancient, is compulsory savings.

Henderson favored compulsory savings. So did a lot of others. He said so. He tried to convince Mr. Morgenthau but Mr. Morgenthau shuddered. That was totalitarian. Regulate prices (what you pay out) all right, but don't tell a free American citizen what he has to put in his sock. That's totalitarian. Henry Morgenthau never said those words to me, but one of his close associates did.

Well, Henderson in one of his tactless moments a year and a half ago, commented on Mr. Morgenthau's opinions on compulsory savings (not for the record). He said, in effect: "Henry is perfectly willing to have me put a gestapo in every grocery store but he thinks it's Hitlerism to force people to save or buy bonds."

Those weren't his exact words but those were his sentiments. I quote them, not because Mr. Henderson knows everything, but because he talks with a punch. I might also add that there appeared a year ago an article from the pen of Reserve Board Chairman Eccles entitled, "Price Ceilings Are Not Enough," in which he expounded the thesis that money must be taken out of the easy spenders' pockets or inflation would result.

One-Third of the Way

Today we have a tax bill which stands, seven months after Pearl Harbor, as incapable of meeting the exigencies of war as Manila or Singapore were.

It is true that expenses have shot up more rapidly than was expected (although many say this should have been foreseen). And now we are lucky if we can pay one-third of our way. Daniel Bell, undersecretary of the treasury, said that 24 billion dollars of the national expenditure would be handled with borrowing (not all from the banks) this year. Secretary Morgenthau had refused to answer a question on that point in the senate committee hearings when Senator Taft put it to him, but turned it over to Bell. Taft protested that he wanted Morgenthau as the policy-making head of the department to answer. Morgenthau then said he would stand behind Bell's prediction.

It is true that the house cut the tax bill as submitted by the treasury. The treasury asked for $8,700,000,000 and got $6,200,000,000 from the house. The senate is being urged to restore the cuts. But the treasury program itself was far too small, the experts say. At present calculations, the government's income for the fiscal year 1942-43 will be around 24 billion dollars, whereas its outgo will be in the neighborhood of 77 billions.

If after Pearl Harbor the government had asked for the maximum it needed the country would have been only too glad to submit. As my correspondents say, the country didn't need to be waked up, Washington does.

Critics of Mr. Morgenthau and his program say, "too little and too late."

They say "too little" because the difference between outgo and income for the fiscal year ending in 1943 will be at least 53 billion dollars.

Non-Negotiable Bonds

They say "too late" because insufficient measures have been taken to check inflation and one way inflation can be checked is to get right after the spending money and make it saving money by forcing the people to invest in non-negotiable bonds that can't be cashed in until after the war. A lot of people are going to need spending money again when peace comes until industry is converted back from war production to civilian production.

As one man connected with the Federal Reserve board said to me:

"There is one thing that very few people realize. When the government or anyone else borrows from the bank, new money is created; that makes inflation. There is plenty of money in existence now to pay war expenditures and avoid the fatal error of borrowing from the banks.

"The difficulty now is that the dollars which are the most dangerous in bidding up prices and causing inflation are the dollars in the pay envelopes of the workers of industry. And these dollars are not, as far as we can estimate, the dollars that are buying bonds.

"And another thing. The taxes don't reach these dollars, either.

"What we may as well realize is coming, though not coming as soon as it should, is: One, compulsory savings although we won't use that unpleasant word compulsory. It will probably be a requirement to buy bonds not redeemable until after the war and so staggered that they won't all hit the treasury at once.

"Two, a smaller tax exemption so that we will get the those dollars from the lower income brackets. There are more of those dollars to get.

"Three, there will have to be some leniency for the fixed salary man who is already saving; the average middle class that puts money into savings regularly in the form of mortgages on homes or farms or plants, money into life insurance policies, money into pension plans. That is savings, it is not creating inflation. But that man with the high taxation those in his income brackets have to pay has to go to the bank and take the money from the savings which he has there to turn it over to the government.

"Canada has faced this problem. The United States will have to. War production is ahead of schedule, fiscal thinking is lagging behind."

We can see, a year after Mr. Eccles said so, that "price ceilings are not enough." Increased costs are such that the packers, as the canners before them, have announced that they just won't stay in business if they have to operate at a loss. The price of the finished product has a ceiling but the raw materials and wages have no ceilings. Somebody has to corral those dollars.

ISAAC PRACTICES PEACE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 26:18-31.

GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.—Matthew 5:9.

To talk peace in a warring world seems almost futile, and so it is, unless it be the peace of God. In a world largely dominated by the philosophy that might makes right, and in which men demand what they call their rights, taking them even by lawless and violent methods, it is increasingly difficult to proclaim the truth that patience and meekness are not weakness, but are Christian virtues worth emulating.

The story of Isaac is interesting from beginning to end. He was an ordinary man, one of the common people. He had come through varied experiences of victory and defeat before the time of our lesson. Fearing a famine, and apparently not trusting God at the moment, he had gone down from the promised land to the country of the Philistines, there redigging the wells which his father Abraham had dug. The result was that he prospered. Ere long, however, envy on the part of his enemies taught Isaac that—

I. Peace in This World is Temporary (vv. 18-31).

Isaac had prospered, but he was still out of the promised land, and while he was in the land of Philistines he could expect no permanent peace.

We are in the world. We long for peace, and would throw all our influence and service into the cause of bringing a righteous peace to the troubled peoples of the world. But let us not be misled by that desire into the support of unscriptural and impossible peace programs. This world is a sinful world, and as long as that is true, there will be strife and war, that men (as James puts it) may have the gains thereof for their own pleasure.

Our business in such a world is to preach the gospel of grace, winning men to Christ, that they may become men of good-will. Isaac was such a man, willing to yield even what seemed to be his right, rather than cause contention.

Undoubtedly there are times when one must defend his name and his possessions, but all too often those who do "stand for their rights" have wrecked homes, churches, and nations, and have gained nothing but an empty victory.

The peace of this world is temporary. Is there then no real abiding peace and joy?

II. Abiding Joy Is Found in Fellowship With God (vv. 22-25).

When Isaac came up into Canaan, the land which God had promised to him, he found real peace and an abiding joy in renewed fellowship with God. Even so, the Christian man and woman who will step out of a spiritually destructive fellowship with the ungodly world and come over wholehearted to the spiritual Canaan of full consecration and separate living, will find true peace and satisfying communion with God.

Our thought, however, has wider application—one much needed today. There is to come a time when this world will have true and abiding peace which shall cover the earth like the waters cover the sea. When the One who has the right to reign, the Lord Jesus Christ, returns to take His throne, then, and not before, will there be true peace.

We await that day with longing which grows more intense as men grow more violent in their hatred. But is there nothing more we can do? Yes, we learn from Isaac's experience that—

III. A Godly Life Is a Testimony to Warring Men (vv. 26-31).

These men were wicked men, even speaking falsehood in their claim of friendship toward Isaac (v. 29). Now that they perceived that God was continually blessing Isaac in spite of their repeated injustice toward him, they decided that it would be well to make a covenant of friendship with him. Even those who follow the way of war and aggression cannot deny the effectiveness of true Christian testimony.

Observe also that by his patience and kindness Isaac ultimately made friends out of his enemies. "It is better to turn enemies into friends than to beat them, and have them enemies still." And so this man with the patient, self-sacrificing spirit brought peace not only to himself, but to those about him, because he believed and trusted God. "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him" (Prov. 16:7).

What can we do to bring peace today? We can pray that God will help America and her allied nations to turn to Him in repentance of sin, and in a desire to so honor His name that He may be able to give His blessing. When Hezekiah spread before the Lord the threat of his enemy, God undertook for him in a mighty way, because his heart was right toward God (Isa. 37:14-20).

Will he do less for us?

Cheese Trays Help You Through Sugar Rationing Period!
(See Recipes Below.)

Take It Easy on Sugar

No sweets with sugar rationed? Why, of course. With honey, corn and maple syrup, molasses, and prepared pudding mixtures, you can learn how to prepare delightful sugar-saving desserts, cakes and cookies that will not only take you gracefully through the sugar-rationing period but will also remain favorites with you long after these times are past.

Honey blends with raisins and spices in this delicious melt-in-your-mouth pie.

Honey Raisin Crumb Pie.
1 egg yolk
½ teaspoon ginger
¾ cup bread crumbs
¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup hot water
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup raisins
¾ cup honey
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup nut meats

Blend hot water with honey and add egg yolk. Mix flour, crumbs and spices. Rub in butter. Place a layer of raisins on unbaked pie shell, cover raisins with layer of nut meats, and pour over honey-water-egg mixture. Top with layer of crumb mixture. Bake at 450 degrees until crust browns at edges, reduce to 325 degrees for 20 minutes or until firm.

Magic Chocolate Pie.
2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1½ cups sweetened condensed milk
½ cup water
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
Baked pie shell (8-inch) or cookie pie crust

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk and stir over rapidly boiling water 5 minutes until mixture thickens. Remove from heat. Add water and salt. Stir until thoroughly blended. When cool, add vanilla. Pour into baked pie shell, or cookie crumb crust. Chill.

Get your full quota of milk into the diet by serving it in this dessert combination with rennet powder. No sugar required!

Marshmallow Maple Rennet-Custard.
1 package maple rennet powder
1 pint milk, not canned
5 marshmallows, diced

Dissolve marshmallows in 1 cup hot milk. Then add 1 cup cold milk and warm slowly, stirring constantly. Test a drop on the inside of wrist frequently. When COMFORTABLY WARM, (110 degrees), not hot, proceed according to directions on package. Chill, then serve.

Butterscotch Ice-Box Cake.
(Serves 6 to 8)
1 recipe butterscotch cornstarch pudding
½ cup cream, whipped
Lady fingers or cake strips

Prepare butterscotch pudding as directed on package. Cool. Fold in whipped cream. Line bottom and sides of mold or loaf pan with waxed paper. Arrange layer of lady fingers on bottom and sides of mold. Turn ½ of pudding into mold; cover with layer of lady fingers. Turn remaining pudding into mold and place another layer of lady fingers on top. Chill 12 to 24 hours in refrigerator. Unmold.

Bermuda Appetizers.

Chop Bermuda onion finely, marinate and drain. Spread on crisp crackers and cover with slice of Liederkranz cheese. Thin slices of rye, pumpernickel or whole wheat bread which have been buttered may be used instead.

You can do all sorts of things with cheese as a last course and serve it in place of fruit. Camembert has an affinity for fruit. Try it with crackers served with a bowl full of summer's luscious fruits or, try American-made equivalents of Roquefort and Blue cheese spread on hot buttered Boston brown bread tossed with after dinner coffee in place of dessert. Serve a cheese tray for refreshments and spare the sugar ration.

This spicy apple sauce cake requires only ½ cup of sugar.

Apple Sauce Cake.
¼ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
½ cup molasses
2 cups cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon soda
1 cup apple sauce
½ cup raisins

Cream shortening; add sugar slowly, beating in well. Add well-beaten eggs and beat until well blended; add molasses. Sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with apple sauce to first mixture. Add raisins. Bake in greased square baking pan in moderate oven at 350 degrees about 1 hour. Frost with:

Raisin Nut Frosting.
1 egg white
¼ cup light corn syrup
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup chopped seeded raisins
½ cup chopped pecan meats

Beat egg white until stiff. Add syrup slowly, beating constantly. Add vanilla and half of raisins and nuts. Spread between layers and on top of cake. Sprinkle with remaining raisins and nuts.

Lemon Smothered Chops.
(Serves 6 to 8)
2 pounds pork or lamb chops, cut thick

Put in a large covered skillet or chicken fryer. Cover top of meat closely with:

2 unpeeled lemons, sliced
1 large sweet onion, cut in rings
1 green pepper, cut in rings
1 teaspoon salt

Pour over all:

2 cups tomato juice

Dot with flakes of fat cut from meat or butter. Cover and cook on top of stove 1½ hours or until done. Lift onto a hot platter, being careful to keep lemon, onion and pepper slices in place. The meat cooked this way acquires a chicken texture and color, while the lemon, onion, pepper and tomato make a delicious sauce accompaniment.

Lynn Says:

Household Tips: Are you wondering how those pots and pans are going to last for the duration? Since the production for these has been sharply curtailed, you will want hints on keeping them in "cooking" condition:

Aluminum: Leaving food in aluminum longer than necessary, soaking the utensil before washing and alkalies such as soda spell short wear for this metal. If you want to clean aluminum without endangering its wearing period, use very fine scouring powder or steel wool for discolorations. Or, cooking acid foods like tomatoes, rhubarb and apples will do the trick.

Iron: Wash in hot, sudsy water. If this doesn't clean it, use hot soda and water. If rusted, use scouring powder or steel wool. Always dry completely and wrap in paper for storage.

Tin: This metal does not keep shiny indefinitely. Remove burnt foods by boiling in soda and water for five minutes, never longer. Rinse and dry thoroughly.

NICHOLSON NEWS—

"Love worketh no ill to his neighbor, therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." "In Christ there is no east or west. In Him no south nor north, but one great fellowship of love throughout the whole wide earth." Harvest greatly exceeds seed sowing.

Grateful appreciation is extended to Mrs. John Hume for another manifestation of kindness.

Most heartily do we thank Mrs. Boeling for lovely gifts.

Mr. Myron V. Stephens, Piner, paid a brief call Wednesday.

Heartiest congratulations are extended to Mrs. John Klein on being a representative of four generations pictured in a recent issue of The Post. That many happy quiet days lie ahead for each member of the group is the united wish of their host of friends.

Long have we lived under dark skies through which the kindness of friends shine out lustrously. For a number of years the Oak Island Church has kindly sent The Western Recorder, Mrs. Walter Maddox has given a subscription to the Cadle Call and The Commission was sent for a year by Miss Jewel Aulick. These and other periodicals, with a close perusal of the Word of God and helpful, inspiring radio messages, spiritual nourishment is amply provided.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bryan of Grants Lick are rejoicing over the arrival of a fine little son.

"Asleep in the Beautiful Hills of God, by the Valley of Rest so fair some day, some time, when all tasks are o'er, her loved ones shall meet her there." Death recently claimed Mrs. Mollie Hergott Rust of Covington, bringing to a close an active, useful life, which saddened a wide circle. Besides her husband and son, she is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Frank Callen, Miss Mary Hergott and Mrs. George Klare, and two brothers. May the sorrowing ones find consolation in the assurance that beyond the grave we live again. Death is not an end, but an entrance into fuller, richer living. It is of divine appointment and is but a path that all must tread if ever we would go home to God. "They never quite leave us, those who have passed through the shadows of death to the sunlight above. A thousand sweet memories are holding them fast to the places they blest with their presence and love."

NAGGING BACKACHE
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action. Don't Neglect It!
Modern life with its ceaseless hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking, exposure, contagion, whatnot, keeps doctors busy, hospitals crowded. The after effects are disturbing to the kidneys and oftentimes people suffer without knowing that disordered kidney action may cause the trouble.
After colds, fever and similar ills there is an increase of body impurities the kidneys must filter from the blood. If the kidneys are overtaxed and fail to remove excess acid and other harmful waste, there is poisoning of the whole system.
Symptoms of disturbed kidney function may be nagging backache, persistent headache, dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of strength and energy. Other signs of kidney or bladder disturbances sometimes are burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide approval than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. They have been winning new friends for more than 50 years. Be sure to get Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.
THE REASON DOAN'S ARE FAMOUS
All over the country grateful people tell others: "Doan's have helped me; I recommend them to you." That is why we say, Ask your neighbor!

SUMMERTIME is vacation time, but not for your electric refrigerator. During the winter months it loafed along, using a minimum of current, but now it must work longer and harder to keep foods fresh and wholesome and to supply extra quantities of ice cubes and frozen desserts. Naturally, your refrigerator is using a little more electricity these sizzling hot days, but the added cost is small compared to the food savings it makes possible. Electric pennies save food dollars.

Electric Refrigerator Economy Hints
1. Defrost regularly—at least once a week.
2. Do not crowd shelves—circulation is vital to efficient operation.
3. Do not open door oftener or hold it open longer than necessary.
4. Do not store hot foods in refrigerator—let them cool first.
5. Cover all liquids before storing them in refrigerator.
6. Avoid quick freezing as much as possible.

Bomb 'em with JUNK

Let's blast Japan—and Germany—and Italy—with the chain lightning of destruction that can be built from the scrap in our cellars, attics and garages, on our farms and in our places of business.

Scrap iron and steel, other metals, rubber and waste materials. It will all be used to make tanks, ships, planes and the fighting weapons our boys must have. It is needed at once.

Sell it to a Junk dealer—give it to a charity or collection agency—take it yourself to the nearest collection point—or consult the Local Salvage Committee... If you live on a farm, and have found no means of disposing of your Junk, get in touch with the County War Board or your farm implement dealer.

Throw YOUR scrap into the fight!

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. They arrive to find both Zora and her husband dead. Although he investigated the fruit company that hired him before accepting a job as chief engineer, Jeff is already suspicious of the company and of his employer, Senor Montaya. Conversations with Jerry Mellanis, who works for a rival company, and with Bill Henderson and Slats Monahan reveal that there is something going on and that Mitchell and Zora were killed because they knew too much. Now Montaya has just called Jeff to tell him that Henderson, too, has met with an "accident" and is dead. A hasty inquest is being conducted.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VIII

Also present were a lieutenant and uniformed aid from the Tempujo comandancia. During the entire scene they said nothing aloud, only whispered to each other as they made notes. Extraordinarily respectful, these two hombres. Of the presence of death, or Senor Montaya? Curt was aware of them only subconsciously. He stared down at Bill Henderson. A severe blow on the back of the head, Dr. Berry had said.

An idea! Reaching out, Curt rolled back one eyelid of the unconscious man, then the other. Both eyes were clear. One pupil was contracted, the other dilated; that was the concussion. But the whites were clear! Curt compressed his lips. He lifted the square of gauze that hid the mangled chest. The stain of the tinia versicolor was there, but it wasn't red. It was scarcely copper pink.

When Henderson was drunk this area of his skin became fiery, his eyes bloodshot. But he'd just lost a great deal of blood. How much would that affect the skin? And if he'd drunk only a few minutes before the accident, perhaps there wouldn't bave been time for the eyes and the skin to betray the fact.

Curt became aware of the surprise of the doctors, that Montaya was eyeing him closely. The two men from the constabulary bad ceased whispering in mid-sentence to watch. The photographer alone paid Curt no attention. Still champing on bis gum, be was setting up his equipment.

"How did it happen?" asked Curt, bitterly.

Dr. Fisber gave them the story.

Henderson lived at Tempujo in the same building which boused the young doctor, a bachelor quarters. It was a sort of botel for the single white men working here. Fisher knew that Henderson had shavod and showered after coming in from work, then changed into whites; that be planned to run up to San Alejo.

"He asked me if I wanted to go along," Fisber said. "But I couldn't, not having arranged previously for relief. I don't think be'd bad a drink at that time, when he went to the shower room."

However, doors were never locked here, and were carelessly left ajar more often than closed. Passing Bill's room later, after Henderson had gone, Fisher bad noticed a half empty bottle and glass on Henderson's table.

"That didn't seem strange," he said. "I thought nothing of it at the time."

From there on Fisher bad to reconstruct the unfortunate man's movements. Henderson first went to the dispatcher's office for an okay on bis trip; that much was fact. But the track wasn't clear. So Henderson drove to the end of the yard, threw a switch, and backed his motorcar onto a siding to let the incoming train pass on into the yard. Then the track would be clear for him.

Apparently bis drinking had befuddled bis brain so that he'd forgotten to throw back the switch. The incoming train, a locomotive and three flats, took bis siding and plowed bead-on into the motorcar, telescoping it, thanks to its engine back against Henderson.

Young Lister had by now got his pictures bere. The others followed him soberiy out into the yards while he took pictures of the wrecked car, now a mass of junk. There was nothing more to be done, so the four men headed back to San Alejo.

On the way Montaya continued to smoke his long cigarettes. He seemed angry, bitter, brooding, frustrated. About halfway across the flats be beld forth.

"There is no excuse for this kind of accident. There is no excuse for drinking to excess. More than once I have thought of establishing a rule that any employe becoming drunk on the grounds sball be let out at once. But I can't do that," he shrugged.

No one answered.

Suddenly Curt remembered the two khaki-clad police representatives. He wondered. Did their whispering and note-taking constitute an "inquest?" Was this kind of inquest held in the cases of Mitchell and his wife? More than likely, be thought. Without a doubt Montaya "owned" the police, and it wasn't to his advantage to stir up any fuss. Curt told Lee about the accident without dressing up the story. Gave her the simple facts without the gory details. She was silent for some minutes.

Then, "Jeff," she said quietly, "I'm no fool. What's the answer? This is the third death by violence here in less than three weeks!"

Curt was sitting on the low couch-hammock on the porch, bent forward, elbows on knees. His hands were busy with his pipe. Lee dropped into the hammock beside bim.

"What's strange about it?" he returned at last. But he didn't lift his eyes to hers. "There's always a lot of drinking and sometimes sudden deaths among construction workers in a place like this. You know that. It was so in the earlier days of Associated across the river."

He reached for her hand, pulled her closer to him.

"But—" There was a catch in her voice. "Oh, darling, darling, be careful, be so very careful. If anything should happen to you . . ."

There was a Catholic church at San Alejo, and a small nondenominational chapel; between them a burial ground. It was here Mitchell and his wife now lay side by side. Service was said over Bill Henderson's body early Sunday morning, and he was lowered into the ground before the sun was high.

Lee clung close to Curt during these last rites, and Curt could feel her trembling. She dabbed at her eyes and turned homeward as Curt went on to his office where Montaya was to join him for their first major discussion of the engineering work Curt had taken over.

While waiting for the Spaniard, Curt pawed over in his mind this chain of deaths. All three were so apparently what they seemed to be—a grudge killing, a suicide from grief, a drunk's accident. Yet there was that telltale coincidence among them. All three victims bad known something. There were, too, a few details which just didn't fit. They haunted Curt.

"The whole thing is none of my business."

One was the fact that Montaya's letter offering Curt this job was written before Mitchell's body was discovered by a trackwalker.

Another, not only was Zora Mitchell very definitely not a neurotic type, but where would she get hold of—in the Mitchell household—a foreign make of gun?

And, though it was not out of character for Bill Henderson to bave taken a drink, it was certainly out of character for Bill to forget that switch even if he'd been rolling drunk! Bill was a railroad man!

Curt's thoughts harked back to Mitchell. What was it the man had "known"? He'd done some muttering about sitting on a "powder keg." He couldn't have meant revolution, for that wouldn't bave upset Mitchell. He'd been through them before in this country. No American who minded bis own business had anything to fear on that score.

He'd also done some muttering about the Canal, about wanting to go there . . . or did Curt have that right? As near as he could remember, the Canal business was a vague so-near-and-yet-so-far sort of thing that had no meaning at all.

Curt bad been fiddling absently with his tobacco pouch. He now flung it to the desk angrily and jumped to his feet.

"I'm an engineer, not a sleuth. Maybe Mitchell did know something, but I don't, and the whole thing is none of my business!"

But it was, and he knew it. Walking in at that moment, Montaya raised smoothly clipped brows as he saw Curt's congested face.

"I was only thinking," said Curt, in violent explanation, "what a shame it is that liquor can't be outlawed."

"I quite agree, Mr. Curtis," said Montaya gravely. "I will not permit drunkenness among my key men at any time, on the job or off, as you know from your contract. Of course, among construction workers . . ." He shrugged.

"But let us get to work. You have not had much time with your so charming family since arriving. You will want the day with them. I have gone over your memoranda carefully . . ."

One of Curt's suggestions had been to bring in some additional draglines and bulidozers, and to speed up the work in two shifts per day, using flood lights for the few hours of darkness they'd overlap.

"Two shifts of work, it is a good idea," Montaya agreed. "As for more equipment, I have two three-yard shovels now on order. They should arrive soon."

"You'll need more," Curt answered.

"But when the work for such equipment is completed? It will be a lot of money to bave tied up."

"There's more work here for such machines than you think. You're going to install overhead irrigation when the more important work is out of the way. You plan to pump from the rivers, but I can sbow you a better way."

Curt strode to the huge photographic map and picked up the pointer.

In the end Montaya agreed, and by phone, then and there, ordered the necessary radiogram sent to his New Orleans office. Other business followed, disposed of item by item. Montaya glanced at his wrist.

"There are two men you bave not yet met. Knowing you would be free at this hour I asked them here. Sunday seemed a good time, not to interfere with the routine of anyone."

He opened the door to the outer office, nodded to someone outside, held the door open.

In marched two young men in freshly starched whites, punctilious and stiff of manner. They could be only the Swedes whom Curt had heard mentioned so many times. Both were tall, both dark blond, with fair skin and blue eyes, both wide of shoulder and hard as nails.

There the resemblance ceased. One was round of face, with full lips that held a curious quirk in the corners. He had wavy hair. Not too strong a countenance, this.

The other's face was square, with thin, straight lips, frosty eyes, and stiff cropped hair. There was an old scar on his left cbeek.

"Mr. Curtis, this is Mr. Ryden, who smooths out our transportation problems." Square-face bowed stiffly. "And Mr. Lannestock, our Chief Pilot." The other followed suit. Neither smiled.

Curt extended a band but felt no warmth in their response. Palpably, they were ill at ease, and Curt presently put this down to their poor command of English.

"Flying always seemed an adventurous life to me," Curt said, by way of conversation. "Do you enjoy this sort of utility flying? Freighting, laying cbemicals, that sort of thing?"

"It is a job," was Lannestock's answer. He had trouble with his "j."

Ryden was more voluble. "A good flyer likes any kind of flying. It is not always work. There was the map." He cast a glance at the big map on Curt's wall. "And the alligators."

Montaya explained.

"Before the swampland was drained of surface water, alligators were quite a nuisance. And, yes, some danger. As fast as the clearing progressed, Mr. Ryden bombed them from a low altitude with grenades. Those that were not killed were driven down the rivers into the marshes between Tempujo and the sea."

A curious look livened Ryden's eyes as Montaya spoke. They took on a merciless slant. Lines of cruelty tensed his thin lips. Features that a moment before had been merely cold took on a hint of leashed fury and hate.

The sudden transition hit Curt like an electric shock. He shifted his gaze to Lannestock. There was no viciousness in this man's face but Curt got the impression that Lannestock was dominated by the other.

"Karl and Gosta," Montaya continued in a tone sbaded with affection, "were invaluable to us when we needed two full-time flyers to freight materials. There is still much work for them to do. I could not get along without them."

Here was another surprise—warmth from "The Dark Lily"!

"Planes have their uses," Curt admitted. "What make of plane do you use?" He'd asked Montaya this question before, and no answer.

"They are old planes!" Ryden spit this out, with it giving Montaya a dirty look.

The Spaniard's teeth shone affably. Here was nothing new. He was, indeed, mildly amused.

"Always they ask for new machines." He shrugged expressively. "But if the planes they bave will fly, I cannot be putting several times the price into new equipment for this heavy work. They, too, become at once second-hand."

"But repair work," asked Curt, "to keep them in condition?"

"Both Karl and Gosta are quite competent at repairs. And they have good mechanics to assist."

"But always we repair, like we glue together. Some day we come to pieces in the air and have no glue!"

Montaya shrugged again, less good-naturedly. "Karl, you are too good a flyer to take up a bad plane. I have no fear of that. And how long would it be with new planes before you would have to repair, adjust, tighten?"

WAGE STABILIZATION

You can write it down that the President will use his executive powers to keep wages in check rather than ask congress for any new legislation dealing with wage stabilization.

There are two reasons for this:

(1) Wage control legislation would be sure to stir up another bitter congressional controversy, as bad or worse than the brawl over farm parity prices. It might even require months to get both houses to agree on a bill satisfactory to the administration.

(2) The President believes that the policy proposed by the War Labor board's recent steel wage decision—limiting wage increases to 15 per cent over scales prevailing on January 1, 1941—plus additional rationing of consumer goods, will be sufficient for the time being to brake inflation threats to the working man's pocketbook.

Inside fact is that the War Labor board is contemplating only one further step in its wage stabilization program, and this is not so much an anti-inflation move as a concession to certain labor groups and a contribution to the prosecution of the war.

Wages in certain industries, including shipyards and tool-and-die plants, are above the 15 per cent increase ceiling set by the board. This raises the question—shall wages in these industries be brought down to conform with scales in other war plants which pay below the ceiling?

The answer is—there will be no reduction in wages. The President has decided definitely against this.

Instead, to prevent piracy and migration of workers away from vital war plants paying below the 15 per cent ceiling, the War Labor board is planning to amend its wage policy to permit the payment of "premium wages" (above the ceiling) in such plants.

Note: One industry sure to be allowed "premium wages" is aircraft, which has lost many workmen, by piracy and migration, to higher-paying shipyards.

NEW ARMY FOOD

To save shipping space, the army is sending food overseas in dehydrated form. Experiments in taste-preserving dehydration have been carried out and tested on a group of army cooks.

At the Chicago depot of the quartermaster corps, the cooks sat down to a meal of dehydrated foods, principal item on the menu being scrambled eggs made by adding water to a yellow powder.

It has been discovered that one pound of dehydrated turnips will serve 28 persons, after water is added.

BEHIND THE AIR CORPS

This war will be won or lost in the air. But despite that fact the air forces will win or lose the war on the ground. In other words, the success of operations in the air depends on ground crews, who outnumber air crews ten to one.

Featured in the headlines and the newsreels every day are the pilots and machine gunners. But the unsung heroes of this war are the ground crews.

Real fact is that it takes only one man to pilot a fighter plane, but it takes eight or ten maintenance men to keep it in shape to fight. A four-engine bomber requires a flying crew of nine, and a maintenance crew of 25. Often a ground crew will be assigned exclusively to one plane, and will become attached to it with the affection a stable boy has for a race horse.

Chief of Staff General Marshall has revealed that the over-all strength of the air force is expected to reach 1,000,000 men by the end of 1942, and 2,000,000 by the end of next year. If the war is won in 1943, it will be won by these 2,000,000 men. But 1,800,000 of them will be "fighting" on the ground.

They are the overall-boys, the grease monkeys, the men who spend all day overbauling an engine which has been flying all night, the men who know what heat is like in the deserts of Africa, because they don't get up in the air for relief, as do the pilots.

OVERSEAS CANDY

The quartermaster corps is in the market to buy 2,500,000 pounds of hard candy: peppermint, orange, lemon, lime, anise, and cberry.

The hard candy is being bought for overseas troops, as part of the regular field ration. Official explanation is that candy is an excellent source of energy.

AFRICAN CAMEL CREWS

They are the mecbanics, the armorers, the metal workers, the welders—yes, and they are the pick and sbovel men who build the landing fields in foreign posts, and repair them after enemy bombers have passed over. They are also the cooks and the mess boys, the pay masters, the doctors, and the truck drivers. In short, they are the men who perform every duty that keeps a plane in the air.

They do everything except replace the African camels.

Englishman Wouldn't Take Chance on Blooming Bomb

An enemy plane passed over a certain district in England one night, and the following morning a man told his neighbor that an unexploded incendiary bomb had fallen into his bedroom.

"Throw it into the garden?" inquired the neighbor.

"Can't do that," was the reply. "It's six feet long."

"Good gracious," gasped the neighbor, "that's not an incendiary—that's a high explosive! Have you been sleeping in the bedroom with that thing all night?"

"Not bloomin' likely . . . I slept on the couch in the drawing-room!"

ALL-BRAN FUDGE SQUARES—BEST YOU EVER TASTED!

Every mother in the land will want to bake these scrumptious cookies. Children will demolish a plate of them in a wink. Grown-ups rave about their "different" taste and new crunchy texture. They're made, of course, with the famous cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN FUDGE SQUARES

3 squares un-sweetened chocolate	1 cup sugar ¾ cup flour ½ cup All-Bran
¼ cup butter	½ cup nutmeats
2 eggs	1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Melt chocolate over hot water and add butter. Beat eggs well, add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Add melted chocolate and butter. Stir in flour, All-Bran, chopped nutmeats and flavoring. Pour into greased pan, making a layer about one-third inch thick. Bake in moderate oven (375°F.) about 20 minutes. Yield: Sixteen 3-inch squares (3 x 3 inch pan).

By GRANTLAND RICE

Grantland Rice

TURNING back the pages of many, many calendars, your correspondent still recalls the thrill that came when the first breath of early fall came along, and the dog days were over. That meant football. We began practicing around September 15, and the season came to an abrupt finish on Thanksgiving day.

It's all different now. Football is already at full swing in many colleges and many camps.

Yale, for example, one of the most conservative of all the universities, has gone all out—not so much to develop a single outstanding team, but to have hundreds trained in the matter of condition and discipline that football demands. Certainly no university is doing a finer job. I also could mention Maryland and many others.

The Change

These teams want and will work for winners. But beyond that more attention will be paid to mass than to class.

Students who never thought of football before now will be shown the feeling of hard body contact, of increased speed, of improved stamina, of quicker reactions in competition. In the universities, the colleges and the prep schools there will be at least five, or possibly ten, football players in training against one for other seasons.

"Why," someone has asked, "shouldn't these men be in active war service?"

The main answer is that the war department wants it this way. First, because most of these men also are taking war training. Second, because the war department wants its coming replacements and reserves to be the best soldiers in the world, trained and conditioned for what is to come later on.

Every university and college of any standing in the country is doing its best to comply with the demands or requests that come from the top.

Football is already under full swing at the Naval Cadet camps located at the universities of Georgia, North Carolina, Iowa and St. Mary's.

"War," as the late General Sherman said, "is hell." But football in Georgia and North Carolina through August is no part of a picnic.

No one yet knows just how such coaches as Bernie Bierman and Jimmy Crowley will be able to get winning teams with squads that come and go, with almost no stars from the pros or from the colleges. The odds are all against them. But football is a big part of their training, and this happens to be the main idea.

Jim Crowley

These four Naval Cadet camps have over 40 games scheduled with the stronger university teams, facing one of the toughest schedules of the year.

Other Games

In the meanwhile the pros and the army squad are both on their way to camp, to many camps, for the eight games scheduled this month and through early September.

This army division, under Bob Neyland and Wallace Wade, will set at least one football record. They will finish up their schedule by September 20, just about the spot when most of the others are swinging into action.

Coaches Neyland and Wade have the "rush act" to handle. They have the material—many of the great football players of recent years—but the job of whipping these men into a football machine in a short while is no simple job.

You can gamble that the Washington Redskins, the New York Giants, the Green Bay Packers, the Brooklyn Dodgers and others will be something to shove around, despite the fact they have lost close to a hundred star men to the services. Messrs. Steve Owen, Curly Lambeau, George Halas and others still have enough good material left to keep any team busy, no matter how many stars may be working against them. They, also, are out to win.

And these games will play a big part for Army Relief. They are a big part of the bigger game. And they will be something to see.

Stout Combination

The Big Nine, plus Notre Dame, may easily be football's stronghold for the new campaign. And this isn't overlooking Iowa, which would be a serious mistake.

There are linemen on hand to match the backs, especially at Minnesota, where Norse forwards usually have the call. Minnesota's big line will be led by Dick Wildung, one of the greatest forwards in 1941—a sure bulwark in the season that is not too far away, and which the fans are looking forward to.

Farm Topics

Farm Building Must Have Board's Permit

WPB Recognizes Need of Limited Construction

County war boards of the United States department of agriculture will co-operate with the War Production board in handling applications for authorization to begin construction work on farms, the War Production board announced.

The United States department of agriculture is co-operating with the WPB in formulating policies under which county and state U. S. D. A. war boards will make recommendations covering farm residential and agricultural construction. Projects recommended by these boards will be forwarded to the War Production board for final approval.

Order L-41, issued by the War Production board, prohibits the start of unauthorized construction projects which use materials, labor and construction equipment needed in the war effort, and places all new publicly and privately financed construction under rigid control.

The War Production board recognizes that a limited amount of construction by farmers is necessary to maintain and increase production to meet agricultural goals and that certain off-the-farm facilities are also needed for the production, handling and processing of farm products.

A farmer planning to begin construction which needs authorization should consult his county United States department of agriculture war board.

All farm projects, including residential, agricultural, and off-the-farm construction, such as warehouses, processing plants, creameries, etc., will be considered first by the United States department of agriculture county war boards. Applications for projects recommended by these boards will be sent to state war boards and then to the department of agriculture.

The department will consider the recommendations and send to the War Production board for final approval those which are deemed essential.

So far as residential construction is concerned, farm dwellings are covered by the same regulations as other residential construction. If farm residential construction, during any 12-month period, costs less than $500 per farm, no authorization is necessary. Likewise no authorization is required for construction begun prior to April 9, 1942; for maintenance and repairs; or for reconstruction or restoration of farm residential construction damaged or destroyed after December 31, 1941, by fire, flood, tornado, earthquake, act of God or by public enemy.

Take Care of Your Milking Machine as Parts Are Hard to Get

The milking machine is essential to wartime agricultural production, and must be cared for properly because shortages of rubber and metal will not permit normal replacement.

The following rules for the care of rubber milking machine parts are suggested:

Use two separate sets of liners, alternating them each week. Rubber needs "rest."

Keep liners tight in teat-cup shells.

Keep milker rubber parts clean and free from all butterfat, which causes deterioriation.

Rubber cuts easily when wet. Use care in assembly and disassembly of units.

Do not use chlorine solutions of a strength exceeding 250 parts per million, for excessively strong chlorine solutions will injure rubber.

If lye is used in the care of rubber parts, be sure that it does not remain in contact with the metal parts.

Battling Soil Erosion

Legume crops such as alfalfa, clover, soybeans and lespedeza are being used with increasing success as "heavy artillery" in fighting the battle of soil erosion. Legumes keep the topsoil in place, deposit nitrogen in soil and provide it with needed supplies of organic matter. To do their best work, legumes should be reinforced by intelligent soil management such as the use of fertilizers high in phosphorus and potash.

Tell me a Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

GRANDFATHER FROG'S TROUBLES GROW

Headfirst in; no way out;
It's best to know what you're about!

GRANDFATHER FROG had had plenty of time to realize how very true this is. As he sat on the old shingle which the Merry Little Breezes had blown into the spring where he was a prisoner he thought a great deal about that little word "if." If he hadn't left the Smiling Pool, if he hadn't been stubborn and set in his ways, if he hadn't been in such a hurry, if he had looked to see where he was leaping—well, any one of those "ifs" would almost certainly have kept him out of his present trouble.

It really wasn't so bad in the spring. That is, it wouldn't have been so bad, but for the fear that Farmer Brown's Boy might come for a drink and find him there. That was Grandfather Frog's one great fear, and it gave him bad dreams whenever he tried to take a nap. He grew cold all over at the very thought of being caught again by Farmer Brown's Boy, and when at last one of the Merry Little Breezes hurried up to tell him that Farmer Brown's Boy actually was coming, poor old Grandfather Frog was so frightened that the Merry Little Breezes had to tell him twice to hide under the old shingle as it floated on the water. Farmer Brown's Boy couldn't see him there.

At last he got it through his head and drawing a very long breath he dived into the water and swam under the old shingle. He was just in time. Yes, sir, he was just in time. If Farmer Brown's Boy hadn't been thinking of something else he certainly would have noticed the little rings on the water made by Grandfather Frog when he dived in. But he was thinking of something else and it wasn't until he dipped a cup in for the second time that he even saw the old shingle.

"Chugarum!" said Grandfather Frog, "that certainly was a close call."

"Hello!" he exclaimed, "That must have blown in since I was here yesterday. We can't have anything like that spoiling our nice spring."

With that he reached out for the old shingle and Grandfather Frog, hiding under it, gave himself up for lost. But the anxious Little Breeze had been watching sharply and the instant he saw what Farmer Brown's Boy was going to do he played the old, old trick of snatching his hat from his head. The truth is he couldn't think of anything else to do. Farmer Brown's Boy grabbed at his hat, and then, because he was in a hurry and had other things to do, he started off without thinking of the old shingle again.

"Chugarum!" cried Grandfather Frog as he swam out from under the shingle and climbed up on it. "That certainly was a close call. If I have many more like it I certainly shall die of fright."

Nothing more happened for a long time and Grandfather Frog was wondering if it wouldn't be safe to take a nap when he saw peeping over the edge above him two eyes. They were greenish yellow eyes and they stared and stared. Grandfather Frog stared and stared back. He just couldn't help it. He didn't know whom they belonged to. He couldn't remember ever having seen them before. He was afraid, and yet somehow he couldn't make up his mind to jump. He stared so hard at the eyes that he didn't notice a long furry paw slowly, very slowly reaching down toward him. Nearer it crept and nearer. Then suddenly it moved like a flash. Grandfather Frog felt sharp claws on his white and yellow waistcoat, and before he could even open his mouth to cry "Chugarum!" he was sent flying through the air and landed on his back in the grass. Pounce! Two paws pinned him down and the greenish yellow eyes were not an inch from his own. They belonged to Black Pussy, one of Farmer Brown's cats.

Stay on It

If you have a war job, stay on it until and unless the United States Employment service says you can be more valuable elsewhere. If you are working in a civilian industry which can be converted, stay put until a war job is made for you. If you are in a non-essential civilian industry start looking for a war job through the United States Employment service. If you are taking technical work in high school or college finish your course—you'll be more valuable in the end.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of its waste of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Annual Convention of Christian Churches

On Sunday, August 30, 1942, the Christian Churches of Boone County will hold their annual convention in the auditorium of the High School building at Burlington. Last year the same meeting place was the scene of a large and enthusiastic gathering of the Disciples of Christ, and from all advance indications, the convention this year bids fair to surpass even that of last year, in both numbers and fervor. Such is fitting in view of the apparent need of the world for all the spirtual inspiration and uplift it can be given by loyal followers of Christ.

The program for the day will closely follow that of last year. The morning service will be given over to a union worship service commencing with a Sunday School session at 9:45, Eastern War Time, with the Communion Service and Convention sermon following in order.

The afternoon session opens with an address covering the benevolent institutions of the Christian Church in Kentucky. This address will be given by Edgar C. Riley, who is well known to the people of this county, as a former resident, as he served as minister for several years in this locality, as well as County School Superintendent. Mr. Riley is now President of the Female Orphans School, Midway, which institution has expanded widely under his guidance.

Following the above address, Dr. Andrew Hensey, who preached in Boone County around 1905 and who later went to Africa and spent many years there as a missionary in the Belgian Congo, will give the missionary talk in which he will outline many of his experiences as a messenger for the gospel in that far away land.

The theme of the convention—"Reach Every Person With Christian Teaching In Your Community"—will be covered by a representative from the State Organization in Lexington. His subject: "The United Christian Advance," will outline the four year program laid out for advancing Christian education among our people everywhere.

The last speaker on the program will be Rev. R. H. Carter of the Florence Christian Church, who, like Edgar C. Riley, is too well known to the people of the county as a minister and teacher to need much introduction.

Interspersed throughout the program will be special musical numbers from the different churches of the county.

Those in charge of the program have every reason for looking forward to a large and inspiring attendance, so every member of the Christian Churches of Boone County is asked to attend and bring his neighbor, the only requirement for attendance being the bringing of a basket of food to add to the spread at noon. Further, the invitation to attend is most assuredly not confined to members of the one denomination. All followers of Christ are cordially and sincerely invited to attend and reap the benefit which comes to all who attend a gathering of this nature.

GRACE McBRIDE Y. W. A. MEETS

The Grace McBride Y. W. A. met at the home of Miss Mary Jane Readnour, Monday evening. The meeting was in charge of the president, Miss Readnour. The topic for the evening was "House Beautiful."

Those in attendance were Annabel Percival, Gertrude Burdine, Mrs. Bryan Rector, and the hostess. Refreshments and social hour followed.

ALBERT J. STONE DIES AT VERONA

Albert J. Stone, 76, died at his home in Verona, Sunday, Aug. 16 from cerebral hemorrhage, after a short illness. He was born in Boone County, near Beaver, and had spent his entire life in this section of the county. For more than 12 years he had been carrying the mail to and from the Post Office to the depot, and was also caretaker at the L. & N. depot.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday, Aug. 19 at the J. L. Hamilton funeral home, with interment in New Bethel cemetery. Rev. Huss of Covington had charge of the funeral services.

Mr. Stone is survived by one brother, J. E. Stone of Cincinnati; one daughter, Mrs. Mabel Stafford; two step-daughters, Mrs. Ross Chapman asd Mrs. Rube Bingham, several grandchildren, great-grandchildren, other relatives and friends.

Funeral arrangements were in charge of J. L. Hamilton& Son.

Superposphate And Vetch Seed Available

Two hundred and forty tons of 20% superphosphate will be delivered to Boone County within the next few weeks, according to word received from the State Office recently. This phosphate will be delivered at both Erlanger and Walton, and is being received to be distributed under the 1943 Agricultural Conservation Program. This phosphate will be distributed under the grant of aid plan, the same as the past few years. The deduction rate for this phosphate will be $21.40 per ton. It is hoped that a substantial increase will be given for the use of it, so that farmers will not have to pay more per ton than last year. Farmers are urged to make orders immediately for this phosphate. The maximum amount that can be ordered at the present time is 60% of the 1942 soilbuilding allowance.

Thirty-five thousand pounds of vetch seed have already been received in the county and this seed has been distributed to dealers in Walton, Burlington and Hebron. Orders for this seed should be made at the county office. The deduction for the vetch seed will be $11.86 per hundred pounds. The Agricultural Conservation Program gives credit for both the seeding and turning under of vetch. Innoculation of the vetch seed is required and the dealers are planning to have the innoculation on hand. Vetch is considered the best green manure crop obtainable. It should be seeded in connection with wheat, rye, or barley, and it is important that it be seeded early in the fall.

CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY ENTERTAINED

Each year the Advertiser brings you at least three book-length novels that would retail for $6.00, more than our yearly subscription rate. Many of our readers follow each story, so they tell us. If you are not reading our present serial, you can pick it up by first reading the synopsis.

The News Analysis this week covers briefly several important subjects. Among them are the major offensive of Uncle Sam's forces in the Pacific area; the possibility of peace between the A. F. of L. and C. I. O.; India's drive for Independence; the Nazis' progress toward the grain and oil, and the end of the Saboteurs.

The unfilled demand for farm labor in July was the largest in history, 58 percent. A new bill is in the making to relieve the situation by registering all workers and students for possible transfer to farms. Read Baukhage's picture of this problem.

Are we going back to the "horse and buggy days" of the sea? Commerce Secretary Taylor thinks so to avoid the use of critical war materials to keep alive the ocean trade between North and South America. Read Washington Merry Go Round in this issue.

Admission To Fair To Be Scrap Metal

Anyone who goes, and everybody's going, to the 4-H-Utopia Fair this Saturday, is going to see a bang-up attraction absolutely FREE.

But wouldn't you feel better if in lieu of admission you made a small contribution which would help the Fair Grounds Committee toward needed improvements? And if your gift were to glance off and do a neat little piece of damage to the Germans or Japs, who wouldn't dig deep?

Alright, here's the County Salvage Committee's plan for coming to the Fair.

Let everybody bring a piece of scrap metal or other junk and pile it at the Fair Grounds. There's room in the rear deck of the car, in the truck bed or on the broad back of the ole' mule—however you come. Bring anything from a pound to a ton.

The proceeds of the sale will be turne dover to the Fair Grounds Committee and trucks from Walton & Readnour and the State Highway Dept. will dispatch it post-haste for the back-handed action of your good deed.

So bring it along and PILE IT HIGH!

TO SEEK LOCAL OPTION VOTE

Those who attend the various churches in Boone County will have an opportunity to sign a petition Sunday to call a local option election in Boone County.

Many people are wanting this and it can easily be done if everyone will do their part. To sign a petition you must be a legally registered voter in Boone County. You can register this week at the County Clerk's office, Burlington.

Use Cover Crops to Save Feed, Fertility

Particular stress should be put on Cover Crops this year for saving feed. This means the use of sufficient seed, sowed early on properly fertilized soil. Many cover crops are seeded too late to have the best growth for all pasture and for ground cover in the winter.

The Poultry Department states that good pasture may constitute from 15 to 25 percent of the total feed consumed by the flock.

Graddy Sellards, swine specialist, reports that one acre of good cover crop pasture would replace one acre of average corn yield for feeding swine. An Illinois experiment, comparing pasture-fed pigs and dry-lot fed pigs, showed that an acre of rye saved 14 bushels of corn, 1494 pounds of tankage and 747 pounds of soybean oilmeal. The experiment started when the pigs were 3 weeks old and continued for five weeks.

Good pasture, including cover crop pastures, are almost essential for profitable lamb production. Carefully conducted experiments show that luxurious pastures have reduced the cost of lamb production over six dollars per head in comparison with the grain-fed lambs and ewes.

Good cover crop pastures greatly increase milk production in dairy cattle and materially reduce cost of production. Good cover crops have been estimated to save the equivalent of $15.00 per acre in feed costs in milk production.

In addition to providing much feed for livestock and poultry, cover crops serve to control erosion, and to add organic matter to the soil. When manure is limited on the farm, green manure can be provided by growing good cover crops to be turned under.

By using winter, or hairy vetch in combination with small grain cover crops such as wheat or rye you can have two green manure crops to pasture and to turn under instead of one. Vetch seed should be inoculated where it is seeding on land for the first time.

It can be disked into the soil like wheat or small grain. It should be seeded the latter part of August or early September in order to give it time to make a good growth to go into the winter. By seeding it early you also get more pasture and growth to turn under.

Protect Soil, Reduce Feed Cost

1—Use cover crops, small grain and winter legumes.

2—Practice contour cultivation.

3—Keep more land in pasture. Keep a cover on your land at all times.

IMPORTANT MASS MEETING TO BE HELD SUNDAY AT FLORENCE HIGH SCHOOL

The Boone County Christian Citizenship Council will sponsor a meeting that is supported by all of the churches in the county at the Florence High School on Sunday, August 23 at 3:00 p. m.

Hon. Henry M. Johnson, a prominent lawyer from Louisville, who is President of the National Business Men's Research Foundation, and also President of the Kentucky Christian Citizen Council, will have the main address. Mr. Johnson is an outstanding Christian layman of the Disciples Church. His heart is in this great work. It is hoped the auditorium will be filled with people who are eager to hear this great address.

Special music is being planned. The Committee planning this meeting would like to have every church well represented, as well as all others who can come.

VICTORY BOOTH AT 4-H CLUB FAIR SAT.

Be sure to visit the Victory Booth, sponsored by the County War Bond and Stamp Committee, while at the Fair. Special material has been shipped to the Committee for this display and every effort has been made to obtain some war equipment, but as yet it is not known whether such equipment is available.

Information will be available on bonds and stamps and both will be on sale to all who will purchase at the booth throughout the day. During the day the committee will sponsor patriotic parts in the general program. This is being done for you to help you to cooperate 100%. Show your interest—visit the booth.

SOLOMON ISLANDS:
Marines Landed

The marines had landed. The Jap-infested Solomon islands northeast of Australia were the site. After seven days of savage fighting, the marines were reported consolidating their positions on three key islands —Tulagi, Florida and Guadacsnal. Key prize on Tulagi, aside from its harbor, was an airdrome in the mountains, said to be the best in that war sector.

The effectiveness of the entire offensive was indicated by a communique from General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia which reported that the marines had captured a Japanese airfield on Guadacsnal island.

Intent on India and massing strength along the Siberian frontier, the Japanese command did not like the idea of an American offensive in the Solomons. An offensive it was, however, with the intent of regaining lost territory, cutting a wedge into Japanese supply lines and carrying the fight to the enemy.

The marines were only a part of the attacking task force under command of Vice Admiral Robert L. Ghormley. They performed the necessary landing and cross-country fighting operations. But back of them was stout naval power and strong air forces which gave the Yankees a superiority the Japs had hitherto held.

U. S. AIR FORCE:
Active in Europe

The long-awaited entry of American fighting planes on a large scale into the European air war took place when U. S. fighting craft engaged in 31 operational sorties.

This baptism was regarded as a forerunner of the time when the sky above Germany would be filled with destruction-laden American planes.

In the initial operations, United States fighter squadrons flying in conjunction with Royal Air Force units made three flights over the French coast. Twenty other aerial missions were over the sea and eight were interception sorties off the coast of England, according to a communique of the United States European headquarters.

Meanwhile the RAF's assaults on German industrial centers continued with another blistering attack on Mainz in which high explosives and incendiaries were again rained down. The effectiveness of the British air blitz was attested by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, German minister of propaganda, who admitted that Germany is suffering "painful wounds" from the RAF's summer offensive, in an article for "Das Reich."

NAVY:
Policy Board Reshaped

Two sea dogs grown gray in their country's service were added to the navy general board, when Secretary Frank Knox announced a reorganization of the committee. They were Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, retired, who was named chairman of the board, and Admiral Thomas C. Hart, retired, former commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet.

Tha board's functions are to advise the secretary on matters of policy. The navy said the board's duties and responsibilities had greatly increased since America's entry into the war and that the reorganization brought to the board officers well qualified to deal with vital problems arising out of the war.

FARM INCOME:
Ahead of HCL

Increases in farm income have thus far been able to outrun rises in the cost of living, it was disclosed in a department of agriculture survey which showed that while net income of farm families averaged 46 per cent higher in 1941 and in the first three months of 1942 than in the comparable period in 1935-36, living costs had increased approximately one-third. Thus income outstripped the rise in living costs.

RUSSIA:
Cossacks No Barrier

The emphasis which Russian communiques placed on "saber-bearing Cossacks" suggested that the Red forces in the Caucasus lacked the heavy tank and armored equipment with which Nazi advances had previously been repelled.

The appearance of new geographic names in the communiques—Cherkess, Kotelnikovski, Krasnodor and Maikop—indicated the rapidity with which the German steamroller had been able to flatten out Russian resistance and move on to new objectives.

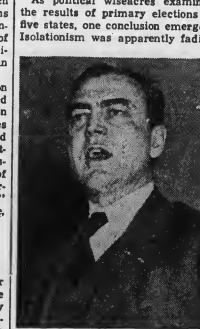
There was no doubt that Russia needed a second front and knew it.

A Soviet communique acknowledged that one swift thrust had brought the Nazis to Mineralyne Vody, only 140 miles as the crow flies from the oil wells of Grozny.

But things were not completely hopeless. While the Germans had seized some oil in the Maikop area of the Caucasus, the big prize was still out of their reach. Between them and Baku roae the barrier of the Caucasus mountains. Moreover, Marshal Timoshenko's forces were contesting every mile of advance stubbornly.

In an area north of the Caucasus the Russian position was grave, for Stalingrad, industrial city of the Volga, was menaced by a Nazi pincers movement from the Kletskaya area on the north and the Kotelnikovski sector in the south.

INDIA:
Gandhi Spins



As Mohandas K. Gandhi worked at his spinning wheel in his sumptuous prison in the Aga Khan's palace, the harvest of his passive resistance campaign against the British was a series of bloody riots that spread to the far corners of India.

Madras, heart of India's war industries, populous Bombay, Wardha in the central provinces and Madura in the far south had been the scenes of outbreaks, despite official threats of death and flogging for all who took part in the revolution. That the British had the situation well in hand was indicated by the fact that the disorders were sporadic and confined to big cities, whereas the countryside was virtually unaffected.

Meanwhile in Washington, the state department made it clear that American military forces in India had been ordered to "exercise scrupulous care to avoid the slightest participation in India's internal political problems." A statement explained that "The sole purpose of the American forces in India is to prosecute war of the United Nations against the Axis powers."

PRIMARIES:
Triumphant Fish

As political wiseacres examined the results of primary elections in five states, one conclusion emerged. Isolationism was apparently fading out of the picture as a prime political issue.

HAMILTON FISH

Outstanding example of this trend was tha result in President Roosevelt's home bailiwick, Dutchess county, New York, where Congressman Hamilton Fish, prewar critic of the President's foreign policy, won renomination by a three-to-one ratio. Informed of his success, Fish said: "Prewar issues were sunk at Pearl Harbor."

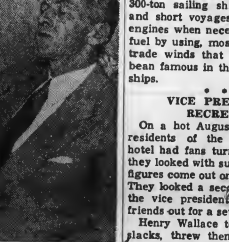
While results appeared contradictory in other states, the trend seemed to be running in this direction. Although Democratic voters defeated two prewar opponents of the administration's foreign policy in other states, these defeats were attributed by most observers to local dissatisfaction rather than emphasis on national issues. The defeated candidates in this case were Representativea Martin Sweeney of Ohio and Harry B. Coffee of Nebraska. Both were veterans in point of service in the House.

ALEUTIANS:
Japs Pay Dearly

Japan was paying a high price for the occupation of three western Aleutian islands. That was evident when a navy communique disclosed that 21 Jap ships had been sunk or damaged, an undetermined number of airplanes lost and important shore installations had been blasted since the invasion was first undertaken.

Latest exploit was a surprise attack by an American task force on Kisks harbor. Caught unawares, the Japs replied to the first American shells with anti-aircraft fire. In the raid, the navy said, shore batteries were silenced by cruisers and destroyers, fires started in the enemy camp area, a cargo ship apparently sunk and "the only resistance encountered was from aircraft."

Kiska is the Japs' main base in the Aleutians, although the Nipponese have also occupied Attu and Aggattu, at the tip of the island chain.



WAR SITUATION:
Realism Required

Examining the war situation with cold realism, Senator Millard E. Tydings, ranking msjority member of the senate naval affairs committee, warned that a United Nations victory cannot be expected before 1944 at the earliest. And, added the Maryland senator, the sooner the American people realize what lies ahead, the better off the United States will be.

"It ought to be perfectly obvious to any one that, barring some wholly unforeseen and unpredictable event," he said, in a radio broadcast, "there is not s chance for this war ending in 1942, and little chance for it to end before 1944 at the earliest, unless, of course, the United Nations are willing to submit to a Hitler-dictated peace.

Senator Tydings said it is useless to hope for a revolt of the German people against the Nazi.

"It is well to remember that the German people, whether Nazi or non-Nazi, have been winning almost constantly ever since the war started. The sooner we realize the grimness and gigantic size of the task ahead, the sooner we will have a complete comprehension of the great demands needed in blood and treasure."

DOCTORS:
Getting Scarcer

Mounting needs for doctors in the armed services will make necessary a speeding up of medical training and an expansion of their practice by physicians remaining in civilian life.

This was made evident when statistics released in Washington showed that the country has 60,000 doctors, whereas needs for military and civilian functions will require 140,000 physicians. As a result of this situation, selective service headquarters said local boards had already begun to reclassify physicians who can be spared from civilian service.

For every 1,000,000 men in the army, approximately 6,000 doctors are required. The navy's needs are 6,500 physicians to every 1,000,000 men. President Roosevelt's recent statement that 4,000,000 men are already under arms indicates that 24,000 doctors are ticketed for military service. The army recently declared it will need 20,000 more by the end of the year.

MISCELLANY

LONDON: Soil that had not been cultivated for almost 2,000 years has been reclaimed for wartime food production in Britain, Lord Woolton, food minister, announced. This land, which is producing oats, wheat and potatoes, has not been in crop since the days the Romans moved through the district.

WASHINGTON: Senator Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. suggested that gasoline rations for politicians be cut so that traveling salesmen in eastern states could have more motor fuel. Lodge asserted that the recent gasoline rationing order deprived salesmen of adequate gasoline and was "destroying their livelihood."

MEXICO CITY: The Mexican government gave the screen actor, Ramon Novarro, permission to enlist in the United States army without losing his Mexican citizenship, it was announced here.

WOODEN SAILING SHIPS

When Undersecretary of Commerce Wayne C. Taylor was flying to Rio for the Inter-America conference, he remarked:

"Our toughest problem is shipping. We have to find something that will give us the most cargo space, using the least critical material. That's the formula."

Then he looked out of the plane window and saw a tiny sailing vessel below. "You may laugh," he said, "but we may even come to that."

That was last January. What Taylor had said on an impulse stuck in his mind. At Rio he talked it over with Brazilians who were worried about moving their coffee crop. He was sure he had the answer to the submarine campaign—ships requiring no critical materials, ships that would coast along in shallow waters and keep alive the trade among the Americas.

But he struck a snag in Washington. The Maritime commission was not interested. Skeptics said it was a reversion to the "horse-and-buggy days" of the sea. Three times Taylor worked up his project in revised forms, but each time it failed to click.

Then he tried another tack. He published an account of the project in a trade weekly of the department of commerce. Immediately it struck fire. Boat builders all over the country wanted to take part in the enterprise. Official interest was kindled.

Result was that RFC allocated $10,000,000, with which the Rockefeller Office is setting up a corporation to build and acquire wooden sailing vessels for inter-American trade.

Two designs have been completed, one for a shallow draft vessel and one for a heavy sea vessel. Yards have been selected in Latin America, and contracts are being let.

There will be an endless belt of 300-ton sailing ships, making long and short voyages, using auxiliary engines when necessary, but saving fuel by using, most of the time, the trade winds that made the Caribbean famous in the days of Clipper ships.

VICE PRESIDENT'S RECREATION

On a hot August morning, when residents of the Wardman Park hotel had fans turned on full blast, they looked with surprise to see four figures come out on the tennis court. They looked a second time. It was the vice president and a party of friends out for a set of doubles.

Henry Wallace took off a pair of slacks, threw them into a corner, and trotted out onto the court in white shorts and a white sports shirt. It was eight o'clock ss the game began.

Wearing no hat or eyeshade, and wielding the racket in his left hand, Wallace entered into the game with the gusto of a high school boy. It was not tennis of professional quality, but it was high class amateur play. Frequently the ball was returned eight or ten times in a single exchange. Once when Wallace was at the net, he made five returns in succession, finally won the point.

At 9:05 the set ended. Wallace retreated to the corner of the court, pulled on his slacks, headed back to his apartment for a shower.

Other apartment dwellers, still sitting in front of the fans, sighed and shook their heads in wonderment.

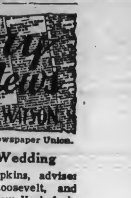
NO BOASTER



The 43rd division's signal company from Rhode Island has a young buck private who has a great future before him—of some kind.

The other morning, while on K.P. duty, he offered to bet the mess sergeant $5 that he could eat two good-sized watermelons in ten minutes flat. The sergeant was suspicious.

"What makes you think you can?" he parried.

"Because," was the reply. "I just polished off two when you weren't looking."

Shortage of Farm Labor Caused by War Demands

Wages 42 Per Cent Above 1941; Ray of Hope Seen in Release of Workers From Construction Jobs.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

While Mr. McNutt's man-power commission is considering the draft of a new bill for mobilizing the workers and the students and even the employers of the nation, the farmer is scratching his chin and wondering just where he will fit into the picture.

Farm laborers, of course, will be registered along with the rest, but will that cure the farmer's headaches?

Today the farm labor problem is full of superlatives and paradoxes. In the first place the unfulfilled demand for farm labor reported for July was the largest in history, 58 per cent of the total demand. In other words for every 100 hands needed, there were only 42 available.

That doesn't mean less people were working—as a matter of fact in spite of the shortage the number of people working on the farms has increased—there were 12,009,000 as of July 1. This seeming paradox merely means that more members of the farmer's family are working, more women, high school boys and girls and many older men who had retired. Older men who did a few hours light work a day, mending fences and odd jobs, are now working full time.

Of course the shortage of farm labor is due to the fact that the war and the war industries have absorbed so many people. And this competition has skyrocketed farm wages. They are the highest in 22 years. They are 42 per cent sbove the wages of a year ago. The average day wage rate is the highest since 1920. It is $2.45 and ranges all the way from $1.15 paid in South Carolina to $4.85 paid in the state of Washington. You can get some idea why the farmers are fighting for parity prices when you learn that the ratio of prices received to wage rates is 75 (the figure 100 standing for the ratio in the parity years, 1910 to 1914) that ratio stood at 83 last year since when it has dropped 8 points.

I asked a member of the department of agriculture if that wasn't an argument in favor of the farm bloc fight in congress to keep prices up. He replied that he thought it was an argument against war and high prices in general.

Well, there is the farmer's problem: although he paya almost double what he paid in the good old parity years 1910-1914, he still can get only 58 per cent of the labor he needs.

Now comes the government ready to mobilize 60 million labor units. That includes men, women and younger folks, with the purpose eventually of having the government assign each available person to the special job in the war effort for which he is capable.

But the farmer has peculiar difficulties. He may need a lot of help for say two days putting up his hay, and then things are pretty slack until the wheat comes along. Either he will have to provide for the support of the extra help between times, or depend on the "Oakies," the migrant labor whose trials and tribulations we've heard so much about. An example of this came up recently when it was suggested that Mexican labor be brought into this country. That is a problem in the state department's bailiwick. It was pointed out that it would not be possible to pay the Mexicans for only the work actually done because as aliens they could not be permitted to enter the country if they were allowed to become public charges. Therefore they would probably have to be guaranteed a weekly or even a monthly wage rate.

Local Problem

One reason why a general mobilization of labor is not of much help to the farmer is because the farm labor problem is largely a local one. In normal times the farmer usually knows the man he wants and can call him up on the telephone and be pretty sure he will come for the few days he will be needed at the peak season. Many of these men now, of course, are off working in an armament factory, or have been drafted.

In the totalitarian countries the authorities just take anybody they want by the scruff of the neck and send him off anywhere they want him to go.

The United States is not yet ready to break up families, or to move homes. Of course, transfer of large numbers of people has been achieved to some degree in the case of the war industries where the federal government provided or helped to provide adequate housing for new industrial communities which have suddenly mushroomed into existence.

There is just one ray of light on the farm labor problem and that is this: Although we expect that there will be a still greater demand for farm help next year, it is possible that some of it can be recruited from construction workers with farm experience. It is believed that many of the plants and other buildings which had to be constructed to meet the war needs will be fairly well completed by next year. This may release a number of workers.

Of course, the manpower mobilization bill will be very valuable in one respect. It will enable the manpower commissioner to flip a card and find out exactly what anyone who can do anything can do, what he is doing now, and where he is.

The mere registration of people has a helpful effect, too. I know a former farmer who is now working in an office. He was one of the recent registrants in the 18 to 65 group —nesrer 65 thsn 18. He said to me, "When I filled that card out and put down 36 years experience on a farm, I thought to myself, 'well, here I am, Uncle Sam knows how to locate me and old as I am, I think I could still swing a pitchfork if they need me.'"

A Good Word For Mr. R. Riedel

In these days when wastefulness in Washington is the theme of many a letter, there is one government employee who probably has known personally more senators intimately than most Washingtonians and he hasn't had a pay raise in 14 years!

And according to most of my colleagues he has more than deserved a raise.

He is a bubbling young man in his early thirties whose job is presa relations officer for the United States senators. And his functions are multifold. He labors in the service, not only of senators but also of newspaper men, radio reporters and commentators and by no means the least in their particularly pressing demands, news photographers.

He is Richard Riedel, who lacks one year of being in the government service a quarter of a century. He started as a page boy in the senate at the age of nine. He has literally grown with the work and the work has grown with him. When he first came to the senate he was too small to reach up to the counter to sign his nsme for his pay, he had to go in behind to get it. Today, he stands 6 feet 2 inches. And the work he does has expanded, too, immeasurably since the time he just ran errands for the senators.

Riedel remembers when the "lobby" of the senate, that hallway just off the chamber through which the senators pass when they leave the floor, was a teeming alleyway from which nobody was excluded. Any visitor, any lobbyist, had a right to come in there and buttonhole a solon as he emerged from the chamber.

But in 1919, Sen. Philander C. Knox, earlier secretary of state, changed all that.

Now this sacred precinct is tread upon only by legitimate members of the press and radio. And, democratically enough, where they hold most of their interviews is in the President's room. That's the first one to the right just off the "lobby." A President uses this ornate salon about once in his term of office, and then when he announces to a committee from the senate that he is through just before his successor takes the oath.

At the doorway of the lobby Riedel stands with some of his colleagues. The newsmen come to him, demand the presence of a senator and are usually accorded an interview unless the gentleman in question is about to speak on the floor, or dares not miss some procedure vital to him or his constituents.

But in the "lobby" and its adjoining anterooms no "lobbyists" may enter.

White House Wedding

WHEN Harry Hopkins, adviser to President Roosevelt, and Mrs. Louise Macy, New York fashion writer, were married in the White House recently, it marked the 15th time that the halls of the Executive Mansion had resounded to the strains of the wedding march. The first was back in 1811 during President Madison's administration and the last was 103 years later while Woodrow Wilson was President. Here is the chronological record:

1811—Thomas Todd, associate justice of the Supreme court, and Lucy Payne Washington, the widow of George Washington's nephew and the sister of Dolly Madison, the President's wife.

1820—Samuel L. Gouverneur and Marie Hester Monroe, daughter of President James Monroe.

1828—John Adams, son of President John Quincy Adams, and Marie Helen Jackson, niece of Mrs. John Quincy Adams.

1829—Alphonsa Joseph Pageot, a member of the French legation, and Miss Della Lewis, daughter of a member of President Jackson's "kitchen cabinet."

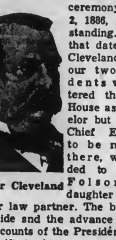
1842—William Waller and Elizabeth Tyler, daughter of President John Tyler.

1874—Algernon C. F. Sartoris, an officer of the British legation, and Nellie Grant, daughter of President U. S. Grant.

1878—Russell Hastings, United States army officer, and Emily Platt, niece of President Rutherford B. Hayes.



1886—President Grover Cleveland and Miss Frances Folsom.

1906—Congressman Nicholas Longworth and Alice Roosevelt, daughter of President Theodore Roosevelt.

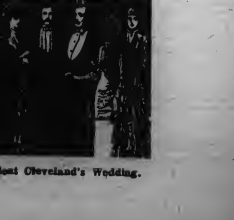
1914—William Gibbs McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, and Eleanor Wilson, dsughter of President Wilson.

Of all the weddings that have taken place in the White House, the ceremony on June 2, 1886, was outstanding. For on that date Grover Cleveland, one of our two Presidents who entered the White House as s bachelor but the only Chief Executive to be married here, was wedded to Frances Folsom, the daughter of his former law partner. The beauty of the bride and the advance newspaper accounts of the President's wedding gift to her (it was a superb diamond necklace) and of the lavish display of flowers which were to decorate the Blue Room, where the ceremony was to be held — all combined to create great public interest in the event.



Grover Cleveland

Frances Folsam

According to a contemporary newspaper description, "the fireplaces were filled with red begonias to represent burning fires, with centaurees scattered at their base to imitate ashes, while blossoms were laid below in the form of tiles. One mantelpiece was banked with dark pansies, bearing the date in light pansies; the other with red roses."

Although only a few relatives of the bride and high public officials were invited to the ceremony, a vast crowd gathered around the door of the White House to hear the music of the United States marine band when the ceremony began. It was still there when the newlyweds tried to slip out the back door of the White House and it showered them with rice and old slippers. Grover Cleveland may have been President of the United States but on that day he was a bridegroom and American democracy insisted upon exercising its traditional right of treating him as one!

Tea for Three—Dregs for Germany

With all the talk of bombing Germany out of the war, this meeting of the U. S. and British bomber chiefs in London is significant. Shown having tea are (left to right): Brig. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, bomber chief U. S. air force in Britain; Gen. Carl Spaatz, commander U. S. air forces in Britain; and A. T. Harris, chief of Britain's bomber command.

Navy 'Takes Over'

A thousand employees of the General Cable corporation plant at Bayonne, N. J., walked out shouting, "Let the government take over." The President ordered the idle plant taken over by the navy, an action which had been threatened earlier by William H. Davis, WLB chairman, shown as he was interviewed by newsmen.

Household Hints by Lynn Chambers

It's a Good Morning With Flapjacks in Syrup!
(See Recipes Below.)

Breakfast Time

Whether you wake to the crowing of the rooster or the jingle of an alarm clock, it's a signal to be up and about seeing to the day's work. But first! A hearty breakfast is in order so that the system can get started on its day's routine in the proper form. No matter whether it's for the head of the family going off to the defense plant, daughter on her way to the nurses' aid class, mother or the youngsters, no one should skip blithely over this meal of the day.

For years doctors and dieticians have looked askance at those who passed up a real up-and-at-them breakfast because it doesn't give the body a chance to start functioning early in the day. If you're fat, you need fruit-egg-toast-and-beverage breakfasts to start your metabolism working at top speed to start tearing down of excess tissues.

If you're thin, then you need just as much of a breakfast with a few more trimmings, to start building yourself. If you're normal, you still need the hearty breakfast so you can maintain your health and give your body its daily nutritional requirements. And one of the best recommendations for a real breakfast is the good way it starts you on your day's work. None of that drowsy, it's-hard-to-wake-up-in-the-morning feeling. No, Ma'am!

Hardest thing about breakfasts is that it's easy to get into a rut by serving the same foods morning after morning. This is rather strange, considering how much time and effort is spent on getting variety into the other two-squares a day. Well, why not variety for breakfast?

You can have this variety in fruit. Yes, I know you like juice pretty well, but you'll get out of the morning doldrums quickly enough if you punctuate the breakfast with favorite fruits-in-season, other fruit juices and some of those canned fruits you put up during the summer months.

Toast? If you insist on toast, try using whole wheat, rye, raisin, cracked wheat, etc. Naturally, the bread should be enriched so you'll get the most out of toast. And then there are all sorts of hot breads that will send the family cheering off to work—blueberry muffins, pecan rolls, muffins, and flapjacks!

Eggs in all manner of ways are a good standby. Poached, fried, coddled, baked, scrambled, a la goldenrod, or combined with ham, sizzlin' sausage or crisp brown bacon—there you have a week's ideas.

The Cereals.

At least one serving of cereals is the nutrition requirement for the day. This is most easily served at breakfast, with cream and sugar and perhaps a few slices of fresh fruit or berries. Ready-prepared cereals are delightful, especially in the warmer weather — they're crisp, light, and nutritious. Recently some of the prepared cereals have been scientifically restored so they have all the whole-grain richness and nutritive value in them.

Light as down flapjacks are a welcome sight at breakfast! Try these:

Feather Fluff Griddle Cakes.
(Makes about 18 cakes)

2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups rich sour milk or buttermilk
1½ cups white flour
½ cup prepared pancake flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder

Have all ingredients at room temperature. Sift dry ingredients thoroughly. Add milk to eggs. Gradually stir in dry ingredients. Stir just enough to make a smooth batter. Cook on ungreased griddle. Try out one cake and if batter is too thick, add a little more milk.

Fried eggs are good to serve with these griddle cakes. Fry them thus: Slip eggs into a scant ⅛ inch layer of moderately hot fat. Cook at moderate heat, dipping fat over eggs to cook to desired doneness. Turn, if desired. Serve at once on warmed platter.

Sunday Breakfast.

Place sausage links in a frying pan, add a small amount of water. Do not prick the skins. Cover and let steam 5 minutes, then drain. Cook over slow heat, add 3 tablespoons of peach juice to 8 sausages and let brown. Serve with poached eggs on top of toasted English muffins. Red currant jelly or golden peach jam makes a delectable dish.

If you've never tried old-fashioned scrapple, you have a real treat a-comin' to you:

Pork Sausage Scrapple.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups cornmeal
4 cups boiling, salted water
1 pound sausage, in bulk

Cook cornmeal in rapidly boiling salted water, and add sausage to mixture. Blend thoroughly. Rinse a loaf pan with cold water and pack in hot scrapple. Let stand in icebox overnight, covered with waxed paper. Dip in beaten egg and fry until golden brown. Serve with spiced applesauce, cranberry sauce or maple syrup.

A variation of the ham 'n' eggs theme is this:

Frivolettes With Ham.
(Serves 6)

6 hard-cooked eggs, remove yolks
4 tablespoons grated cheese
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Salt and pepper
Melted butter

Mash yolks and mix with cheese, butter, seasonings. Refill whites. Press together. Pour a rich cream sauce over them and sprinkle buttered crumbs over them. Brown a few minutes in a hot oven. Serve on browned circles of ham.

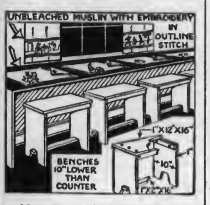
Lynn Says:

Tips for Breakfast Fruits: You're going to be a little short on sugar so do the most with what you have. A little salt in cooked fruit or sprinkled on such things as melons brings out true fruit flavor, requires less sugar.

Lemon or lime juice with melon enhances the natural sweetness. Try it.

Orange juice, chilled before the fruit is squeezed, is an excellent pep-you-up. Let the sugar stand on grapefruit a while (while the coffee percolates) and the sugar will melt and go further. Try eating fruit or juice first, but saving half to finish off your breakfast—it will leave a fresh taste in your mouth.



Fruit stewed should have sugar added after it is stewed, with a pinch of salt. You won't need as much sweetening, this way.

Cook dried fruits with a slice of lemon or orange. These citrus fruits have an affinity with dried apricots, peaches, prunes and apples.

ON THE HOME FRONT with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

EVERYONE knows that quick meals in the kitchen save time, but it was both time and space that had to be saved in this kitchen where breakfasts were eaten on the run and the children had but a few minutes for lunch. The problem was solved by building a 16-inch-wide counter under a window and then making simple stools to be slipped under it when not in use. The dimensions and construction of the stools are shown here. A saw, a screw driver and a wood chisel are the only tools that were used.

The stools were painted cream color to match the woodwork and the counter was covered with blue linoleum like the floor covering. Cream colored place mats, napkins and window curtains embroidered in colorful Mexican figures were then added to give a smart note of gaiety.

NOTE: These curtains, mats and napkins were made of flour bags and the gay figures tell a story of life down Mexico way. A flower seller; a peon on his burro; a caballero with his guitar; a man leading a pig to market, and girls carrying jugs and baskets on their heads are all worked in simple outline stitch. Transfer pattern including enough figures for six mats, six napkins, borders for one pair of curtains and extra figures for several pot holders, is available to our readers. You will find directions also for many other fascinating things to make in Mrs. Spears Book 7. Send order direct to:

Household Hints

All wild meat should be soaked clean of blood. An onion roasted with the meat improves the flavor.

Put a small piece of hard soap in the sewing basket to rub over yarn or thread so it can be put through the eye of a needle with less difficulty.

Knitted garments should be laid flat to dry, shaped to the outline drawn before the garment was washed.

Wash beans before soaking. Then they can be cooked or baked in the water in which they were soaked, with a small onion added.

Peroxide will remove perfume stains from linen bureau scarf. Keep a blotting pad under scarf to protect dressing table or bureau top when perfume is spilled on it.

J. Fuller Pep
By JERRY LINK

"Fuller," says Aunt Netty, the other day. "Folks are like wine. Some sour with age, and some, like you, get better!"

"Jeebbe," says I, pickin' up that little compliment, "that's because I feel so good most of the time." For, you know, folks, when you feel good your disposition's apt to be good, too. But to do that, you got to eat right, which includes gettin' all your vitamins. And KELLOGG'S PEP is extra-rich in the two most often short in ordinary meals—vitamins B₁ and D. Mighty fine-tastin', too. Try it!

Kellogg's Pep

A delicious cereal that supplies per serving (1 oz.): the full minimum daily need of vitamin D; 1/4 the daily need of vitamin B₁.

THE SHEEP BREEDING SEASON FOR THE FARM FLOCK

The good sheep producer is now thinking about what needs to be done to insure a good lot of market lambs next June and early July.

Good healthy ewes and good purebred rams are essential to the production of good lambs.

Kentucky Extension Circular No. 301 gives timely information about the Breeding Season for the farm flock of sheep. Get a copy from your extension agent.

The annual loss to sheep producers from parasites amounts to a large figure. Much of this loss could be reduced if proper disease and parasite control measures were followed. Sheep producers are using the Copper Sulfate (bluestone) treatment and in many cases the combined treatment. Get a copy of Kentucky Extension Circular No. 152 on Stomach Worms in Sheep.

Sheep producers who have had trouble with the "nodular worm" disease can find control measures in the Phenothiazine treatment. This treatment is also effective for stomach worms.

In addition to treatments and control measures, clean pastures are necessary to make a parasite prevention program effective. An important step in any health program is to remove the conditions that tend to make disease and parasites grow and thrive. This applies to all kinds of livestock and poultry.

Birthday Party

MISSION WORK IN BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAINS

Fifty-five years ago a young man came to America from England and asked for Mission work in the Episcopal Church of America. The Blue Ridge Mountains around Charlottesville, Va., needed just such a man—Frederic W. Neve—who started the mountain work that has revolutionized the mountaineers of that section.

Todays fruitage is thirty beautifully equipped missions, within a radius of 7-15, up to 30 or 40 miles of Charlottesville. The writer visited a cluster of these missions out in the mountains from 20 to 25 miles West of Charlottesville—the approach to them about 12 miles of hard surface road, the rest well-worked mountain roads, and going out on them at sunset, one faces a grandeur of mountain scenery, equal almost, to that of Sky Line Drive, which is not far away, and reached by winding precipitous mountain roads. The mountain visitors, I think, usually get one or more trips in the Workers' cars to Sky Line Drive, which presents mountain scenery surpassed by few, if any, places in America.

Of the aforementioned cluster of missions is Crossroads, a lovely little place with a level woodland background, composed of an up-to-date bungalow, modernly equipped even to a furnace in the basement, a lovely church, the lower story of which is a long hall used for Sunday School work and recreation and parties. A club composed of the girls and boys for miles around meet here one night a week to play many kinds of indoor games—many of them by music. Between the bungalow and church is the "clothing bureau," a real little store building where the mission boxes are opened. Each of the thirty Missions has its own bureau and opents it's own boxes and it's very interesting to stand behind the counter and help keep store and see the mountain women and girls "seeking bargains," and pretty dresses.

Seven miles from Cross Roads is Mission Home, interesting because the oldest of the 30 Missions, and because Miss Mary Ellen Bedinger, one of our Boone County girls, is one of the two workers in charge there. A pretty old place with a nine-room residence and a lovely stone bell tower in one front corner of the yard, holding a sweet-toned bell which is heard far over the mountains every Sunday morning. On a knoll across the road is a long two-story hall, built of stone, for Sunday School and recreation work. Nearby is the church—plain and old, but pretty within. In the yard is a pretty little vineclad post office, kept by the two workers there. Mail comes in and goes out twice daily.

Just around a curve in the road from Mission Home is the Preventorium—a long modern stone building for the care of undernourished children between the ages of 4 and 11, built and run by an English lady, Miss Park. Thirty children at a time are beautifully taken care of and nursed back to health before sending them back to their homes. Our Boone County worker is not connected with the work of the Preventorium except for Sunday dinner in the guest dining room, but she and co-workers were, her first year in the mountains, in charge of Cross Roads where now a Rector and his wife are stationed. They still teach in the afternoon, S. S. there, work in girls, a Woman's Auxiliary, young people's club and choir practice.

They visit the people, do "first aid" work and many times take their subjects to the hospital of the University of Va. Clinic in Charlottesville, where the mountain people get the best medical treatment and nursing free or for a nominal price.

Each Mission has one or more guest rooms in the home for friends, an auto for business and pleasure. The work and life is free, useful and attractive.

The Mission Home workers have access to a farm where there are riding horses at their disposal in leisure time.

The mountain women make afghans and rugs and embroider and sell their finished work sometimes on Sky Line Drive to tourists or in Charlottesville. One mission specializes in souvenirs, made of mountain materials.

They not only receive mission boxes, but the girls and women's auxiliary sew and knit and send out mission boxes and do Red Cross work.

Thorne's wheat produced more than twice as much as some other kinds in Jefferson county.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

NICHOLSON NEWS—

"Men ought always to pray." Without prayer we can not have the right relationship with God. It is the channel of His blessing, and the golden elevator that lifts the soul to the presence of God. May we all repair to this place of quiet retreat, pleading for the hastening of the day when peace shall again reign, and the soldier boys come marching home. "The fervent, effectual prayer of the righteous availeth much."

The world wide day of prayer is to be observed Sept. 7th instead of Sept. 27. Oh, that America would heed the admonition given in the last issue of The Advertiser by a noble man of God across the sea, and escape suffering a similar fate!

"KEEP 'EM RINGING"

THE Liberty Bell is ringing again — throughout this militant land.

But it's not just one bell that rings today.

Tens of thousands of them are clanging "right of way for the U.S.A." as the troop trains roll, as freight trains bring together at the war plants every sort of raw material, and as they speed tanks, guns, planes and munitions from assembly lines to our fighting forces.

For the bells of America's locomotives—locomotives moving a million tons of freight a mile for every minute of the day and night—are Liberty Bells of 1942.

To do their part in keeping this "War of Movement" rolling, the railroads have enlarged their plant and increased the efficiency of their operations.

Today railroad equipment and railroad men are delivering the finest transportation job in history.

The size of that job is constantly increasing as ships are withdrawn from domestic service and as rubber-tired traffic turns more and more to the rails. To handle a growing job, railroads have bought and built more cars and locomotives, and would like to get still more. Other national needs for critical materials, however, have made it impossible for them to get as much new equipment as they would like. But you can count on it—the railroads will make the best use of what they have and what they can get. You can count on it—they'll keep up their all-out effort toward the great objective—to keep America working, to keep America fighting, to keep America free.

KENTUCKIANS HAVE A RIGHT TO KNOW THE RIGHT ANSWERS!

Q: Isn't strict regulation of legal beer and other beverages better than the unregulated conditions of Prohibition?

A: Positively! Prohibition's "blind pigs", speakeasies and bootleggers undermined the morals of our people and their respect for law and order. The government spent millions in enforcement, lost countless millions in revenue. Today, legally licensed beer outlets are under constant official surveillance and supervision. Gangsterism is gone. And beer alone provides the Federal Government with nearly half a billion dollars a year in much-needed tax revenue.

HARRY D. FRANCE, State Director

Q: Do present laws provide adequate control of the sale of beer?

A: Yes. Under present enforcement methods, the Kentucky A.B.C. board maintains a staff of field agents to inspect licensed retail beer outlets. Law violations result in suspension or revocation of licenses. County and municipal officials are quick to move in wherever a proprietor violates the law. The irresponsibles are being systematically eliminated.

Q: How is the beer industry in Kentucky meeting its public responsibilities?

A: By helping the authorities to maintain decent conditions wherever beer is sold. Proprietors are warned against allowing infractions. Persistent law violators are cited to proper officials by the Kentucky Committee of the Brewing Industry Foundation. With your cooperation, the remaining few undesirable beer outlets can be cleaned up or closed up—without eliminating the great majority of law-abiding beer retailers.

BOMBS BURST ONCE

By GRANVILLE CHURCH

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. They arrive to find both Zora and her husband dead. Although he investigated the fruit company that hired him before accepting a job as chief engineer, Jeff is already suspicious of the company and of his employer, Senor Montaya. Conversations with Jerry McInnis, who works for a rival company, and with Bill Henderson and Slats Monahan reveal that there is something going on and that Mitchell and Zora were killed because they knew too much. Bill Henderson is killed, and Jeff is convinced his death is murder. Jeff and Montaya are talking to the company's two flyers, Ryden and Lannestock.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IX

This trend of talk was not to his liking, and Montaya patted Karl Ryden comfortingly on the shoulder and steered the conversation into other channels, mentioning at last the fatal injury of Bill Henderson the night before.

"They were good friends, the three of them. Karl and Gosta both feel Henderson's death keenly."

The proprieties satisfied, Montaya put a period to the meeting, much to the young men's relief.

"You haven't visited the airfield yet, Mr. Curtis," Montaya said in parting. "You can telephone any time it is—ah, convenient, to learn if Karl or Gosta is there to show you about. If you play tennis, they will be glad to have a new partner."

The three men left. Curt settled back in his chair, holsted his feet, reached for his pouch. He felt vaguely unsatisfied — and couldn't put his finger on the reason.

Curt was a good organizer. He put his program on paper that Sunday night, at home, and made prodigious strides in the field during the next two days.

One big job was doubling man hours on railroad work—ballasting the main line, the pushing of two spur lines to feed farms already planted or now being planted.

Another was in putting all earth-moving machines and crews on two shifts a day, using floodlights hastily improvised from ordinary tin dish-pans and washbasins.

There were minor matters under the Chief Engineer — farmhouses, wells and windmills, furniture manufacture, production of concrete items—culvert pipe, building blocks, reinforced girders and slabs to bridge farm ditches — all coming along at a fine pace.

But the really important jobs, the Rio Negro levee, the railroad branch lines to haul from present plantings to Tempujo three or four months from now when fruit should start to come in—these things had dragged! The drainage ditches, too, were far behind schedule.

Curt sometimes talked over his problems with Lee. This usually amounted to a monolog, but putting bothersome angles into words seemed to help. And here was something in which Lee had a vital interest.

It was Tuesday evening. The children had been put to bed, and Curt was lounging on the darkened veranda, propped up with cushions, Lee in the curve of his arm. His dangling left foot lazily pushed the couch-hammock back and forth. It was the half-hour after dinner that he was snatching for himself.

They'd held a silence for some time, lulled by the gentle rattling of young palms in the evening breeze, so like rain on a tin roof. The lightning slither of a lizard darting up the screen to the wide overhanging eaves roused Curt. He sat straight and reached into a bip pocket for his tobacco pouch. When he spoke it was in a sober voice.

"Lee, I'm worried. No, not worried—puzzled is the word. There's something rotten going on here, and I don't know what it is. I'm afraid of stepping into something unaware. Like Mitchell might have. If I knew what it was, I could steer clear."

"What—what do you mean, Jeff?"

"You remarked about the coincidence of those three deaths. I didn't intend to go over this with you, but you're level-headed and whatever it is I've got us into, you're in it. You should have the whole picture."

"Jeff, what are you trying to say?"

"Lee, I'm convinced those three deaths were no coincidence. That they were all deliberate murders. The second and third, I suspect, to cover up the first."

"I knew it! Zora Mitchell couldn't possibly have committed suicide! Not the Zora I used to know. But Bill Henderson? What you told me about his accident . . ."

Curt was silent a moment. "I know. It looked like an accident, sure enough. But Lee, last Wednesday Bill told me he knew who killed Mitch, and then refused to tell me anything more for fear of involving me. He pointed out my precarious position, having you and the kids here. Said he'd work it out himself, for me to keep hands off. Well, I was all set to get behind that on Saturday night, and you know what happened."

He felt Lee stiffen beside him, but she didn't speak.

He went on. "You didn't know, I didn't tell you, but Zora Mitchell sent me an urgent note warning me not to come to Tierra Libre, not to bring my family. I got it in New Orleans and like a fool didn't look at that batch of mail readdressed to us until we'd dropped the pilot and were out in the Gulf. Then it was too late to do anything about it. I kept quiet, not wanting to alarm you. I intended to talk with her first chance I got. But she—died."

He read fear in Lee's voice when she finally said, "Jeff, what are you leading up to?"

"I don't know, Lee, I don't know. I've been going over this business until I'm dizzy! Look. Here are several possibilities. Listen and give me your reactions."

"Go on."

"First, Bill Henderson knew who killed Mitchell, and why. That 'why' is somehow important, from the way Bill stressed it. He was done away with before he could pass it on. Zora knew something, and she died. Well, these two deaths would seem to be for the purpose of covering up Mitchell's murder. Then, the crux of the whole business is why Mitch was killed. Was it really a personal grudge, or was it something deeper?" He paused.

"Go on," Lee said, in a small far-away voice.

"Well, Mitch was no fool, yet at the rate the work was going here, the coming rainy season would have flooded the whole valley again. The railroad and all the planting done this year would have been washed out!"

"Jeff, what are you driving at?"

"You think Montaya had him killed?"

"Just this. You've read my contract. Pretty stiff one. I'm absolute boss in my department—practically—so long as I follow the plans laid down. Well, if Mitchell had a contract like mine, and we can assume he did have, and if he was deliberately slowing up the work, then his death was very convenient for Montaya."

"Sabotage! You're advancing that as the reason? You think Montaya had him killed?"

"I don't say that, honey," Curt answered doggedly. "It simply seems a possible answer."

"Well," Lee replied slowly, "I know you don't like Senor Montaya. I don't, either. But that's simply personal taste on our part. We have no reason to dislike him. Or have we?"

"No."

"It's an ironclad contract you have, sure—for Montaya. There's an escape clause which would let him cancel the contract if you should turn out incompetent or unsatisfactory. Surely he could have got rid of Mitchell in a case of sabotage."

"Sabotage is difficult to prove sometimes!" Curt exclaimed. "For example, I've found Mitchell was making the dragline men use cables too slender for the job. They kept breaking. Every break slowed up the work a little more. There are many ways he could, or I could, slow up the work without enabling Montaya to invoke that clause you mention.

"That clause isn't as elastic as you think. A court, in an ensuing breach of contract case against the company had Mitchell been let out, might have obliged Montaya to pay heavy damages. Not only for remainder of salary under contract, but punitive damages for injury to reputation."

"I see what you mean," Lee said slowly. "But no, Jeff, I can't see Montaya having Mitchell killed for any such simple reason. And two other murders, too!"

"One planned murder," Curt pointed out. "The other two were follow-ups."

Lee said nothing.

"Well, another point. Montaya's put this Emilio Vargas on my tail as a bodyguard. Lee, I never had any trouble with native labor—or any labor. Kid 'em along and you can get anything done. I don't need a bodyguard. Montaya may or may not be involved in these murders—either way, I can understand his wanting to hush them up with the least trouble—but at least he does know what's behind them. Otherwise, why this Emilio Vargas?"

There was another silence. Then, "You say you had several possibilities," Lee reminded him.

"Yes. Well, let's go back to Mitchell. The fact remains that Mitchell was slowing up the work. That's conclusive. But why? Was he secretly working for C. A. T. or for Associated, say, to prevent rising competition?"

"Well-i, in that case Montaya might have reason to kill him. But Jeff, I simply can't see Mitchell as that kind of snake-in-the-grass. Whatever we might say about his social graces, he was certainly honest about his work. That's my idea."

"Mine, too. All right, could Old Man Moore have ordered it done? You know big business has few scruples when the matter of money and competition is concerned."

Lee shook her head. Light from the room beyond faintly outlined the two on the couch. It was a positive shake.

"No. I wouldn't have put it past him if this were twenty years ago. He's older now, more careful and sly. And I don't believe he's that much concerned today about what competition he'd get from this outfit."

"It may be pretty stiff competition, Lee! Things look mighty good here for bananas."

"Even so," she answered. "No, I can't accept that."

"Well," he went on, "suppose Montaya—this is his project, lock, stock, and barrel—suppose Montaya has a personal enemy determined to wipe him out, who goes to work on his Chief Engineer as the most important single factor for the purpose."

She thought this over.

"That theory's full of holes. Why wouldn't such an enemy go after Montaya direct?"

"Make him suffer piecemeal?" Curt suggested. "Bit by bit?"

"No. That wouldn't explain Mitchell's slowing up the work. That's an important angle, from all you've said."

"I know."

"Darling," said Lee, troubled, "we're right back where we started. I can see your point in wanting to know more. But oh, Jeff, darling, be careful. Don't do anything that would put you in danger. I just couldn't bear it if anything should—should happen to you. And we've the children."

He pulled her to him.

"Don't worry, sweetheart," he said, his words muffled in the thickness of her hair. "I'm no fool. I shan't stick my neck out. I can't forget you and the kids. But I can't promise to drop the matter completely. I've got to know what's behind Mitch's murder. I've got to," Curt insisted, "to protect myself from a possible similar danger. I can't help feeling that Montaya's in back of all this, but I don't see myself in any danger because I'm too valuable to him. He has too much at stake. For proof of that, there's the bodyguard he's assigned me . . ."

Yes, there was the bodyguard. To irk Curt more and more. Though Montaya may have had Curt's safety in view, Curt also felt himself to be under rigid surveillance. Not a chance could he find to get in a word privately with Slats Monahan.

The following day Curt took to the field again. He made a fast trip to the levee camp, saw his plans for speeding the work were coming right along, tried again to get Monahan aside. It was no go.

But Vargas did have his uses. Not only did he relieve Curt of many minor details, but he kept an eye on his well-being, too. He saw to it there were lunches and vacuumed drinks when they'd be too far from camp or village. And on this trip, when Curt scratched his arm badly on a poisonous puncture-weed, Emilio was close at hand to drag out a first-aid kit and swab it with mercurochrome. He also insisted on returning to San Alejo early, that the wound might be better cared for.

The mercurochrome had little effect and the flesh about the scratch swelled. Reaching San Alejo in the middle of the afternoon, Curt unloaded himself of musette bag, field glasses, pistol and cartridge belt, as he piled out of the motorcar at the station.

"I'll go on to the hospital from here," he told Emilio. "You can drop these at the office for me. I'll see you in the morning."

Leaving the doctor's office, Curt took a turn in the corridor by mistake and found himself in the patio used by convalescents. Since he hadn't yet had a full look around, he decided to push on farther.

The patio was squared by hospital and service buildings, open at the rear corners. Wandering out one of these openings Curt found himself at the brink of a sharply descending ravine. From here he had a much wider view of the airfield than obtainable from the railroad. There were men on the field and both planes were in front of the hangar.

He pulled a sour face at thought of the two pilots, but mused, "We're here together for a long time. If I can break them down, so much the better. Cost nothing to try. Be pleasanter all around."

LOW BACK PAINS

Most sufferers from low back pain naturally reach for help to relieve pain rather than search for the cause. They will take painkilling drugs, use heat and electricity, hot baths, massage, and other methods of treatment. In cases where pain is due to strain or other injury the use of heat to muscles that are stretching the spine away from the point of injury is good treatment but getting the strained or sprained parts back into their proper position would get the patient well in much less time.

In speaking of low back pain I have usually pointed out that most cases are really due to infection—tonsils, teeth, gall bladder, intestine—and the remainder to injury—strain and sprain of certain joints, injury to the disk or cushion between the bones of the spinal column. Sometimes the strain or sprain is due to poor posture.

Dr. P. M. Girard, Dallas, Texas, in Archives of Physical Therapy, points out that while low back pain is present in the spot where the infection or injury occurs, that pain also occurs in places distant from the point of infection or injury. This is known as a "referred" pain and beeause it occurs at a distance from the infected or injured spot, the cause may be overlooked. On the other hand, pain may occur in lower back and down back of thighs and be due not to injury or infection at point of pain but to growths in spinal cord, rupture, appendicitis, turns or bends of uterus, growths in ovsry, and stone in bladder.

A slight injury due to swinging a golf club or making a misstep may tear a muscle, rupture a ligament, or injure the joint holding one spinal bone to the next one.

The more the subject of low backache is investigated the more physicians are coming to believe that poor posture—letting the body slump or sag—is a more frequent cause than was formerly thought. This is the reason that when injury is the cause (as shown by relief from pain when at rest) and both patient and physician are unable to find any history of injury, they forget about poor posture as a cause.

Overweight and Gland Troubles

There was a time when the only method of reducing weight was to eat less food, take more exercise, or both. This is still the best method and the only one used in about nine of every ten cases.

However, now that it is known that if certain glands do not manufacture enough juice, an accumulation of fat will occur, physicians are able to inject or give by mouth enough animal gland extract to overcome this lack and so the fat is removed.

Generally speaking, where there is lack of thyroid extract or juice, the excess fat accumulates in all parts of the body. This occurs six times as often in women as in men. If lack of pituitary extract, excess fat accumulates across abdomen, shoulders, chest, upper arms, upper legs and hips. It usually starts in the teens and the youngster wants large quantities of sweets. Lack of sex gland extract results in excess fat across abdomen and more particularly across hips and buttocks. This is common following menopause in women. There are cases where the excess fat is due to lack of extract in more than one of the glands.

When the lack of gland extract has been definitely shown, the use of gland extracts under the supervision of the physician will give results particularly when there is reduction in the food intake also. However, for an overweight who "thinks" his excess fat is due to lack of gland extract, trying to treat himself is dangerous as severe illness, collapse, and death have followed self treatment.

Remember, gland extracts wholly are needed in less than 5 per cent of overweight cases and, in part, in less than 10 per cent.

Then there are the "cures" for overweight that so many try because they want a short and easy road to normal weight. Some of these "cures" where the drug used is known to the physician and its reaction, even if dangerous, can be controlled, have been used in "extreme" cases where the individual was 100 to 250 pounds overweight.

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JACOB'S VISION OF GOD

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 28:10-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whithersoever thou goest.—Genesis 28:15.

Deception, trickery, falsehood, jealousy were all present in the family of Isaac at the time of our lesson. A hopeless situation, one would say; and so it was, apart from one thing—the grace of God. We speak that phrase so easily, but in reality it has an infinite depth of meaning.

Jacob shared the deception planned by his mother, and thereby he received the blessing of Esau. Not willing to wait God's time for the carrying out of His purpose, they sinned to gain an advantage. Then to escape the wrath of Esau, he had to flee. The journey was ostensibly to find a wife, but in fact a flight from an enraged brother. Could such a journey bring a man to a place of blessing? It did, as there was—

I. A Revelation of God's Grace (vv. 10-15).

The fugitive was overtaken by darkness on the second night of his journey, and made his bed in the open. Then came the magnificent vision of the ladder to heaven.

Heaven and earth are not separated. There is a way to reach the throne of God, and there is a way for God to reach and bless His people. The vision of the ladder thus reassured Jacob. We need only remember the God-Man Christ Jesus, who came from glory and has returned there to now appear as our Advocate to be assured of this fact.

God renewed to Jacob the covenant with Abraham and with Isaac. He does not forget. Men make treaties only to break them. God says, "I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of" (v. 15).

In His matchless grace God relieved Jacob's fear by assuring him of His protection; his loneliness by His divine presence; and his uncertainty regarding the future by the promise of blessing.

The response of Jacob was—

II. A Realization of God's Greatness (vv. 16-19).

Full of holy fear and of awe, Jacob realized the presence of the infinite God. It is a proper and a wholesome reaction when a man, realizing himself to be in God's presence, is overcome by the awe-inspiring experience.

Possibly the reason for our lack of reverence for holy things, for the Lord's day—yes, for God Himself, is because He has become a little God, weak and uninspiring in our thinking. Theologians, preachers, and teachers have dared to speak swelling words of disrespect concerning His miraculous power, have denied the deity of His Son, have questioned the authority of His Word. Having sown the wind of unbelief, they have reaped from the people the whirlwind of irreverence, a belittling of God, and a rejection of His authority (Hos. 8:7).

Jacob was reminded of God's immediate presence—"the Lord is in this place." The place of his vision of heavenly things had special meaning to Jacob.

But the underlying truth is that God is everywhere. He is not only in the church, or in the place of vision or of soul-struggle; He is also in the place of trial, of suffering, of sorrow, of loneliness—yes, even of sin. The thing that Jacob "found out that night was not that God visits man, but that God is with man wherever he is. We expect to meet Him in the sanctuary; but He is near us in the market place . . . Not alone in the sanctuary, but where the multitude gather in defiance of His law, He is there" (G. Campbell Morgan).

This rich experience led Jacob to—

III. A Recognition of God's Goodness (vv. 20-22).

The God who would supply his every need, who would watch over him and keep him, was recognized by Jacob as being worthy of his devotion, and he made a vow that He should be his God (v. 21).

The grace and goodness of God are intended to bring men to faith in Him and devotion to His service. Yet men can go on year after year, the beneficiaries of all His bounty, and never so much as say "Thank you," let alone recognize Him as Lord.

Jacob made a very practical and workable decision to demonstrate the reality of his vow. He promised that one tenth of all God gave him should be given back.

We agree with Dr. W. H. Griffith Thomas that "if only some of those who are inclined to criticize Jacob would do what he promised and give a tenth of their income to God, a different state of affairs would obtain in connection with God's work at home and abroad."

Trickery and deception were changed to truthfulness and devotion when Jacob met God face to face. The same blessed transformation awaits those who meet our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in faith. Have you met Him?

Sportlight

By Grantland Rice

THE brilliant pitching record set by Spud Chandler, Georgia's former half-back, has brought an old discussion out of the dust. How many former football luminaries have also starred under baseball's Big Tent?

Grantland Rice

More than a few managers, Joe McCarthy especially, believe football is a bad dish for any baseball player to take on.

They figure football takes too heavy a toll in injured ligaments, battered shoulders and wounded ankles or knees.

They also point to the long list of football stars who made their bids for the big league, only to blow the job.

But there were more than a few who didn't blow.

Among the First

Christy Mathewson was better known as a football star at Bucknell than he was as a pitcher.

He had just won a major Bucknell game with a long drop kick when he came to the Giants, where Andy Freeman wanted him to play first base. A college football star was a sensation in those days.

About the same time a big California football star by the name of Orvie Overall came to the Cubs. He was among the best.

Mickey Cochrane was a better football player at Boston U. than he was at baseball. Mickey had everything an All-America entry needs.

Lou Gehrig was among Columbia's better backs.

Eddie Collins was a Columbia quarter-back of first class merit before starring at second for the Athletics, where he first played under an assumed name.

Jim Thorpe was a fine outfielder, but Jim couldn't quite locate a fast breaking curve.

Reese and Collins came up from football at Vanderbilt to join the Giants and Dodgers. Ernie Nevers, one of football's best, couldn't quite stick in the majors. Schoolboy Rowe was another football star.

Joe Gordon was a football wonder as an Oregon freshman before they made him stick to baseball. Gordon would have been as big a star in pro football as he is in baseball. Ask Tuffy Leemans.

Joe Gordon

The tops of the football - baseball combinations were Mathewson, Overall, Cochrane, Collins, Gehrig and Chandler.

There have been more than we have mentioned here, but this sextette has the lead.

Trained Muscles

The majority of all the leading stars were one-game people. Bobby Jones, for example, played no other game but golf until he was grown. Every muscle in his body was trained and developed for a golf swing.

Bob had no conflicting muscles that wouldn't work together.

Schoolboy Rowe was a star at football, golf, tennis, shot-putting and other pastimes while playing baseball. Over-developed muscles had no helpful effect on his pitching career.

Ty Cobb played no game but baseball. Cobb refused to swing a golf club until near the end of his major league career.

Ty still insists the two swings are different. They are in Cobb's case, as Ty in baseball was more of a puncher than a swinger. Ruth, Speaker and others were swingers who could play golf in the 70s.

The Case of Chandler

The case of Spurgeon Chandler, the Carnesville Clipper, takes an unusual angle.

Here is a pitcher who has won 22 of his last 24 games, turning back to the summer of 1941. And this happened after he had passed his 32nd birthday.

As a starter it took Chandler five years and a touring jaunt through seven different cities before he finally parked himself on a Yankee bench. After that a yanked arm ligament and later a broken ankle were no great help.

When Spud dropped his first four games last spring his outlook was about as sunny and as cheerful as a windowless cellar.

And then it happened—10 straight for 1941—12 out of 14 for 1942—and almost every game brilliantly pitched.

I recall years ago Harry Mehre, then Georgia's coach, telling me that Chandler was one of the hardest workers on his squad.

Chandler has proved that by taking the knocks and raps that came his way without a kick or an alibi. It took him 10 years to locate the smoother road, and 10 years is quite a chunk from a pitcher's career. But I doubt today that anyone can name a better pitcher.

Cut Your Fuel Wood During Slack Periods

Release Transportation, Improve Forests That Way

By J. E. DAVIS

(Extension Forester, University of Illinois College of Agriculture.)

Woodland owners can release transportation for war purposes by burning their own wood and supplying wood for similar use in towns and cities.

Fuel-wood cutting according to a definite plan to correct poor forest conditions resulting from mistakes of the past is suggested.

Fuel wood can be obtained from misshapen trees, dead and insect-ridden trees, other cull trees, from tops of trees cut for saw logs and from suppressed or unthrifty trees cut in thinning or woodland improvement operations.

Trees suitable for lumber, veneer logs, box bolts or other special products should not be taken for fuel. Large quantities of oak are needed for ships, hickory and ash for handles and lumber and pulpwood for other war industries.

These products can be obtained only from well-formed trees, and cutting them for fuel is a waste of valuable resources.

During Slack Periods.

Fuel wood can be harvested during slack periods on the farm, but some time must be allowed for seasoning. Cutting should also be planned to promote a better stand of thrifty growing timber by removing "wolf" and "weed" trees.

For seasoning, the wood should be stacked, not heaped, on bed pieces over dry ground, and preferably in an open yard to get greatest air circulation. Fuel wood burns more efficiently and yields much more heat when it has dried at least six months.

Labor-Saving Tips

Farmers will have to work more hours to reach their 1942 production goals unless they adopt electricity as a labor-saving device, just as tractors are being used to speed up field work.

It has already been demonstrated that much labor can be saved at a little expense in the use of electricity for lights, for putting water under pressure, for processing and handling feeds, for electric fencing and for operating milking machines and brooding pigs and chicks.

Electricity will play an important part in making the development of rural industries possible. On farms where secondary agricultural production is not practiced, the extra time resulting from the present system of mechanized farming may be used to advantage in the shop operating a wood lathe or other woodworking equipment, or on an electric welder making some part or a complete item of commercial value.

Vegetable Insect Control Is Not a Difficult Task

Follow a few simple rules and control of vegetable insects is not difficult.

A duster may be obtained for a dollar up, but one may be made at home with a tin can, a stick and a piece of cheese cloth. Ask the county extension agents how it's done. Next, have ready a supply of insecticides for use at the first sign of insect injury. These are cryolite for control of bean beetles, cucumber beetles, cabbage worms and other insects which feed upon the fruit and foliage of the plants; rotenone and sulphur to control tomato fruit worm, flea beetles, plant lice and leaf hoppers; and concentrated pyrethrum dust for squash bugs, stink bugs, and harlequin cabbage bugs. Watch the garden for the first sign of injury and dust both sides of leaves.

Apply poison bait late in the afternoon for control of cut worms, grasshoppers and adult wingless May beetle, or June bug. Poison bait also will control mole crickets which frequent sandy soils.

A bait made of cryolite, finely chopped carrots or turnips and wheat bran will control the adult weevil.

Tell me a Bedtime Story

DEAR OLD SMILING POOL ONCE MORE

BLACK PUSSY was having a good time. Grandfather Frog wasn't. It was great fun for Black Pussy to slip a paw under Grandfather Frog and toss him up in the air. It was still more fun to pretend to go away, but instead to hide and the instant Grandfather Frog started off to pounce upon him and cuff him and roll him about.

At last Black Pussy grew tired of playing, and catching up Grandfather Frog in her mouth she started along the little path from the spring to the Long Lane. Grandfather Frog didn't even kick.

"It's all over and this is the end," moaned Grandfather Frog. "I'm going to be eaten now. Oh, why, why did I ever leave the Smiling Pool?"

Just as Black Pussy slipped into the Long Lane Grandfather Frog heard a familiar sound. It was a whistle, a merry whistle. It was the whistle of Farmer Brown's Boy. It was coming nearer and nearer. A little bit of hope began to stir in the heart of Grandfather Frog. He didn't know just why, but it did. Always he had been in the greatest fear of Farmer Brown's Boy, but now—well, if Farmer Brown's Boy should take him he might get away from him as he did before, but he was very sure that he never, never could get away from Black Pussy.

A little way off was Farmer Brown's Boy fishing.

The whistle drew nearer. Black Pussy stopped. Then she began to make a queer whirring sound deep down in her throat.

"Hello, Black Pussy! Have you been hunting? Come here and show me what you've got," cried a voice.

Black Pussy arched up her back and began to rub against the legs of Farmer Brown's Boy, and all the time the whirring sound in her throat grew louder and louder. Farmer Brown's Boy stooped down to see what she had in her mouth.

"Why," he exclaimed, "I do believe this is the very same old frog that got away from me yesterday. You don't want him, Puss. I'll just put him in my pocket and take him up to the house by and by."

With that he took Grandfather Frog from Black Pussy and dropped him in his pocket. He patted Black Pussy, called her a smart cat, and then started on his way whistling merrily. It was dark and rather close in that pocket, but Grandfather Frog didn't mind this. It was a lot better than feeling sharp teeth and claws all the time. He wondered how soon they would reach the house and what would happen to him then. After what seemed like a long, long time he felt himself swung through the air. Then he landed on the ground with a thump that made him grunt. Farmer Brown's Boy had taken off his coat and thrown it down.

The whistling stopped. Everything was quiet. Grandfather Frog waited and listened, but not a sound could he hear. Then he saw a little ray of light creeping into his prison. He squirmed and pushed and all of a sudden he was out of the pocket. The bright light made him blink. As soon as he could see he looked to see where he was. Then he rubbed his eyes with both hands and looked again. He wasn't at Farmer Brown's house at all! Where do you think he was? Why right on the bank of the Smiling Pool, and a little way off was Farmer Brown's Boy fishing.

"Chugarum!" cried Grandfather Frog, and it was the loudest, gladdest Chugarum that the Smiling Pool ever had heard. "Chugarum!" he cried again, and with a great leap he dived with a splash into the dear old Smiling Pool, which smiled more than ever.

And never again did Grandfather Frog try to see the Great World.

Stretch Your Gasoline Ration

To get the most out of your gasoline, your car's spark should be properly adjusted for the particular grade of gasoline used. Don't let a light knock worry you when you are climbing a hill; it only means that the spark is properly set. Also, to get the most mileage from your gasoline ration, have your car's spark plugs cleaned and adjusted every 5,000 miles or oftener. Dirty and improperly adjusted spark plugs bring your gasoline mileage down considerably.

Record Crowd Expeted At Outing

Friends of St. Patrick Church, Vernora, residing in Northern Kentucky and over-river Cincinnati will be represented on the managing committee for the Labor Day homecoming outing celebrating the eighty-fifth anniversary of the parish on September 7. The Rev. John T. Jobst, pastor of the Verona parish and the mission at Walton, Ky., said that a record attendance is anticipated for the 1942 fiesta.

Edward J. Walton, who is general chairman of arrangements, reports that Magistrate Thomas Carr will serve as chairman of refreshments.

Robert S. Bossong of Cincinnati, chairman of the casino, and Miss Genevieve Thomas, of Norwood, who will be chairman of the pond, will head a delegation of Ohio workers represnting former parishoners and friends.

Other committee executives announced for the outing are: Mrs. Thomas Kelly, dining room; Mrs. Wayne Roberts, cards; Jack Cahill and Miss Olivia Iller, social games; Miss Helen Miller, novelties; Edward Schapper, "Nevada Days"; Miss Agnes Parrell, children's booth; John Ryan, Jaseph Ryan, Hayes Collins and Mrs. Joseph Ryan, country store; Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Blau, Jr., variety booth; Joseph Pool, baby rack.

Dinner will be served from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m. A chicken menu will be the specialty.

Motorists are asked to bring "full loads" as a means of conserving transportation. The parish outing ground is reached over U. S. 25 to Walton and then taking Kentucky Route 16 to Verona. The Greyhound bus runs to Walton.

LOCAL CHURCH MEMBERS URGED TO ATTEND CONVENTION

Members of Walton Christian Church are urged to attend the annual County Convention of the Disciples of Christ, at Burlington, Sunday, August 30, beginning at 9:45 a. m. (EWT).

There will be no morning worship service at the church, but there will be a Church School session at 10 a. m., for the children and others who cannot attend the convention.

At the convention there will be Sunday School classes beginning at 9:45 a. m. The class will be followed by a Communion Service, administered by the Rev. Geo. S. Carolan, and the sermon by Rev. Noble Lucas. After lunch, the various state and brotherhood enterprises will be brought before the convention.

All disciples are urged to attend this enterprise in the interest of God's Kingdom. Bring a basket dinner and enjoy the fellowship. All sessions will be in Burlington High School Auditorium.

NAPOLEON HOMEMAKERS

The Napoleon Homemakers were entertained August 18 by Mrs. Georgie Noel of Glencoe, at Locust Grove Camp, on the banks of Eagle Creek. Only thirteen members and one visitor were present, but the day was enjoyed by all and a picnic lunch was served at the noon hour. Our next meeting will be held at Mrs. Lucy Wilson's home on September 15. Let all members be present, as our County Agent will hold the poultry meeting also that day and we are looking forward for a large crowd and an enjoyable day.

Stop Soil Erosion Use Cover Crops

Protect your soil by using cover crops and practive contour cultivation!

It takes nature hundreds of years to make one to two inches of rich top soil... Erosion can destroy the top soil on your farm in a year or two if it is not kept covered and cultivated on the contour.

Make Plans Now to Cover Soil

At this season of the year, steps should be taken to protect the soil from erosion by seeding cover crops for the fall, winter and spring to reduce erosion of the top soil. Small grain crops like rye, wheat and others need to be seeded early enough to allow a good growth before freezing weather begins.

Winter Legumes Help Build Soil

In addition to the small grain cover crop, a winter legume like hairy vetch helps to build the soil by adding organic matter and nitrogen. Vetch seed should be inoculated in all cases to insure getting the nitrifying bacteria on the roots.

For best results vetch should be seeded by the 15th af September in order to give time for growth before freezing weather sets in. If seeded later than this date, in most seasons the vetch does not make the desired growth although it may live thru the winter and make a gaad growth in the spring. Vetch like the small grains, should have a seed bed to insure growth. By disking the land so that the vetch gets covered one inch to one and a half inch it should have enough moisture to germinate well and come up sooner. Do not seed on hard ground. Make a seed bed by discing before sowing the vetch seed.

Two Cover Crops In One Season

When you seed vetch with a small grain for plowing under the following spring, you get two green manure crops for turning under in one season. These winter legume, vetch, when properly inoculated also makes much nitrogen which is added to the soil.

Cover Crops.

Provide cheap feed in the form of pasture.

Improves the soil.

Nitrogen is added where winter legumes are used.

The Extension Division, College of Agriculture, Lexington, Ky., has prepared leaflets and circulars on Cover Crops, Winter Pasture, Contour Cultivation and other information on how to PROTECT YOUR SOIL FROM EROSION.

Get a copy from your County Agricultural Agent.

4,000 Attend 4-H Free Fair Saturday

Four thousand people were estimated as attending the Tenth Annual 4-H and Utopia Club Free Fair, held at the new Fair Grounds at Burlington on last Saturday, August 22. The Fair was marked a success and all attending were well pleased with the location and development of the new grounds. Donations of $64.06 were made to the Fair Grounds Improvement Program, according to John L. Conner, Treasurer.

The Fair and Picnic is the largest single gathering of Boone County people and their friends during the year. It serves the great purpose of bringing the people together in a spirit of unity and cooperation on their picnic grounds to enjoy the day in friendship and recreation and educational exhibits.

The 4-H and Utopit Club Council served as the County Committee on the Fair program. The council expresses its deepest appreciation to all the leaders, club members, committees and friends who so nobly assisted in all jobs performed in preparation for and in the holding of the Fair. Le's all look forward to the future of the opment and improvement of the grounds and to a bigger and better Boone County Fair and Picnic.

LITERARY CLUB TO MEET SEPT. 2nd

The Walton Woman's Literary Club will meet for it's opening meeting of the year 1942-43 on Wednesday, September 2nd at 3:00 p. m. at the home of Mrs. J. E. McCabe on Highway 42. There will be a guest speaker for the program. Each member is asked to answer roll call with a quotation on Kentucky.—Pub. Com.

EIGHTY-FIFTH BIRTHDAY

A noon luncheon was given Wednesday at the Sinton Hotel, Cincinnati, in honor of the 85th birthday of Mrs. Amelia Britt, of Covington. Those to enjoy this gathering were Mrs. Britt's sister, Mrs. John C. Beddinger, Mrs. Allen Gaines and Miss Rebecca Sleet of Walton.

Mrs. Britt was raised in the Hughes Chapel neighborhood, the wife of Rev. Britt. She has a host of friends in this community who extend "greetings and best wishes" for other happy years.

FEATURES IN THIS ISSUE

Even the common man in Russia is demanding the opening of a second front to divert Nazi troops from the Eastern battlefields. Read the Washington Digest column for details of this prevailing attitude.

Our air, land and sea forces cooperated for the first time in a single striking force in the Solomon Islands attack. Upon the outcome of this test will depend whether the U. S. will concentrate more in the Pacific than in Europe. Washington commentator Drew Pearson's column covers this affair.

Why is massage so helpful to stiff, painful joints and muscles and why is it so little used? Dr. Barton's Health column explains this.

The subject of the Sunday School Lesson for next Sunday is on Jacob, who sought God's help, after the guilt of sin brought fear; fear brought prayer and prayer brought blessing.

For the children's entertainment the Advertiser recommends the Bedtime story in this paper. Adults will enjoy reading it to the youngsters.

U. S. WANTS GREASE; HOUSEWIVES URGED TO COOPERATE

Homemakers of Kenton County are being urged to cooperate with the Conservation Division of the War Board in the Fat Salvage Program. A drive to save the two billion pounds of kitchen fats that housewives have thrown out each year is now under way.

Miss Zelma E. Byerly, United States Department of Agriculture, Extension Service, Federal Building, Covington, states that the Government hopes to have each housewife salvage from her kitchen between one and two pounds of fat a month.

Fats are essential war materials. More than a billion pounds of oils and fats used in this country were imported annually from the Far East. With this supply cut off by the Japanese, America is faced with a serious shortage of a material so necessary in modern warfare.

One hundred percent of the fat will be used, the glycerine in making explosives and the remainder in the manufacture of soap. Two pounds of kitchen fat produces enough glycerine to make 5 rounds of anti-aircraft fire, thus the firing line begins right in Mrs. Homemaker's kitchen.

Homemakers should save pan drippings, old lard, cooking oils, country tallow, suet and fat or any kind of fish, animal or vegetable grease unfit for human consumption. These waste fats should be strained into spotlessly clean, wide-mouth metal containers. When one pound has been colleted, the housewife should take it to the meat dealer in her community.

Junk Rallies To Be Held Sept. 2

Between now and the time snow flies, the Boone County Salvage for Victory Committee has urgent business with every farm and home in the county. By that time we want every pound of scrap metal or other salvage material to have left here and to be filling its proper place in production for our country's defense.

To initiate a Scrap Harvest Campaign, "Junk Rallies" will be held Saturday, September 5 in all town and trading centers of the county. All families are asked to bring in to a collection point where they trade a big sack of scrap. It may be old rusty iron or steel, brass, aluminum, copper, any metal, any article made of or containing rubber, or it may be rags, burlap or worn out rope. Fifty to a hundred pounds could be gathered around any home and two hundred pounds (not all in one piece) wouldn't weight a fellow entirely down.

All scrap delivered that day will be weighed up and paid for on the spot. You may be paid in cash or by "junk scrip" which may be redeemed at a premium for special items offered by cooperating merchants. All stores are being urged to display bargains, to make specials and to offer real inducement for your trip to town that day. Let's not lose sight of the object—GET IN THE SCRAP—but if everyone enters into the spirit of the day, it will prove to be interesting and profitable for all.

Committe members are often asked the sale price of junk. Delivered in metropolitan Cincinnati, prices on an average are—scrap iron, 75c per 100 lbs—brass and copper, 1c per lb.—rags, old burlap and rope, 1c per lb.—batteries, any condition, each 80c—tires and old rubber, 70c per 100 lbs. and old inner tubes, 3½c per lb.—grease and fats collected as specified, 4c per lb. by your meat dealer.

So, a systematic collection will yield results enough to interest. If not, delegate the job to the children. They will welcome the opportunity to earn a little money. Just a little trouble by anybody mens a real service to your country.

Mrs. Allen H. Gaines, Walton 33, or J. B. Heizer, Jr., R. 2 Walton, Ky., will be glad to answer any inquiry about scrap, or lend assistance in its collection. They will appreciate your aid in this job we must get done.

W. C. T. U. TO HOLD DISTRICT CONVENTION

There will be a District Convention of the Womans Christian Temperance Union at Newport Baptist Church, Dr. Wayman, pastor, at 8th and York streets, September 2nd. Will convene at 10:30 a. m. promptly. Bring your sandwiches.

Mrs. Pickett, Steate President, and several other state officers will be there.

Pray for the meeting and all go that possibly can. Take a Crosstown bus at Greyhound bus station. That will take you to the church.

Rev. Spar, the pastor, was faithfully and abely assisted by Rev. C. B. Jackson and wife of Greenville.

CHRISTMAS MAIL FOR MEMBERS OF ARMED FORCES ABROAD

Arrangements have been made by the Post Office Department in cooperation with the War and Navy Department for acceptance of Christmas parcels for members of our armed forces servin outside the continental United States. In order that such parcels may reach the addressees on time and in good condition, patrons should mail Christmas parcels and Christmas cards during the period beginning October 1 and November 1, 1942; the earlier the better.

It is not practical to publish all of the regulations concerning the sending of gift parcels, but it is suggested that you call at the Post office for this information before you prepare the parcel. If you do not do this you may have to repack your package or it may be refused by the Post Office Department.

ROBERT T. NORTHCUTT VICTIM OF AUTO CRASH

Madisonville, Ohio—Robert T. Northcutt, 61, shop foreman for the Pennsylvania R. R., passed away early Monday morning at Bethesda Hospital, shortly after he was struck by an auto at Eastern & Delta Avenues.

Mr. Northcutt was struck after he had alighted from an East End street car, when returning home from work.

He is survived by his widow, May Northcutt; two sons, Robert and Howard; two grandsons and two sisters, Mrs. Edna Brown and Mrs. Blanche Bagby and a brother, Chester Northcutt.

Mr. Northcutt was in Walton last week, visiting with some of his many friends in this community, who were shocked to hear of his sudden passing.

Services will be held at the Thomas Funeral Home, 4418 Whetsel Ave., Madisonville, Ohio, Thursday at 1 p. m.

To Deliver Wool Clip Sept. 2-3-4

The Boone County Wool Pool clip will be delivered at Walton on Wednesday, September 2nd, Burlington on Thursday, September 3rd, and Petersburg on Friday, September 4th, according to H. E. White, president.

The 1942 pooled clip was offered for sale on last June 8th, but due to an unexpected major slump in the market, two weeks previous to that date, satisfactory bids were not received and all bids were rejected. The market has been very dull until just recently.

The clip was sold at the earliest possible date a satisfactory bid could be received. It is expected that the 375 county pool members owning approximately 60,000 pounds of wool will be pleased with the sale to L. S. Denklespiel & Co., of Louisville.

Mr. Denklespiel has requested that all growers use care in not getting their wool wet on the date of delivery. Wet wool is not desired either by buyer or the seller. Tarpaulins should be used to carefully protect the wool in case growers must deliver the wool during a rain.

DR. R. E. RYLE RETURNS HOME

The many friends of Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Ryle are thankful that the doctor was able to return home Monday, after a serious operation at Christ Hospital. He is getting along as well as could be expected.

They greatly appreciate the interest of everyone, but Dr. Ryle is not allowed to have any company for awhile.

Scrap Donations Net Fair $10.71

Mr. J. B. Heizer and Mrs. Alan Gaines, County Salvage Committee Chairmen announced Monday of this week that $10.71 worth of scrap was brought to the Fair Saturday and donated to the 4-H and Utopia Fair Grounds Building Program. The State Highway Department hauled the scrap to the junk dealer and turned the proceeds over to the Council.

The great good of such donations is not the amounts of scrap delivered to the Fair, but the increased amount of scrap that will be sold to the junk dealers direct from the farm as a result of this educational program. The 4-H and Utopia Club Council expresses its appreciation to the County Salvage Committee and pledges its full support to our National Salvage Program.

The major problem in the Salvage Program is getting the salvage materials to the junk dealer. The junk dealers serve an important part in the Government Salvage Program in that it is best services that the various scrap metals can be separated, graded and supplied in its various grades to the manufacturer needing that particular grade. Very few manufacturers can use all this scrap as it comes from the farm.

VERONA HOMEMAKERS SPONSOR "FISH FRY"

The Verona Homemakers will sponsor a "Fish Fry" on the school house lawn Saturday evening, Aug. 29.

Serving will begin at 6 o'clock, C. W. T. Come out and eat supper with us and enjoy the association with your neighbors and friends.

The proceeds will go towards the Floral Hall at the 4-H Club Fair-grounds in Burlington.

MRS. CHAS. THOMPSON INJURED BY FALL

Mrs. Chas. Thompson fell down the basement steps at her home last Friday, breaking her left arm, between the shoulder and elbow, and the pelvis bone. Also receiving several bruses. She was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, where she will have to remain for some time. Her many friends here wish for her a speady recovery.

Allies Demonstrate Growing Strength In 'Dress Rehearsal' Raid on Dieppe; Solomon Victory Forecast of Further Pacific Offensives by United States

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of the newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

The English channel area which was the scene of the most daring and extensive daylight raid by Allied forces on the French coast thus far. British and Canadian Commandos, supported by American Rangers, took part in the nine-hour foray which ravaged the Nazi defenses at Dieppe, destroyed artillery batteries, ammunition dumps and radio stations and left Dieppe in flames.

COMMANDOS:
In Dress Rehearsal

Adolf Hitler learned that no matter how deep into Russia his eastern armies might penetrate, his western flank was open to attack that might be costly.

That was evident when British and Canadian Commandos supported by American Rangers swept across the English channel and back again in a nine-hour daylight raid that was a dress rehearsal for the forthcoming Allied invasion of Europe.

The Nazi-fortified coastal defenses at Dieppe, midway between Calais and Le Havre were the target. Although German sources estimated the force at 15,000 men, its number remained an official Allied secret. The raiders carried tanks and artillery with them.

While losses on both sides were considerable, the raiders were reported to have destroyed a six-gun shore artillery battery, an ammunition dump, a vast anti-aircraft battery and a radio location station. Moreover, it was reported that the city of Dieppe had been left in flames.

A strategic feature of the assault was the vast aerial umbrella in the form of 1,000 Allied fighter planes shielding the raiders. This was reported as the greatest aircraft canopy yet sent aloft. While it protected the operations of Commandos below, it succeeded in downing or damaging 273 enemy planes.

The attack demonstrated that landings in force could be successfully made against the strongest Nazi-fortified points on the French coast. And as a reminder of the growing air strength of the Allies, American and British planes swept over France the day after the raid, striking out in the greatest force ever seen over western Europe. The air raiders, 500 strong, included fighter-escorted American Flying Fortresses and other bombers.

RUSSIA:
Gloom Persists

Only in the northernmost area of the Russian fighting front—at Voronezh and Bryansk—were the Soviet forces able to report any success. At these points several towns had been taken and thousands of Germans had been killed.

But elsewhere the picture remained gloomy. Stalingrad, key industrial city on the Volga, was menaced by a Nazi pincer. Further to the south, Maikop, fertile center of the Kuban valley wheatfields and source of some of Russia's oil, had been taken and Russian communiques admitted the Germans were moving trainloads of foodstuffs out of this area.

The loss of Maikop opened the way for the capitulation of the strategic city of Krasnador, a railroad and river in the northwest Caucasus, and gateway to the Reds' naval base of Novorossick, less than 60 miles distant.

Although Prime Minister Churchill's visit to Moscow had roused hopes that strategic moves from western Europe or from the Middle East by the Allies might take some of the mortal pressure off Russia, the situation remained critical. The successful Commando raid on the French coast was at least a token in that direction.

SOLOMON ISLANDS:
Important Victory

At last it could be told, for the news revealed in a laconic navy communique was that the offensive in the Solomon islands had been completely successful. The enemy-held islands in the southeast Solomon chain were now firmly in the hands of United States marines. Only remnants of once strong Japanese forces remained on the islands and these were being mopped up.

The navy's communique announcing the victory said also that an enemy cruiser or destroyer was bombed and set afire by American planes in the area.

"United States marines are engaged in mopping up remnants of the Japanese forces on the islands which were recently captured in the Solomon archipelago," the communique said.

"Casual bombardments of our shore positions by enemy aircraft, destroyers and submarines have inflicted only minor damage. An enemy destroyer or cruiser was bombed and set afire by our aircraft."

The main offensive had been launched on the strategically important Tulagi harbor area on Florida island, 930 miles from Australia. The enveloping attack included landings on smaller islands nearby.

Viewed in its strategic perspective, the Solomons offensive meant that Japan's thrusts toward New Caledonia would be forestalled, and that the pressure on southern New Guinea and Australia would be lifted.

MARRIED MEN:
Face Early Draft

Married men under the age of 45 with dependents faced the prospect of being called in the draft "in the not far distant future." This prediction was made by a spokesman for Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey's national selective service board.

Speaking before the 52nd annual reunion of the Legion of Valor in Boston, Ted Luther, Hershey's aide, said "the nation's reservoir of 1-A men was practically exhausted" and that it would be necessary to obtain men from 1-B and 3-A classes.

"The selective service board is most anxious to avoid breaking up homes and families," he said, "but because of the few men in 1-B classification and the smaller number that can be obtained from among those reaching 20 years of age each month, it will be necessary to take those with dependents.

BRAZIL:
Irked at Axis

Submarines which for weeks had persistently attacked Brazil's coastwise shipping roused that nation to fighting pitch when they sank five merchantmen within a few days' span, with a loss of more than 600.

Thus a tacit state of war existed between Brazil and the Axis, without benefit of a formal declaration.

"Brazilians know how to fight decisively and with or without arms will know how to die for Brazil," Air Minister Joaquim Salgado declared, as the nation's warships and planes combed the sea for submarines and raiders.

RATIONING:
Meat and Oil First

Two rationing programs loomed on the near horizon for American citizens with others in the background. These two were fuel oil in the East and meats generally throughout the nation.

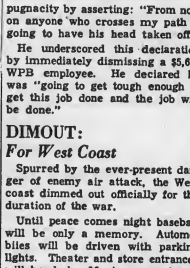
The food branch of the War Production board had drafted a preliminary order embodying recommendations of Agriculture Secretary Wickard's food requirements committee. These included allocation of meat supplies to different sections of the country, adjustment of price ceilings to stimulate the flow of meats into shortage areas, allocation among packers of government purchases of meat for the armed forces—and finally, rationing.

Rationing of fuel oil for Eastern heating purposes appeared near as industrial establishments and homes using oil for heating were warned they would have to get along on less than normal supplies.

MIDDLE EAST:
Command Is Changed

As Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck had joined a growing list of ousted commanders of the precarious Middle East front, the infusion of new brains in the person of hard-hitting Gen. Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander, focused attention on the importance of that sector. The visit of Prime Minister Churchill to Alexandria on his way to Moscow, too, had shown how vital the Egyptian sector loomed in Allied strategy.

Observers pointed out that because of its strategic possibilities, North Africa might become the United Nations' second front.



Biggest task confronting the United Nations before snow flies was halting Hitler's gigantic pincer drive against the Middle East by way of the Russian Caucasus from the north and via Marshal Rommel's Egyptian Nazi armies from the southwest.

WAR PRODUCTION:
Nelson Gets Tough

Criticism of the War Production board's management of the war program had been mounting in recent weeks.

Thus when Donald M. Nelson, WPB chief, returned to his desk after a much-needed rest there was considerable speculation about the next move.

The usually quiet production chief made himself forcefully clear. Challenging his critics to a showdown, he indicated a new spirit of pugnacity by asserting: "From now on anyone who crosses my path is going to have his head taken off."

DONALD M. NELSON
". . . job will be done."

He underscored this declaration by immediately dismissing a $5,600 WPB employee. He declared he was "going to get tough enough to get this job done and the job will be done."

DIMOUT:
For West Coast

Spurred by the ever-present danger of enemy air attack, the West coast dimmed out officially for the duration of the war.

Until peace comes night baseball will be only a memory. Automobiles will be driven with parking lights. Theater and store entrances will be dark. Movie companies in Hollywood will no longer use glaring lights for outdoor shots.

Residents up and down the Pacific coast will blackout their windows.

Dimout technique had been practiced for days before regulations became official.

LABOR PEACE:
Green Urges Unity

Another olive branch was waved in the cause of labor peace when William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, called for an end to "the economic tug-of-war whereby each group seeks to get the best bargain it can from the other."

The economic fight "must be abandoned for the duration," he told the 50th annual convention of the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor.

Green termed the CIO-AFL split a "dangerous and wasteful civil war." Earlier he had disclosed that representatives of the two organizations would confer late in September on the proposed re-union of labor.

"I trust those participating in these conferences," he said, "are conscious of the fact that private interests are secondary to the national necessity."

EPILEPSY

Some years ago I expressed the personal thought that if I had been gifted with the qualities of a research physician, the investigation as to the cause of epilepsy would have been my first challenge, after cancer. Despite the fact that it is one of the oldest known diseases, the actual cause is unknown.

We know that too much liquid in the body brings on the attacks in some individuals. We know that some cases are due to injury. We know also that cutting down on starch foods and increasing fat foods is all that is necessary to prevent attacks in some individuals.

In addition to the knowledge now possessed by physicians everywhere there are many research physicians still patiently working on the problem of epilepsy. It might be well to speak of the Harvard Epilepsy commission where the original work of Drs. H. H. Merritt and T. J. Putnam on dilantin sodium outlined in the Journal of the American Medical Association four years ago, is being further investigated and results reported to physicians everywhere.

For years, successful treatment of epilepsy has, as outlined above, been (a) cutting down on liquids, (b) cutting down on starch foods, (c) increasing fat foods. The medical treatment has been phenobarbital or other of the barbital drugs which replaced the bromides of former years.

A new drug in use for the past few years is dilantin sodium, the use of which has been reported by Drs. Merritt and Putnam in Boston, and Dr. C. P. Kimball among the children attending the Detroit board of education's special school for epileptics.

While physicians report still some unpleasant reactions from dilantin sodium and prefer phenobsrbital, more and more dilantin sodium is coming into general use to prevent the epileptic convulsions.

Until, then, the cause of epilepsy is found, epileptics can, in most cases, live safely with none of the fears of attacks occurring in public or dangerous situations by following the diet suggestions mentioned above and the use of dilantin sodium or phenobarbital as prescribed by their physician.

Massage Relieves Pain and Stiffness

During and immediately following the war of 1914-18, the value of massage in quieting pain, loosening up stiff joints and muscles, aiding the circulation, helping to move the wastes along the large bowel was so well recognized that schools of massage, sometimes as a part of a course in physical therapy, were established, and, when connected with recognized colleges, diplomas were given.

Just before this present war started massage was not receiving as much attention as it deserved but now there is renewed interest therein in actual field operations and even in training camps.

Unfortunately it is only at war time that physicians as a whole give any attention to massage; even then it is left to non-physicians not only to give the actual massage but often to prescribe the type of massage that should be given in any particular case. Thus Dr. Ralph Pemberton, Philadelphia, in his "Handbook of Physical Therapy" states "There is probably no other measure of equal known value which is so little used and understood by the medical profession as a whole."

At one time it was thought that massage had just the same effect upon the muscles as exercise; in fact was a form of exercise but the benefit derived is now believed due to another cause.

Why is massage so helpful to stiff, painful joints and muscles? In the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. George Morris Piersol, Philadelphia, states that from direct observation on the circulation of the blood in the little blood vessels (capillaries) massage causes an increased rate of blood flow and changes in the vessel walls followed by an increased interchange of substances between the blood and tissue cells. That is, the blood takes away from the tissues the substances causing tiredness, stiffness and pain, and brings to these tissues fresh blood.

Plead for Diversion of Nazi Soldiers from Eastern Battlefields; Soviet Picture Grows Darker.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Features, 1343 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Just at the time when Washington was anxiously awaiting news of the battle of the Solomon islands and the reports from Russia seemed to grow worse by the hour, the curtain was pulled back for a little group here and they were shown a disturbing picture of the mind of the common man in Russia.

I say the picture was disturbing. To those who read between the lines it seemed to reveal the possibility that the United Nations were about to lose the sympathy if not the material support of the single Ally which has been able to engage the Axis effectively.

Not only the common man in Russia, but everybody from Stalin down, divides sharply with the majority of United Nations' military opinion about a second front. That split of opinion it was made plain, may affect not only our military relations with Russia, but post-war relations as well. Naturally the Axis is promoting such disunity.

Briefly the two views are these:

The Allied strategists say: Invasion of the European continent now might mean another Dunkirk. Another Dunkirk would be worse for the Allied cause than to let Russia continue alone as she is now doing.

The Russian common man, according to the analysis of this mind to which I referred above, says: If you do not divert Nazi soldiers from the Axis front Russia cannot hold out. We have sacrificed greatly. Except for a few divisions in Egypt which are not fighting (at this writing) no Allied soldiers are attacking Hitler's armies except us.

We have died by the thousands, if not millions, making last-ditch stands that gave you time to prepare. Why should you be unwilling to die, too, even if you cannot be immediately successful with an invasion to save us now, and, as a result, save yourselves later on?

Russia's Opinion

That seems to be the Russian reasoning. It is understood that after the Molotov visit to the United States and the announcement of the Anglo-Russian pact, that hopes ran high in the bosom of the ordinary Russian. Since then nothing has happened—except the victorious advance of the German armies which now either hold the richest parts of Russia in their grip or bar them from the rest of the country.

This attitude has become evident and supposedly well-informed observers predict that the disappointment on the part of the general Russian public will have a bad effect on the morale of the Russian army.

There are, of course, advocates in high places in the American government as well as in Britain, for the opening of a second front. But even if the American high strategists were unanimous on this subject they would have to defer to Great Britain since the brunt of an invasion at this time would have to be borne by British troops.

Of course, it must be realized that the Russians on their side and the British and Americans on theirs are each thinking to some degree in terms of their own welfare, as well as in terms of the common objective—defeat of the enemy. But there may be also a philosophical difference. American and British officers have been trained in a school which makes them hesitate to sacrifice men in what seems a futile effort, that is an effort which they are not sure has at least a greater chance of success than of failure. The Russians have shown that they are quite willing to die even when they know that they are already beaten and further resistance, although it takes greater toll of enemy lives, cannot be successful.

Gunner's Wings Aid a Fighting Man

The American bomber was drenched with German anti-aircraft fire, one engine was smashed and burning, one propeller was shot away, bullets hsd riddled the ship's tail. Down it was crashing, out of control. It struck, pancake-wise, and—miracle of miracles it bounded up. The pilot still glued to the controls felt the plane respond. It staggered upward—and back to England from that famous Fourth of July raid over Holland.

I have just been talking with the boy who was in the gunner's turret of that plane and naturally I asked him what he thought about when they started to crash. He said he couldn't remember. But I have a hunch that it was a little town out in Kansss.

"The world's fine," he told me earnestly, leaning across the table. "I'm glad of the chance to see what I've seen of it. But I'll be glad when I get back to Fredonia where I was brought up. Back where I know everybody and everybody knows me. I can't get used to folks hurrying so."

By the time this is in print I hope that Fredonia has had a chance to see Technical Sergeant Robert Golay—and for him to see it. They'll get out the band when he comes back with his brand new gunner's wings on his coat along with his pre-Pearl Harbor service ribbons and that other bar that shows he's the owner of a Flying Cross. Of course, pretty Mrs. Golay and six months old Robert will be proud.

"I like small towns," says Robert And he's seen quite a piece of the world. In fact, you might say, after his experience on the Fourth of July, he knows Holland from the ground up. That was where he was shot down (temporarily) and he said they brought a lot of Dutch soil back with them.

Surprise to Wife

Most of you have seen pictures of Bob getting his gunner's wings, one of the first two pairs ever awarded, at the ceremony in Texas on August 9. But Mrs. Golay heard about the fight over Holland shortly after it happened. And it was a surprise to her. Because when Bob left for Europe he was only an "armorer"—and that meant his job in the air corps was a ground job. And Mrs. Golay had given her husband one order—Don't fly. She was willing to have him fight the war and get it over, but not in the air. Then one day an officer called her on the phone and told her that her husband had taken part in the then widely heralded American Fourth of July expedition and that he was safe.

Brass —— And Brass Hats

Donald Nelson popped his eyes recently when the navy ordered 13,000 pounds of brass to make the door plates for a new battleship.

Brass is scarce. The WPB asked the navy if instead of brass they couldn't use some commoner metal, or perhaps just paint the labels on the doors.

It was the navy's turn to be shocked. Battleships had always been adorned with brass plates. A tradition of centuries was menaced if battleship nameplates should ever be made of anything but brass.

"Moreover," said a navy brass hat, "navy men are used to brass plates. If in the heat of battle a man is ordered to a certain station, he will automatically look for brass plates to guide him. Stenciled signs will mean nothing to him. At a critical moment the lack of a brass plate may mean the loss of the ship."

Nelson had to yield.

He had to yield again when the ship demanded stainless steel cooking utensils. Nelson's office thought stainless steel somewhat luxurious, particularly since a battleship requires thousands of utensils in its cook's galleys.

"Why not enameled ware?" the navy was ssked.

"Ever hear of tonsilitis?" an admiral argued.

"To enameled cooking utensils cause tonsilitis?" the WPB counterqueried.

"No, but you can polish stainless steel until it shines. You can't do that to enamel. If it shines, we don't have tonsilitis in the navy."

They got the brass name plates and the stainless steel. They also got brass cuspidors, because the navy department pointed out:

"The cuspidors are the sure barometer of whether the gobs are on their toes. If the cuspidors of the navy's fighting ships shine bright, the officers know the gobs are doing their job. If there are no brass cuspidors, how can they know?"

JACOB SEEKS GOD'S HELP

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 32:3-12, 27-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.—Psalm 46:1.

"O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home."
—Isaac Watts.

How true it is that "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." Jacob found it so, even though his trouble came upon him because of his own misdeeds.

God had prospered him at Haran, but in due time he was led by circumstance and by direct guidance to return to his own land (Gen. 31:1-3). Hindrances arose, but Jacob pressed on. As he came toward home, however, he recalled the sin which had caused him to flee. He remembered now how he had defrauded Esau and this

I. Guilt Brought Fear (vv. 2-8).

It always does. The sinful act of 20 years before now faced Jacob. He had left it behind and had all but forgotten it. He had hoped that the years would cover it, but they did not—and they never do.

"Be sure your sin will find you out" (Num. 32:23)—perhaps not this week or this year, or next; but until it is dealt with and forgiven it is there to rise up and plague you sooner or later.

Jacob's fear was increased by hearing that Esau came out to meet him with 400 men. He tried by his own devices to meet the situation, but ultimately realized that his predicament had reached the point where only God could help him.

How like us, trying everything else until we realize its futility, and then turning to God. How delightfully simplified life becomes when we turn to God first. Yet we are glad that Jacob's

II. Fear Brought Prayer (vv. 9-12).

It was real prayer, too, although, as W. H. Griffth Thomas suggests, it is strange that after his blessed personal experience with God he addressed Him only as the God of his fathers and not his own God (v. 9). Then, too, his faith seemed a bit weak, for it was coupled with great fear (v. 11).

We are told that fear is not a proper motive for turning men to God. Perhaps it is not the highest motive, but both in Scripture and in experience we find it to be true that fear often leads men to God in real repentance and faith. If the goodness and grace of God do not touch man's heart, it is assuredly far better that he should be saved through fear than to be eternally lost.

Jacob, however, needed a further experience of dependence upon God before he could be brought back in peace into the land. He was led to send everyone away so that he was alone when the Lord dealt with him and

III. Prayer Brought Blessing (vv. 27-29).

Jacob, who had by deceit taken the promise from Esau instead of awaiting God's time to give it to him, was now about to attempt another skillful scheme which would have won over Esau and sent Jacob into his land glorying in his own ability. In spite of all God's dealings with him, he was still Jacob the supplanter. So God had to deal with him.

We sometimes think of the grace of God only as that which brings us blessing and joy, but often God is being most gracious and considerate of our real need by sending opposition and hardship.

The divine wrestler let Jacob struggle all night, giving him a chance to submit of his own will; but when it was evident that he would not, he was shown that his own strength would not do, for he was made lame (v. 25).

The very thing which made Jacob sure of his own strength became his weakest point at the touch of God. He was not the last one to learn that lesson.

The comment of F. B. Meyer on this entire scene is most helpful: "Note that Jacob did not lay hold of this visitor, but the visitor lay hold of him. This is not a picture of a man coming to God, to wrestle with God in prayer, but a record of God coming to man, to break the spirit of stubbornness and self-sufficiency which a particular man has for too long a time habitually manifested. All night these two wrestled, the one from heaven and the one of earth, and when, at the dawn of day, Jacob saw that he could not prevail against the man, in his exhaustion and weariness he suddenly felt the touch of the stranger's hand on his thigh. Immediately his thigh was out of joint, rendering him absolutely helpless. But now Jacob realized that the one with whom he had wrestled all night was a divine person; and, whereas early in the night he was held in the grip of the other, now he refused to release his grasp of the visitor until he received a blessing from him."

Commandos Home From 'Greatest Raid'

This soundphoto shows a group of British Commando forces at their home port to which they returned with prisoners and souvenirs after the biggest Commando raid of the war on the French invasion port of Dieppe. Volunteers from an American "Ranger Battalion" participated in the action, the first time since the last war that U. S. soldiers went into action on French soil. The raid, which was regarded by many as the testing of an offensive on a larger scale, was something which Hitler never dared to try. The great raid was backed up by swarms of planes and numerous naval vessels. Raiders even landed tanks for the battle. About 175 German planes probably were destroyed or damaged in the raid, which was described as a "successful demonstration of co-ordination of all three services"—army, navy and air. Two Nazi shore batteries and a radio location station were destroyed, and heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy.

General Wainwright (?) in Jap Prison Camp

This radiophoto, sent by radio from Lisbon to London to New York, is captioned as reputedly showing American officers captured by the Japanese in a prison camp. Maj. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright is purportedly shown at the right, wearing a steel helmet, with the other Americans captured when the fortress of Corregidor fell to the Japs.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Washington, D. C.

WOMEN INFLUENCE HISTORY

All through history, from Helen of Troy to the Duchess of Windsor, women have influenced the tides of fate. And if it had not been for a woman in the life of Gen. Douglas MacArthur he probably would not have been in a position to perform his heroic defense of the Philippines and command Australia today.

Just after the last war, the belle of Washington society was vivacious Louise Brooks, step-daughter of the millionaire Edward T. Stotesbury, a partner of J. P. Morgan. She was the toast of Washington. General Pershing, just returned from France, was one of her most devoted attendants. Admiral Beatty, hero of the battle of Jutland, was another.

Once, after a dinner at Mrs. Marshall Field's both Pershing and Beatty escorted Louise to her car, nearly had an altercation over who was to take her home.

But General MacArthur, then superintendent of West Point, stepped in and married the lady. Shortly thereafter, General Pershing, not at all happy over MacArthur's victory, transferred him to the Philippines.

MacArthur and his wife were stationed in the Philippines for several years. And although the marriage later ended in divorce, it was MacArthur's tour of duty in Manila which acquainted him with Filipino leaders and later brought about his return as field marshal of the Philippine army.

BORED BY WASHINGTON

As a reward for selling $25,000 worth of war savings bonds and stamps, Delbert Hudson, Reno, Nev., newsboy, recently was given a free trip to the nation's capital by the Kiwanis club.

For several days young Delbert led the life of Riley.

He was entertained by Vice President Wallace, U. S. senators and high treasury officials. He lived in an expensive hotel, toured all the showplaces and polished off numerous ice cream sodas.

"Well, Delbert," asked Sen. Pat McCarran of Nevada when it was all over, "what do you like best about Washington?"

"My bed," yawned Delbert, "I'm tired."

SOLOMON ATTACK—A TEST

Inside fact about the attack on the Solomon islands is that it was very carefully planned six weeks in advance, and was different from any other naval action in the Pacific.

U. S. naval raids on the Gilbert and Marshall islands were hit and run affairs. There our navy had no idea of enemy strength, but depended on quick surprise hits and speedy withdrawal.

In the battle of the Coral sea also, we were able to take the Japs by surprise. And in the battle of Midway, we knew the enemy was coming, while the Japs did not know we knew.

But in the Solomon Islands battle, our reconnaissance planes had made advance surveys and we knew fairly accurately the size of the enemy—knew also that we were up against a tough job that would exact heavy cost.

There is every reason to believe, too, that the Japs knew about our preparations, because troop transports cannot be loaded and brought within striking distance without enemy scouting planes sighting them. Therefore, this was a real test in more ways than one.

For instance, this was the first time land, air and sea forces all have co-operated in a single striking force.

Upon the final outcome of that co-operation will depend whether the United States follows the advice of many high army-navy strategists and concentrates more on the Pacific than on Europe.

BRITAIN'S FUTURE

A U. S. official, back from London, tells of standing in line for breakfast at the Hotel Waldorf. Just ahead of him he heard an English lady say:

"After this war is over, we'll have to fight a war of independence to save ourselves from becoming the 49th state of the United States."

This semi-good-natured, semi-grousing attitude, according to Americans returned from London, is rather typical of the apprehension which exists as to what will happen to Britain after the war.

There is no hostility in this, but a realistic awareness that the war is strengthening United States ties, and weakening British ties, with Australia, Canada and Africa.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Not satisfied with 100 per cent participation in the war savings campaign, the doughboys bought a $25 bond for their mascot, "Blackout," a tiny black dog . . . When "Blackout's" bond comes due, the money will go to the SPCA.

Even the lepers are suffering from the shipping shortage. The high commissioner of Guadeloupe, French West Indies, has asked U. S. assistance to get 300 kilograms of chaulmoogra oil from Brazil, needed for treating lepers.

Keep Smiling

Wish a Few Bones, Too?

"Have you seen my dog, Fido, this morning, Mr. Butcher?"

"Seen him? I should think I have. Came in here and chewed up a leg of lamb, and then upset a customer into some eggs."

"Really? Well, I wonder if you'd mind putting this 'Lost' notice in your window?"

Toast His Shins?

Wife (preparing breakfast)—There isn't a slice of bread in the house.

Husband (absently) — Never mind, dear; just make some toast.

You can fool some of the people all the time, and all of the people some of the time, but the rest of the time they'll make fools of themselves.

Hopeless

What Causes Your Constipation?

The super-refined foods we eat these days too often do not give us enough "bulk food." And medical science tells us that lack of sufficient "bulk" is one of the commonest causes of constipation!

If that is your trouble, harsh cathartics and violent purges are, at best, only temporary remedies. How much better to get at the cause and correct it!

Why not make sure that you are getting the "bulk" you need by eating Kellogg's All-Bran? All-Bran is a delicious, crispy cereal that millions of folks rely on. Eat All-Bran yourself—eat it daily—and drink plenty of water—not only to get regular but to keep regular. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, it's wise to see a doctor.

NICHOLSON NEWS—

"Let the wicked forsake their sins and return unto the Lord for He will abundantly pardon all who will come to Him."

So live that Christ will approve of your life. Forget self and live for the glory of God and good of our fellowmen. If Heaven be missed all will be missed.

The many friends of Mrs. E. P. Rankin regret to learn of her illness and wish her a speedy recovery.

Heartiest thanks are extended to Miss Nellie Fisk, Miss Phyllis Williams and Miss Betty Bolening for luscious contaloupe and delicious cake.

Mr. Chester Bird and son of Covington called on Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Morgan and children Saturday morning. His kindness was deeply appreciated.

"There is a land beyond our mortal vision. A better country, one exceeding fair. It hath no night and neither death nor sorrow, nor any sin may gain an entrance there. Oh, far off land beyond the quiet stars, thy perfect calm no earthly discord mars. When our dreams fulfillment find In Thee, our eyes, the King in all His beauty shall see." On Sunday, August 16, 1942 marked the passing of Shaler Roberts Barry after a brief illness. News of his sudden demise shocked and saddened a wide circle. Death had erased the lines of suffering and his features were calm and serene as having fallen into peaceful slumber. A little shadow passed over his placid face, like that of a soft cloud upon the serene waters of the lake, with the calm repose of eternal rest upon his brow. In his youthful days he became a member of the Oak Island Baptist Church. How deep would be the grief over the grave did not the rainbow of Christian hope span the dark gulf between time and eternity. Besides his wife, two daughters, Mrs. A. T. Patton and Mrs. D. D. Armstrong, dear little four-year-old granddaughter, Miss Virginia Ann Armstrong, two sons-in-law, Pvt. A. T. Patton and D. D. Armstrong of Miami, Fla., he is survived by other relatives to whom many hearts go out in sympathy. Final rites at the Grant's Lick church Wednesday afternoon from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Steinhauser were followed by burial in the beauty of the hills in Oakland cemetery, Grants Lick. "There is no death—they only truly live who pass into the life beyond and see this world is but a school preparative for larger ministry."

She was married to John Brewster in 1886.

I shall not cry return!
Nor weep my years away;
But just as long as sunsets burn
I shall be lonesome,—I shall miss
Your hand, your voice, your smile, your kiss.

Not always shall this parting be,
For we, too, may claim eternity
And find the way you go:
And so I do my task and wait
The opening of the outer gate.

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. When they arrive in Tierra Libre they find both Zora and her husband dead. It is Mitchell's job as chief engineer for a fruit company that Jeff has been called to fill. Later Jeff's friend Bill Henderson is also killed, and Jeff suspects his employer, Senor Montaya, of murdering him and the Mitchells because they had found a clue to the strange things going on at the plantation. Other sinister figures are the company chemist, Dr. Toenjes, and the flyers, Ryden and Lannestock. So far Jeff has no evidence, only suspicions, but he is convinced that the solution lies with Montaya.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER X

Curt was tired, hot, and sticky. He had some matters to go over with Montaya and had intended a trip to the senor's office after a shower and change of clothes. But there was an hour to spare and this was as good a time as any for a visit to the field.

He plunged down a rugged footpath leading into a more traveled pathway, and in less than fifteen minutes was at the wide double gates that stretched across the railroad tracks leading into the field. These were of heavy fence wire pulled taut over pipe frames. One gate was swinging ajar, and Curt pushed on in.

A few men busy some distance away hadn't seemed to notice his approach, yet word had carried. Before Curt reached the field office, young Karl Ryden came trotting around a corner of the nearest hangar, his square face congested with anger or annoyance, Curt couldn't tell which. Perhaps it was both.

Said Curt cheerfully, "I was at the hospital and the short cut down the hill was invitir.g. Should have phoned, perhaps, but I wasn't near one at the moment."

"It is all right," Ryden said stiffly. "We happen to be here today."

Lannestock came running up, wiping his hands on some cotton waste. He, too, was visibly put out by the visit. Curt ignored the scowl, tried another smile, extended his hand to Lannestock.

"Hello, Lannestock. Or shall I say Gosta? We're all one family here."

Both Swedes bowed stiffly, uncertainly. Ryden was the spokesman.

"Of course, Mr. Curtis. We are friends here."

"Fine—Karl." He surveyed the two. "Repair work on the planes today?"

"Yes." Ryden snapped this out. He then flung some Swedish at Lannestock, who stood wiping sweat from his forehead with the sleeve of his coverall. Lannestock nodded and made off for the living quarters. Ryden spoke again to Curt.

"My friend will get clean. Then we have something to drink. Now you let me show you the plant."

Grouped behind the two hangars were the utility buildings, and it was to these Ryden led the way.

The largest was a V-shaped affair, housing in one wing the office, in the other a six-room bachelor quarters for Ryden, Lannestock, and their principal mechanics.

But there remained the hangars. With Ryden clearly reluctant, Curt himself led the way.

In front of each hangar was the plane it housed, mechanics were still at work on them. On one plane they were repairing the landing gear, but the other machine was dismantled of cowling and propellor, and a new wing had been installed. The old one lay on the ground.

Curt puzzled. These were a make of plane quite unfamiliar to him, but after all Curt wasn't a particularly air-minded man. They seemed big, bulky, awkward things, Percherons of the air, built for hard usage. Each had powder-laying nozzles protruding from the fuselage well back under the tails.

Thought of this powder led Curt's eyes to the shed-type structure between the hangars, which evidently housed the chemical for treating the swampland. The sliding doors were closed and locked, but the hard-packed earth before the building and in paths leading to the planes' loading spaces was white with the stuff trod in under foot.

Curt noticed floodlighting equipment.

"I see you can do night flying."

"That is for emergency. We have never used it."

Something else was for emergency, too. An emergency against emergency, Curt told himself. At one end of the hangar in front of him he saw a broad shelf holding some dozens of oil flares.

Curt turned back to the shed that housed the chemical, eyed it speculatively. Against his better judgment he was about to put a question, when a furious chugging and clanking of rails, the sudden sound magnified by the backdrop of mountainside, told of a motorcar racing around the foot of the range toward the field.

The look of relief that swept Ryden's face was not lost on Curt, who thought, What now? In a few strides they were at the end of the building and saw a mozo swinging wide the gates so the motorcar would not have to stop its pace.

Ah, Curt thought, the visitor's expected. Montaya?

The car came to a grinding stop and out popped not the suave, smooth Senor Montaya, but Dr. Toenjes! Even at that distance Curt could see the Dutchman was not so genial as when Curt first met him.

Not so genial? Dr. Toenjes' hair, ragged at any time, now stood on end, for he wore no hat and the late afternoon wind was brisk. His beard was the plaything of a thousand devils. The man looked possessed.

The astonishing sensation of evil genius Curt felt of Dr. Toenjes in that one moment was dissipated as the Dutchman approached.

"Ahh? Meestoor Coortiss. A zerprise, no?" The man's voice was normal enough, his shaggy brows comically arched. "I coom for ze vorrds with Herr Lannestock und find you. It iss a plezoor." To Ryden he said, "He iss here, no? Herr Lannestock?"

"Yes. In his room making clean." Ryden's voice had changed. Gone was the stiffness, in its place relief, as though he were handing over responsibility.

"Ah, zen I see him latoor. You like ze—ze—teengs you see here, Meestoor Coortiss?" Toenjes waved his hand vaguely at the field, the buildings.

"Very much. The men must be quite satisfied here."

Curt watched quizzically as the Dutchman's eyes shot about, taking in the planes standing out in the open, the closed doors of the chemical shed.

Dr. Toenjes turned his thick lenses on Curt. "Yess," he hissed.

A zerprize, no? Curt mimicked to himself. I teenk no. You're a confounded liar, Doctor. Lannestock phoned I was here. Why? The chemical, of course.

He indicated the shed. "Your compound, Doctor?"

Dr. Toenjes turned his thick lenses on Curt.

"Yess," he hissed.

"Efficient method of treating the ground," Curt grinned, "taking it in thousand-acre lots."

"Ah, yess. Eef Associated had so done before they pla-ant, they would have ze reechest cutting efer known. Their land ees good, wizout ze—ze—how you say? ze sour from ze centuries of water."

"They're still cutting strong, Doctor," Curt said dryly. Then, as the Dutchman's eyes continued to bore through him he gave a short laugh. "Look here, Dr. Toenjes. Let's get something straightened out. You, too, Karl. And Gosta," he added, as Lannestock joined the group in fresh whites.

"You'll have to get rid of your suspicions of me. I'm no spy for Associated. I work for Senor Montaya, just as you do. His success is mine, and I'm certainly going to do nothing to undermine my own future. I didn't seek this job. The senor sought me. Up to then I hadn't even heard of this planting. So you needn't be worried about my giving away your secret, Doctor."

The Dutchman studied Curt. "Ah, no, I am not vorry," he said at last. "For you do not ze zegred have. It has nobody but me, me alone, Meestoor Coortiss."

"Okay, that's fine. Then let's drop the bars. We'll be here together for a long time to come. Anyway," he went on curiously, "you've less reason to be worried about me than about anyone of your some thousands of farm laborers who could easily steal samples of your stuff to sell to Associated for analysis."

At this Dr. Toenjes shook his head with satisfaction.

"Ah, no. Zampies from ze grround zey could get, but zamples from ze grround vould not vork out in laboratory analysis, Meestoor Coortiss. All zey find iss lime. My zegred ingredient, he iss too quick absorbed."

Curt stared, then gave another laugh.

"Well, you need have no worries at all, then. You seem to guard the fresh stuff well at its source."

He couldn't keep the sarcasm from his words, but he smiled agreeably enough. He took off his Stetson to wipe the sweatband and mop his forehead, and by way of changing the subject he motioned to the far end of the field and the big abandoned hangars there.

"Too bad you couldn't have used the original hangars and had the benefit of that shade," he said.

As the three stared at him he laughed again. Evidently he hadn't yet struck the combination of syllables that would ease the conversation along an agreeable path. But as he'd mentioned the hangar, he might as well continue.

"Senor Montaya told me the story. Well, things grow fast here. It won't be many years before the trees planted at this end will give good shade."

Nobody said anything to this, either, so Curt went on in a moment, rather irritably, "You should clear the grass from that end of the field. From the color and ripple in the wind I can tell from here that it's high and dry. Don't your planes in landing or taking off fire that dry stuff?"

"We cut it regular. It is time again," Ryden conceded.

The group was ambling. Curt became aware that Dr. Toenjes was steering them away from the white-floored space before the chemical shed. He grinned.

At this point Dr. Toenjes suggested a drink, so they headed for the clubroom. Lannestock held open the screen door. They took chairs about a table and a native servant set before them tall glasses and bottles of Schnapps. Only then did Toenjes become quite fully at ease. He could be affable when he chose. It was not a prolonged visit, and the last lift of the big tumblers found it ending on a reasonably social note. Yet even now, after drinking together with him, Curt noted the Swedes were still unsmiling and formal!

Dr. Toenjes offered Curt a lift up the mountainside.

"You haven't taken care of your business with Gosta," Curt reminded him, adding provocatively, "the business that brought you to the field."

The Dutchman stared through his thick lenses. "Oh, yess." He spoke to Lannestock. "It is about tomorrow, ze vork for you. Coom to ze office, on ze map I show you."

The two were gone but a few minutes. Then Curt and the doctor, in the latter's car, were on their way up to San Alejo.

This was the first time Curt had gone over the branch line to the airfield. It followed the field's boundary at first, then halfway down curved away to cling to the foot of the mountain. This necessitated a rather long spur to serve the bodega at the far end of the field.

They had just passed this spur when there came a buzzing from the air which quickly grew in volume to a steady, powerful drone. Curt put his head out of the window to look up, but could see nothing.

Toenjes stopped the car. Both men climbed out, squinting against the sun. They knew the C. A. T. planes were grounded and in any case this sound told of heavier ships. Powerful ships. More than one.

Then they were seen. Two huge planes dropped from a bank of clouds and circled low over the San Alejo field.

"Army planes!" Curt exclaimed at sight of the insignia on the wings. "Must be from the Canal. Well, why do they circle? Why don't they land or fly on?"

The reason became apparent as a third plane came limping into view. One of its engines was misfiring. Something had happened and these two were hanging on to make sure of the third's safety.

The damaged plane settled onto the San Alejo runway, taxied to the upper end. Above, the two circling planes climbed, straightened out, and made off directly North.

"Headed for Soledad," said Curt. "Let's go back and find out what's wrong."

The words weren't necessary. The Dutchman's brows bristled, his eyes bulged. "Ja!" he wheezed, and excitedly plunged into the car.

They could have backed the car onto the bodega track, then cut the other arm of the spur's "Y," and thus be headed for the field again. But Toenjes couldn't wait so long. Curt had only time to hop on the running board as the Dutchman crashed into reverse gear and backed the car to the field.

When they arrived at the grounded army plane they found four men landed and the plane already surrounded by airfield workers. The newcomers were in United States Army uniform. One, the leader, was expostulating angrily with the glowering Ryden.

"What the deuce? There are no private fields, man, when a plane is in distress. Here! Keep those monkeys away from this plane. Blanding! Newman! Push these people back! You, whatever your name is." He stabbed a finger at Ryden for attention. "You seem to have authority here. We'll have to make repairs before we can go on. Give us a hand and we can take off before dark, but waste any more time telling me I can't land here and you'll have to put us up overnight. We ARE landed!"

Meals—With Zest

Does meal after meal slip by unnoticed, eaten only because it does away with hunger? Do your meals pull their punches so to speak—look good, have proper balance, contrast in texture, etc., but still seem to lack something vital?

A dinner, lunch or breakfast that lacks a sense of completeness is like a ham sandwich without mustard, meat without seasoning, fish without a tart sauce, a pie without a flaky crust. The small things that do big things for menus are the relishes, pickles, jams and jellies, which brings me to today's topic.

Relishes such as pickles, jellies, conserves and preserves can supply that sense of completeness to a meal if you use them with a thought to flavor affinity.

For chicken try strawberry or plum jam. Goose calls for spiced peach jam or apple jelly. Orange and cherry jam or relish are tops with bland duck. Spiced grape jam or gooseberry jams are "musts" with beef just as mint or crabapple jelly are musts with lamb. Pair off that golden brown ham with plum jelly or horseradish mixed with grape jelly. Veal needs currant or blackberry jam.

If you can't get quince jelly, try cranberry jelly with pork. Liver will be extra good with tomato relish.

Think of all the plate lunches and sandwiches you are going to serve the year 'round for lunches, snacks and pack-up boxes. You'll need these:

Your Canning Shelf

*Concord Grape Jelly
*Quince Honey
*Peach-Plum Butter
*Bread and Butter Pickles
*Pickled Peaches
*Chili Sauce
*Recipes Given

Bread and Butter Pickles.
(Makes 8 pints)
12 large cucumbers
4 onions, sliced
4 cups sugar
1 quart vinegar
3 cups water
4 teaspoons celery seed
4 teaspoons mustard seed
2 teaspoons tumeric

Cut cucumbers in ¼ inch slices. Soak with onions in strong salt water for 4 hours. Combine remaining ingredients and bring to a boil. Add strained cucumber and onion slices. Bring to a boil again and boil 5 minutes. Pack into hot, sterilized jars.

Concord grapes are plentiful in the fall and make delicious jelly. You can substitute corn syrup in this one:

Concord Grape Jelly.
(Makes 11 medium glasses)
4 cups juice
7½ cups sugar
½ bottle fruit pectin

You will need about 3 pounds of grapes for four cups of juice. Wash and stem grapes and crush grapes. Add just enough water to keep from scorching, bring to a boil and simmer 5 minutes. Strain juice through cheesecloth. Measure out 4 cups. Measure sugar and mix with juice. Bring to a boil over hottest fire, stirring constantly. Bring to a full, rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, and pour into hot, sterilized jelly glasses. Paraffin at once.

Note: 2 cups of light corn syrup may be substituted in this recipe for two cups of sugar. Use 5½ cups of sugar and 2 cups light corn syrup in the recipe for Concord Grape jelly.

Peach and Plum Jam.
(Makes 8 small glasses)
1 pound blue plums
1½ pounds peaches
1 box powdered fruit pectin
4½ cups sugar
Or
2 cups light corn syrup
2½ cups sugar

Peel and pit peaches. Chop finely. Pit plums and chop until fine. Add powdered pectin (or pectin, sugar and corn syrup.) Mix well and bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute. Remove from heat and skim. Pour into hot, sterilized glasses and seal.

Quinces come into their own in the fall and if you're fond of them, plan to put up some:

Quince Honey.
(Makes 6 small glasses)
1½ pounds quinces
2½ cups water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 cups sugar

Wash, pare and core quinces. Add water to peelings and cook 30 minutes. Grate quinces very thin, or slice thinly. Weigh pulp and use 1 pound. Add lemon juice and strained liquid from peelings. Cook until tender, add sugar, and cook until two drops fall from spoon at same time, or when a drop jells easily on a saucer. Pour into sterile glasses and seal.

Nothing compares to the sweet, spicy, home-like smell of the making of chili sauce:

Chili Sauce.
(Makes 5 quarts)
1 gallon chopped, peeled tomatoes
1 cup chopped onions
1½ cups chopped green peppers
1 cup vinegar
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons salt
1½ teaspoons ground allspice
3 tablespoons cinnamon
1½ teaspoons cloves

Tie spices loosely in cheesecloth. Boil with vegetables until mixture is reduced to half its original quantity, stirring all the while to prevent scorching. Add vinegar, salt, sugar and boil rapidly for 5 minutes. Pour into hot sterilized jars and seal immediately.

Pickled Peaches.
(Makes 8 pints)
3 cups honey
3 cups vinegar
2 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon whole cloves
2 sticks cinnamon
5 quarts peaches

Heat honey, vinegar, water and salt. Scald peaches, remove skins and insert cloves. Place a few in the boiling syrup, add cinnamon and cook until peaches are tender, and acquire a slightly transparent look. Pack in sterilized jars, cover with boiling syrup and seal.

What are your food problems? Cake making? Bread making? Pickles, jams, jellies? Children's lunches? Miss Lynn Chambers will be glad to give you expert advice on your particular problem, if you write her explaining what you want to know, at Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill. Please enclose a stamped, addressed envelope for your reply.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Cantaloupe supplies for this year will be lighter because of curtailed production, but watch your markets for the "peaks" of the season as supplies come in from California, Arizona, Georgia and South Carolina.

Recently a group of prepared cereals have had their whole grain nutritive values restored or are now made from whole grains so watch labels when doing your buying.

The peach crop this year will be like last year—one of the best, according to present indications. Heavy shipments have already started coming in and production will climb up to about 50 million bushels—a new high.

Broilers and fryers will be abundant during these next few months, so don't miss out on good fried chicken or crisply browned and broiled chicken. Young chickens are abundant now because of increased war poultry production.

Canned foods will come in fewer sizes this fall and winter in the effort to cut down on use of tin.

Public-Spirited Woman Encounters a Little Boy

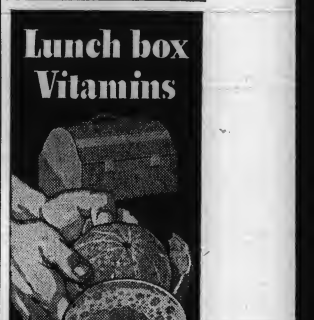
Something about the appearance of the begrimed little chap on the street halted the lady, who inquired, "Little boy, haven't you any home?"

"Oh, yes'm, I've got a home."

"And loving parents?"

"Yes'm."

"I'm afraid you don't know what affection really is. Are your parents bringing you up to be a good and helpful citizen?"



"Yes'm."

"Will you tell your mother to come and hear me talk on 'When a Mother's Duty to Her Child Begins' at two o'clock next Monday afternoon at Lyceum hall?"

"What's the matter with you, Ma," shouted the little felow, "don't you know me? I'm your little boy."

Years ago the Marine uniform was equipped with a high stiff leather collar supposed to give a more military carriage. From that time on, "Leatherneck" has been the word for a Marine. The word for his favorite cigarette is "Camel"—the favorite cigarette also of men in the Army, Navy, and Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) By GRANTLAND RICE

THE somewhat steamy lets summer air is still rife with the buzz of many voices trying to name the world's best golfer.

Byron Nelson? Ben Hogan? Sammy Sneed? Craig Wood? At least these are the four well in the lead, although in the last year Craig Wood has gone in more upon the instructive side than tournament play.

The phrase "best golfer" covers more than a few details or angles.

Winning golf means something more than shot-making. It must also mean determination and the ebility to keep concentrating under fire.

I haven't seen a finer stylist than Sammy Sneed, now in the navy end far from the fairways.

Sam Snead

By stylist I mean the ability to get results with less effort, with greater smoothness and ease.

But the leen Virginian or West Virginian, a product of both states, has too many concentrative lapses at critical moments.

Navy Sem at times finds it difficult to keep his mind on the next shot or to keep his grip on the situation through 72 holes. But before going into the navy he was still the one that alweys carried more than his shere of the gallery who liked to watch an easy looking swing that sent the ball se far and se streight.

Nelson and Hogan

Nelson and Hogan, two Texens who ceme along together from Ft. Worth, take up most of the erguments. This is natural enough. In the first place they are the two big money winners of the yeer, the two leading stars of the last two years over a stretch of tournament play.

Hogan won the $3,500 open at Los Angeles. Nelson won the Mesters at Augusta in e play off egeinst Hogan. Hogan won the Hale America. Then Nelson followed by winning the $15,000 Tam O' Shanter scremble. The two have had one important meeting so far.

In the Augusta National test Nelson led Hogan by a single stroke in 90 holes of play. This margin of course is thinner than the rubber of a toy belloon.

Hogan's tournament record in the way of average strokes per round and his money record for two yeers has been slightly better than Nelson's. They are a tough pair to seperate, if you take in all the elements that go inte winning golf.

Nelson has been the big stake winner. Hogan has yet to win e national title—U. S. Open or PGA.

Styles of Play

Byron Nelson, without eny question, is the best ell around shotmaker in the game.

He has a greater veriety than Hogan can call upon. For example, Hogan must depend upon e controlled hook off the tee. Nelson, if the occesion demands, can use a fade or a hook.

Hogan believes in banking upon control of a more limited assortment, which makes concentration an easier matter.

They are both long. Both are fine, long iron players. But neither over any extended period of play could be classed as a fine putter.

Ben Hogan

At least neither belongs with such green experts as Jerry Trevers, Welter Travis, Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Freddie McLeod, Tommy McNemara, Horton Smith or Paul Runyen — to mention only a limited list.

But golf has its peculiar ways. It gave Harry Vardon control of every shot in the game—up to the putt. If Vardon had been a first-class putter he would have finished with more U. S. and British Opens than any two men in golf.

Both Nelson and Hogan can putt in spells. But there is nothing consistent on either side. Neither looks like a good putter, to start with.

Nelson can gear himself up higher in a big stake than Hogan can. This may be due to the fact thet Hogen is willing to work harder through a longer stretch.

Hogan gives himself no rest. He takes no vacations. Nelson does, giving much less thought to tournaments that he considers not quite so important.

The wonder is that 135-pound Hogan can take such physical and nerve and mental beating—not only week after week and month after month—but also year after year. Hogen practices endlessly, steeling himself for every tournament. His ability to stand up under the strein is little short of miraculous.

If you are looking for the best shot meker—the nod goes to Nelson.

If you are looking to the hardest worker—the same goes to Hogan.

And it might be mentioned that both can play their full share of winning golf.

Corn 'Rheumatism' Cause Explained

Cure Effected by Using Phosphorus and Potash

By Dr. George N. Hoffer

"Rheumatism" in the joints of growing corn that results in poorly formed ears or dwarfed growth can be cured by doses of potash or phosphorus fertilizer or a combination of both elements applied to the soil in sufficient quantities.

Corn "rheumatism" is especially prevalent in areas that have been consistently planted to this crop for generations. It often manifests itself in poor yields from normal looking corn plants thet fail to produce properly ripened ears.

If the stems of these backward corn plants are slit lengthwise, the chances are that the interior of the joints will be found considerably derker in color than the remainder of the stem tissue.

After a "hard" day these purebreds on a Jefferson county, Wisconsin, dairy farm are heading home.

These darkened areas ere due to an accumulation of iron and other minerals that break down the tissues and wreck the "conveyor belts" that transport food to all parts of the corn plant. Scientific tests have established thet this malady is caused by a lack of available potash in the soil. It cen be prevented by the eddition of potash.

In some cases e definitely stunted growth of the entire corn plant accompanies the symptoms of poorly maturing ears. Here egain a lengthwise section of the stem is likely to reveal tell-tale darkened joints. In such instances, the trouble is due to a lack of both potash and phosphorus. The application of these plant food elements to the soil will remedy the condition.

While corrective measures such es the foregoing are advisable, the surest preventive of plent malnutrition and its resultant crop failure is to make certain that before corn planting time each year the land is provided with plenty of fertilizer to supply needed potash and phosphorus to the growing crop.

Cellulose for Textiles

Wood and cotton linters, grown on American farms, are used to make rayon, the fabric that goes into everything from football breeches to velvet evening wreps. So popular has it become that five times more rayon than silk is now used. The process was discovered 50 years ego by a Frenchmen and has been produced commercially in the United States since 1911. More than 500,000,000 pounds of rayon yarn is used annually.

Although there are several verieties of the process, most reyon is mede by adding chemicals to spruce wood and cotton linters to change it into a thick, syrupy solution. This is pressed through e kind of strainer, called a spinneret. Out of each tiny hole comes a single filament of yarn. When this is cleansed and dried, it is the thread to be woven into cloth.

Filaments can be combined into different sizes of yarns, finer than those of a silkworm or thicker than coarse wool. Mixed with cotton, silk, flax or wool, this yarn is woven into cloth of endless variety of textures.

This same process invented for rayon is used to make yarn from soybean cellulose and the casein from soured milk. Soybeans will be used for automobile upholstery within a short time. So enthusiestic is Henry Ford about the possibilities of this fabric that he has had a suit made from soybean cloth woven to resemble wool.

Italy pioneered in making milk wool.

Injured Trees

Trees that have been injured by storms should be given treetment as soon as possible. This treatment should consist of cutting the ends of the broken branches back beyond where the bark was torn. In some instances it may be advisable to remove the entire branch back to the main stem or lateral. These torn and ragged ends of branches should be removed immediately and all wounds that are two inches in diameter or over should be painted.

Tell me a Bedtime Story

PADDY THE BEAVER GIVES WARNING

GRANDFATHER FROG set on his green lily-pad in the Smiling Pool. It seemed to him that never before hed the heerts of the lilles been so golden, or the sky so blue, or the laughter of the Laughing Brook so merry, or the ripples of the Smiling Pool so charming. On another lily-pad near him sat Spotty the Turtle. Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter were stretched out on the bank, and lazily swimming just in front was Jerry Muskrat. Grandfather Frog was telling them of his edventures and what he thought of the Greet World.

"I heve always told my cousin, old Mr. Toad, that the Smiling Pool is e much better place than the Greet World. I was sure of it before ever I went out to see for myself, and now I know it," said Grandfather Frog.

Billy Mink end Little Joe Otter began to laugh. Grandfather Frog looked at them severely. "What are you laughing et?" he demanded.

"Much you know the Great World! Why, you heven't seen a tiny corner of it," laughed Billy Mink, who, you know, is a great traveler.

Grandfather Frog drew himself up proudly and replied in his most dignified way, "I will have you to understand, Billy Mink, that I heve seen the Great World, and it is no place for honest people to live in."

"Did you visit Farmer Brown's dooryard?" asked Little Joe Otter.

"Or the heart of the Green Forest?"

"Or the Old Pasture?"

To each of these questions Grandfather Frog wes forced to shake his heed. It was rather mortifying to have to admit thet after all he had been but a very little way out into the Greet World, end he wes trying to think of some sharp reply when Jerry Muskrat suddenly shouted, "Here comes my big cousin, Paddy the Beaver! Hello, Cousin Paddy! Where have you been all summer?"

"Did you visit Farmer Brown's dooryard?" asked Little Joe Otter.

Everybody turned to look in the direction Jerry was pointing. There, sure enough, was Paddy the Beaver swimming out from the Laughing Brook. Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter stared. They had never seen him before. Grandfather Frog and Spotty the Turtle bowed politely. They had met him the time of the great trouble in the Smiling Pool and the Laughing Brook when the water had nearly stopped running because way up in the Green Forest Paddy had built a dam across the Laughing Brook. He had torn it down when his cousin had told him how he had spoiled the Laughing Brook and the Smiling Pool.

"I've come to give warning," said Paddy as he drew near.

"Warning of what?" asked Grandfather Frog.

"That I'm going to make my home up in the Green Forest," replied Paddy.

"Hurray! I'm so glad!" cried Jerry Muskrat, who was very proud of his big cousin. "But I don't see what you mean by a warning:"

Paddy's eyes twinkled. "Well, you see I have got to make a pond up there," said he, "and to do thet I have got to take the water of the Laughing Brook."

Everybody's face fell. They remembered how dreedful it had been before when there wes so little water in the Laughing Brook end the Smiling Pool Paddy noticed it. "It will be for only a little while," said he. "Just as soon as my pond is made the water will run back in the Laughing Brook and fill the Smiling Pool just es it is now. I wanted you to know what is going to happen, so that you will not be worried, and so I heve come to give warning. I hope you will not feel badly about it."

Noah and His Ark

Authorities on the Bible have long debated the length of time it took Noah to build the Ark. Many state that 120 yeers elapsed between the warning of the Lord to Noah and the coming of the flood. Genesis 6:3 reads: "And the Lord said, My spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years." Other authorities place the construction period at 53 years while some assign only five years to it.

ALMOST any plain washstand or dresser may be given long smart lines by adding open shelves at the ends. Here, a top of plywood with a plain mouding around the edges extends across the top of the stand and shelves.

By adding a plain baseboard and a coat of paint the piece is finished with a modern air.

The diagram at the upper right shows how to make the wall decoration from a remnant of flowered chintz. If you use an old frame, the chintz picture may be given the appearance of an oil painting by applying several coats of varnish, allowing plenty of time for each coat to dry thoroughly.

Judge N. E. Riddell Passes Away After Long Illness

Judge N. E. Riddell, 70, who has served as Judge of Boone County for the past 22 years, passed away at Christ Hospital, Cincinnati, Tuesday, after a lingering illness.

He was the son of Attorney and Mrs. Fountain Riddell. A sister, Mrs. A. B. Renaker of Burlington, and a niece, Mary Louise Townsend, wife of Dr. William of Falmouth, survive him. His wife, Katie Huey Riddell, whom he married in 1900, died 12 years ago.

Judge Riddell was a life long resident of Burlington. He was graduated from the Cincinnati Law School.

At one time the Judge was owner of the Boone County Recorder. At the time of his death he was president of the Peoples Depasit Bank at Burlington, and secretary of the Masonic Lodge

Judge Riddell had a host of friends, not only in Burlington, but all over the county, and whenever he was known. He was a political power and will be greatly missed.

Services are to be conducted at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. B. Renaker, Burlington. Burial at Highland cemetery. Chambers & Grubbs, Walton, have charge of the funeral arrangements.

GOOD RYE PASTURE EXCELS BLUEGRASS IN SHEEP GRAZING

Rye that gets a good start in the fall is better than bluegrass as winter pasture for sheep, judging from tests by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station.

Ewes running on good rye pasture in winter kept in better condition, sheared heavier fleeces and gave birth to heavier lambs which gained slightly faster, than ewes on bluegrass.

In years when rye was poor, bluegrass gave better results. Rye should be seeded as early as possible, when it is planned to pasture it.

The Experiment Station has also found that ewes do better on alfalfa hay than on red clover hay. Lambs from ewes fed alfalfa hay were larger at birth and when four weeks old than lambs from ewes fed clover.

Only 10 percent of the alfalfa hay was refused by the ewes, while they refused to eat 16 percent of the red clover hay.

Tests are being continued at the Experiment Station to determine wheather sheared or unsheared late lambs gain faster. In tests to date, the sheared lambs have done better. They also have been graded "U. S. Good," while the unsheared late lambs have graedd "U. S. Mediuh."

D. L. BUSBY'S NEW STORE

Mr. D. L. Lusby moved into his new store building Monday.

This very attractive and modern building is in the same location as his store which was recently destroyed by fire. The front is of black ivory and green victric material. The interior is decorated in white, with the latest designs in fixtures. Dr. Hess Vest of Walton, was the contractor and builder.

A stock of first class groceries and meats are carried with courteous clerks to assist you in your shopping.

BOONE COUNTY WAR SAVINGS COMMITTEE SOLD $981.65 IN BONDS AND STAMPS

The War Savings Committee of Boone County reported that there was sold from their Booth at the 4-H Fair, in War Bonds, (series E), and War Saving Stamps, the amount of $981.65, this being the issue price.

The Committee was pleased with the amount sold, but was sorry that more people did not stop in the Booth and obtain literature or express an interest in the movement. However, the Committee stated that they were aware that people attended the Fair for relaxation and that they should not be in any way censured for their lack of interest in the Booth. But they did want it made known that the bulk of the sales made were in large amounts, which of course, were acceptable and will be a great help toward attaining the August quota.

The Committee wishes at this time to gratefully acknowledge the help which it received from the following: Chambers & Grubbs, Geo. W. Hill & Co., Kirkpatrick's Store, Sam Ryle, Community Public Service, McBee Service Station, Poston Brothers, Mrs. G. W. Tolin, Miss Dorothy Furnish, Elmer Kirkpatrick and The Walton Advertiser.

Big Junk Rally To Be Held In Walton Saturday

Everybody in the county is going into the junk business for a while Saturday. Junk Rally Day will be h eld in Walton and everybody is asked to bring in a big sack of scrap when they do their Saturday shopping.

Any scrap metal, rubber, rags or burlap will find a ready sale for cash on the parking lot opposite the Chevrolet garage. An effort is being made to have a good speaker at the gathering at 4:00 p. m., and everybody attending will have good fun.

Uncle Sam wants and needs all your scrap materials and it will pay you to bring them in Saturday. Most of the merchants and stores are offering attractive bargains, special items can be bought with your junk money, and it ought to be profitable for all. You will see friends and have a good time.

Don't dismiss the matter with the thought that you've already disposed of your scrap. A little poking around will turn up pieces you had long forgotten, and a systematic search and clean-up would in some cases reveal tons. Before snow flies everybody will be urged to gather their LAST POUND, to sell or donate, to themselves haul or cooperate in moving it off to take its place in Production for Victory. So let's get started now.

And A Line To The Children

Listen, all you children, little ones and big 'uns, too, who can lift. Gather up all the old scrap metal you can find and bring it to town in a sack Saturday.

Now I didn't say to take Dad's new straight back razor or the last pot Mother's got to boil a ham in. But, in the cellar, around the barn, or in the barn lot, you'll probably find some old iron that's not good for anything except to shoot at the Germans or theJaps, and FOR YOU TO SELL in town Saturday. If it's too early to think of school books, it will buy you all the candy and ice cream you want and maybe go far enough for a trip to the movies. Now, get busy!

CREDIT ORGANIZATION URGES WHEAT FEEDING

In line with Secretary of Agriculture Wickard's recent call for livestock feeders to use more wheat in the livestock ration, Leonard C. Taylor, Secretary-Treasurer of the Northern Kentucky Production Credit Association, yesterday urged the 650 members of this short-term cooperative in Northern Kentucky to include increased amounts of wheat in feeds for livestock and poultry.

Current reports", Mr. Taylor explains, "reveals that farmers of the United States are feeding more corn right now than they are producing. This means that there will have to be a change in rations. With our plentiful supplies of wheat, this grain is the logical substitute for part of the corn now going into feed for meat animals and fouls.".

The drive to get members and other farmers to feed more wheat is an addition to the activities being carried on by the Northern Kentucky Production Credit Association as a help to the war effort. The association's loans this year reflect that the farmers are producing needed items in the Food-for-Freedom program. War Saving Bonds are being sold by the association as a wartime service for members and other farmers in the eight counties it serves.

Information on the wheat-feeding program is available from county AAA committees.

Burlington First Aid Class Completed

Under the tutelage of Dr. M. A. Yelton, a class in Standard First Aid has been taught and completed in Burlington, with fourteen certificates being awarded to members of the class.

This class was started May 19, and continued through July 28th, the date of the final examination.

Those completing the course and who will receive certificates are Robert Clore, Kirtley Cropper, C. D. Benson, Mary Bess Cropper, Kathryn, Cropper, Helen Clore, Alberta Green, Lon Pope, Rosa Brown, Catherine Easton, Lula Tolin, Alice Yelton, Lucille Cotton and W. C. Brown.

SUMMER MEETING OF NEW HAVEN P. T. A. HELD AT WEAVER HOME

Some twenty members and friends of New Haven P. T. A. were delightfully entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Weaver on Thursday, August 27, at which time a very detailed program was mapped out by officers for the coming school year. Quite a bit of old business was successfully disposed of and many new projects laid before the body to be worked out as the new term gets under way.

Due to the late date of September 14 being set as opening day for Boone County schools this year, it was announced that the first P.T.A. meeting will be at 8 o'clock E.W.T. Tuesday, September 15, with all future meetings to be held on the regular first Tuesday of each month. September 10 was set as Clean-up Day, when as many members as can will be on hand to aid in a renovation of our lunch room.

Mrs. Viola Friend, Secy.

HOMEMAKERS' CLUBS TO RESUME ACTIVITIES IN KENTON COUNTY

Health, conservation and salvage as related to the war effort will highlight the 1942-43 club calender of the Kenton County Homemakers' Association. This organization will resume activities in September. The initial community meeting will be held at the country home of Mrs. John Murchison, Hyland.

The Extension Service of the United States Department of Agriculture has been designated as an educational agency to promote wartime programs.

The job of building and maintaining the military machine we must have to beat the enemy will involve the extremes of toil and sacrifices and homemakers throughout the country are mobilizing to hold the home front.

The wartime nutrition program will be a vital phase of the Extension Program. "Saftguarding the winter Diet," and "Problems in Planning 1942-43 Meals" will be studied.

Paul V. McNutt, Administrator, Office of Defense Health and Welfare Service, says, "At least 80,000,00 working days can be saved this year if workers can keep fit. This means 14,000 more bombers, 10 dreadnaughts, 33,000 tanks to help win the war."

Conservation will play an important part in all phases of the year's program, since every form of waste must be eliminated. Thus, homemakers will be given suggestions for the care of household furnishings, clothes, etc., "Sewing to Save," "Wartime Conservation of Home Furnishings," and "Home Management in Wartime".

Victory gardens and food preservation was the summer program for the organization.

The calender of events will also include recreation, landscape architecture and citizenship.

Home demonstration clubs which are under the direct supervision of the United States Department of Agriculture, are organized in the following communities: Piner, Oak Island, Nicholson-Atwood, Hickory Grove, Staffordsburg, Ryland, Independence, Beech Grove, Elsmer-Erlanger, Dixie, Ft. Mitchell, Bromley, Crescent Springs, Oak Ridge, Spring Lake, Winston Hill, Forest Hills, and Arcadia. Miss Zelma E. Byerly, Home Demonstration Agent, is in charge of the work in Kenton County.

W. C. T. U. WILL MEET FRIDAY

The September meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the Methodist church, Friday, Sept. 4th at 2:30 o'clock.

Recording Secty.

DORCUS CLASS MEETS—

Mrs. Levi Pennington was hostess to the Dorcas Sunday school class of the First Baptist Church Thursday, August 27.

A bountiful dinner was served to twenty-four members and visitors. A program on "Faith in God" was given in the afternoon.

Those who enjoyed the day were: Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Alford, Mrs. Minnie Davis, Mrs. Grace Jones, Mrs. Fannie Sleet, Mrs. Lucy Breeden, Mrs. Susie Norman, Mrs. Fannie Brittenhelm, Mrs. Maude Wilson, Mrs. D. K. Johnson, Mrs. Della Northcutt, Mrs. J. T. Boulton, Mrs. Marion Stevenson, Mrs. Ethel Breeden, Mrs. Jesse Heley, Miss June Haley, Glenna and Betty Northcutt, Nathan Northcutt, Jr., Lucy, Jimmie and Leon Pennington and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Pennington.

FOLLY FARM JAMBOREE

Mr. Emlin Roberts entertained at his "Folly Farm" Friday evening in honor of Miss Julia Ann Stansifer's 16th birthday.

The early part of the evening was spent in playing games, directed by Fox DeMoisey. An added attraction was the hog calling contest, easily taken by the "Hog Caller DeLuxe", Miss Evelyn Coffman, Verona, Ky., after which a delicious dinner was served, buffet style, on the beautiful lawn.

After dinner a novelty dance act was put on by the beautiful and versatile Barbara Ann Crouse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Crouse. She was directed and accompanied by her mother at the piano. Later in the evening dancing was enjoyed by the younger set in the ballroom, where punch was served by Mrs. Stansifer and Miss Milner, mother and aunt of Miss Stansifer.

Mr. Roberts was a most gracious host. The affair was attended by the following persons:

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Cleek and Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Hughes, Chaperones; Misses Ella Mae Chambers, Luke Gordon, Mary DeMoisey, Blanche Brittenhelm, Barbara Crouse, Charles Ransler, Russel Groger, Stanley Lee McElroy, Lloyd Desha McElroy, Guy Olen Carlisle, Tommy Kephart, Plucker DeMoisey, Fox DeMoisey; Mrs. Wm. Crouse, Mrs. Ora Fry, Mabel Stansifer, Walton, Ky.; Miss Patrica McFarland, Miss Ann McFarland, Miss Westy Addams, Mr. Richard Long, Mr. Don Frank, Mr. Pat Fanning, Ft. Thomas, Ky.; Miss, Evelyn Coffman, Verona, Ky.; Miss Verna Lee Walton, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Hughes, Jack Hughes, Crittenden, Ky.; Miss Martha Dowell, Miss Julia Ann Stansifer, Mrs. A. F. Milner, Jr., Rising Sun, Ind.; Mrs. Mary Southland, Mrs. Mabel Subanick, Middletown, Ohio, and the host, Mr. Emlin Roberts.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT TO JUDGE VALLANDINGHAM BY BOONE COUNTY BAR

At a called meeting of the Boone County Bar on August 10, 1942, a committee composed of Hon. Sidney Gaines, Hon. O. M. Rogers and Hon. JohnL. Vest, was appointed to draft resolutions of respect in memory of the late J. G. Vallandingham, former Judge of of the 15th Judicial District. On August 19th, the Committee reported and read the Resolutions which they had prepared, and the resolutions were adopted with appropriate remarks by those of the bar present. The Resolutions as adopted are as follows:

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—

Judge James Gayle Vallandingham, who died June 7, 1942, was born, reared, and spent his entire life in the nearby county of Owen.

In his private life he attended the schools of Owen County, Smith's Academy at Owenton and graduated from the Centre College at Danville in 1895. After graduating from Centre College he taught school in Owen County for a time and later began the practice of law in Owenton in 1898. In 1902 he married Lula Lee (daughter of Judge and Mrs. W. A. Lee), a young lady reared in Owenton, Kentucky, who survives his death. To this union three children were born, namely: James Lee Vallandingham, an attorney of the Owen County Bar, W. L. Vallandingham, now in military service, and a dauuhter, Mrs. F. L. Polmer, of Norfolk, Virginia.

In his public life Judge Vallandingham spent twenty-four years in office, twelve of these years acting spent as county attorney of Owen County and twelve years as circuit judge of the 15th Judicial District, including this county. It is in the capacity of the Judge of the 15th Judicial District and particularly of the Boone Circuit Court that the attorneys of this county came in personal contact with Judge Vallandingham and from that contact we learned his honesty of purpose and his desire to dispense justice between litigants, and his inherent qualities of fairness and efficiency and affability.

In meeting assembled, the Boone County Bar desires to express its appreciation of the sterling qualities of the late Judge Vallandingham and to that purpose:—Be it resolved:

That we deeply regret the passing of Judge Vandandingham.

That we extend to his widow and children our sympathy in their bereavement.

That a copy of these resolutions be delivered to his widow.

That a copy be furnished to each of the papers published in Boone County, and

That this resolution be spread at large on the order book of this court on a page set apart for that purpose.

TO DISCUSS WAR-TIME HEALTH PROBLEMS AT HOSPITAL STAFF MEETING

A scientific discussion and review of war-time health problems will occupy the program for the monthly meeting of the medical staff of St. Joseph Hospital, Covington, on the night of September 9, in the hospital auditorium. Dr. Philip H. Dorger, staff president, will be chairman of the meeting.

Dr. Erwin G. Heiselman, secretary of the medical staff, said that the business program will begin at 8:30 p. m.

Staff members and executives of the hospital are collaborating in the civilian health activities which are part of the war effort.

The hospital which has given liberally of its staff doctors and graduate nurses to military service is also cooperating with the comprehensive program for maintenance of sound health and adequate hospitalization facilities at home.

Ten percent of the receipts of the Alexandria Fair in Campbell county will go to the Army and Navy relief fund.

Marjorie Binder Gold Medal Winner In 4-H Club Contest

Marjorie Binder was gold medal winner in the Victory Garden and Food Conservation contest sponsored by the Sears, Roebuck Company for 4-H Club girls in Kenton County, and will participate in the State Contest to be held in Lexington, September 26th.

Elimination contests were held Friday, August 28th, at the Federal Building, Cavington. Winners with high score are:

First, Marjorie Binder, Staffordsburg 4-H Club.

Second, Pauline Stephenson, Nicholson Club.

Third, Anna Webb, Staffordsburg Club.

Fourth, Betty Douglas, Oak Ridge Club.

Awards were made in War Stamps, all contestants receeiving a prize, which was presented by Mr Hicks of the Sears, Roebuck Company.

The garden products were judged by Mr. C. A. Wicklund, County Agricultural Agent, the canning products by Mrs. Mary Louise Moore, Home Demonstration Agent of Boone County. The project was under the supervision of Miss Zelma E. Byerly, Kenton County Home Demonstration Agent.

The contest is a national one sponsored by the Sears, Roebuck Company to stimulate interest in the government's food production preservation program.

Girls entering the contest raised Victory gardens and canned the surplus products. The national winner will be selected at the 4-H Club Convention which will be held in November in Chicago.

Contestants competing for the gold medal were:

Ruth Ehlman, Loretta Ehlman, Betty Douglas, Ruth Cahill, Irma Lee Hageman, Margie Eubanks, Jean Eubanks, Marjorie Binder, Pauline Stephenson, Anna Webb, June Jones, Janet Meyers, Janice Rosing, Wanda Williams, Barbara Cook, Violet Temple, Margaret Carl, and Mary Damon.

FEATURES IN THIS ISSUE

How long will the War last? Your guess is as good as ours, and Baukhage, our Washington correspondent, confirms that the answer is as deeply in doubt as ever.

The cost of the War in the Pacific to Japan has been terriffic, according to Drew Pearson in the Merry-Go-Round column. Jap cruisers have been bumped off rapidly and their airplane carriers have been cut to one-half.

How the housewife can prepare for week-ends which the family spends at home together is the feature of the Household News column today. Tempting and appetizing recipes are there and worthy of a place in every homemaker's cook book.

Dr. Barton, in the Good Health Column, treats of Dizziness and of relieving pain by heat. Epsom salts would be considered good as treatment in some cases of dizziness. By means of heat, wastes are hurried out of the system in half the time required by other means.

Dr. Lundquist suggests in this week's Sunday School Lesson that Sunday School teachers should use this lesson to teach over again man's moral accountability, and the importance of his choice of a way of life.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Savage Russ Counterattack in North Offsets Nazi Pressure in Volga Area; U. S. Upsets Jap Strategy in Pacific; Chinese Register Important Victories

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Map shows how Hitler's 1942 conquest of Russia nears the climax as his armies move into position in a pincer movement closing on Stalingrad. A million Nazi soldiers assaulted that vital city on the Volga river, closing in from two directions. By skirting the Caucasian mountains, Hitler's army can push on to the Caspian sea for a junction with the Japanese.

PACIFIC INVASION:
Costly to Japs

Despite heavy Allied air action, which cost the enemy one transport, six landing barges and probably a cruiser, Japanese shock troops made another landing in Milne bay on the island of New Guinea, 240 miles east of Port Moresby and less than 500 miles from the Australian mainland.

However, "Our ground forces anticipated this movement and are in contact with the enemy," a spokesman from General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia said. United Nations medium bombers and fighters heavily bombed and strafed Jap barges which were heading toward shore and Jap troops which already had landed. The aerial attack was carried out despite adverse weather conditions, the communique said.

Spokesmen acknowledged that the Japanese had put into action the airdrome at Buna, 200 miles northwest from Milne Bay on the north coast of New Guinea. They established a beachhead at Buna in July, then pushed south to Kokoda, within 60 miles of Port Moresby.

Solomon Thrust

The violent sea-air battle in the Solomon islands saw the United States win the opening round. Land-based American dive bombers, torpedo planes and fighters were credited with forcing a battered Jap fleet to withdraw from Guadalcanal island in the southeast Solomons, lesa than a thousand miles from Australia, across the Coral sea.

In the original United States offensive in the Solomons, the American marine corps vanguard obtained beachheads on the island, overcoming enemy resistance and seizing an air field. Planes, bombs, torpedoes, ground crews and gasoline were brought in to repel a major invasion.

While a communique stated that results in the struggle for the strategic islands are "encouraging," it warned that a large scale sea battle still was in progress and that the outcome could not yet be determined. But one official expressed the opinion that "we are winning the second round of the battle of the Solomons."

ACTION IN EGYPT:
Transport Blasted

Striking at Marshal Erwin Rommel's preparations for a new offensive in Egypt, Royal Air force fighters killed or disabled hundreds of enemy troops in a raid on transport columns west of El Alamein.

New Zealand troops saw fast action when they routed an Italian division on the same line, and United States bombers blasted Axis shipping in Suda bay, Crete and the Corinth canal in Greece.

Tension on the Egyptian front has mounted steadily. German tank movements were observed near the Qattara depression and Italian forces were attempting to concentrate their positions.

As the all-out battle of Egypt grew closer British newspapers described this front as equal in importance to Stalingrad. They pointed out that the smashing of Rommel's army would restore the Mediterranean command to the United Nations, whose forces then could start to close in on the enemy. According to the London Daily Mail, "The coming battle in Egypt may in the end reverse the fortunes of war in Russia." Indications are that Rommel will have the hardest fight in his life in the 40-mile stretch between El Alamein to Alexandria.

WAR RISK:
Improving Situation?

Indication that the convoy system for Atlantic shipping was showing improvement was reflected in a 5 per cent reduction of cargo war risk rates charged on certain voyages. Marine underwriters revealed that this was the first important reduction war risk rates in many months.

Trends had been increasingly upward since the submarine activity of the enemy had been intensified off our Atlantic coast.

Most important effect of the reduction would be in the trade between the United States and Brazil and Argentina where the previous rate has been cut from 25 to 20 per cent.

RED OFFENSIVE:
For Stalingrad Relief

Even while clerks and factory hands joined Red troops in the defense of Stalingrad, Russia's Central front armies began a counterattack in the German-held area northwest of Moscow, killing 45,000 enemy troops in the first 15 days of a drive that pushed back a Nazi salient 25 to 30 miles.

As Soviet troops battled for footholds within the streets of Rzhev, the Germans were reported to have thrown fresh reserves into the battle but were compelled to retreat with heavy losses as Russian troops thrust westward. The Russians claimed the capture of 610 communities.

Despite the offensive action, which was intended to relieve pressure on Stalingrad, the situation in that industrial city was conceded to be critical. However, the Russians described it as "no worse."

CHINA:
Counter-Attack

In the provinces of Chekiang and Kiangsi the Chinese were fighting a determined counteroffensive to dislodge the Japs from important bases whence the United Nations might launch air raids on Japan.

This offensive was meeting with considerable success as the Chinese troops pushed toward Chusien, site of the biggest airfield in China and drove hard on Lishui and Sungyang, both vital points. In addition the Chinese forces had recaptured over a hundred mile strip of the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway. At one time the Japs had controlled this railroad in its entirety.

Biggest questions in the minds of military experts was where the Japs were sending their troops now being diverted from this Chinese front. Some sources were inclined to believe that they had gone to the South Pacific for the battle of the Solomons and New Guinea, while unofficial reports told of mass movements of troops toward the Russian back door.

Chinese leaders were on the lookout for a strategic retreat by the Japs which might have as its purpose the setting of a large-scale trap.

DRAFT:
A Forecast

Representative Sabath of Illinois, chairman of the house rules committee, believes that the waning months of the 77th congress will see the drafting of 18 and 19-year-old youths authorized by new legislation. This session of congress ends in January, 1943.

The congressman predicted that: "In all likelihood congress will be asked this session to permit the drafting of 18 and 19 year olds and will give its approval."

CEILINGS:
For Hogs, Cattle

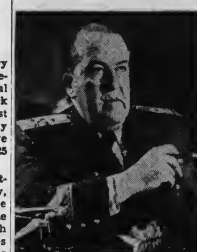
As the Office of Price Administration worked out its plans for price ceilings on hogs and cattle, J. K. Galbraith, deputy administrator, told a delegation of large stock producers in Washington that revisions of this system would eliminate inequalities between different regions and different classes of buyers.

Meanwhile concurrence with the OPA plan was being considered by the department of agriculture. Ceilings were worked out in conjunction with representative groups of producers and OPA before submission to Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard.

Beef producers were assured by OPA that this agency would take no steps to discourage normal feeding and marketing of livestock.

"While feeders must exercise normal caution and avoid paying high prices for their feeders," said Deputy OPA Administrator Galbraith, "the working out of ceilings will be undertaken in close consultation with producers and with a full and complete recognition of the market relationships involved."

He said further that "feeders who buy carefully may look forward to the coming year with confidence."



DUKE OF KENT:
Dies in Action

The first casualty in England's royal family since the start of the war occurred in northern Scotland when a giant Sunderland flying boat crashed, bringing death to the duke of Kent, youngest brother of King George VI. With him died all but one of the crew, a tail gunner who was thrown clear of the wreck. The duke, fifth in succession to the throne, was 39 years old. On active military duty, he was the youngest of the four sons of Queen Mary and the late King George V. Married to Princess Marina of Greece in 1934, his three children were Prince Edward, 6; Princess Alexandra, 5; and Prince George, who was born last July 4. Prince George also bears the name of Franklin for President Roosevelt, his godfather.

BRAZIL:
Good Neighbors Speak

Just a week after Brazil's declaration of war against Germany and Italy, the Uruguayan government announced that the two South American nations would co-operate in a "common defense against possible aggression."

Thus Uruguay forged ahead of her South American neighbors in a show of soldarity with Brazil. The country's national defense ministry had been authorized to "adopt, in agreement with military authorities of Brazil, all measures designed for better efficiency in the common defense against possible aggressions."

Maj. Gen. Armandox Tromposky, head of the Brazilian air force, pictured at his desk in Rio de Janeiro. Brazil has a modern air force composed largely of planes manufactured in the United States.

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Caracciolo Parra Perez of Venezuela expressed his nation's "sincere sympathy and solidarity" with Brazil and announced that Venezuela automatically will treat Brazil as a nonbelligerent under a decree affecting any American nation that goes to war against the Axis.

BRIEFS:

ADVANCE: Seven months in advance of schedule, the 45,000-ton battleship, Iowa, greatest warship ever built, slid down the ways of the New York navy yard.

RETURNS: After a summer's visit to the United States and Canada, Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands was back in London.

TYPEWRITERS: An OPA order was issued forbidding (after September 15) the rental, lease or loan of typewriters manufactured since January 1, 1935, and bans the sale of typewriters manufactured since January 1, 1915.

UNITY: Meeting at their 65th annual convention in Detroit, members of the American Bar association heard Associate Justice Stanley Reed of the Supreme court call on them for lawyers to promote U. S. unity and lead the way so that a unified America could march on to victory.

FREE-FOR-ALL: A tempestuous session of the Louisiana state senate featured fisticuffs among legislators and spectators after a floor argument over the merits of a sales tax proposal for financing welfare services in New Orleans.

IMPROVED NAVAL POSITION

Behind the Solomon islands battle are some optimistic naval facts, entirely aside from the announcement of victory. These facts had to be very carefully considered even before U. S. naval chiefs started to invade the Solomons.

One of these naval facts is that the Japs have suffered very severe losses in cruisers. Although it has escaped public notice, U. S. forces have been bumping off this fast, impotant type of warship with deadly regularity, so that Jap cruiser strength is now cut at least in half, perhaps more.

Another known naval fact is that the Japs have lost approximateiy half of their airplane carriers. And with air power what it is today, this is the type of vessel they can least afford to lose.

On the American side of the picture is the fact that U. S. repairs of ships sunk or damaged at Pearl Harbor have been miraculously swift.

All this obviously was taken into consideration before the United States started a major engagement and the offensive in the South Pacific. For Admiral King had to calculate the risk of the Jap admirals rushing a large force to the Solomon islands.

Simultaneously he also had to figure the risk of a Jap attack on various other vital points—Midway, Alaska, Hawaii, even the continental United States.

Top admirals these days to not take chances. Not when the fate of a nation depends on them. Therefore, it requires only a mathematician to figure that the scale of American strength in the Pacific has turned. It reached its low ebb just after Pearl Harbor, when the navy was unable to do anything about the Philippines, Singapore, or Java.

But now the Battle of Midway has shown that Hawaii and the West coast can be defended by land-based planes. No Jap ship dares come near land-based planes without committing suicide.

This leaves a reinforced fleet to operate in the Pacific. Top naval men are not doing any crowing yet. But at least the naval picture seems to counterbalance some of the bad news from Russia—which is going to get a lot worse.

BURIED SILVER

Ten years ago, President Roosevelt and Cordell Hull held a series of discussions with the foreign ministers of Europe in preparation for the London Economic conference, at which one of the chief proposals of the United States was world use of silver.

At these conferences, the late Senator Key Pittman, of the great silver state of Nevada, droned through a regular 45 minute lecture on silver which American experts knew almost by heart and which put Hjalmar Schacht, German finance minister, to sleep. After Pittman had finished, the German minister woke up with a start, hastily brushed aside silver.

"We accept silver. Now this is what we want in return."

The London Economic conference was a dismal failure. But the United States had committed itself so completely to silver in these preliminary talks, that it undertook a silver program, which actually meant that the world sold its silver to us at an artificial price and we buried it in the ground at West Point, N. Y. It was a fine thing for Mexico, China and Canada and a great victory for Senator Pittman and the Rocky Mountain states. Also it resulted in the U. S. treasury accumulating two and a half billion ounces of silver—other than coin.

Today, however, there is a shortage of industrial silver. And yet the treasury will not open up the giant hoard of silver gathering mold at West Point.

Shortage Amid Plenty.

What has happened is this. About 5,000,000 ounces of silver monthly is being mined in the United States, which is ample to care for war needs, but not enough for ordinary commercial needs, especially for the silver industry of New England.

The silver industry, which makes knives, forks, and household ware, formerly used alloys and critical materials—all of which have now been dispensed with. However, silver is not a critical material. There is plenty mined for the war effort but not enough to supply the 80,000,000 ounces needed annually for the silver industry.

So New England silversmiths now ask that they be permitted to buy a mere 80,000,000 ounces out of the two and a half billion ounces which the treasury has buried.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

¶ Though the U. S. navy gave the royal run-around to the Sea Otter, Germany is now reported building exactly this type of shallow-draft, automobile-engined boat for use on the Danube, the Black and Caspian seas—against Russia.

¶ When the WPB made a survey of junk dealers it found 6,000,000 pounds of "scrap" silk stockings on hand. This is a "gold mine" for making silk bags to hold gunpowder for the navy.

How Long Will War Last? Answer Remains in Doubt

Successful American Offensive Result of Thorough Planning; Two Possibilities May Alter Picture in Russia.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Features, 1343 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

How long will the war last?

Two things have happened in the last weeks which have made people ask that question again even if the answer remains as deep in the mire of speculation as ever.

The first event is the significant passing of the first milestone on the road to Tokyo. On the little islands and about Tulagi harbor which British Admiral Jellicoe in the last war said contained the finest natural harbor in the world, the marines landed and now have the situation well in hand.

The first American offensive in the war was accomplished, not without losses but with success and as a result of a plan worked out nearly five months ago. It was a surprise attack and yet there were many in Washington who guessed that something was about to pop in the Pacific. They did not know what. They didn't have any idea that it would be on the scale of the battle of the Solomons. But for a full week before it took place, I found great interest in certain quarters in the activities of the Japanese in those islands. The people I talked with probably didn't know what the navy was planning—they were not naval officers—but they did know that the Japs were busy as bees completing a fine airfield on Guadalcanal and getting ready to prepare other complete installations on the nearby islands, especially developing and protecting the Tulagi harbor for a submarine base.

Also, Japanese forces there would be too near the island of New Caledonia, on which American forces are stationed, for comfort. New Caledonia is much further south, opposite the western coast of Australia. I mentioned this activity of the Japanese in the Solomons on the air more than once, right up to the eve of the battle, and nobody questioned my script—I mean there was no question from the censor. Perhaps even the censor wasn't in on the secret! Anyhow the blow was just about to be struck. It was struck and it may mean the turning point in the battle of the Pacific. So much on the credit side.

Russian Picture

But in the same weeks which saw this achievement of American arms, the Russian picture began to unfold as darkly as the pessimists pictured it. The story of the campaign of the Caucasus is not over yet, but the Nazi armies have carried on so far at a tempo beyond that which even the pessimists did not calculate upon.

Two things may brighten the Russian picture: The sudden appearance on the northern fronts of a mysterious army of red reserves which some believe have been hidden in the long shadows that cloak all of Russia's war plans. Second, the revelation of much greater losses on the part of the Germans than are evident at this writing.

Based on developments to date, however, Washington "hopes for a short war," as one military man put it to me, "but is preparing for a long one." I suppose a short one would be defeat of Hitler by 1944—a long one, any longer than that, with the fighting in the Far East to continue still longer, and then the indefinite period when United Nations troops will have to patrol the world to keep a semblance of order.

The reasons for these prognostications are: first, the fact that Hitler now has food and oil in his grip; second, with a strong German army in control of the Caucasus and Russia's chief area of raw materials and war industries cut off, the Red army can be of no positive military assistance to the United Nations. (Unless those mythical reserves turn up.)

This means that Germany cannot be broken by blockade; that a powerful expeditionary force will have to defeat Hitler's armies.

More Predictions

Speaking of predictions there have been many of late concerning the war and a number have been gathered together in a very readable 150 page book called "Prophets and Portents" (Thomas Y. Crowell Company) by Rolfe Boswell. These somewhat vague prophecies do not intrigue me very much but they are interesting reading. One, however, which has been quoted considerably of late is more modern than most of the rest and is remarkable to me because it actually uses the word "fascism" although it was written in 1842, and so far as I know that word had never been used to describe a form of government. It is by Heinrich Heine, written after his self-exile to Paris.

"When revolution starts spreading around the world, we shall witness the advent of the most frightful of all foemen who ever set out to fight against the established way of life. This opponent has not appeared as yet, but will arise under the name 'fascism,' and will be the most competent enemy who ever has counter-marched against the existing order.

"War will be only the first scene in the titanic drama and will be just a curtain-raiser. The second act will be the European revolution and world revolution, the gigantic conflict between those who have and those who lack.

"The future tells us of cruelties, of blood, of atheism and of vast intrigue and plotting. I warn our grandchildren to come into the world with shoulders and backs padded heavily. It well may be that the ancient belief of absolutist tyranny will step out upon the world's stage once again, this time in new attire, with new war cries and shibboleths."

Where Men Are Men— And Women Are Absent

Just about the time that news came to Washington that the Japs had landed on Attu island in the Aleutians I received a copy of the Kodiak Bear. Now I have had a nodding, peanut-tossing acquaintance with a couple of Kodiak bears at the Washington zoo for many years but like most people I never connected their name with an American base off Alaska, where this journal is published.

The Bear is a six-page seven-column newspaper with a red-hot headwriter and some very peppery correspondents on its staff. I would not estimate or identify its circulation if I could, since it is printed for the American forces that is probably a military secret. But whoever the readers are they certainly are a lively lot according to the accounts of their doings. And they have a variety of tastes. That is clear from a two-column headline on a page one story. It reads:

Baseball, Fishing, Girls, Religion, Keep Outfit Busy

"Where men are men," the story reads, "and women just aren't, something must be done to take up idle moments. The men have constructed themselves ping-pong tables and tournaments are frequent."

But, gentle reader, don't let mention of that innocuous pastime of table-tennis mislead you. "The baseball has started to cleave the air," the reporter continues, "and many have taken up axe and knife throwing." (Not so innocuous, I would say.)

Fishing tackle is out, too, and the chronicler predicts that "it won't be long before the smell of fresh fish frying on the griddle will be a delight. The very idea is a delight right now."

"Twice a week" religious meetings are held.

But as for the ladies, the last paragraph reveals the sad truth. The news on that score is limited to heart-breaking accounts of soldiers who don't get those letters from back home any more. It seems, the writer from far Kodiak concludes, "absence makes the heart grow fonder—for somebody else. Ask the man who no longer owns one."

To men there is real pathos in that. It's bad enough to be a soldier in a foreign land, but in the lonely domain which the Kodiak Bear reveals as its habitat, it must take a lot of ping-pong, knife throwing, etc., to make up for the things (inanimate and otherwise) those boys left behind them.

The department of agriculture says it's not shortages of coal or oil that are raising the question of what we'll burn for fuel next winter, but rather the pressure the war effort is putting on transportation facilities.

History in the Heart

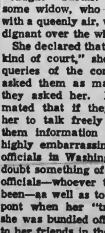
Spy Trial

WHEN President Roosevelt, as commander - in - chief of the army and navy, appointed a military commission, headed by Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, to try the eight German saboteurs landed on American soil from submarines, he was following a precedent established just 80 years ago. On February 27, 1862, President Abraham Lincoln issued an executive order creating a similar tribunal and it was the first of a number of such military commissions established by both the Union and Confederate governments to try the cases of draft evaders, blockade-runners and others whose offenses thwarted the war effort.



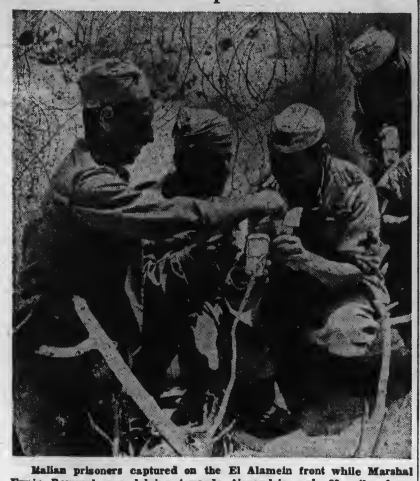
The term "court martial" is a familiar one in military history and in other nations it had the power to try all forms of offenses in war time. But in the United States the power of a court martial was limited to the trial of offenses by members of the armed forces. So the "military commission," established in 1863 and having jurisdiction over all types of offenses, whether committed by the military or by civilians, was an innovation.

The commission appointed by President Lincoln was made up of only two men, both New Yorkers. One was a leading member of the legal profession in that state, Judge Edwards Pierrepont, who later became attorney-general in President Grant's cabinet. The other was Maj. Gen. John A. Dix, who had had a varied career. He had been an officer in the army during the War of 1812, held several state offices in New York and served for a brief time as secretary of the treasury under President Buchanan. At the outbreak of the Civil war he was commissioned a major-general of volunteers. Placed in command of the department of Maryland he had much to do with holding that state in the Union.

Edwards Pierrepont

While Dix was commanding at Fortress Monroe, he was recalled to Washington to serve with Judge Pierrepont on President Lincoln's military commission. Its duties were to examine prisoners who had been arrested for various offenses and determine whether they should be released, held in prison on civil charges or turned over to the military authorities.

Gen. John A. Dix



One of the first cases Pierrepont and Dix were called upon to try was that of a Washington society leader, Mrs. Rose Greenhow, the handsome young widow of a Virginian. She was a relative of Mrs. Stephen A. Douglas and lived in a mansion across Lafayette park from the White House. There she entertained cabinet members, senators, congressmen and especially Union army officers. In fact she was such a charmer that the information which she wheedled out of some of the latter and passed on to her Confederate friends is said to have played an important part in the Southern victory at the first Battle of Bull Run.

Soon afterwards she was arrested by Allen Pinkerton, head of the Union army secret service, held a prisoner in her own home and then removed to the Old Capitol, a brick building which was used as a jail for political prisoners in 1861. Charged with being a spy, Mrs. Greenhow was placed on trial on March 29, 1862, and the military commission soon found that it had "caught a Tartar." The dark, handsome widow, who swept into court with a queenly air, was extremely indignant over the whole affair.

She declared that "this is a private kind of court," and the parade of all the queries of the commissioners and asked them as many questions as they asked her. Finally she intimated that if they really wanted her to talk freely she would give them information which would be highly embarrassing to many high officials in Washington. It was no doubt something of a relief to those officials—whoever they might have been—as well as to Dix and Pierrepont when her "trial" ended and she was bundled off across the lines to her friends in the Confederacy.

Perhaps the most famous military commission of this kind was the one appointed in 1865 by President Andrew Johnson to try the fellow-conspirators of J. Wilkes Booth after the assassination of Lincoln. Presided over by Maj. Gen. David Hunter, it was composed of Generals A. P. Howe, James A. Ekin, Robert S. Foster, T. M. Harris, Lew Wallace, A. V. Kautz and Henry L. Burnett; Colonels D. R. Clendenin and C. H. Tompkins and two federal judges, John A. Bingham and Joseph Holt, the latter serving as judge advocate, for the government.

Prepare for Week-Ends

Lazy days with first signs of fall in the air, wilted appetites and the whole family home for the week-end are a heavy drain on the homemaker. If she expects to spend any time with her family, Madame Housewife must scurry around and plan a preparedness campaign which will stock her refrigerator with foods that can be pulled—like the traditional bunny out of the hat—and still keep her reputation as the "best cook around here."

It's a mistaken notion that the main dish has to be an elaborate hot and heavy affair that sends the hostess to the head of her table sweltering after hours of preparation. A much better idea would be to have a cool, tempting chicken-ham mousse such as I've planned for you today.

Wash the vegetables and store them in the cold compartment and they're ready to toss together in a few minutes, crisp, and chewy, coated with a flavorful dressing, in a salad supreme. If the family really has its heart set on "something hot" bring out some bran muffins, all moist and tasty with blueberries. These take but a short time to bake.

Your table should be bright and gay with oranges and yellows, reds, rich browns to add warm notes to the porch supper or lunch—indoors or out. Let your imagination run riot with the dry leaves, bright berries, sprays from the wayside or fall's bountiful fruits.

Remember, you can do more for your table by arranging Concord grapes tastefully with a few golden pears, blush red apples on rich brown leaves or in well polished pewter, copper or brass vessels than rare, expensive flowers that your family does not know how to appreciate. Then, of course, if you have a few yellow or deep red chrysanthemums in your fall garden, let them fall gracefully in and out among their own leaves in a burnished bowl, and you leave nothing to be desired.

Here's the mousse which you can have as a main dish. Make it the night before and it's all ready to serve just with unmolding:

Chicken-Ham Mousse.
(Serves 6)

- 3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups chicken broth
- 1½ cups ground, cooked chicken
- 1½ cups ground, cooked ham
- ¼ cup salad dressing
- 1 minced scallion
- ¼ cup whipped cream
- 1 package lemon-flavored gelatin.

Add salt to egg yolks, then broth. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly until mixture coats a spoon. Pour over gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool. Fold in remaining ingredients. Place strips of green pepper, sliced olives, sliced hard-cooked eggs on bottom of oiled mold. Pour in mousse. Let chill until firm. Unmold on lettuce and garnish with romaine, endivo and tomato wedges.

This Week's Menu

- *Chicken-Ham Mousse
- *All-Bran Blueberry Muffins
- Butter
- *Julienne Salad
- *Whipped Cream Sugarless Cake
- *Recipes Given.

Dispositions will all be the merrier when you serve these bran-blueberry muffins because the B-vitamins, often called morale builders, in the bran and the magnesium in the blueberries, which is reputed to create kindlier feelings toward your fellow men, really get together and do their best for the system:

All-Bran Blueberry Muffins.
(Makes 12 small muffins)

- 2 tablespoons shortening
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 cup all-bran
- ¾ cup milk
- 1 cup flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2½ teaspoons baking powdor
- ½ cup fresh blueberries

Cream shortening and sugar until fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Stir in all-bran and milk and let soak until all moisture is taken up. Sift dry ingredients and add blueberries. Add to first mixture and stir just until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin tins until two-thirds full and bake in a moderately hot (400-degree) oven about 30 minutes.

Greens tossed together with mellow french dressing are attention-getters:

Julienne Salad Bowl.
(Serves 6)

- 1 cup cabbago
- 1 cup carrots
- ½ cup green peppers
- ¾ cup red radishes
- Garlic
- Curly endivo or shredded lettuce

Shred all the vegetables fine. Arrange mounds of them in a bowl, and toss french dressing over them. Rub the bowl in which they are served with garlic.

A main dish that will go well with the Julienne Salad is this Baked Bean dish:

Baked Bean Rarebit

- 1 can baked beans
- ¼ pound American cheese, grated
- 3 slices bacon, fried crisp
- ½ green pepper sliced

Mix beans, green pepper and crumbled bacon with grated cheese and pour into a casserole. Bake in a moderate oven 35-40 minutes.

A cake that's a tasty sugar saver is this one:

Whipped Cream Sugarless Cake.

- 2¼ cups sifted cake flour
- 2¼ teaspoons double acting baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup butter or shortening
- 1 cup light corn syrup
- 2 eggs, unbeaten
- ½ cup orange juice
- 2 teaspoons grated orange rind
- 1 cup cream, whipped

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift dry ingredients together three times. Cream shortening, add orange rind, and then syrup beating well after each addition. Add ¼ of flour and beat until smooth and well blended. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each. Add remaining flour in thirds alternately with orange juice, beating after each addition for best results. Bake in two greased 8-inch layer pans in a moderate (375-degree) oven 30 minutes. Cool. Spread whipped cream between and on top of layers.

Lynn Says:

Easier Way to Live: One good way by which to simplify home-making is to get rid of trouble-makers in your household furnishings as fast as you can.

If you have an expensively upholstered sofa or chair which requires special cleaning often, make a slip-cover for it out of one of the practical cottons or other washable fabrics which are so numerous in the stores these days. A quick trip through the household washer now and then will keep it spic-and-span. Whisk it off and let the regular covering show when special guests are coming, or use the slip-covers day in and day out, for they are so attractive in themselves.

When your draperies wear out, or when you decide to do over a room, look at the beautiful wash fabrics which you can buy for your windows. Make them up with washable linings, these pre-shrunk, too, of course, and save yourself troublesome cleaning from then on. In time, you can "re-plan" many of your furnishings for practical washing machine handling.

THE WINTER GARDEN—
By John S. Gardner

Knowing what are the principales of vegetable storage it is an easy matter to apply them. So, now will be treated, sketchily, the various types of structures in which gardeners have successfully kept their winter vegetables. For greater detail, the storage circular, Kentucky Extension Circular 266, should be procured from county and home demonstration agents or from the College of Agriculture, Lexington.

Because storing places for the "warm" vegetables (squash and sweetpotatoes) are needed first, they will be discussed first; those for the "cool" ones, next week. An ideal place for just a few bushels is a concrete-floored house basement with a heating plant, to keep it dry. There, the best place is at the ceiling, in baskets hung by spikes driven in the floor joists. Inasmuch as the volume of air is proportionately large, no air outlet is needed, except possibly in the "curing" (of sweetpotatoes). This, by the way, is effected when the top layers just begin sprouting.

Next is a pantry or closet next to the chimney flue to warm it and to keep the atmosphere dry. Here, it is better to cure the sweetpotatoes first, as the space may be small. Next, a brooder house is an excellent place to cure them, or they may be put (for two weeks) in any airy room. Next, is behind the kitchen stove or a corner of a room where fire is kept at least part of the day. As a safeguard against chilling during the night, the vegetables should be kept covered with sacking or carpet, or each patato or squash should be wrapped in newspaper or packed with dry earth, sawdust or sand.

All this applies only to the family's winter store. For larger amounts, a "Professional" storing place is recommended, a building or a room so arranged that complete ventalation is had, and equipped with a heating means so that the temperature can be held at 50 degrees. The Farm Engineering Department of the College is prepaerd to furnish plans and other information necessary to the building of such a structure.

"Him that cometh unto me I will in nowise cast out."

Our redemption runs like a scarlet thread throughout the poges of the Bible, and God is ever gracious to repentant sinners, but it all depends on their attitude of acceptance or rejection of His proferred mercy. If the heart's door remains closed He will not force an entrance, but will receive all who call. World-wide Day of Prayer will be observed Sunday, September 7.

In the quiet of the early twilight hour Sunday evening Rev. W. E. Maners, higly efficient pastor of the Independence Baptist church, and Mr. Cooper accompanied the evangelistic singers, "Mike and Rachel" of radio fame, who were at his curch during special meetings, rendering their sweet ministry of songs. The pastor, who is an ardent soul-winner, ably conducted the revival meeting and we prayerfully trust that his words of admonition to the youthful group gathered in our room shall be speedily heeded and that early they may "remember their Creator." Deep appreciation is expressed for his beautiful bedside prayer. Numbered among the vast radio audiences hearing helpful inspiring messages from Rev. Frances, higly esteemed pastor of the Mt. Carmel Baptist church, Rossmoyne, Ohio, which are broadcast overWCPO each Sunday moring at 7:30 and whilewe always enjoy the hymns they so sweetly sing at the services over the radio, still it was indeed a great pleasure to meet them face to face and to hear them sing and play beautiful numbers on their guitar in our own room, for which heartiest thanks are extended. They possess voices of exceptional beauty, blending beautifully in songs of praise to our Master. Our drab life was brightened. Their presence was like a gleam of sunlight in a shadowed valley.

Mrs. E. B. Rankin remains ill and as she passed another milestone in life's joyurney recently, it was quietly observed.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Butler have returned after a brief stay at Smoky Mountains. During their absence their bright little sons, Allen and Johnny, enjoyed a visit with their grandmother, and Mrs. A. A. Butler and daughter, Miss Anna Kathryn, were at their home.

A bright cluster of zinnias from Miss Lureka Armstrong is deeply appreciated.

PLEASE LADY!
Don't yank that appliance cord --it may be hard to replace
YANKING an appliance cord loose in the manner illustrated above not only frays the covering and loosens connections, but also may result in a blown fuse from a short circuit. Perhaps you are not guilty of this practice but it's well to remind yourself continually that it's going to be necessary to handle your electrical equipment with "kid gloves" these days.
With the electric appliance industry devoting its full efforts to war production, appliance cords among other things are going to be hard to replace. You'll need them to continue to enjoy the step-saving, work-saving convenience of your electric appliances, so handle them with care. Disconnect appliances by pulling the plug, not the cord—and when you put the cord away, coil it loosely in a drawer instead of hanging it over a nail or hook. Your cords will last longer and you'll be making a small but important contribution to the wartime conservation program.

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. When they arrive in Tierra Libre they find both Zora and her husband dead. It is Mitchell's job as chief engineer for a fruit company that Jeff has been called to fill. Later Jeff's friend Bill Henderson is also killed, and Jeff suspects his employer, Senor Montaya, of murdering him and the Mitchells because they had found a clue to the strange things going on at the plantation. Other sinister figures are the company chemist, Dr. Toenjes, and the flyers, Ryden and Lannstock. Jeff's suspicions are further aroused when his visit to the airfield is interrupted by Dr. Toenjes' arrival. Now a U. S. Army plane, forced down by engine troubles, has landed on the airfield.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XI

Curt and Dr. Toenjes pushed through the circle. Again Ryden registered relief as he gave up the spotlight.

"Ve don't vish to appear to unvelcoom you," Toenjes said, his voice controlled. Again Curt was amazed at the rapid change, amazed that the Dutchman's anger—or whatever it was he'd seen in his face—had vanished. "Zey mean to zay ve are not as a coomairzhal field equipped. You had ze trouble vith your blane?"

"Yeh, trouble." The lieutenant also had trouble to regain his own equanimity. In fact, he made little effort to do so, merely transferring his angry gaze from Ryden to Toenjes. "Clogged a fuel line. Headed for Puerto Soledad but the matter of safety forced me down here."

"I am glad for you to land zafe. Vat can ve do for you?"

But the army man's gaze met Curt's. Curt was grinning from ear to ear as he stepped into the fray.

"Name's Curtis. Chief Engineer for the Compania Agricola Tropical, who have this valley. This is Dr. Toenjes, of Amsterdam, an agricultural authority in charge of farms."

"I'm Lieutenant Trainor. My men," nodding in direction of each in turn, "Blanding, Newman, Foster." All three were engaged making a space about the plane. "Sorry if we inconvenience you, but we'll have to make some repairs."

"Of course."

Things organized, ladders brought from the nearby hangars, the two men Newman and Foster stripped to their waists and got busy disentangling the fuel line of the engine. It was not a simple task but they knew their job.

Toenjes took considerable interest, conversing in low tones with Ryden. This left Curt by himself for a moment, and he singled out the second lieutenant.

"Blanding? Curtis."

They grinned and shook hands. Blanding spat and said, "American? What you doing in this blooming league of nations?"

"Work here. What's the matter? No co-operation from our field force?"

"Co-operation? Say, a guy'd think it was a crime to set down a crippled plane. 'Private field, private field,' " he mimicked. "What the hell? By the way," his tone changed, became curious, "what you doing with those old crates? Those old-time Junkers transports."

He wore a smile that was half amusement, half disgust, as he nodded toward the two C. A. T. planes. He spat again.

"Junkers?" said Curt. "That what they are? I'm no airman, I didn't know. Only been on the job here ten days, or so, myself."

They watched for some minutes the work on the engine. The fuel line was disconnected, blown out, reconnected. The engine was tested, but still it sputtered.

Lieutenant Trainor, from a kibitzing position above, jumped to the ground. He wore a frown.

"We were scheduled to touch Puerto Soledad this afternoon and proceed onward at once. If we can catch up with the other planes quickly, they'll wait for us. But supposing we can't make repairs tonight, any way of putting us up?"

"I should think so," answered Curt. "Trouble serious, then?"

"Not serious, but it goes deeper than I thought. I see you have other hangars here." The lieutenant nodded toward the far end of the field. "Could we put the machine under cover for the night?"

"Sorry," Curt replied. "They were built a hangars, all right, but they're used for storage purposes now. They're full up with materials and supplies. You couldn't even get the nose of your ship inside."

Curt hadn't yet gone through the buildings, but he recalled the extraordinary stock of pipe and fittings, and other materials listed in the inventory Senor Montaya had sent him.

Attention called to the end of the field, they saw movement there. Lieutenant Trainor produced a pair of field glasses, adjusted them, studied what he saw. Then he shrugged and Curt automatically reached for the lowered binoculars.

Pointing them at the bodega, Curt saw a small crew of men with Lannestock in charge. They'd handworked a flatcar from outside the field fence into position alongside the loading platform.

A big door of the hangar was raised and from the interior the men were bringing lengths of lumber to load onto the car. Curt could see plainly the tall piles of lumber, cross-stacked for curing, that filled the open space of the building to the very eaves. Another door was partly open, showing further piles of material—pipe in this instance.

However, there was no further thought of an overnight stay, for as Curt handed back the glasses the plane's motor was gunned to a deafening pitch. This time there was no break in its smoothness.

It was then only a matter of minutes before the two mechanics were buttoning up their shirts. Blanding and Trainor shook hands all around, decidedly in pleasanter frame of mind now. Curt caught the final look both officers flung at the Junkers planes, then at each other, the suspicion of smiles on their lips as though at some secret joke.

The second motor of the army plane was opened up, both were gunned for a few moments, then the plane took off, circled once above the field, and straightened out to speed off for Soledad.

On the trip up the mountainside to San Alejo, Dr. Toenjes had nothing to say. And at the station, with a short "Cootpy, Meestoor Coortiss," the Dutchman stumped off in one direction, Curt headed for home.

Presently Curt remembered that he'd wanted to see Montaya today.

Curt hesitated, hand on the knob of the door.

There wasn't time now to bathe and change, for he'd spent longer on the airfield than he'd intended. He turned on his heel, lengthenened his stride, and made off for the executive office.

The thought of Montaya brought a bad taste to his mouth. Curt had no illusions about the man. Directly guilty of the actual murders here or not, they couldn't have been covered up—maybe not planned—without Montaya's connivance.

Briefly Curt wondered why the landing of the army plane hadn't brought Montaya to the field. It had been down a good thirty minutes, time enough and to spare for Montaya to have put in an appearance.

The commissary was closing for the day. A few last clerks were leaving the offices above. Curt crossed the patio and climbed the wide, tiled staircase.

Down the cool office corridor he pounded, his heels little deadened by the strip of green linoleum laid along the center. Montaya's ruby-nailed secretary was gone.

But Montaya was in. As Curt entered the outer office, he heard voices from behind the senor's door, voices harsh and angry, one expostulating, the other laying down the law.

And the louder voice was not Montaya's. It was Dr. Toenjes, who must have made a bee-line from the station to Montaya's office when leaving Curt only a few minutes ago.

They were not speaking French, which Montaya professed to use with the Dutchman for convenience, but were talking, to judge from the sounds of it, in the Dutchman's own language!

Curt heard his name flung by Dr. Toenjes, and he took it that the argument was about his visit to the airfield rather than the forced landing of the army plane.

"Cripes," he muttered. "Montaya himself suggested the visit. And why the build-up the day I arrived over using French with Toenjes if he can talk Dutch that fluently?"

Curt hesitated, hand on knob of the door through which he'd just come. The argument waxed stronger, a hand thumped a desk to punctuate Toenjes' tirade.

If I only knew Dutch! Curt thought, or even German. At least enough to get the gist of it.

Tomorrow, he decided, would be a better time for his talk with Montaya, so he went out, closing the door quietly, and stood for a moment reflecting. His hands busily loaded his pipe, tamping down the tobacco.

That last burst of anger clearly showed that the worthy Dutchman had the upper hand. Curt scowled. Then he moved on slowly.

"What goes on here?" he muttered to himself. "Who's the boss, Montaya or this Dutch prima donna?"

Next morning, when Curt again called at Montaya's office, he found "The Dark Lily" his usual suave and polished self. If Dr. Toenjes' boorish outbursts of the night before had caused annoyance, there was no indication of it now.

The senor was as ever a plate of sartorial elegance. Today his white gabardines were livened by purpled accessories, which had the curious effect of making his lips seem the fuller. Curt's own lips curled slightly at the picture, but he managed a pleasant enough "Good morning" and got down to business.

"You've had word about the machines I recommended?"

"Yesterday. The purchase has gone through and the machines are on the way to New Orleans. They will be shipped on the next voyage south of the Pisces. The two shovels previously on order will arrive at Cabeza Saturday morning."

"Fine! I can use them! And my requisition for additional men? It's pretty difficult handling two shifts with skeleton crews."

"The first should be here in about one week."

"I'll plan accordingiy. Now, about this survey of the Upper Negro for a reservoir site. Tomorrow I'm making a quick trip above the rapids to refresh my memory of that terrain. It's some years, you know, since I was here. I want to be ready to send out a surveying party the first of next week . . ."

Getting into details of this job, Curt let himself go. He'd finish the levee and drainage system already worked out on paper and under construction, and enjoy it. But this reservoir idea came from him. It would be his baby, especially as it tied in so closely with the overhead irrigation plan he was so anxious to get into. He lost himself in the discussion of it.

As he finished outlining the scope of his proposed survey, Montaya brought him back to earth.

"Be sure Emilio accompanies you on the trip tomorrow, Mr. Curtis."

Curt blinked. Ah, yes, Emilio, he thought. Aloud he said smoothly, "Of course. Your orders, are they not?"

During some remaining routine items Curt kept wondering why no mention had been made of his trip to the airfield. Certainly Dr. Toenjes had brought it to the senor's attention. Vehemently. Plenty of heat had been generated over it in this office last evening.

He wondered, too, why there'd been no reference, at least casual, to the U. S. Army plane forced down. This sort of thing didn't happen often. Yet Montaya seemed to have no intention of speaking about it.

Instead, he mentioned, "My daily harbor report says you were treated for a minor cut."

"Only a puncture-weed scratch. It'll be all right."

"However, you will have a care, no? I do not wish you to be incapacitated. Have it dressed again today and be sure Dr. Berry says there will be no danger of infection before you leave tomorrow."

But if Montaya had no intention of mentioning the airfield visit, Curt had, and this gave him an opening.

"That reminds me. While at the hospital yesterday I stumbled onto the path to the airfield. So I decided to make them that visit you suggested. You do the men at the field very well in the matter of accommodations."

"You mean the swimming pool, the tennis court? It pays."

Hmm, thought Curt, no outburst over my not sending 'em an engraved notice? Give him another chance.

"I—uh, know you don't like interdepartmental comments, but I have one you shouldn't object to. That part of the field used daily is kept pretty well under fire control. But one can see from a distance that the grass at the far end of the field is high and dry. It should be kept cut."

Montaya was looking steadily at Curt. He didn't speak.

"None of my business, perhaps," Curt shrugged, "but it's in the interest of safety. Even if the buildings at that end aren't of great value, you have materials stored there. Precautions should be taken."

"You are quite right, Mr. Curtis, quite right. I shall make a note of it." And make a note of it he did—at least he did some careful scratching on his calendar pad.

What! Can't I get any kind of rise out of him? The imp of perverseness in Curt prodded him, and he ventured again.

"That army plane from the Canal Zone that was forced down here yesterday. I rather expected you to come to the field—as a sort of welcoming gesture."

Montaya's voice chilled, there was a touch of contempt in his reply.

"This, my dear Mr. Curtis, is a business venture, not a social enterprise. I have a telephone. I knew you and Dr. Toenjes were there to perform—ah, the amenities. Was there need of more?"

Curt let it go at that.

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for September 6

THE ALCOHOL PROBLEM: PAST AND PRESENT

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 13:13; 19:23-25; Deuteronomy 32:31-33; Amos 6:1-7.
GOLDEN TEXT—The way of the ungodly shall perish.—Psalm 1:6.

The necessity for using to the limit every resource—man power and material—in this time of national crisis should make every American doubly alert to the devastation and loss which has come (and is coming in increasing measure) to us as a result of the sale of intoxicants.

This is no time (nor was there ever a time) when "men should put their enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains; that we should with joy, pleasure, revel and applause transform ourselves into beasts! To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast!" (Shakespeare).

Christians—and especially Sunday school teachers—should use this lesson to drive home anew the great lesson of moral accountability, of the importance of man's choice of a way of life, and the certainty of judgment.

I. Man is Morally Responsible (Gen. 13:13; 19:23-25).

Life is not just a careless drifting from day to day, from pleasure to pleasure, from sin to sin. Man was created in the likeness and image of God, which means that he is a personal being, knowing right from wrong and possessing the power of choice. Sodom and Gomorrah drew upon themselves the judgment of God because of their determination to persist in horrible wickedness. What happened to those cities, terrible as it was, is but a prophecy of even greater judgment to come (Luke 10:10-12).

If man chooses to do right, he may count on all the resources of the omnipotent God to uphold him. But if he chooses to go in the way of sin, he must look forward to the judgment of God. It is important to remember that

II. He Chooses His Own Way of Life (Deut. 32:31-33).

Moses contrasts the Rock—Jehovah—in whom his people trusted, and the corrupt standards of their heathen neighbors, of Sodom and Gomorrah; but note it well, each one made his own choice.

One greater than Moses, our Lord Himself (Matt. 7:13, 14), spoke of the two ways, and noted with sadness that many go down the broad road to destruction and but few walk in the narrow way of life.

It is a vital matter that we teach our boys and girls the great and noble spiritual standards of Christianity; bring into their lives the power of God through faith in Christ that they may choose well for themselves and be able to lead a bewildered war-shocked world in the right way.

The need of humanity is great now, but it will be even greater in a post-war world of broken homes, broken lives and broken hearts. We must be ready to minister in the name of Christ.

III. Neglect and Ignorance Are No Excuse (Amos 6:1-7).

Surprise attack is always doubly effective. "Remember Pearl Harbor." Yes, and remember man's defeat in spiritual things.

Satan would like to lull us to sleep with the assurance that all is well. The heart of man is prone to cherish optimistic thoughts; to magnify that which encourages him to take his ease; to keep away the fear of reality by sweet music, good food, and flowing bowl of wine.

The people of Amos' day, to whom this message was given, had come to the point where prosperity had made them at ease, when they should have been actively alert; foolishly serene, when they should have been vigilant and ready for battle.

Who can say that the same is not in all too large a measure true of the people of our own beloved America. Many elements enter into that dangerous situation, but not the least of them is our increasing use of intoxicants. It may shock some to learn that the per capita use of alcoholic beverages has increased greatly throughout the country. The appalling fact is that the city of Washington, D. C., which should in these days set an example of sobriety and sanity, has led the nation in the increase of the use of strong drink.

That way is the way of captivity (v. 7) unless we repent—and that right soon. America needs to awaken to the dangers which threaten its precious liberty—and, we repeat, the liquor question is not the least of these problems. We must win a victory over it soon, or we may find that it has won the victory over us—which may God in His mercy forbid!

TO YOUR Good Health by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

DIZZINESS

For many years the home treatment of dizziness was a dose of Epsom salts—magnesium sulphate. This dose was given because dizziness was thought due to a sluggish liver and gall bladder and constipation. As a matter of fact, many cases of dizziness are due to these conditions and the treatment by Epsom salts is considered correct.

There are, however, many cases of dizziness due to disturbance— swelling of the tissues—about the baiancing canals of the inner ear. Any drug that will remove water from the system, as does Epsom salts, would be considered good treatment.

Treatment by Epsom salts is, however, not the method of treatment for dizziness now used by physicians. Dr. K. M. Simonton, in Proceedings Staff Meeting, Mayo Clinic, states that severe vertigo — dizziness— should be treated by (1) rest in bed; (2) avoidance of all movement, especially sudden movement; (3) avoidance of sudden sounds and light; (4) raising the head of the bed to prevent congestion in the inner ear; (5) moderate doses of atropine (to open up blood vessels) and a quieting drug; (6) a soft, light diet; and (7) magnesium sulphate—Epsom salts—taken by mouth.

If attacks of dizziness are accompanied by head noises and loss of hearing (Meniere's disease), the patient is instructed to take six 7½-grain tablets of ammonium chloride, three times daily with meals, for three days; no medicine is then taken for two days; and the tablets are repeated for three days. No salt is allowed at the table and very little is to be used in cooking. No baking soda—sodium bicarbonate—or other drug containing sodium should be used. To keep the patient free from dizziness, this treatment must be always kept up.

When there is dizziness only and the dizziness is "up and down" rather than "round and round," the liver and gall bladder are considered at fault and Epsom salts is used. When the dizziness is "round and round" and there are head noises, loss of hearing, nausea and vomiting, eating food low in salt and omitting salt with and in food may give relief without the ammonium chloride.

Relieving Pain By Means of Heat

When examining boxers at 2 p. m. for a boxing bout that night, I have often been annoyed by having a boxer step on the scales one or two pounds overweight. The manager of the boxer is sometimes fined for this neglect to have his boxer at the correct weight.

Being overweight means covering him up with heavy woolen sweaters, hard brisk exercise, and a Turkish or cabinet bath to get the one or two pounds off within an hour. This effort is both a mental and physical strain as the boxer feels that he is weakening himself and will not be at his best for the evening bout.

There is nothing wrong with increased heat of the body by means of exercise or baths, but the heat should be created gradually, not in such a rapid manner. A Turkish or cabinet heat bath, too hot and too prolonged can cause weakness, shock, and collapse.

"The heat, whether it is dry or moist, should not be given for a longer than 30-minute period even where there is profuse sweating."

However, most individuals who undergo heat treatments by baths or other methods are not boxers or athletes but those with rheumatism or arthritis, soreness and stiffness due to accumulation of waste or fatigue products in the tissues. By means of heat these wastes are hurried out of the system in half the time or less than it would ordinarily take to remove them.

Those who are not well should not take heat treatments without supervision. Patients may feel a fullness and throbbing of the head, rapid beating of the heart, and a feeling of great weakness while undergoing heat treatment. For this reason the "steam" room of the Turkish bath establishment has a couch on which the individual should lie down. Sitting erect means more effort on the part of the heart as it is easier to pump blood on the level than up and down.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What causes me to become breathless when I climb stairs or do too much housework? I have a chronic sinus drip.

A.—Pain in breast is not likely due to heart disease or physicians would have told you. It is more likely to be due to nervousness or gas pressure. For the sinus condition you might try eating more vegetables and cutting down on liquids as well as on table salt on food and in cooking.

ON THE HOME FRONT With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THIS is another design in the series planned to use up odds and ends of woolen materials to make lasting floor coverings. The design is very old and was made by other women during other wars. Dimensions are given in the sketch for making your own patterns for the links and the fleur de lis. The shaded parts of the diagrams show a half and a quarter of the design drawn on folded paper. The dotted lines show how the pattern will appear when the paper has been cut. The design is outlined on the burlap by drawing around the cut-out pattern with wax crayon.

The rug colorings have been planned to repeat tones in the room color schemes.

NOTE: There are suggestions for preparing hooked rug materials and for making original designs in BOOK 8 of the series which Mrs. Spears has prepared for readers. Book 8 contains directions for a hooked rug that any beginner can make easily and quickly. Booklets are 10 cents each. Hungry Hummingbird

Hummingbirds have to eat about every ten minutes during the daytime because the energy from their food is consumed by the rapid beating of their wings as fast as it is produced. In New York recently, six hummers were taken on a 50-minute taxi drive, without food, from a pier to the Bronx zoo, with the result that one died and the other five passed into a coma from starvation.

ASK ME ANOTHER?

A General Quiz

The Questions

1. What mythical creature was half horse and half man?
2. In what city is Threadneedle street?
3. During a race, how much of the time has a horse all four feet off the ground?
4. Is it unlawful to destroy U. S. coins?
5. Who was the first and only President to be buried at Arlington National cemetery?
6. What is the percentage of silver in German silver?
7. In 1941, how much did the American public pay in tolls to cross rivers?
8. What was the fate of the first iron-clad battleship Monitor?

The Answers

1. The centaur.
2. London.
3. A race horse has all four feet off the ground one-fourth of the time during a race.
4. No. There is no law against it. The law is against mutilating, lightening or defacing.
5. William Howard Taft is the only President to be buried at Arlington National cemetery.
6. German silver is a white alloy of zinc, nickel and copper, and contains no silver.
7. In 1941 the American public paid in tolls, to cross rivers on ferries, through tunnels and over bridges, an average of about $250,000 every 24 hours.
8. On December 10, 1862, the Monitor foundered during a heavy storm and sank with all hands in Diamond shoals off Cape Hatteras, North Carolina.

By GRANTLAND RICE

"YOU brought out an important point in connection with Carl Hubbell," writes Old Timer, "that I don't think you stressed enough. This was about Hubbell after 20 years of pitching, 15 years as a big leaguer, still trying to learn something new or something better.

"I always knew that Carl Hubbell was one of the smartest pitchers in baseball. This proves that he is even smarter than I thought he was. For the great majority, especially those who are above the average in skill, think they know most of it. They are no longer interested in learning something new and something better.

Carl Hubbell

"This is a great human weakness. Too many think they know enough when no one knows much. Especially in these days no one knows nearly enough.

"What a fine thing it would be to have many more people adopting Carl Hubbell's method of still trying to learn after so many years at the top."

The Meager Minority

This happens to be 100 per cent true. We'll take the argument back to sport.

Those who happen to lack certain qualifications in the way of skill or knack, get discouraged too easily and give up.

They either lack the determination to keep trying or they fail to understand how much they might learn from others that would carry them out of the rut.

Many of those who happen to be rigged out with speed or skill or the winning knack take it for granted they are approaching the superman class and so need no further instruction or improvement.

There never was a human being who knew it all, or anything even approaching the ultimate.

You'll find that Cobb and Tilden were still experimenting, studying, working on new angles after more than twenty years of championship competition.

We could also name a number of others who stopped learning quickly and showed no particular improvement in later years.

They had nothing to learn from coaches or trainers.

Old timers were jokes. They already had the answers.

Sarazen Speaks

"One of the big thrills I've gotten out of golf," Gene Sarazen says, "is this—I've learned something every year I've played.

"I've found out that things I thought were important 20 years ago are not so important after all. I've found other things I payed little attention to meant a lot.

"Hagen was always a great guy in this respect. He was always trying to learn something that might improve his game. After he had been Open champion, I saw him one day taking a lesson, or at least friendly advice, from Harry Vardon on how to play a certain type of shot. Walter never thought he knew it all, or any big part of it.

Walter Hagen

"I've tried to learn something that would help my play for the last ten or fifteen years. I thought as a kid I knew most of it.

"It was only when I began to find out how little I really knew that I started winning again after a lapse. You get a lot of foolish and useless advice. But here and there you can pick up something that will help a lot."

Walter Camp and Pudge

Years ago Walter Camp told me an interesting experience he had had with Pudge Heffelfinger, a football star who lasted over 30 years.

"Pudge was so good," Camp said, "that I was afraid he would be another know-it-all. In place of that he kept coming to me for more advice on guard play. I showed him three new variations. Later on he came back and told me he had learned four new angles. One of these was the possibility of the running guard. How many people know that Pudge Heffelfinger had worked out and developed the correct method of the running guard around 1889 or 1890?"

All I know is that as late as 1921 or 1922 Heffelfinger, then 53 years old, kept telling Bo McMillin, then 22, to speed up his start and give him a chance to lead that interference. Ask Bo.

"The more you know, the easier any game is," an old-time trainer said recently. "You can save yourself so much and last so much longer. You can often handle superior physical power and even greater natural skill by knowing more than your rival does. But this can only come from trying to learn everything you can as you go along.

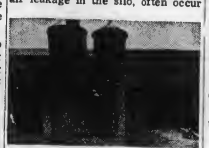
Wilting Method for Silage Is Suggested

Experiment, Extreme Care Needed to Make It Work



By C. W. BENDER
(Professor Dairy Husbandry, Rutgers University.)

In view of the high price of molasses and the scarcity of phosphoric acid for preserving silage, the wilting method of ensiling legumes, grasses and cereals — a method requiring practically no preservatives—sounds good.

The wilting method will work, but it also takes experimental control and extreme care to make it work.

Moisture Content Excess.

Farmers experienced at making grass silage know that mold accumulations, caused by air pockets or air leakage in the silo, often occur even when the silo is filled with material having a moisture content of 72 to 78 per cent.

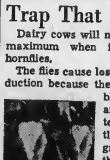
Yet materials with this amount of moisture pack more readily and develop more pressure than grasses with lower moisture content, and the wilting method calls for wilting down the green material to a moisture content of only 65 to 68 per cent. Thus there is a greater danger of mold when the wilting method is used.

Secondly, some type of apparatus is necessary to determine the exact moisture content of the green material.

How long it takes to wilt the material down to the proper moisture content cannot be determined in advance. One thing is certain: There will be many delays in filling the silo, thus increasing the danger of mold and high temperatures, both of which tend to destroy nutrients.

Fill Silo Three-Fourths.



The silo must be filled more than three-fourths full with wilted green material within two days. The material must be evenly distributed and well tramped. Filling should be continued on the third day, using high moisture grasses or legumes to which a preservative has been added so that sufficient pressure is generated to exclude the air from the partially wilted mass. Delays in filling beyond this period may ruin the silage, a fact which has been learned by many farmers.

Furthermore, the wilting of a green crop destroys carotene. The longer the period of wilt the more carotene is lost, an important consideration in producing milk of excellent quality.

Trap That Hornfly

Dairy cows will not produce at maximum when infested with hornflies.

The flies cause loss in milk production because they suck cows' blood, and their annoyance often causes cattle to refuse to graze. Hence, they do not get their full of grass which is the best milk producer, and it takes a part of the feed which otherwise would go to production of milk to replace the blood.

Some investigators claim that during seasons of abundance hornflies are responsible for losses of one-quarter to one-half of the normal milk production. Moreover, annoyance by the flies during milking might lead to contamination of the milk with consequent lowering of its quality.

Sprays, which many dairymen use, will keep flies off cattle during milking and for an hour or more afterward. But this does not prevent loss in milk production. However, a cattle fly trap used as a gateway to and from water, feed, or other frequented places, has been found effective for the control of hornflies on many dairies, farms and ranches.

Tell me a Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

AN IMPORTANT MEETING AT THE SMILING POOL

THERE was great excitement at the Smiling Pool. There was so much excitement that everybody was talking at once. You see, it was this way: Paddy the Beaver had suddenly appeared and given warning that he was going to build a dam across the Laughing Brook way back in the Green Forest so as to make a pond there for himself. Of course that meant that the Laughing Brook would stop laughing and the Smiling Pool would stop smiling, for there would be very little water in either. Paddy had promised that as soon as his pond was big enough to suit him the water would run again, the Laughing Brook would laugh as merrily as ever and the Smiling Pool would smile just as it was doing now. But the little people of the Green Forest were afraid he wouldn't keep his promise.

"How do we know that he will do as he said he will and let the water run again?" demanded Billy Mink. "For my part I don't believe he will do anything of the kind!"

"Neither do I!" cried Little Joe Otter. "He's just a great big bully."

Now Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter had never seen Paddy the Beaver before, and they were a little upset to find him so big and strong.

"Of course, you're not afraid," jeered Spotty the Turtle.

Jerry Muskrat and Grandfather Frog and Spotty the Turtle had met Paddy in the spring when he had built a dam and stopped the water, and they remembered how willingly he had torn down the dam when they told him how dreadful it was to have the Laughing Brook stop laughing and the Smiling Pool stop smiling. So now they believed that he would do just as he promised.

"Of course it is very unpleasant," said Grandfather Frog thoughtfully, "but I don't see what we can do about it."

"Stop him, of course!" snapped Billy Mink. "Tear down his dam as fast as he builds it."

Jerry Muskrat, who remembered how hard he had worked to tear down that other dam only to have it repaired while he slept, chuckled. "I propose that Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter be appointed to go up the Laughing Brook and tear down the dam as fast as Paddy the Beaver builds it," said he.

"Agreed!" cried all the other little people of the Smiling Pool.

Now Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter never do any work that they can avoid, and everybody knew it. Billy Mink shifted his position on the Big Rock uneasily. "It seems to me that as it is for the good of all of us we all ought to go together and help," said he.

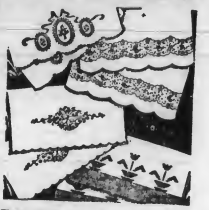
"Of course, you're not afraid!" jeered Spotty the Turtle. "Of course you saw those great big front teeth of his and are just aching to know how they feel!"

Billy Mink lost his temper. He was afraid, and he knew that everybody knew it. He didn't dare go interfere with Paddy the Beaver. But he tried to make the others think that he really didn't care what happened to the Smiling Pool.

"Oh, well," said he in a very lofty way, "if you folks don't care enough to do your share, I'm sure I don't. Little Joe Otter and I can live just as comfortably down at the Big River as up here. We just thought that we would help you out."

"Which means that you would go off fishing while we did the work," said Jerry Muskrat slyly.

"I tell you what. Let's all go up and watch Paddy work. Then if he doesn't do as he has said he will do it will be time enough to decide what we will do," broke in Spotty the Turtle.



So it was agreed that all the little people of the Smiling Pool would go up the Laughing Brook and watch Paddy the Beaver work, all but Grandfather Frog.

Flag Display

When the flag is displayed in a manner other than by being flown from a staff, it should be displayed flat, whether indoors or outdoors. Displayed either horizontally or vertically against a wall, the Union should be uppermost and to the flag's own right, that is, the observer's left. If the flag is displayed over the middle of a street, it should be suspended vertically with the Union to the north in an east and west street or to the east in a north and south street.

Woman's Literary Club Held Opening Meeting Sept. 2nd

The opening meeting of the Walton Woman's Literary Club for the 1942-1943 season was held on September 2nd, at he attractive country home of Mrs. J. E. McCabe on Highway 42. Mrs. McCabe is a most gracious hostess, and gave each member and guest a hearty welconme. The business session was conducted by the new club president, Mrs. Clayton Jones, who presided well.

After the roll call to which the members answered with a quotation on Kentucky, the reading of correspondence and other item of business, Mrs. Olivia Wills and Mrs. Blanche C. Ransom rendered muchly appreciated vocal and instrumental numbers.

Mrs. Nell Blankenbecker, chairman of the program committee, introduced a most interesing discussion on the "Historic Spots of Kentucky."

At the conclusion Mrs. McCabe served a tasty salad plate luncheon, assisted by Mrs. Sam Sleet, Mrs. Nell Blankenbecker and Mrs. Joe Berkshire.

Members and guests were: Miss Rebecca Sleet, Mrs. Jake Cleck, Mrs. Merritt Jack, Mrs. Mary S. Baile, Mrs. Joe Berkshire, Mrs. Emma Cleek, Mrs. Julia A. Rouse, Mrs. Lewellyn Wallace and Mrs. Cloyd Johnson, Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, Mrs. Nell Blankenbecker, Mrs. J. R. Conrad, Mrs. E. E. Fry, Mrs. A. H. Gaines, Mrs. J. L. Hamilton, Mrs. Lula Huey, Mrs. Clayton Jones, Mrs. D. L. Lusby, Miss Emma Jane Miller, Mrs. John Myers, Mrs. Lottie Powers, Mrs. C. W. Ransler, Mrs. Blanch C. Ransom, Mrs. W. W. Rouse, Mrs. Sam B. Sleet, Mrs. D. H. Vest, Mrs. John L. Vest, Mrs. Olivia Wills and the hostess, Mrs. McCabe.

CORN BORERS DAMAGE CROPS

The corn borer, apparently the European Corn Borer, has caused considerable damage in many corn fields this year, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. A few fields were affected last year but the damage this year is much greater.

Specimen of the larvae or worms have been sent to the College for indentification.

New Pastor Of Methodist Chnrch

REV. C. G. DEARING

native of Lexington, Ky., who has served in this Conference since 1925, and who served the Methodist church at Taylorsville, Ky., last year.

Rev. Dearing come on Sunday to take up his work as pastor of the local Methodist church, to which appointment he was assigned by Bishop U. V. W. Darlington at the recent annual session of the Kentucky Conference held at Winchester.

Rev. Dearing was welcomed heartily by the congregation, who will be glad also to welcome his family upon arrival during the week. Rev. Dearing's family consists of his wife, a son now in the U. S. Army service in Texas, two daughters who reside in Cincinnati, Ohio, and two daughters, Louise and Ruth, who will be with him here at Walton.

The Walton church members feel they have been well favored in receiving Rev. Dearing's appointment and are looking forward to a good year.

REV. JAMES H. TALLEY MOVES TO COVINGTON

Rev. James H. Talley, who has been pastor of the Methodist church the past three years, with his wife and son, moved to West Covington, where he is pastor of the Epworth church.

We regret to lose these fine people from our midst, and wish for them a most pleasant year in their new home.

A Deluge of Junk Brought In Last Saturday

Junk Rally Day last Saturday, ton after ton of junk descended on the hapless heads of gas station proprietors, Salvage Committeemen, Scouts and 4-H Club boys all over the county. At their own invitation junk of all kinds was poured on them and they liked it and PAID for it—everything from an aluminum salt shaker to wholesale junk in the form of worn-out automobiles. At Walton a German helmet, relic of the last World War, was tossed on the heap.

The occasion was enlivened by a large gathering on the parking lot in Walton. Mrs. Allen H. Gaines, County Co-Chairman, handled the microphone graciously, and introduced Messrs. Chas. W. Ransler and Ed. Wimmer, who delivered splendid talks, interesting and pointed. Everybody in town for the day seemed to prosper and have a good time.

Intended primarily as a demonstration, the Committee considers it a huge success, not only in that way but also from the standpoint of the actual amount gathered. A five-ton load went in Labor Day and many, many more tons will be on their way before the week is out.

Don't think this is the end. It's only the start. Saturday makes clear that there is scrap in the county—just plenty. That it can be sold. Get the scrapping habit—it pays. Or it can be donated to any organization you choose. You can haul it to the dealer or if gathered in sufficient quantity we'll take it away for you. Just KEEP SCRAPPING.

All collection points heretofore named in this paper are always open for scrap donated and delivered there. Proceeds of sale of this goes one-third to Red Cross, one-third to USO, and one-third to the Scouts, 4-H Club, Future Farmers or other group responsible for handling at that point.

Trucking lines and collection centers are being organized to enable all farmers to sell at home their last pound at close to city prices. And we'll be starting as soon a sthe last stick is hung in the barn. Another opportunity will be offered to sell for cash at all towns in the county.

Our Country and this county are indebted to our newspapers for this success. To garage and station owners doing double duty on a busy day, to all the fine hard-working boys and the State Highway Department. Our sympathies too, to the latter for their grunts and groans as they haul it away.

The following telegram was received by Mr. Heizer:

"J. B. Heizer, Jr. Director "Boone Co. Salvage for Victory Committee.

"Washington phoned today, scrap-iron shortage serious, some steel mill closing. Do all you can to get in scrap. Please hurry.

"J. J. Rice,
"Executive Secretary of Ky."

Revival Closes At Baptist Church

Services at the Baptist church Sunday night brought to a close a two-weeks' revival.

These services were attended by large crowds each night and much interest was manifested in the spiritual sermons and splendid music.

18 new members were added to the church.

Rev. John E. Huss, pastor of the Latonia Baptist church assisted Rev. C. J. Alford, pastor of the local church.

FORMER BOONE COUNTY SOLDIER GRADUATES FROM A. M. SCHOOL

Private Edward P. Napier, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Napier, 713 Greenup St., Covington, Ky., has the honor of being one of the first soldiers to graduate from the St. Louis Aeronautical School.

This course is of 19 weeks duration and covers such important phases as airplane structures, airplane hydraulic systems, aircraft propellers, aircraft instruments, and inspection and maintenance of single and multi engines.

The purpose of this school is to train soldiers in the performance of first eschelon maintenance of standard airplanes. Unlike the combat pilot his duty as an airplane mechanic will not appear as glamorous, yet it is vitally essential. Its importance is best known by the pilot who flies the ship, because he realizes that his success as well as his safety depends upon the expert knowledge and conscientious performance of the airplane mechanic.

Ed, as known by his many friends, was inducted into the Air Corps of the U. S. Army at Ft. Thomas, Ky., on March 10th. Shortly after induction he became a member of the 13th Supply Sqdn., Duncan Field, Texas where he received his basic training.

We folks back home are mighty proud of you, Ed, and realize that you have a major role to play in this great crisis, so "Let's Keep 'Em Flying."

Leo Flynn of Walton, Kentucky, sold 9 lambs that averaged 83 pounds and brought $15.50 at the Cincinnati Union Stock Yards.

Joe Code of Walton, Kentucky, sold 7 lambs that averaged 76 pounds at $15.50 at the Cincinnati Union Stock Yards.

Ten per cent of your income in War Bonds will help to build the planes and tanks that will insure defeat of Hitler and his Axis partners.

Pvt. F. Lipscomb Writes From Ala.

Dear Mr. Linton:

I would like for you to have this this put in the Walton Advertiser. It may help someone, and by helping them in turn they can help the U. S. Army.

Ft. McClellan, Ala,
Aug. 29,1942.

To make this world more in the right way it takes the right kind of men to work together as brothers under the guidance of the Almighty God. We can win this war very easily if America will trust God instead of their own selfish pride, dance halls, liquor and hedious living.

Our country was created by men who knew God. That is the reason they were able to accomplish so many great things. But down thru the ages the pages of time have proven mankind is becoming weaker and are trusting themselves instead of God. If they don't wake up and get right with our Creator it is going to make the pressure harder on the fighting men of our country.

America, please, I beg you as a soldier of the American Army to lay down the filthy robe of the Devil, trust in God and back the Army up with the fighting spirit which God will put in you and us. Let's do more and talk less. You can surely sacrifice a little for us. We are sacrificing all for you.

Many of you may wonder how we can get right with God. Just one simple way: trust Christ as your Savior, pray for yourself and us boys, be in a prayerful attitude, mean what you say from the bottom of your heart. Try it. I know it will work. A Christian life is the greatest life a man can live.

Very truly yours,

Pvt. Franklin Lipscomb,

WORTHINGTON-HELMER

(Communicated)

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Worthington of Piner, announces the marriage of their daughter, Rose Ella, to Mr. Edward Helmer of Covington.

The beautiful double-ring ceremony took place Saturday, morning, August 22, at St. Mary's Cathedral at 9 o'clock, Rev. Father Feiberg, officiating.

The bride was gowned in beautiful white slipper satin and wore a long train veil, which formed a matching head piece caught by pearls. She carried a bouquet of white gladiolas. The witnesses were Misses Dorothy and Agnes Helmer, sisters of the groom, and Mr. Robert Helmer, cousin of the groom. Miss Dorothy Helmer, the bride's maid, was dressed in pink satin and wore a matching headpiece. Miss Agnes Helmer, maid of honor, wore blue satin and a matching headpiece. Both the bride's maid and the maid of honor carried a lovely bouquet of salmon gladiolus.

After the ceremony the bridal party went to the home of Mr.s. Rose Helmer, mother of the groom, and ate their wedding breakfast. Reception was held Saturday night, August 22, at Turner's Hall for 150 guests.

FARM MANAGEMENT MEETING THURSDAY EVENING

Mr. R. E. Proctor will discuss Farm Management practices that will pay best in 1943 in a meeting at the Court House, Burlington, Thursday, September 10, at 9:00 p. m. EWT, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Mr. Proctor's discussion will be based on the summary analysis of complete Farm Account Records kept by farmers in Boone, Kenton and Campbell counties this year. All farmers interested in their farm management study are invited to attend. The meeting will be especially helpful to farmers who may want to keep complete farm records next year.

C. L. CROPPER Appointed Judge Of Boone County

Mr. C. L. Cropper of Burlington, was appointed County Judge of Boone County Wednesday morning. The appointment was made by Governor Keen Johnson, to fill the unexpired term of the late Judge N. E. Riddle, whose term would have expired August 1943.

Mr. Cropper is a splendid young man of 45 years. He graduated from the Burlington High School in 1916, then attended the State University at Lexington. Returning to his farm in Burlington he was elected Assistant Cashier of the old Boone County Deposit Bank in 1925. This bank merged with the Peoples Deposit Bank in 1927.

In 1934 Mr. Cropper was elected Representative of Boone and Grant Counties and served two years.

He is a member of the Burlington Baptist church, and Masonic Lodge No. 264; American Legion, and Red Cross. Also chairman of the Boone County Democratic Executive Committee for the past six years. At various times in the last ten years he has served as acting Judge.

HOWE AND SMITH WEDDING

Miss Thelma Howe, the attractive daughter of Mrs. Mary Howe, left Tuesday night for Biloxi, Miss.

Mr. James Smith, who is stationed there with the Air Corps, and Miss Howe expect to be married Wednesday and stay there until about November, when Mrs. Smith will return to her home here and await the return of her husband.

Mrs. Smith, a congenial and competent clerk of Mann's store in South Walton for the past several years, has a host of friends who wish for her and her husband much happiness along life's journey.

SPOKE HERE TUESDAY NIGHT

Ed. Wimmer, candidate for Congress, made an enthusiastic speech after showing his moving pictures Tuesday night.

A large crowd listened attentatively and enjoyed his instructive pictures.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Battle of Egypt Gains New Momentum As British, U. S. Planes Blast Rommel; Jap War Minister Given New Power; Total Farm Crop Reaches Record High

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Japan's great pincer movement, which was aimed at Hawaii, appeared to be effective until the United States marines took Jap bases in the Solomons, thus breaking the lower prong. This failure has been emphasized further by Japanese defeats in Milne bay, an the tip of New Guinea.

DESERT WAR:
With Tanks, Planes

As British and German tanks continued their bitter struggle on a 20-mile desert front in Egypt, American bombers joined the Royal Air force in carrying out almost continuous operations against Nazi concentrations.

Reinforced and rested after a two months' halt, Marshal Erwin Rommel's army started its advance in the rolling, rocky area between the Ruweisat ridge in the center and Himeimat peak, on the southern wing near the Qattara depression.

Rommel's major effort was at the southern hinge of the British line, where troops were taking the brunt of the attack. War bulletins issued jointly by the headquarters and the RAF, said U. S. army air force planes participated in extensive operations over the entire area where the Nazis were trying to smash toward Alexandria, the Nile and the Suez canal.

Dispatches from the front noted that the moon was favorable for night fighting and that the weather was much cooler than the 100 degree temperature during the early summer.

TOGO TO TOJO:
Fourth Portfolio

When Japanese Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo resigned his position for "personal reasons," the Japanese cabinet virtually eliminated the one strong man regarded as being opposed to hostilities against Russia. Togo negotiated the Moscow-Tokyo neutrality pact.

Togo's post was taken over by Gen. Eiki Tojo, who now holds four portfolios in the cabinet—premier, war minister, minister of home affairs and foreign minister. The "strong man" of Japan, Tojo was a staunch advocate of the Axis pact and of Japan's "new order" in the Orient. His present four posts concentrate in one man almost absolute powers over his people.

Anticipating close scrutiny by official Russian sources, Tojo declared that his assumption of the foreign ministry "will not result in any way in an alteration of Japan's foreign policy." However, Togo's resignation, plus Tojo's decision to take over the foreign portfolio, was widely interpreted as presaging a sneak attack on Russia. Information reaching Chunking said that 100,000 Japanese troops—totaling five divisions—had been sent north from the China theater of war.

Supporting this theory, Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, United States commander in chief in India, China and Burma, announced that there is a "good chance" the Japs would attack Siberia.

HOT SPOT:
In South Pacific

Frustrated by hard-hitting United Nations forces at Milne bay, the Jap busied himself by pounding away elsewhere on the island of New Guinea, vital stepping stone to Australia. Port Moresby via Kokoda was the Jap objective.

Though the tempo of the fighting had increased there were strong indications that the trap set by General MacArthur's forces at Milne bay had effected huge losses on the enemy's air power. Particularly was the Jap fighter plane force smashed. At least 30 of the Zero fighters had been destroyed in the Milne bay encounter and while the Japs could ferry additional planes through a chain of islands it appeared that the United Nations had won the first round in the struggle.

Communiques lacked reports of Zero bombing and strafing expeditions but the United Nations were not assuming that Japan's air power had been permanently disabled.

NAZIS GAIN:
In Caucasus

Gloomy news came from the Russian front as the unexpected Red offensive northwest of Moscow failed for the most part in bringing relief to beleaguered Stalingrad.

Despite Soviet counterattacks on the Moscow-Rzhev front, the Nazis still were able to pour large scale reserves of troops, tanks and aircraft into the advance on Stalingrad. Hungarian and Rumanian divisions joined the assault on the vital Volga river city.

German troops had reached a zone in the Caucasus northwest of Novorossisk, Soviet Black sea naval base, a Russian communique acknowledged.

The Red army had withstood a constant hammering northwest of Stalingrad and had delivered strong blows against the enemy's flank. South of Krasnodar, in the Caucasus, the Russians said their troops were annihilating a trapped enemy.

NATION'S CROPS:
Reach Record High

The greatest supply of food in history will come from the nation's farms this year. Department of agriculture reports indicate that crops are the greatest on record for this time of year.

America is producing the biggest corn crop in 10 years, the largest wheat crop since 1915 and the greatest oat crop since 1925. Corn crop estimates place the total at 2,753,-696,000 bushels as compared with 2,673,000,000 bushels in 1941. Oats are expected to reach 1,332,000,000 bushels as compared with 1,176,-000,000 last year. The department estimates wheat production at 955,-000,000 bushels as compared with 946,000,000 bushels in 1941.

Sugar cane production is estimated at 7,379,000 tons; sugar beet production, 12,967,000 tons; cottonseed, 5,800,000 tons; flaxseed, 42,000,000 bushels; soy beans, 186,000,000 bushels; peanuts, 2,800,000,000 pounds; barley, 417,000,000 bushels; rye, 60,-000,000 bushels; rice, 74,000,000 bushels.

WHERE'S OUR NAVY?:
Secretary Knox Reports

In his first press conference in almost five months Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox came up with some information on activities in the U. S. navy.

He pointed out that all officers over 57 years of age were being subjected to a rigid physical examination as part of the navy's effort to weed out all officers except those in perfect condition.

While he doesn't believe the submarine menace off the Atlantic coast to be solved he did say that he believed the decline in sinkings could partly be credited to the fact that "we've made it tough for them." U-boats, he said, have shifted their activity to other sectors.

Other naval developments of interest revealed at the conference were (1) the ship-building program is ahead of schedule in all categories; (2) naval air officers will be promoted faster than others to "completely answer" criticism that the air arm of the navy has not been getting a good break in important high command decisions; (3) the attack on the Solomons was the "largest amphibious operation we ever undertook" and was successful in obtaining all immediate objectives; (4) in the Aleutian islands, the record "speaks for itself." (Here Secretary Knox was no doubt referring to the record of 19 enemy ships sunk or damaged since the Japs seized the westernmost tip of the island chain.)

MEXICAN WAR CHIEF:
Cardenas Gets Job

Mexico's increased participation in the war effort was emphasized when President Manuel Avila Camacho appointed his predecessor in the presidency, Gen. Lazaro Cardenas, as minister of national defense.

The appointment of Cardenas, who succeeds Gen. Pablo Valenzuela, was looked upon as the initial move toward expansion of the army, navy and air force. Early reports predicted that the navy as well as the army and air force, would be put under the defense ministry, thus making him second in command.

In his annual message to congress, President Camacho declared that Mexico is in the war until "a peace worthy of our living it" has been achieved. He added that Mexico will not make a separate armistice or peace.

DRAFT:
Puzzle

Selective Service Director Brig. Gen. Lewis Hershey had informed state draft officials to regulate quotas to individual boards so that married men would not be drafted in one locality before those in another. Then came the next problem: When would married men be called? When would it be necessary to take youths of 18 and 19 years of age into the army?

Efforts were being made to force a congressional vote on the latter issue before the November elections but most observers thought this unlikely. That such a vote would come soon after these elections appeared certain however.

Chariman Andrew Jackson May (Dem., Ky.) of the house military affairs committee declared that when and if married men with children are called the war would be about 18 months older, or they might not be taken at all. He released figures which he said were furnished by the national selective service headquarters indicating a nine million man pool available in advance of drafting registrants with dependent wives and children.

FUEL OIL:
To Be Rationed

Fears of midwest petroleum distributors were realized when Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production board, confirmed reports that fuel oil will be rationed and that rationing may be imposed upon some midwestern states as well as the East.

Rationing would be extended to the Midwest in order to make additional railroad tank cars available to supply the eastern market.

At his press conference President Roosevelt mentioned 25 per cent as the likely amount of curtailment in some areas. Those areas were not specified.

Initial reports indicated that a basic ration would permit heating to an average temperature of approximately 68 degrees, with additional rations to be issued on the basis of need. Full details of the plan will be ironed out by WPB officials.

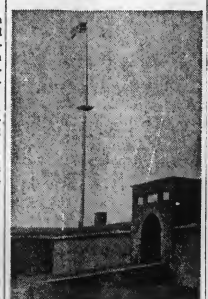
Our National Anthem



(It was written 128 years ago this month. For more than a century and a quarter Americans have been singing it. But how many of them knew the OTHER THREE stanzas?)

HE WROTE IT . . .

Francis Scott Key watched the British bombard Fort McHenry throughout the night of September 13, 1814. Then "by the dawn's early light" he saw that "our flag was still there."

THIS INSPIRED HIM . . .

This flagstaff stands on the same spot where stood the flagstaff from which was flown the banner that inspired Francis Scott Key to write

THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER

O, say can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, through the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watched, were so gallantly streaming?
And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there.
O, say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

On that shore, dimly seen through the mists of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes;
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected now shines in the stream;
'Tis the star-spangled banner, O, long may it wava
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion,
A home and a country should leave us no more?
Their blood has washed out their foul footsteps' pollution.
No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terrors of flight or the gloom of the grave;
And the star-spangled banner in triumph doth wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

O, thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation;
Blest with victory and peace, may the heaven-rescued land
Praise the Power that hath made and preserved us a nation.
Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto—"In God is our Trust!"
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Key's poem was first printed in the Baltimore American on September 21. Later it was distributed in handbill form and set to the music of an old English drinking song, "To Anacreon in Heaven," composed by John Stafford Smith. The man who joined the words of "The Star Spangled Banner" and the tuna of "To Anacreon in Heaven" was Ferdinand Durang, an actor then serving in the American forces near Baltimore, and he and his brother first sang it in public in the old Holliday Street theater in Baltimore late in September, 1814.

U. S. Backs Fair Trials For Axis War Criminals

President Hopes for Punishment by Process Of Law for Perpetrators of Crimes Against Subdued Nations.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

It was press and radio conference day at the White House. We were crowded around the big desk in the executive office. It was hot. The President was seated at his desk, coatless, in a white shirt and black tie. He was leaning over a typewritten statement before him, reading it carefully, puffing out his cheeks and then blowing out slowly, as many people do when they are concentrating.

It happened to be a newsful day and the answers to the reporters' questions and the explanations of two long statements filled columns in the papers which you read the next day.

The first announcement, the one which he was reading over to himself when we came in, is the one which I want to speak about—tha warning to the Axis perpetrators of acts of atrocity against the civilian peoples of the occupied countries.

Brutal though the theme was, ominous though the warning, I was suddenly struck by the feeling that here, in the midst of hatred and slaughter, was an effort to maintain the spirit of decency and humanity, the things we are really fighting for. Tha whole intent of the warning was to assure justice—even for the enemy. America was committing itself to the principle that the innocent with its policy of making the innocent suffer for another's offense—such as the shooting of hostages—would be punished, not by blind vengeance as brutal as the crime it would avenge, but by due process of law. Gestapo and military officials after the war would be tried in a court by the country where the crimes were committed.

Vengeance?

As the President was explaining this, a reporter asked him if he thought the people in the occupied countries would wait for a trial. Would they not take the law into their own hands? Another asked the President if he had heard the sentence said to be circulating in the occupied countries — "give us a week."

That, the President said, was exactly what he hoped would not happen—that criminals would be punished after fair trials. He pointed to the recent trials of the Nazi saboteurs in Washington as an example of this nation's insistence on the due process of law.

It seemed gratifying, to me, that we were setting out now in the midst of bloodshed and hatred, to plan curbs against violation on our part of the very things for which we are fighting.

One man, familiar with military law and usage, pointed out to me that when and if perpetrators of these crimes are tried, the defense is sure to be that the individual officer cannot be held to account for merely executing the orders of his superiors. If General X, for example, is arraigned for shooting innocent hostages in Paris, he will answer that he was merely obeying instructions from his superiors in Berlin.

"Legally," my friend said, "that excuse will not wash. Military law requires unquestioning obedience only when the command given is honorable. No soldier can be required to perform an act that is contrary to honor.

"If the accused general's conscience revolts against executing people who have committed no offense, he is entitled to refuse to obey the order. Even a German court martial would uphold him in that refusal.

"The German gauleiters who slaughter Jews and Poles and Czechs cannot take refuge in the plea that their crimes were commanded by Hitler or Himmler."

Commandos Find Zest In Hit-Run Raids

The remark of one of the young members of the Rangers who took part in the raid on Dieppe, that in the midst of the fighting they suddenly realized they "were having fun," fell with a shock on many civilian ears. But that sentiment, terrifying as it is, explains the philosophy of the raider. It is not a discovery of this war. It as evidenced in the last war and has been a part of all wars.

This week I was talking with William Bird, a former foreign correspondent who is a keen student of human nature and who spent some time with an organization in France, in the early days of the present war, called the "groupes francs." Thess consisted of about two dozen men, divided into squads of six. Each squad was quartered in a single barrack room, and each was completely autonomous. The members of the squad had no contact with the rest of the battalion, or even with the members of other similar squads, except in the planning and execution of operations involving more than one squad. They did not even attend the company mess, but cooked their meals on the barrack room stove.

"You know," Bird explained to me, "what gives zest to big-game hunting is the element of danger to the huntsman. Some men will travel half way around the world for the thrill of risking their lives in battle with a tiger or an elephant.

"Tha same kind of man gets an even bigger thrill from war, because man is a deadlier foe than any beast. The Commandos and the Rangers are made up largely of men who thrive on mortal danger."

The Personnel

"One of the 'groupes francs' which I came to know," Bird went on, included:

A champion racing driver.

The son of a multi-millionaire manufacturer who, until the war came along, was often in the famous "salon prive" at Deauville, where fortunes changed hands nightly on the turn of a card.

A Montmartre hoodlum who had done time for stabbing a rival in a fight.

A bookkeeper from Lyons.

A farm boy from Normandy.

A garage mechanic.

They had no tastes in common except a taste for risking their lives. In peace time scarcely any two of them would have spoken to each other. But in war they were boon companions, and each was ready to die for the others.

"War to them was simply the sublimest sport in the world."

Chinese Jujitsu Expert Trains American Officers

So far the Japanese strategy, the strategy of the little fellow against the big one, has been to hit his opponent when he isn't looking.

And that philosophy goes back a long way with Japan. Back to the art of jujitsu. Soma say that this is an indigenous Japanese institution, dating from Seventh century Nippon. My friend Joseph Chiang has another story. Chiang is a Chinese newspaper man in Washington and he says that jujitsu is Chinese. "The Japanese copied our language. They copied jujitsu too," he says.

According to Chiang it was used first by the peaceful Buddhist monks to defend themselves and their monasteries against bandits. It is primarily an art of defense although it can make the aggressor break his own neck if the jujitsuist isn't careful.

"The feat consists of clutching or striking such part of the enemy's body as will make him numb or incapable of resistance. Its object is not to kill but to incapacitate for the time being."

That is a definition by Inanzo Nitobe, in "Bushido, the Soul of Japan."

What the expert does with his victim after he has incapacitated him, Mr. Nitobe does not say, any more than Mr. Kurusu mentioned what the Mikado was going to do "after Pearl Harbor."

Whether the Japanese stole the idea from the Chinese or invented it themselves they have made good use of it. It has long been part of tha training of the Japanese police and is now a part of the training of the Japanese soldier. No wonder. The Jap fighter weighs an average of 126 pounds. He may be equipped with fanatic zeal but it takes more than that to meet a six-foot American or Britisher in a hand-to-hand combat. Something must be added to put him on equal terms with a heftier adversary.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

The Offica of Information said America was only "ankle deep" in the war. Out of the 7,000 Americans lost so far in the war, 3,000 were civilians. In the British empire (white only) 130,000 dead, 62,-000 civilians; native troops chiefly Indian, 13,000, 10,000 civilians included. Soma two million Chinese soldiers have been killed; between five and ten million civilians.

Over a recent typical week-end 3,000 pies were sold at the Washington Union station restaurant.

Constipation! Why Not Get and Keep Regular?

One of the commonest causes of constipation is simply this: Modern diets, superrefined, too often give us too little "bulk food." In such cases, dosing with cathartics and purges gives only temporary relief — the trouble comes back again and again. The way to more lasting relief is to get at the underlying cause and correct it.

You can do this by eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN daily. This delicious, toasty cereal supplies the needed "bulk." It acts pleasantly; works principally on the contents of the colon, helping you to have easy and normal elimination. In many cases, eating ALL-BRAN regularly and drinking plenty of water brings lasting freedom from constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not benefited by this simple treatment, see your doctor.

STAGE—SCREEN—RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

THAT'S quite something in murder mysteries that 20th Century-Fox is cooking up, with Bryan Fox in charge. Instead of having only one famous sleuth, it's going to have practically all of them! Philo Vance leads off, but when he gets stuck he's aided by Michael Shane, the Falcon, Bulldog Drummond and various others. They can't borrow William Powell to be the Thin Man, so they'll just use his voice. George Sanders will play the Falcon. And Mr. Moto, the Japanese sleuth, will participate from an internment camp.

"The Show Boat" is returning to stage, screen and probably radio. It's to be revived on Broadway this fall, and Metro has purchased the screen rights from Universal, so for the third time movie-goers will have an opportunity to see it and hear its lovely music.

Katharine Cornell, one of the first ladies of the stage, has at last agreed to appear in a motion picture. Producers have been imploring her to do so for years; now she's consented. You'll see her in "Stage Door Canteen," the profits of which will go to service organiza-

Harry Sherman's "Lost Canyon," a Bill Boyd picture, ran into a snag the other day. There are scenes requiring cowboys to spend some time in a barn, amid about 100 bales of alfalfa. All was set, when the sneezing ruined the dialogue; seems some of the cowboys were allergic to alfalfa, and it was a case of abandoning either it or the cowboys. So a hurry call for non-hayfeverish cowboys was sent out.

Ryder stepped into the role when the show first went on the air.

Martin Block says that laziness pays, since it makes you look for short cuts. Eight years ago he was an announcer on a small station, writing his own scripts, and making $30 a week. He learned that he could avoid typing the commercials by ad-libbing them. That style was more convincing than the first one, and today he's drawing down $4,000 weekly, thanks to it. He's now master of ceremonies on "The Hit Parade."

The largest stampede scenes to be photographed in technicolor have been completed by Columbia Studios in Utah for the new super-western, "The Desperadoes." More than 1,000 unbroken horses were used. Budget Stretchers

What can I serve as a main course that won't take too many dishes?

What can I give my large family that isn't too expensive? These are the two queries often asked by my readers. The answer to both questions is simple—a casserole. Easy to make, easy to serve, economical too, casseroles solve the main dish problem almost perfectly.

Almost? Yes, I say almost advisedly, because if the family ever becomes aware of your ulterior motives in serving casseroles, their interest in them becomes less, less and finally non-existent.

Make your casserole so delectable and so distinctive in flavor and no one will ever realize that it's packed with economy and you have a one-dish meal that's perfection plus.

Never overwork the casserole by trying to use up all the leftovers lining refrigerator and pantry shelves. Never swamp the flavors of the food so you strike a false note and confuse the sense of taste. Use good food and season with discrimination. Your result will be a real success.

Here are some new ideas I've compiled for you. Most of them of the food you have used often enough so they're old favorites, but in new dress! You'll like:

Rice and Chicken Casserole.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups rice
2 cups milk
1½ tablespoons butter
2 eggs
2½ cups diced, cooked chicken

Boil rice in salted water until tender. Stir in butter, milk and eggs. Put a layer of this into a casserole, then chicken, more rice, etc. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until well browned.

Every now and then you've heard me talk about food affinities. Here's another I'd like to add to the list:

Lamb and Lima Bean Pie.
(Serves 6)

2 pounds lamb neck, shanks or shoulder
1 pound dry lima beans
Salt, pepper
Celery salt

Soak lima beans overnight. Drain and place in a heavy kettle. Have lamb cut in 2-inch pieces. Add to beans, season and cover with water. Transfer to casserole and top with pimiento biscuit rings and bake in a moderately hot oven 20 to 25 minutes.

To make pimiento biscuit rings: add ⅓ cup coarsely chopped pimiento to baking powder biscuit recipe.

You'll get your carbohydrates, proteins along with vitamins and minerals in this economical, hunger-satisfying dish good for family dinner or informal buffet entertaining:

American Goulash.
(Serves 6)

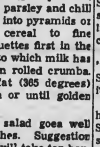
½-pound package macaroni
1½ pounds hamburger
1 large onion, chopped
1 tablespoon fat

This Week's Menu

Tomato Juice Saltines
*Rice and Chicken Casserole
*Grapefruit-Cranberry Salad
Popovers Strawberry Jam
Sliced Melon
Beverage
*Recipe Given.

2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
3 cups tomatoes
1 can tomato soup
Buttered crumbs

Cook macaroni in boiling, salted water, about 20 minutes, or until tender. Drain. Brown meat and onions in fat. Add macaroni, seasonings, tomatoes and soup. Pour into greased baking dish and sprinkle with buttered crumbs. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate (350-degree) oven.



An economy meat cut that is getting itself talked about plenty because of its simply wonderful flavor is this:

Ribs of Beef With Vegetables.
(Serves 6)

3½ pounds of short ribs
1 large onion, sliced
2 cups tomatoes
Salt, pepper
6 onions
6 potatoes
3 parsnips

Season short ribs with salt and pepper. Put in skillet with fat and brown quickly. Place in an iron skillet or roasting pan and add onions and tomatoes. Let bake in a moderate oven for 1¼ hours, tightly covered. Add whole carrots which have been scraped, parsnips, peeled, and potatoes peeled but left whole. Cook another hour or until vegetables are tender. Add boiling water if necessary during the last hour of cooking.

Second day service of chicken is beautifully simplified if you do up the bird in crusty cylindrical croquettes, and dish them up together with golden carrot strips and either canned or frozen asparagus and you have a one-plate meal that is bound to inspire the family's appetite:

Chicken Croquettes.
(Makes 10 croquettes)

2 cups cooked, ground chicken
1 cup thick white sauce
2 teaspoons chopped parsley
Flour
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon milk
3 cups oven-popped rice cereal
Salt, pepper

Prepare white sauce using ¼ cup chicken stock and ¼ cup milk. Add to chicken and parsley and chill thoroughly. Shape into pyramids or cylinders. Roll cereal to fine crumbs. Dip croquettes first in the flour, then in egg (to which milk has been added) and in rolled crumbs. Fry in deep, hot fat (365 degrees) for 2 to 5 minutes or until golden brown.

A crispy, citrus salad goes well with casserole dishes. Suggestion of the week which will take top honors in the hall of fame is this one made with grapefruit, oranges and cranberries for color. Its dressing is unusual in that it combines honey with mayonnaise and cranberries.

Grapefruit and Cranberry Salad
(Serves 4)

1 large grapefruit
2 large oranges
Lettuce
½ cup ground, raw cranberries
2 tablespoons honey
½ cup mayonnaise

Peel and section oranges and grapefruit. Arrange alternately on lettuce. Mix cranberries with honey. Let stand ½ hour. Combine with mayonnaise. Serve over salad

Store Food Wisely: There are no "Finders Keepers" but you may be the "Loser Weeper" if you do not store those vegetables properly.

Scientific experiments show that lettuce may lose 40 per cent of its vitamin C if kept at room temperature. Refrigerator recommended!

Spinach, left standing on pantry shelf, will be drained of its vitamin C by about one-third. Canned string beans lose about one-third of their vitamin C if they stand in a bowl at room temperature for six hours.

Short cooking time is recommended, too. Cabbage, for instance, loses 60 per cent of the elusive vitamin C and 72 per cent of its calcium and 50 per cent of its other minerals when these valuable nutrients go up in steam.

SMILING POOL IS DESERTED

"WHAT I want to know is where has Paddy the Beaver been all summer?" said Billy Mink. "Nobody seems to have seen him. I went up to his old dam three times, but there wasn't any pond up there then and I didn't see anything of him around."

"He said that he had found a splendid hole in the bank that time when he came down the Laughing Brook with us in the spring," said Spotty the Turtle. "Perhaps he has been hiding there all summer."

"Perhaps he hasn't!" replied Billy Mink scornfully. "Don't you suppose that with all the travelling I do up and down the Laughing Brook I'd have known of it if he had?"

"Perhaps he was out seeing the Great World like Grandfather Frog," Jerry Muskrat suggested.

"If he was he'll know enough now never to go again," grunted Grandfather Frog. Everybody smiled for it tickled his friends to hear Grandfather Frog insist that he knew all about the Great World when they knew that despite all his adventures he really had had no more than a peep at a very tiny bit of it. But they couldn't make Grandfather Frog believe this. No, siree! He firmly believed that he had seen the Great World and that it wasn't to be compared with the dear old Smiling Pool.

"Well, I don't know as it matters much where Paddy the Beaver has been all summer," said Little Joe Otter. "What does matter is the fact that he is somewhere up the

"I—I guess he did mean it after all, and he must be at work right now," said Billy Mink.

Laughing Brook this minute and he says that he is going to make a new pond way back in the Green Forest. I don't see why the Smiling Pool isn't good enough for him, but if he wants to take the trouble to make a new pond I don't know as I have any objections. I wonder if he has begun work yet."

Jerry Muskrat had been looking very sharply at the bank on which Little Joe was sitting. "I think he has," said Jerry.

"What makes you think so?" asked Billy Mink. "I think myself that he is just a great big boaster and gave us that warning that he was going to stop the water running in the Laughing Brook just to give us a scare."

Jerry didn't reply. He just pointed to the bank. Everybody looked and they could hardly believe their eyes when they saw a wet line running all the way along the bank which showed that the water was not as high as it had been. They just stared and stared with eyes and mouths wide open, and even while they looked the water dropped ever so little.

"I—I guess he did mean it after all and he must be at work right now," said Billy Mink slowly as if it were hard work to believe what he was saying. "I think it is time we went up to see what is going on."

With that he started up the Laughing Brook and all the rest followed, that is all but Grandfather Frog. Spotty the Turtle looked back and saw him still sitting on his big green lily-pad. "Aren't you coming?" he called.

"No," replied Grandfather Frog. "I was foolish enough to leave the Smiling Pool once and I'll never do it again no matter what happens."

And so they left him sitting on his big green lily-pad watching the Smiling Pool grow smaller and smaller. It was strangely still there. There was no one for company, excepting a few of his great great grandchildren, the Tadpoles. Even the trout had started up the Laughing Brook as if they felt that something was wrong.

"Chugarum!" said Grandfather Frog. "This is dreadful! I hope that Paddy the Beaver will do as he promised and let the water run again when he has made his pond. If he doesn't I—I—well, I'm going to stay, anyway."

NOW is the time to use every scrap of old woolen goods that you have on hand. That old coat the moths got into; the dress from which spots cannot be removed; the trousers that are ragged at the knees—all of the material in these may be made into handsome hooked rugs that you will be proud to own.

The square rug in the sketch was designed to fit in a smart dressing table corner. The rose-and-ribbon design in the chintz skirt and window valance was copied in making a border and center flower for the rug. It is easy to make your own rug designs in this way to exactly suit your room. So begin today to plan a rug for some special spot in your home.

NOTE: There are suggestions for preparing hooked rug materials and for making original designs in BOOK 5 of the series of home-making booklets which Mrs. Spears has prepared for readers. Also BOOK 6 contains directions for a hooked rug that any beginner can make easily and quickly. The booklets are 10 cents each. Plans for making a hooked rug frame will be included with your order, if requested. Address:

If you are ever stumped by the question of what to send a friend or relative in one of Uncle Sam's armed forces, here's a tip. If he smokes a pipe or rolls-his-own, nothing would please him more than a pound of his favorite tobacco. Surveys among the men themselves show that. Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco has long been known as the National Joy Smoke—it is the largest-selling smoking tobacco in the world. Local dealers are now featuring Prince Albert in the pound can as an ideal gift for service men who smoke a pipe or roll-their-own.—Adv.

Watery Vegetables

The quantity of water in some fruits and vegetables exceeds that in many beverages. For instance, peaches, lettuce, spinach, cucumbers and summer squash contain a much higher percentage of water than beer, wine, whole milk and carbonated drinks.

Rice?

No, Thank You, Mr. Hirohito!

NOT as a steady diet. You've done pretty well on rice, but can you keep on doing it? What about Midway and the Coral Sea? Ever hear of Doolittle? MacArthur? Chennault?

What about the Solomon Islands? You can't get around it—those U. S. boys are better, man for man. And they're not sun-worshippers, either—just plain free men, well-fed and fighting mad. Sure it takes a lot of food to keep them going, but we've got what you haven't got, Hirohito . . . an army of free women fighting the home front because they know the need to fight! Not with guns. Not everyone can make shells or build airplanes. It takes an American woman just half of a split second to see where she fits in; the empty shelves at the grocery were enough of a hint for her. 50% more home-canning is our goal, and it's just like making bombs for Tokyo. No one in America will ever live on rice. We'll have fruits and fruit juices, vegetables and meats—home-canned for a few cents a jar.

Can you beat it, Mr. Hirohito? A war won—by women?

Kenton County Neighborhood Leaders Keep Farm Families Posted

To carry information on wartime problems and programs to farm families cut off from educational meetings by lack of time and transportaton, the Extension Servicce of the Department of Agriculture and the State Agriculture College are placing new emphasis on a system of education of long standing—a system of voluntary local leaders.

State reports show that about 600,000 wartime leaders, one man and one woman for every 10 to 15 families, already have undertaken this war work. These leaders carry information quickly to their neighbors by telephone calls, neighborly visits, small walk-in meetings and over-the-fence discussions.

Kenton County neighborhood leaders regularly receive information on wartime developments to be transmitted in their communities through Miss Zelma E. Byerly, Home Demonstration Agent, and Mr. C. A. Wicklund, County Agricultural Agent, representatives of the Agricultural Extension Service in Kenton County. Offices are maintained in the Covington Federal Building and at the Bank of Independence.

Neighborhood leaders in Kenton County are:

Melvin Hoffman, Fred Reinhart, Chas. Kraft, George A. Eubanks, John P. Westerman, Chas. Thirs, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Scott, G. W. Hahn, Donald Rudolph, C. J. Eubanks, Ray Eubanks, Walter Eubanks, Mrs. Geo. Milner, Mose L. Black, Mrs. B. J. Rosing, Mrs. Howard McHenry, John Tewes, Jr., Lawrence Gripshover, John T. NICHOLSON NEWS—

"Behold the Lamb of God which takes away the sin of the world." Life here is but preparation for the future.

Grateful appreciation is extended to the Mt. Carmal Baptist church, near Cincinnati, for a lovely gift, also an additional gift from one of the deacons, presented by the board of deacons composed of Messrs. R. S. Bowman, H. Cordel, J. Byrnside, W. G. Goble and P. W. Woods. Recently as the evening shadows were falling the twilight hour was brightened by their call and after a quiet little service which was a season of great spiritual uplift and the old, old story evermore their check was given which cement even firmer the ties of friendship which exist. Like the afterglow of the sunset, the warmth and radiance of the genial personalities of these noble men of God, shall long linger in our memory and their characteristics of friendliness, loyalty and devotion, remain a blessing like the lingering softness of twilight after the sun has set. Friends enrich life for us, for like the tendrils of a vine heavy with foliage they cling fast and long. Not every one, however, stops to consider what it means to be a real friend ,for being a true friend certainly does consist of more than giving smiles or a pat on the shoulder. Naturally we question the sincerity of one unwilling to share with the unfortunate. Real friendship reveals a readiness to help others. The more one does for his fellowmen, the more he benefits himself for "to lift another's load is to lixhten your own."

Best wishes of a host of friends follow Mr. Malcolm Simpson, highly efficient editor of "The Walton Advertiser," as he joins the ranks of the gallant defenders of our beloved America, where blessings unparolleled anywhere else in the world, are enjoyed. Very warmly does our admiration go out to him as he holds aloft our much prized banner representing the highest ideals, and prayerfully trust that speedily there may be a successful conclusion of this dreadful conflict, and he returns safely to his devoted mother.

Mrs. Walter Maddox and attractive young daughter, Miss Geneva, were recent callers . We are indebted to Mrs. Maddox for kindly sending one of our articles to "The Cadle Call" for publication. We have known and loved her since childhood days and now that silver threads tinge her beautiful brown hair, it has increased with the passing of the years.

Mrs. J. L. Pickett and Mrs. Thomas McClure of Kenton, who were calling on relatives Friday evening were in attendance at our twilight service.

Most heartily do we thank Mr. and Mrs. Mayson and Stephens of Piner, for recent kindness.

Miss Nellie Fisk has returned from a pleasant visit with relatives near Covington.

When Your Back Hurts
And Your Strength and Energy Is Below Par
It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

Mrs. Clayton Renaker and children of Lexington, Miss Halcomb and Sergt. Yates also of that city were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Renaker Monday.

Young Master Rodney Renaker, who has been visiting relatives in Boone county during his vacation, returned home with his father for the opening of school.

The W. M. S. of the Baptist church will conduct a mission study class at the church Thursday beginning at 1 o'clock. Mrs. F. H. Malone will teach the book, "He That Giveth." All are invited.

Verona Homemakers met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Ransom with about twenty-five members and guests present. At the morning session a check-up was made by members as to improved practices. Noon time brought the serving of a lovely luncheon and the enjoyment of a happy social hour. At the call of assembly in the afternoon Mrs. Ransom, our incoming president, made a few pertinent remarks of acceptance of the office and conducted the business session. The report was made that our fish fry was very successful and we wish to express our appreciation to all who attended or otherwise had a part in contributing to that success. The lesson on "Style Trends for Fall" was presented in a splendid way by Mrs. John L. Vest and Mrs. D. Hess Vest of the Walton Club.

A Questionnaire for KENTUCKIANS
NOT AFRAID TO FACE FACTS

Q: Does Prohibition of beer and other beverages really prohibit?

A: No! According to Clark Warburton in "The Economic Results of Prohibition", the American people spent more than 36 billion dollars in 10 Prohibition years for bootleg and smuggled liquor! That's 10 million dollars a day!

Q: What usually happens when the legal sale of beer and other beverages is voted out of a community?

A: The experience[illegible]s of enforcement officers, not only in Kentucky bu[illegible]hroughout the Nation, prove that when legalized sales are voted out, the bootlegger moves in. Crime and vice inevitably increase. Respectable business men are forced out of business, their employees out of jobs. The community, the county, the state and the nation lose much-needed tax revenue. Everybody suffers—except the bootlegger!

Q: How is the Kentucky beer industry combating the legacy of Prohibition—the few irresponsibles among the many beer retailers?

A: By cooperating in the splendid work of the enforcement agencies charged with maintaining clean, wholesome conditions wherever beer is sold. Among the actions taken by these authorities since June, 1940, 37 retail beer licenses have been revoked, 10 have been suspended; 4 places have been padlocked; and 1 put on probation, on the recommendation of this Committee. These few places reflected on the decent conduct of thousands of reputable beer retailers.

With your cooperation, and without eliminating the great majority of respectable, law-abiding beer retailers, beer will remain a legal beverage of moderation in Kentucky.

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. When they arrive in Tierra Libre they find both Zora and her husband dead. It is Mitchell's job as chief engineer for a fruit company that Jeff has been called to fill. Later Jeff's friend Bill Henderson is also killed, and Jeff suspects his employer, Senor Montaya, of murdering him and the Mitchells because they had found a clue to the strange things going on at the plantation. Other sinister figures are the company chemist, Dr. Toenjes, and the flyers, Ryden and Lanneston. Jeff's suspicions are further aroused when the flyers and Dr. Toenjes try to keep a disabled U. S. Army plane from making a forced landing. But when Jeff talks to him later, Senor Montaya does not appear to be alarmed.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XII

Since arriving at San Alejo Curt hadn't seen much of his children, and one of the things he most enjoyed was playing with them, letting Chuck and Buddy crawl over him. He loved making them squeal with happiness. And now little Sylvia Mitchell was an added attraction. So today Curt went home early, to have some time with them before dark.

Curt spent a full hour with the children before the clouds let loose with a ten-minute shower, a daily feature so regular they could set their clocks by it.

The shower gave Curt a chance to calm the children down with a story so they wouldn't be too excited for supper and bed, and when Lee called for them he shooed them up the steps and into the house. But he remained outside. He returned to the open basement. For here his eye had caught something of interest during the play which he couldn't have investigated then without raising the children's curiosity.

The living room ran the width of the house across the front, screened on three sides—a lanai, had this been Hawaii. Along the front and sides of this veranda-livingroom was a solid bank of hibiscus, broken only by the steps. A cement walk ran from the front around the side of the house to the rear, but a two foot space had been left for the shrubbery between this and the cement floor under the house.

And on the edge of the cement, inside the hedge, were dried mud footprints! Someone had stood on this spot. Why? For only one reason. To listen in on what passed above in the veranda-livingroom.

Then who could it have been? The prints were broad and indicated flat shoes. They weren't large. The men in this clime didn't run to big feet, Curt knew, but he sensed these were woman's prints. Not Lee's, for she wore heels. The cook's? No, she didn't know English and eavesdropping would have done her no good. That is, Curt had been told she knew no English.

But Ines knew English. Not well, but enough for simple phrases, which meant that she understood it even better. Ines was the maid furnished by Montaya.

Whoever had left them had inadvertently stepped into the hibiscus bed, then up onto the cement, and since this soil absorbed moisture quickly it had to be early in the evening after the shower. Perhaps after dinner when he and Lee sat on the veranda above. About the time Ines left for the day.

Dinner. Curt was quiet and brooding, and Lee caught his eye on Ines whenever the girl was in the room. Especially, Lee noticed, he glanced at her feet. Lee wondered, but said nothing—couldn't have at the table. What Curt saw was that the shoes Ines wore to work, despite her flare for style in dress, were for comfort, not style. They were practically heelless and broad enough for feet which had gone barefoot through childhood.

After coffee, Curt collapsed on his shoulder blades in a comfortable bamboo chair which he pulled close to the couch. He lit his pipe and blew rings to the ceiling, and ignored the stack of papers on the taboret by his side. Lee recognized the mood and got out her sewing—small rompers to mend. She knew he'd start talking when he got ready. She stole the couch, as he'd planned for her to do. A subdued clatter of dishes came from the rear as Ines removed them from the dining table to the kitchen sink. Then sounds from the sink. Curt came to life.

"Lee, I want you to talk to yourself for a while, as though you were talking to me."

Lee shot him a startled look.

"I want to know if ordinary conversation can be heard outside," he grinned.

"Oh." But she stared.

Curt put down his pipe, went to the door, silently let himself out into the dark.

Lee, with the ghost of a snicker, sighed and did as asked, keeping her voice down as though Curt were beside her.

"Well, I suppose I might as well talk about the people I've met. I'll get as much attention as if you were here. Let's see, there's Mrs. Berry, the doctor's wife. She's from Pennsylvania, but she's no Quaker!

Lee's hands flew at her work while she talked.

"Oh, I've found there're quite a number of nice people here. It's a good clubhouse we have, with pool and billiard tables, a card room, and movies twice a week."

Lee heard a chuckle and looked up to find Curt had returned as silently as he'd slipped out.

"Dance? Okay," he said. "Much as I hate the idea, we'll go one of these evenings. It's a promise. Well, I found out what I wanted to know."

He picked up his pipe and knocked out the cold ashes. His voice was careful as he told her of the footprints he'd found.

"But," he told her, "while I could hear your voice just now, I couldn't make out what you were saying from this spot. I was a little worried for fear we might have been overheard last night. I reckon not. Nevertheless, we'll have to be careful of what we say from now on."

"And you suspect Ines."

"Yes. If it were only Ines, I could put it down to housemaid's curiosity. But there's this greasy Vargas. I have a definite feeling he's more than a bodyguard—a spy on me in the field."

Lee said nothing, but her eyes clouded. Sounds from the kitchen now ceased.

"Well, she's through for the day," Curt said. "We can make certain. I can watch her leave from the bedroom—it's dark. You keep on talking."

The back door closed and steps descended to the ground. The bamboo drops were down, all around the living room so that no one outside could see what went on within. Curt left the room. Lee didn't snicker this time, but there was the hint of a smile in her voice as she spoke up.

At the bedroom window Curt first used only his ears.

"Well, if I could get a date for a dance the first time I talked to thin air, perhaps this time I can get you started on that collection of orchids for me. After all, you promised . . ."

At the bedroom window Curt first used only his ears. He listened to the pad of footsteps going to the gate, the normal click of the latch. Presently came a rustle of shrubbery and he knew his guess was correct. There could be no doubt.

The rattan screen at the bedroom window was down. In lifting it aside to peer out, Curt made the slightest of sounds. Instantly his straining eyes caught a flicker of shadow slipping into solid darkness around the corner of the house. Quickly followed the click of the gate latch again, muffled this time, but unmistakably the gate latch. He frowned.

On the morrow the weather held hot, and coupled with the ever-present Emilio, it didn't improve Curt's disposition. It was midmorning when Curt and his shadow reached Tempujo for their trip upriver. By phone from San Alejo Curt had ordered the launch fueled and ready. He intended wasting no time here. But the need of a map or two took him first to his office.

As he was about to turn into it a figure rose from under a palm and Curt was accosted by one of the most disreputable looking tramps he'd yet seen in the tropics. An American, clearly, but the many days' growth of beard, the filthy rags he wore, effectively concealed what kind of man this was.

"Mr. Curtis, sir?" in a cringing voice.

"Yes," Curt answered shortly. He hated subservience in a man.

"My name is Collins, sir. I'm looking for work."

Curt eyed the man. The eyes were bloodshot and told unquestionably of hunger—real hunger.

"Well?"

"I'm a good transitman, sir, and I'm good on gas engines or Diesels. I heard you need men."

Curt stood silent. There were plenty of tropical tramps in these quarters — drunken, irresponsible men, all of them fugitives, if not from the law, then from themselves. Curt had sufficient sympathy to give such derelicts a lift from his own pocket, or a little work if he could—enough to carry them on to some other place.

But he knew he could place no reliance in them, and from the standpoint of efficiency it didn't often pay to take them on. In this case, however, something in the man's bearing, drooping though it was, didn't quite match the rest of him, and Curt was sufficiently intrigued to pause.

Emilio unwittingly settled the matter. He was standing by, eyes veiled. By now Curt could read the native's dead eyes, and the disapproval Curt saw there was enough to swing his decision. Curt nodded toward the door and the man followed him inside. Emilio brought up the rear.

Lauriano Duro, the draftsman in charge of the office, was bent over his work.

"Anything for my attention?" asked Curt.

"No, sir."

The native straightened up, looked at the three, and Curt thought he caught a flicker of Emilio's eyelids before the draftsman bent over his table again.

In silence Curt selected the maps he wanted, together with a bundle of white flags. He took down from a shelf a company camera, loaded it deliberately, handed the lot to Emilio.

"Put them aboard, and get some lunches packed at the mess-hall. It'll be better than what they could put up for us over at the levee camp. See to it there's plenty of coffee—black." Then, as Emilio hesitated, he barked, "Well! That's all! We've no time to waste."

Emilio departed, and this time Curt definitely caught the flicker of eyes that Vargas aimed at Lauriano Duro as he turned to the door. Curt spoke to the stranger.

"All right, Collins, where you from?"

"Illinois, sir."

"How long you been down here?"

"Four years, sir."

"Not so much 'sir,' if you don't mind!" Curt was rapidly getting in a mood. The prospect of two days of Emilio was facing him. "What've you done to keep going these four years?"

"Worked most of the time, si—worked, here and there. I've handled a Diesel shovel, done rough carpentering, used a transit."

"Where'd you come from last?"

"I've been up at the Rosario mines on the hydraulic pumps."

"Why'd you leave?"

"Fired."

"Drunkenness?"

"Yes, sir."

"I said I don't like the 'sir'! Well, I don't know what I can do for you. I've got to depend on the men under me and I won't hire booze hounds."

"I'm hungry, Mr. Curtis, and I'm a good worker. I don't get drunk very often. I can keep away from it, honest. I'll promise to leave it alone, if you'll give me a chance. I'll—"

"Don't snivel. Here," Curt sighed, "let's see what you look like on paper. Fill this out. Make it snappy. I've only a few minutes to spare."

The man took the application blank, sat down at a table and commenced writing. Curt loaded his pipe while he studied the man's back. He paced for a few moments, forgot to pull on his pipe, had to light it again.

"Lauriano!"

"Yes, sir?"

"Here." He handed the native a bill. "Get me a tin of Briggs and a couple cartons of candy bars. Any kind. Put them aboard the launch and hurry back. I haven't much time this morning."

The candy bars was an old trick of Curt's. It was his theory that the more candy a man consumed the less alcohol his system craved.

The native hesitated, but under the glower Curt gave him, departed in haste. Lauriano Duro hadn't the pertinacity of his compatriot, Vargas. The screen door had no sooner slammed after him than Curt approached the man at the table.

"Stand up."

Collins rose to his feet. Curt looked him steadily in the eye a moment, then reached out and ripped open the shirt. It practically came apart. The man's head jerked up. Curt grunted. "Thought so!" Collins' skin was smooth and healthily tanned—and clean. The flesh was firm and hard, no ribs showed. The man was in the pink of condition, other appearances notwithstanding.

"All right, out with it, and quick. What do you want?"

It was a different voice Collins used in answering, as he tucked the shirt together again and under his belt, a calm enough voice if not assured.

"Just what I asked for, a job."

"Why the disguise?"

A silence greeted this.

"Quick, man, why'd you come to me?"

"I came to see Mr. Mitchell, but got here two late. Mr. McInnis, across the river, told me to see you."

"Why?"

"I want a job."

Curt grunted again. "Collins! Collins! Sure!" The name had suddenly clicked. The man from Henderson's home town—more lately from the Zone! "You wouldn't want to see Bill Henderson, too, would you?"

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

As most cases of poliomyelitis occur toward the end of the summer or the beginning of the autumn weather, many theories as to why it occurs at this time of year are brought forward.

Dr. Barton

Some parents are apt to blame an attack on the summer camps, the public swimming pools, on swimming beaches near industrial plants. There is apparently plenty of evidence pointing toward camps and swimming places as causes.

However, many physicians believe that it is because children are tired from summer play that they are attacked by infantile paralysis as many of them are too young for camps or swimming beaches.

Dr. W. J. McCormick, Toronto, points out in the Medical Record that in all cases investigated it was found that the child ate too much starch food and did not get enough vitamin B1 in his food. In addition to improper diet, it was pointed out that these children had a history of overexertion, or tiredness, previous to the attack.

As there was an epidemic of infantile paralysis in Winnipeg, Canada, in September, 1941, Dr. McCormick was given the opportunity of making a study of the diet and physical exertion in 24 cases in the Isolation hospital.

In the Winnipeg cases investigated, the diet habits showed that the children did not get enough vitamin B1 in their diet, which diet was made up almost entirely of white flour bakery goods, white sugar candy, boiled potatoes, and corn syrup, all of which contain no vitamin B1.

Further, in 22 of the 24 cases investigated there was a definite history of overexertion in the summer activities of youth—swimming, bicycling, dancing, rowing.

Infantile paralysis has been believed due to a tiny invisible organism although it was recently stated that a large organism—streptococcus—may be the cause.

Whatever the cause, in view of Dr. McCormick's investigations reported in Medical World, it would be good sense for parents, as they may not be able to cut down on their children's play, to at least see that they get plenty of rest.

Operations and Complete Relief

When an ailment becomes so serious that an operation is necessary, naturally the patient and his family may feel that after the operation he should be free of symptoms. And this is true in most cases.

There are some ailments in which operation saves life, but because the patient inherits or has acquired certain tendencies, some of the symptoms remain even after the operation. This is particularly true of ulcer of the stomach and of the duodenum (the first part of the small intestine into which the stomach empties). It is called peptic ulcer and these patients are advised to follow the peptic ulcer diet.

Similarly with the removal of the gall bladder. While the great majority of these patients obtain almost complete relief from symptoms there are a certain number who do not and they must follow certain habits of diet and living to keep free of symptoms.

In the American Journal of Digestive Diseases, Fort Wayne, Ind., Drs. R. H. Moser, B. D. Rosenak and R. J. Hasterlik, Indianapolis, report their investigation of 49 patients who returned to the clinic because of the persistence of dyspepsia symptoms following the removal of the gall bladder containing stones. Strange to relate, these physicians found that the symptoms before operation or the condition of the gall bladder found at operation, did not show which patients would have symptoms after the operation and which patients would get complete relief from symptoms.

There was one striking fact observed and this was that when the patient had dyspepsia only during an attack, then relief was likely to follow from the operation.

There are two lessons to be learned from the above investigations. First, even when gall stones are present they may not be entirely to blame for the symptoms, though the gall bladder is better removed. Second, the patient should be told that complete relief is not always obtained by removing gall bladder.

QUESTION BOX

Q. What causes my face to become flushed after eating?

A. May be due to sensitiveness—allergy—to the food eaten. You could have tests made for allergy.

Q. My skin, on both my face and legs, is very dry and gets flaky after bathing. Creams do not help. Is this due to something I eat and what can I do to overcome it?

A. Eating may be a cause, as you suggest, but consult a skin specialist.

JOSEPH SOLD INTO SLAVERY

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 37:23-36.
GOLDEN TEXT—Love envieth not.—I Corinthians 13:4, R.V.

Does it pay to trust God? Is He really concerned about the affairs of men? Does He know the trials and the heartaches of His children? These are the crying questions of today, and they find their answer in God's dealings with men of the past. The story of Joseph has many interesting and instructive phases, but perhaps the most important just now is the truth of our lesson, "The Lord saith . . . them that honor me I will honor."

We first find Joseph as he learns that

I. Jealousy Bears Bitter Fruit (vv. 23-30).

Joseph was his father's favorite and was shown that favoritism in many ways, but it was perhaps most fully expressed in the coat of many colors. This was a luxurious long robe with sleeves, indicating that he was a gentleman and not to do ordinary work of one who wore the sleeveless, knee-length tunic. His brothers deeply resented this evidence of the father's favor.

The dreams which Joseph rather innocently yet perhaps unwisely told to his brothers and his honest report of their wicked behavior fanned the flame of jealousy into a consuming fire which threatened his life. But God, through Joseph's brother Judah and through the opportunity they had to make money out of selling him into slavery, kept him for His own purposes.

May we not learn that the darkest hour may be the time of God's deep interest and directing power. The only way strong men can be developed is by suffering hardness and trial. "God wants iron saints, and since there is no way of imparting iron to the moral nature than by letting His people suffer. He lets them suffer (Heb. 12:11)" (Meyer).

Parents should also learn here the dangers of favoritism among children. It is one of the most destructive of evil influences that can enter a home. It hurts the child who is favored, alienates the other children, and it destroys confidence in parents and respect for their authority. Let's have none of it!

II. Deceit Attempts to Conceal Sin (vv. 31-35).

One of the tragic things about sin is that a wicked act does not stand alone but leads into another sin to cover the first. In the case of Joseph's brethren, their sin against him was covered by deceit. They lied to the father and maintained that lie for years, even though they saw that their aged father was brokenhearted. How callous sin makes the heart of a man!

Yet the very fact that they lied to cover their sin indicates that they were ashamed to admit that they had fallen so low. James Strahan well says: "Evil never dares to be sincere. It always borrows the colors and wears the garb of innocence. It has a whole lifetime of hard labor in keeping up appearances. Hypocrisy is the tribute which all bad men have to pay to the ideal of goodness."

III. God Overrules Evil for Good (v. 36).

It was God's plan that Joseph should come to his greatest usefulness in his place of authority in Egypt, so He directed the sale of the young slave into the home of Potiphar, a leading officer of Pharaoh.

The story of Joseph's life in Potiphar's house is one of unusual interest. Faithfulness to duty, loyalty to God and truth led to shifting experiences of imprisonment and of favor, but ultimately he came out into the place of leadership in the government of Egypt. In this place God marvelously blessed and used him.

Since the matter of the relation of men to government is so much before us these days, it will be well to note that Scripture holds a very exalted view of the public servant. Paul says we are to "be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God" (Rom. 13:1). The Bible clearly teaches that every governmental agency and every public servant, from the policeman on the beat to the President in the White House, is only permitted to exercise authority over his fellowmen because God has ordained that there should be such government. Clear it is that every right-thinking official of state and nation should be humble, teachable, discreet, and wise in the exercise of his power, and God-fearing in the discharge of his responsibility.

Our lesson provides unusual opportunity for the teaching of proper family relationships, the right attitude toward government, as well as the blessed assurance and confidence which we may have who have intrusted our lives into the hands of God.

NEW EFFECTIVE HAY FEVER RELIEF

Hay fever, which annually causes more sneezes, more inflamed noses and more red, streaming eyes than any other scourge, may have its final big fling this September, all because a Pennsylvania electrical engineer was served a dish of corn meal mush which was entirely too salty.

The engineer, sneezing, and with all other hay fever manifestations, stopped at a hotel where he was served a dish of mush which he considered sending back as it was much too salty. Finally he ate it, however; the hay fever attack lessened, ultimately ceased. Next day he had three meals, all oversalted, and experienced his most comfortable time in years in the "hay fever season."

His analytical mind quickly grasped the possibility that the saline substance in his food was responsible for his relief.

About this time, Dr. E. E. Selleck, a graduate of Columbia University, met the engineer, made notes, and when he returned to his home, began experiments. Today Dr. Selleck declares he has found a certain means of relief for hay fever and is supported in his contention by other medical experts, and a nationally known chemical manufacturing concern, the Hollings-Smith Company, at Orangeburg, New York, has taken over making the remedy, which is called Nakamo Bell.

Describing the experiments, Dr. Selleck said, "After I was sure I had found a means of quickly relieving hay fever through the chloride group, I tested it in the most practical way I knew. I held a three day clinic, to which many hay fever sufferers responded, from ages ranging from 10 to 60 years. Each person was given two tablets with a little water. Some relief came to all within ten minutes. Reports on these cases during the ensuing weeks showed practically a complete cessation of symptoms."

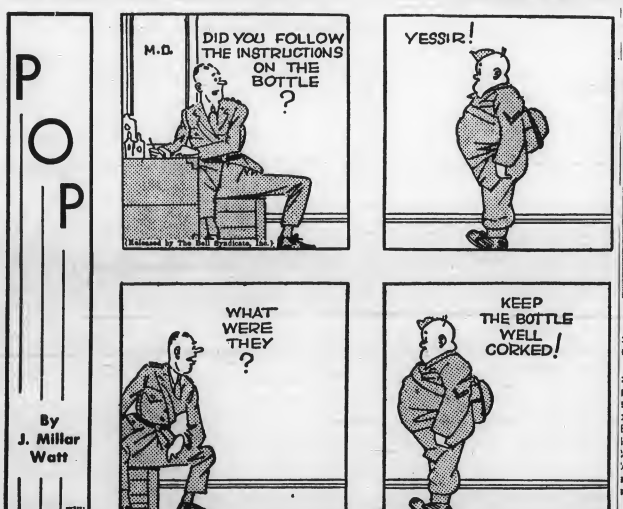
That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.



Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass of harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

TREAT 'EM ROUGH

"Do you think that feller will marry your daughter?"

"From the way she treats 'em, I'd think she intended to marry every man that calls on her."

By GRANTLAND RICE

THIS seems to be a good spot in which to pay additional tribute to a fellow by the name of Carl Owen Hubbell, a pitcher for Mel Ott's New York Giants.

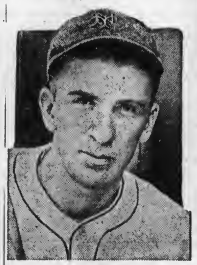
After taking in all the testimony available from Mel Ott, his fellow Giants and his opponents from the National and American league, Carl Hubbell comes closer to being: "The perfect ball player" than any one we've ever known.

There is, of course, no such word as "perfection" in the human layout. It is the closest approach to perfection that one must consider.

"Here is what Carl Hubbell has," Mel Ott told me. "Just check against it—"

"Skill, courage, brains, modesty, humility, loyalty, stamina, the will to win, concentration, physical fitness—100 per cent of which qualifies he has at every start."

This happens to be a fair collection of worthwhile ingredients in an age where such features as "modesty," "humility," "loyalty," "stamina" and "concentration" are often well below par.



Skill, courage and brains combined in one system are rare enough.

But these qualities are usually accompanied by arrogance, over-confidence, physical unfitness and spotty concentration.

About Carl Hubbell

Lon Warneke, the tobacco chewer from Mt. Ida, Ark., one of the best pitchers in the game, said recently that Hubbell was the greatest pitcher he had ever seen.

"That tells only half the story," Mel Ott said. "Carl Hubbell is the most remarkable man I've ever known in baseball."

"When he started this season with the Giants back in April he was 39 years old. He had been a star pitcher for 20 years. We kicked away one game after another back of him. He never had a complaint. He had lost six of his first seven starts. He took all the blame. But in place of losing heart he kept working just as hard and then won his next six straight starts."

"It doesn't make any difference how many errors you make back of Carl. He takes the blame. He never has an alibi or an excuse. It took him five years through seven different towns to reach the Giants in 1928, but this never slowed him down. He has been their star ever since he arrived."

"Carl has won 19 games in a row. He fanned five of the greatest hitters the American league ever knew in succession. He has won four of his six World Series starts. He won 116 games in five years for the Giants, a remarkable record with only a fair hitting ball club. But that's only a small part of the real Carl Hubbell."

Still Learning

"Hubbell, after 20 years, is still learning. When he sits on the bench he watches every batter that comes to the plate. He watches every pitcher to see just what he has. He works just as hard when he isn't pitching as he does in the box. The greatest pitcher of them all, he takes nothing for granted. During a game, even when he is on the bench, he overlooks nothing. He rarely says a word.

"His whole heart and soul are in that ball game—and that's after 20 years of competition. He is just as keen to win now—I think even keener—than he was at his prime.

"And through it all he is the most modest man I ever knew. If Carl won 40 consecutive games, if he broke every pitching record, he would still be the same quiet, loyal, modest fellow trying to learn—and giving all the credit to the team."

I talked with several of the Giants about Hubbell.

"He is under one tough handicap," a Giant veteran said, "When Carl pitches we all are so keen to win for him that we tighten up. We know there's no one like him. We'd break a leg and an arm to win for him. So at times we get over anxious, try too hard, and lose games he should have won. But you can make six errors back of Hub and you'll never hear a squawk. When he loses he is the one who takes the blame. When he wins—it's the team that did it."

Producing Own Home Beef Aids War Plan

500-Pound Calf at Ten Month Age Is Suggestion

Producing beef for home use is a real contribution to the wartime program. If some families are to have meat they must produce it, says Roy W. Snyder, animal industries specialist of the Texas A. and M. College Extension service.

Even the nondescript, pot-bellied, small, rough-haired Jersey type calf can be made into satisfactory beef for family use. It needs to be fed a fattening ration for four to six months before being killed. Feeding not only makes more beef, but improves the quality to an almost unbelievable degree.

If a milk-pen calf is available it should be started on feed at once. Use the feeds grown on the farm. It may take 1,200 pounds of corn or milo, 1,200 pounds of hay and two sacks of cottonseed meal for the average inexperienced feeder to develop a calf into good edible beef, but the feed will be used to good advantage.

Feeding the calf until it weighs at least 500 pounds when it is ten months old, is a good mark to shoot

From the way the picture looks, little Amy Fry, Montgomery county, Maryland, has figuratively and actually taken this young calf under her protective wing. It seems that Amy is going to make an excellent 4-H-er when she gets a little bigger.

at. Feed it all it will eat so that it will put on fat as it grows.

A good practice is to feed grain as soon as the calf will eat it. Oats is best to get a young calf on feed, but if it is not available, feed corn, milo or some other grains.

When the calf receives less milk later in the feeding period, add cottonseed meal or cake to the grain at the rate of one pound of meal to five pounds of grain.

Drug Plants

Defense experts say that this country would be able to raise its own supply of drugs if the 60 medicinal plants now imported were planted here. All of the plants will grow here and the only drawback is the large amount of hand labor required.

Anise is grown commercially in Rhode Island. Its aromatic seeds are used for medicine, in baking and for flavoring confectionery. Oil is distilled from the seed which is used medicinally, in cordials and for flavoring in various beverages.

Belladonna has been cultivated in California, Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. When the leaves and roots are dried, they yield a drug which commanded high prices during the World war, but interest in this crop recently has declined.

In certain localities in New England and the West, Lovage is grown. Its roots are used in the drug trade, while the seeds are used for flavoring confectionery.

Muck lands of southern Michigan and northern Indiana are used for growing peppermint. About 500,000 pounds are produced annually in this country.

Stigmas of the saffron flowers are used in cookery, for coloring confectionery and to some extent in medicine. It is grown as a small garden crop in Pennsylvania.

Bark Valuable

Bark from certain trees is valuable and can be sold.

Two companies in the Buffalo, N. Y., area buy the bark from hemlock and rock oak, while one firm in Fulton county, New York, buys alder bark.

White ash logs are bringing top prices now for uses in the army, navy, and agriculture. The buyers want logs free from crooks and knots, and may take lengths as short as four feet.

...But Are They?

Off they go! New books... new clothes... but what about eyesight protection? Eighty-seven per cent of all that children learn they absorb through their eyes. Their ability to fill useful jobs and win advancement in later life depends to a large extent upon their eyesight. So don't take a chance. Give your children the advantage of good light for easier seeing when they play or study at home. Good light means better grades now and better jobs later.

Two Ways to Assure Better Light for Home Study

Jimmy's eyes will relax when you put an I. E. S. Study Lamp with 100-watt bulb on his table. Its white glass diffusing bowl sifts out harmful glare. Its wide, white-lined shade spreads soft, generous light evenly over a broad area. Why not let us send one out for a free trial today?

When Jimmy and Mary study at the dining room table, you can help them sail through their work with a plastic adaptor equipped with a 150-watt bulb. Easy to install, it screws into existing socket like an ordinary light bulb. Provides abundant eye-easy light, yet costs surprisingly little.

LOCAL PEOPLE GRADUATE AT EASTERN

Six Boone Countyteachers were awarded the degree of Batchelor of Science at the Commencement Exercises of Eastern Ky. State College held in August. They were Zayda Kendall Clare, Walton; Ruth Kottmeyer Huey, Constance; Paul Alvin Robinson, Walton; Dorothy May McHenry, Florence; Mary Eggleston Humphrey, Hebron, and Lawrence Lewis Rodamer, Consance.

Out of a class of 89, four were graduated with distinction. Of these four, two, Dorothy McHenry and Lawrence Rodamer were from Boone County.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION AT SUGAR CREEK

Mrs. Margaret Scudder was pleasantly reminded of her birthday Sunday morning(when she returned home from Bible School to find that practically the whole congregation had followed her with well-filled baskets of delectable edibles.

Mr. and Mrs. Scudder are general favorites at Sugar Creek, where they seldom fail to be present when the church doors are open. Mrs. Scudder's father, Danlel Hon, erected the building and she was reared and has spent all her life in this community serving this one church,—but holdon Have we said how long?

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Sam Story, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hendrix, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Reffett, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Dance, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Deitz, Mr. Lloyd Hon and family, and Mesdames Lillie Hon, Grover Clifton, Emma Wallick, and Mr. Elijah Hon.

Pleasant conversation, singing and laughter were the order of the day, but "Poke" Hendrix thought modesty was going too far when Joe Reffett politely refused the fourth big piece of watermelon.

Mr. Scudder claimed he was surprised too but we judged by the fish, ice cream and melons that he had "smelt a mouse."

The writer personally wishes "Mis. Mag" many happy returns or the day. E.S.W.

JONES FAMILY REUNION

On Sunday, Sept. 13th, the John L. Jones family held their last reunion at the old home farm down on the Ohio River a mile and a half below Big Bone Springs, Ky., where John L. Jones, Jr., Now resides. Mr. Jones, Sr., having passed away a year ago last May, Mrs. Jones has sold the farm to the sons of Richard Swenke, and will give possession in February when the crops have been disposed of.

It had been the custom during the lifetime of Mr. Jones to hold an annual reunion on or near his birthday. However last year they did not have the reunion at the farm, but due to the sale of the farm they decided to have a final one this year. The relatives on all sides and lots of friends are always invited.

A basket dinner was enjoyed, and all good foods in season were in abundance. There seemed to be no rationing, there were even home-made cakes,and iced tea with sugar in it. Everyone was filled to capacity.

Enjoying this memorable occasion were Mrs. John L. Jones, Sr., and Mrs. Maude Asbury, of Florence; Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Jones and Mrs. Geo. W. Shearer, of Erlanger; Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Jones and Doneld Herring, Mr. James Monroe and Victor Williams, of Aurora and Rising Sun, Ind; Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Stephens, of Silverton, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. John W. Aylor, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Aylor, Jane Aylor, Carra Lee Huey, and Duane Aylor, of Petersburg; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Moore and Melvin Moore, Jr., of East Bend; Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Asbury and Carol Ann,of Hebron; Mr. Raymond McMillan, Miss Amelia B. Rell, of Cincinnati; Mrs. Helen J. Herring,of Covington; a friend from Ft. Thomas; Mrs. Sallie R. Miller and Emma Jane, of Walton; Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Carroll, Kathryn, Bertha Mae, Robert W., and M. C. of Landing, and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Jones, Jr.

Mrs. John Dowd, who has been very ill at her home on McCollum Road, is very much improved at this time.

We are glad to see Ambrose Powers, who has been so very ill at the hospital all summer, is now able to be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ervin entertained recently for their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence B. Hester and children, Mrs. Anna Laura Behle and children, Mr. and Mrs. Howard G. Webser and children, all of Covington, and Jewell McHendrick, of North Carolina.

Mr. and MMrs. James Metcalf, Mrs. Allie McElray, Mrs. Wiboley Mires have returned from a trip through Indiana and Michigan.

Everyone is invited to come hear this interesting speaker.

TENT MEETING AT GARDNERSVILLE

Rev. Henry W. Patterson, an evangelist, who lives on a farm near Gardnersville, has erected a large tent in his side yard and is holding a revival there. Assisting Rev. Patterson in his endeavor are five young men from God's Bible School, Cincinnati, Ohlo, who sing and play various instruments,including the piano, guitar, trombone, saxophone a cornet and others. And though we do not have their names,the young men are young preachers and take turns in conducting the services. Rev. Bozo is also assisting the Rev. Patterson.

A good attendance is being enjoyed and anyone who enjoys a good old fashioned tent revival will do well to attend these services. A number from Walton and Crittenden were in attendance on Saturday night. The servicees do not begin until 8:00 central time.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION WEEK

The week of September 27th through October 4th has been set aside as Religious Education Week and Churches and Sunday schools throughout the nation will cooperate. In a letter to Rev. Roy G. Ross, General Secretary of the International Council of Religious Education, President Rooseyelt endorsed the 1942 observance of the Week. Governor Keen Johnson, of Kentucky, also endorsed the observance, aside the above mentioned period as Religious Education Week.

ORIE S. WARE NAMED U. S. COMMISSIONER

Orie S. Ware, prominent Covington attorney and former congressman, was appointed Monday by Judge Church Ford of the United States Court to serve as United States Commissioner with headquarters in that city. Ware succeeds his son, William O. Ware, who resigned t obecome attorney for the U. S. Army Engineers.

Commissioner Ware also has held the position of Covington postmaster and commonwealth attorney of Kenton County and is prominent in Masonic circles.

FOOD SHOWER FOR NEW PASTOR

On Friday evening the members of the Methodist church gave their new pastor, Rev. C. G. Dearing, and his family, "surprise" pantry shower and an informal reception. Sometime was spent in getting acquainted,later a season of spirited hymn-singing led by Mrs. F. E. Bedinger and Mrs. Lucille Hudson,pianist, was enjoyed by both young and old. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

Participating in this event were Mrs. J. F. Jockey, Mr. and Mrs. Reamy Simpson and Geraldine; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Pruett, Beverly, Jim and Tom; Mr. and Mrs. Clay Myers, Marle and Donnie; Mr. and Mrs. John C. Bedinger; Mrs. Millicent Waterhouse; Rev. and Mrs. D. E. Bedinger; Mrs. Faye Connor; Mrs. Hattie E. Metcalfe; Mrs. Lillie Young; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Jones and Dennie; Mrs. Emma Vest; Mr. Sam Hudson; Mrs. F. E. Bedinger; Mr. and Mrs. Horace Simpson; Mrs. W. O. Rouse; Mr. C. C. Sleet, Miss Rebecca Sleet; Mrs. Sallie R. Miller, Miss Emma Jane Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Carlisle; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Marshall; and the honored family, Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearing, Ruth and Louise.

The Rev. Dearing and family received a nice donation of fruits, vegetables, canned goods, preserves, flour, lard, chickens,and even some home-made bread and butter,as well as cash. One staple usually present at such affairs was noticably missing, sugar.

SOW COVER CROPS NOW

Farmers are urged to seed all 1942 cultivatel land to small grain and grass at the earliest possible date, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Early seeded grass and cover crops are a sure sign of good farming.

Grain feed and hay represent the greatest item of cost in producing milk, beef, lamb. pork or even poultry. Good early sown cover crops will save farmers $7.00 to $15.00 per acre on the winter and early spring feed bill. The value to the land represents approximately that much more.

Certified Balbo Rye, costing around $1.75 a bushel, is the most hearty and heavy yielding winter crop. Certified Kentucky No. 1 Barley, at around $1.50 per bushel, on good ground is excellent and should yield approximately as many bushels of grain feed next year as would corn and cost less in labor and expense. Thorne wheat is the best of the wheat varieties, and Fulwin Winter oats, at around $1.25 per bushel, is the best of the winter oats.

Vetch with small grain should be sown on all land that will be cultivated next year. Vetch has given the largest increased crop yield and most soil improvement crops. The cheapest source of seed of all the witer legumes or cover is through the County AAA office at $11.86 per hundred as Grant of Aid. Grant of Aid means no cash payment at the time of receiving seed. The cost is deducted from the AAA benefit payments at the end of the year. All vetch seed should be inoculated.

Be a good farmer in 1942 and 1943. Help meet the war emergency with efficiency in production through good winter cover crops. Now is the ime to seed cover crops. All grasses and a few of the legumes.

Verona Baptist S. S. Picnic

The Baptist Sunday School of Vernoa will have its annual picnic next Saturday in the yard of the old church on the hill. We hope all members who possibly can will come and enjoy this outing. Games and contests will be featured. Let's meet about 10:30.

A CORRECTION

We are very sorry a line of type was omitted in the report of the Literary Club last week, in which the name of the guest speaker was omitted. The guest speaker, Miss Rebecca Sleet, gave a most interesting discussion on the "Historical Spots of Kentucky."

NO RESTRICTIONS ON SHOES MANUFACTURED

Covington shoe merchants have been informed by the War Production Board that no restrictions have been placed on the total number of shoes to be manufactured. That would seem to mean there will be shoes for everybody.

However, some of those fancy shoes, including the two-tones, have been ordered discontinued by the manufacturers. To save leather, the variety of colors and styles have been reduced for next spring and summer wear. Colors have been limited to the following: Black, white, tuft tan, army russett, town brown, and blue.

The War Production Board has requested shoe retailers "to discourage extra-pair sales to consumers and to discourage promotion to influence consumers to buy unneeded pairs of shoes."

Except for shoes worn in agricultural or industrial work, double soles will not be permitted. Designers are permitted to originate new kinds of practical soles and create new fashions for next spring and summer, which will save scarce materials and yet have eye appeal. The great demand for sole leather by the armed forces is the limiting factor in shoe production.

NOTICE

There will be services at the Richwood Presbyterian church Sunday, Sept. 20th. A student minister from the Louisville Seminary will have charge of the services at 11:00 A. M. and 8:00 P. M. EWT.

B. F. Bedinger.

Rev. Russell Cross leaves this week for Conway, Ark., where he has accepted a call t othe Presbyterian church. His many friends in this community will miss his helpful services, but wish for him sucess in his new field.

FEATURES IN THIS ISSUE

In an exclusive story in our Washington Digest column today, Baukhage relates how Hitler himself wrecked Nazi plans for blowing up bridges, electric light and power plants, munitions and other war works in this country.

While many people listen to radio newscasts and read the latest news in daily papers, the great majority prefer a summary of the most important happenings. Therefore, the editor provides a News Analysis for readers of the Advertiser each week.

With the days becoming shorter, there will be more time devoted to reading the Advertiser. We commend our serial story to those who are not enjoying it at this time.

Peter B. Peeve, S'Matter Pop, and Pop are among the most popular comics that can be obtained by weekly newspapers.You will get the most fun out of them by following them each week.

The inside story of the Aleutians is told today by Drew Pearson in the Merry-Go-Round column. It's good information.

In the Household News column today, Lynn Chambers gives several good recipes for baking cookies. These are well worth saving for reference purposes. Her suggestions on preserving foods are also good and timely.

Good health is important at al times, especially when we are engaged in War. Dr. Barton's health column covers at least two subjects for our readers. There is a Question Box too, that will prove interesting.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

FDR Plans Nationwide Gas Rationing With 35-Mile Speed Limit for U. S.; Double-Time Pay Banned for Duration; British Renew Madagascar Occupation

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

When the U. S. marines accomplished their history-making offensive in the Solomon islands, amphibian tractors churned South Seas water to carry them to their first attack to win back Jap-held territory since the start of the war. The tractor is in the background as these marines dug in at the beach soon after the battle's opening. The area was soon cleared of the enemy.

GAS RATIONING:
President Acts

For weeks silvery-haired Bernard M. Baruch and co-members of the President's special rubber committee had labored over the problem of what to do about the nation's steadily diminishing rubber supply.

When the committee handed Mr. Roosevelt its report, the President was ready for action.

First, he announced that "as rapidly as arrangements can be made" he would put into effect a set of recommendations submitted by the committee, including nation-wide gasoline rationing and drastic restrictions on civilian motoring.

Made public in the President's announcement were additional steps recommended by the committee which included:

A 35-mile speed limit for passenger cars and trucks; an average annual mileage of 5,000 miles per car, permitted only for "necessary driving"; release of more rubber to the public for recapping old tires to maintain necessary civilian driving; imposition of gasoline rationing nationally on the basis of 5,000 miles per year per car; compulsory periodic tire inspections; voluntary tire conservation pending establishment of gas rationing.

Submitted with the committee's recommendations was the blunt declaration that rubber conservation was now a matter of "discomfort or defeat."

MADAGASCAR:
'Full Occupation'

Even as communiques revealed that the British had opened a general offensive against the west coast of Vichy-held Madagascar, the state department in Washington announced that Great Britain with the full approval of the United States had decided to undertake "further military operations" in the Madagascar area.

British action was taken to eliminate reported refueling of Jap submarines in secret harbors and Nazi espionage in connivance with Vichy agents.

Significant of the close military collaboration between Britain and the United States and their indifference to Vichy France opposition, the state department announcement declared:

"The full military occupation of Madagascar by British forces will not only contribute to the successful conduct of the war against the Axis forces, but will be in the interest of the United Nations."

DOUBLE-TIME PAY:
Curbed by FDR

"Penalty double time" pay for millions of industrial workers was abolished for the duration of the war when President Roosevelt signed an executive order banning the practice for Sundays, Saturdays and holidays.

The President's action thus invalidated contracts in which employers were required to pay workers double time for work on Saturdays or holidays, even though these days fell within the regular five-day work week.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had taken the step in line with an understanding previously arrived at with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Philip Murray, president of the CIO.

The order was signed at almost the final hour of a deadline set by the United Automobile Workers union, of the CIO. The UAW which had voluntarily surrendered such double time had protested that rival organizations had not made the same sacrifice. Enactment of the order thus eliminated a possible labor conflict.

RUSSIAN FRONT:
Nazis Rule Air

The gloom of Russia's military predicament was darkened when correspondents in Moscow were permitted to cable the news that the German air force had secured virtually undisputed sway over the beleaguered city of Stalingrad, key industrial and communications center of the Volga area. Added to this pessimistic report was the news that additional "populated places" adjacent to Stalingrad had been lost by the Russians.

With Nazi Marshal Fedor von Bock hurling massive armored and infantry forces into a frontal drive against the city, it was only by the stubbornest resistance that the Reds were able to continue their formula of "fall back and keep fighting." The only comforting aspect was that the Nazis were paying costly prices in men and equipment for every foot gained.

In the Caucasus area the news had likewise been adverse, for the Russian high command acknowledged that fighting had reached the "outskirts" of Novorossisk, last remaining naval stronghold on the Black sea.

VOTES:
For Armed Forces

Wherever they are serving Uncle Sam on the far-flung war front, more than 4,000,000 men and women in the nation's land and naval forces were given the right to vote, in the coming November elections and in subsequent elections until the end of the war, when the house of representatives approved legislation extending the ballot to absentee members of the army and navy.

The house's action set a new precedent, for never before in time of war had the armed forces been able to vote away from their home districts.

Affected by the new law was every citizen serving in the army or navy, including members of the Army Nurse corps, the Navy Nurse corps, the Women's Navy reserve, and the Women's Army Auxiliary corps.

SOUTH PACIFIC:
Japs Persistent

Australia felt again the chilling threat of a Japanese approach, as Nipponese and Allied armies had fought for control of the Port Moresby area—only 375 miles from the northeast tip of the Australian continent.

In a drive which had started late in August from the Kadoka area, north of the Owen Stanley mountains, the Japs by infiltration and flanking methods against the Australian defenders had pushed southward through the highest pass in the range toward their coveted goal.

Meanwhile, in answer to General MacArthur's plea that each American kill one Japanese apiece, Yankee forces resumed the offensive in the Solomon islands. A communique indicated that the positions originally seized by the American marines had become so well established that they could now be used as a springboard for delivering further hard blows at the enemy.

BRIEFS:

LONDON: Sir James Grigg, secretary of state for war reported to the house of commons that up to the present date, the government had been notified that 77,190 British war prisoners were in Axis hands. He said that figures did not include prisoners taken in Malaya or most of the other Far Eastern theaters. The number of these had not been determined.

LUXEMBOURG:
Defies the Nazis

Plucky Luxembourgers gave the lie to Nazi propaganda that they were voluntarily acquiring German citizenship and entering the enemy armed forces, by staging a general strike—the first in a German-occupied country.

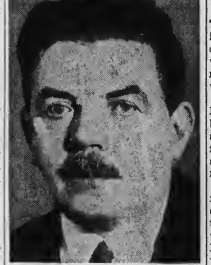
The pint-sized duchy, which has a population of but 269,913, is nevertheless one of the world's most important steel producing regions. The exiled Luxembourg ministry in London reported that German authorities had declared a state of emergency and threatened striking workers with death.

Repressive measures were imposed throughout Luxembourg when the strike which started at Schifflingeh, spread to other towns. Sabotage against railroads in the tiny country was reported widespread, with workers putting equipment out of order.

TRUCKS AND TAXIS:
Face U. S. Control

The operation of 5,000,000 commercial motor trucks, 150,000 busses and 50,000 taxi cabs will be placed under government control by November 15 as a measure to conserve transportation facilities for war purposes, it was announced by Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation. Passenger cars and motorcycles were exempted from the new regulations.

The ODT's order directed operators of commercial vehicles to obtain a "certificate of war necessity" to obtain fuel, tires, tubes and accessories.



Mr. Eastman said the certificates for commercial vehicles would require a tire check every 5,000 miles, or every 60 days, whichever occurs first, to assure proper inflation and repairs. Certificates, he indicated, will be issued to all types of trucks, vehicles built primarily for transporting property and passengers and others available for public rental, such as ambulances and hearses.

The objective, he said, is to limit their use to operations necessary to the war effort, or to the essential domestic economy.

FRANCE:
Petain Is Warned

Edouard Herriot is one Frenchman not afraid to raise his voice in blunt opposition to Vichy. Jules Jeanneney is another. Both command respect in Unoccupied France, for Herriot is mayor of Lyons and a former premier and Jeanneney a former cabinet member. Both were leaders of the last parliament of the Third Republic.

Thus Frenchmen everywhere listened when these two delivered a solemn warning to Marshal Petain and Pierre Laval that France may suffer "convulsions" if the Vichy government attempts to draw the nation "into war against our Allies."

EDOUARD HERRIOT

" . . . Convulsions will follow."

In an unprecedented letter indicting the present regime, Herriot and Jeanneney implied that despite the French defeat in June, 1940, and the armistice with Germany and despite the rise of Petain and Laval, they still consider France bound by the treaties of alliance with which she entered the war.

TANKS VS. PLANES:
U. S. Passes Axis

Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war, had good news for the nation when he announced in Cleveland that American tank production had reached "an impressive figure" and that Uncle Sam was now turning out more planes than Germany, Japan and Italy combined.

Answering criticism of American war material, Patterson said that in speed, range, toughness of armor and hitting power, the U. S. medium tank, either the M-3 or the M-4, "is superior to the best German tank," as "proved in combat in Egypt."

Combat records, he declared, also had proved the Curtiss P-40 better than the Jap Zero planes.

SEA SAGA:
Wakefield Rescue

A grim drama of the sea, abounding in tales of heroism was unfolded when survivors of the burned naval transport Wakefield were landed at an Atlantic coast port.

Formerly known as the liner Manhattan, one-time queen of the U. S. merchant fleet, the Wakefield had been severely damaged by fire, but more than 1,600 passengers and crew members had been removed without loss of life.

'INSIDE' ON ALEUTIANS

The inside story can now be told of why the Japs were able to land in the Aleutian islands and bomb the U. S. naval base at Dutch Harbor with so little opposition. As with most things in this war, the problem goes back to lack of foresight, and also, to some extent, lack of army-navy co-operation.

Not generally known is the fact that the navy in September, 1941, some two months before Pearl Harbor, refused to let the army build an air base on Umnak island to guard the navy's Dutch Harbor base.

What happened was that Senator Brewster of Maine, a member of the Truman committee and of the naval affairs committee, flew to Alaska last September with Brig. Gen. Arthur Wilson to ascertain whether Alaska needed further fortifications. At Kodiak they met Brig. Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, commander of the army's forces, whose father, a famous Civil war commander, once helped to pay Ulysses S. Grant's way home from West Point and later surrendered to Grant in Tennessee.

General Buckner wanted to go on from Kodiak to Dutch Harbor with Senator Brewster, and although the navy was willing to supply an amphibian plane to the senator, they balked at having General Buckner go along, referred to him as a "hitch-hiker."

Finally, however, the party, including General Buckner, went on to Dutch Harbor and located an excellent site for a flying field on Umnak island. Immediately upon their return, Senator Brewster arranged for a senate appropriation to build an air base at Umnak, while the war department prepared to proceed.

Navy Says No.

The war department also notified the navy of its move, since the army is charged with protecting the shore establishments of the navy. A few weeks later, however, word came back from the navy that it did not want the army to build an air base on Umnak island to protect Dutch Harbor.

When senators asked Vice Admiral Frederick J. Horne why, he replied: "The navy can protect Dutch Harbor."

This was in late September. Two months later, after Pearl Harbor, the navy frantically demanded an air base to protect Dutch Harbor, but it had to be started during the snow and ice of an Alaskan winter. Therefore the date of completion was July, 1942.

Probably the Japs knew this date. They have had fishing vessels cruising through the Aleutians off and on for some time. At any rate it was the first in June, one month before the Umnak air base was finished, that the Japs struck.

And when they bombed Dutch Harbor, the navy's flying patrol boats there were helpless. Heavy and slow, they lacked protection from the army's fast pursuit planes, so speedy Jap Zero fighters made mincemeat of them.

Lack of a nearby army air base from which fighters and bombers could protect the rest of the Aleutians undoubtedly contributed also to the ease with which the Japs took Kiska harbor and the western Aleutians.

PERSISTENT LEON

The army doesn't seem to think that hard-hitting Leon Henderson, price-fixing boss of the OPA, is lethargic about wanting to put price ceilings on tanks, guns, trucks and other army material for which it is now paying top prices.

In a knock-down, drag-out session in the office of mild-mannered Undersecretary of War Patterson, Henderson banged on the table, told Patterson the army was paying too much, that he demanded the power to put price ceilings on army supplies.

"I'm going to keep after you on this till I get it," Henderson atormed. "When I was younger and I was courting a girl, I kept after her until I got her. And that's what's going to happen now."

CAPITAL CHAFF

¶ Frank Grillo, president of the United Rubber Workers, is one man who doesn't believe that labor leaders at home are more necessary than fighters at the front. He has resigned from the Rubber Workers and asked for his old job back in the army—not a cellophane commission (you can see through it but it protects from the draft). He wants to be a sergeant.

¶ The navy has wisely drafted some of J. Edgar Hoover's FBI sleuths to help train naval intelligence officers. They are doing a bang-up job.

¶ The Truman committee has persuaded the army to lend it Brig. Gen. Frank Lowe, a Maine Republican, as its executive officer.

¶ On her way from Hollywood to Washington to participate in the treasury's big bond show, demure Ann Rutherford sold several hundred dollars worth of bonds at each station stop. At Albuquerque one man handed her $1,000 in cash.

Nazi Break With Russia Foiled Sabotage in U. S.

Hitler Held Responsible for Wrecking Germany's Elaborate Plans to Blow Up Vital Points in U. S.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

A mystery that has perplexed many laymen and some officials in Wsshington with respect to the manner in which the government has forestalled a mammoth Nazi plan for sabotaging American industry can now be explained. There will be no official confirmation of the explanation but it comes to me from what are frequently described as "informed sources"—which really means "a man who has never lied to me so far."

In a sentence: The man who wrecked elaborate Nazi plans for blowing up munitions plants, railway terminals, bridges, electric light and power plants in the United States was none other than Adolf Schikelgruber, Hitler himself.

He did it when he tossed the Ribbentrop-Molotov pact out of the window just after Nazi armies had launched their surprise drive on Russia.

To understand what a job the fuehrer did for himself we must remember that for years, with the methodical care of the German mind, a detailed plan had been worked out for the sabotage of American industry. Even during the last war there were some terrible and effective pieces of sabotage accomplished by a comparatively untrained and unregimented crowd of German spies. The famous Black Tom explosion which wrecked the huge New Jersey plant not far from New York city, was an example. An international mixed claims commission finally awarded huge damages to the United States for that act.

But the Nazis began where the kaiser left off. They had schools for the training of saboteurs especially selected from Germans who had lived in the United States and were lured back to Germany and either bribed or intimidated into undertaking the work of destruction in territory with which they had become familiar.

Details of this training came out in the secret testimony in the recent trial of the Nazi saboteurs in Washington. But much of it was ancient history to the department of justice. And the way the advance information came into the hands of our intelligence officers was this:

While the Germans had their pact of friendship with Russia, Nazi agents were busy making friends with Communists all over the world in the hope that they could use them for subversive activities. The Communists naturally did not turn a deaf ear and Hitler's agents told all.

Then came the double cross, Germany attacked Russia, and Communist and Nazi who had always hated each other thoroughly gave vent to their real feelings. The plans which the Nazis had confided to the Communists were turned over to the governments of the United Nations.

The United States also had been picking up a little information about the German sabotage methods in other ways—such as by planting a man or two in the German Gestapo.

These men learned, from one source or another, that the Germans had hired safe crackers in this country to steal the blue prints of factories from insurance companies, which always demand a detailed description and plan of all buildings they insure. The plans were stolen, photographed and returned. That is one example. Many other little devious tricks and enterprises were revealed by dint of our own investigators, and with the help of the Communists who had complete and exhaustive data, the Federal Bureau of Investigation was able to take the necessary steps to break up the complicated plots and counter-plots to wreck American industry. So far there have been very few, if any, major cases which have been branded as sabotage in this country, thanks to Mr. Hitler.

On Pronunciation

You may not know it, but nobody thinks broadcasters know how to pronounce the names of foreign places. Some write in and tell us about it and even the news services try to help us. When an item comes over the news ticker about Rzhev or Chumbly they obligingly put the pronunciation in brackets.

The other day the news services had something to say about disturbances in Lyons, France. Now I've been hearing about Lyons all my life and I know perfectly well that Lyons is pronounced like two lions in the zoo. I also know that the same city is spelled by the French without the "s."—Lyon—and I've visited that ancient and attractive city and I know how the French pronounce it.

So when the ticker said "Lyons (pronounced Lee-on)" I got the same feeling as when I once heard two Frenchmen disputing whether Washington was called "Vashinjton" or "Vassington."

Lyon, if you want to be pedantic, is not pronounced "Lee-on" or anything like it. If you want to pronounce it the French way, you'll have to study French. As for me, I'll go on saying Lyons, and I'll continue to say Paris—not "Pah-ree," and Rome, and Vienna and The Hague and Cologne and Athens, although I know that the natives don't call any of those cities by those names.

Notes From a Broadcaster's Diary

Is the government farm-conscious? It is. I am going to risk a gentle indiscretion and quote a suggestion from a high government source to broadcasters. It is part of an appeal to encourage enlistment in our merchant marine that must have one hundred thousand skilled workers for the shipyards in 1942; must have 120,000 experienced seamen. Here is the suggestion:

"Take care to specify that the Merchant Marine does not want men engaged in farming or war production work. They do their share now. Any change would bring more harm than good. It does, however, want the young, the strong, the adventurous for seagoing jobs, and the skilled capable workers for the shipyards . . ."

And the government wants the skilled farmer to stay on the farm where he is: Food will win the war and write the peace.

The Whole Truth

The Nazi regime is not usually credited with doing much to encourage truth. Hitler himself spends many paragraphs in "Mein Kampf" telling about the importance of being a good liar. But, strange as it may seem, according to a tale that is whispered behind the closed doors of state department offices, the Nazis have struck a blow for veriy. Here is the tale which may never appear in the official communiques of our ministry of foreign relations.

When Germany declared war on the United States last December, after Pearl Harbor, there were still several hundred Americans, men and women, living in Paris. Many of them had lived there for 20 years, getting their American passports renewed periodically. Some of the ladies, it seems, took advantage of these periodical renewals to lop a couple of years off their age now and again.

And who would grudge the ladies a few years stolen from the calendar, especially in Paris? But the gentle prevarication bounced back with a vengeance. For when the Nazis announced that women under 60 would be interned in concentration camps, while older women would be allowed to remain at liberty, a certain number of American women suddenly discovered that the age shown on their passport was erroneous. They hurried to the Swiss consulate, which had charge of American interests, and swore out affidavits to the effect that they were not, say, 45, but 62.

Not all of these belated amendments were accepted by the Nazi officials—gallant for once. The consequence is that the rigors of the Nazi internment camps are now being suffered by women who, if they had been less coquettish about their years, would now be free.

MENTAL CASES

During the last war a medical officer, examining a recruit, reminded him that as he had hsd attacks of bronchitis, he would hardly be fit for overseas. The chest was clear but the physician pointed out that under stress and bad weather conditions the bronchitis might return and he would be a liability to the country. He was a superior type of individual and pleaded so hard that the medical officer talked the matter over with the captain of the unit he was joining. As it was thought that the outdoor life might "toughen" him, it was agreed to accept him as there was nothing against him but the "history" of the attacks.

Dr. Barton

The outdoor life at camp agreed with him, he had no attacks of bronchitis, and gained 15 pounds—the heaviest he had ever been. However, arriving in England the damp climate caused an acute attack of bronchitis and pneumonia and he had to be invalidated home without going to France.

Todsy every recruit has an X-ray film made of his chest before he receives the rest of his examination. Other tests are also made.

What about the mental condition of recruits? How can it be known how recruits will behave under the shock, danger, noise and surroundings of war?

This is going to be a difficult matter for the psychiatrist or mental specialist attached to the board of medical examiners. Thus Dr. Lauren H. Smith, physician-in-chief, department for mental and nervous diseases, Pennsylvania hospital, Philadelphia, says that the mental specialist ordinarily sees fully developed mental cases; we want him to use his skill to exclude, as far as possible, all those people who would be seriously damaged in their capacity for useful living by the circumstances of war.

However, as recruits are examined first at their own villages, towns or cities, the local physician is able to give information as to how the recruit conducts himself in the community and can advise whether the recruit is suitable for overseas or home service only, from the mental and emotional standpoint. Doubtful cases can always be sent on to the Medical Advisory board.

Exercise—Food—Blood Pressure

A mistake often made is in thinking that exercise should not be taken by middle-aged individuals as it will increase the blood pressure and enlarge the heart.

As a matter of fact, the blood pressure of athletes is slightly lower than those of the same age who take no exercise and the heart is, if anything, smaller.

Thus it can be seen that two individuals whose blood pressure is the same, can go for a holiday of two or three weeks and on their return the blood pressure of one is higher than the blood pressure of the other. Questioning brings out the fact that the one whose blood pressure is higher than when he went away has "rested" all the time while the other has been active. The one who rested all the time admits, however, that as he was outdoors all the time he had a great appetite and as the food was good he had eaten more than was his custom and his weight had increased several pounds.

That lack of exercise and increase in food intake increases the blood pressure is pointed out by Dr. H. O. Gunewardene in his book "Blood Pressure and Its Sequelae (results)", who states that physical inactivity—taking no work or exercise—plays an important part in high blood pressure conditions in India. High blood pressure rarely occurs among rickshaw runners who take violent exercise with long and exhausting hours, whereas high blood pressure is notably common among certain social groups who lead sedentary (sitting down most of the time) lives, with overeating.

The thought is that as we grow older, we have less desire to exercise and when the heart is affected or failing, too much exercise can put a strain on the heart and on the blood vessels. However, in the normal individual some exercise should be taken daily—a few bending exercises and a brisk walk—if the heart and blood vessels are to get their own needed exercise of their elastic tissues.

QUESTION BOX

Q. What would cause me to have a sharp pain in chest and a thumping in chest?

A. The pain may be due to gas, nervousness, or even to a heart condition. Consult your physician.

Q. Would an excessive flow of saliva following a meal be considered an indication that an abnormal thyroid condition is present?

A. An excess of saliva is more likely to be due to nervousness, or some stomach disturbance.

Sportlight
by GRANTLAND RICE

"WAR," as the late William Tecumseh Sherman said, "is hell." At least, it is around 97 per cent hell. But here and there it also contributes something on the better side.

In the course of a recent transcontinental trip I've discovered one helpful factor from more than a dozen football coaches. Headed by Curly Lambeau of the Green Bay Packers, they all tell me their squads have reported in far better physical shape and all have a much keener spirit than football ever has known before.

Grantland Rice

"In the first place," Curly says, "most of them know they will be in war service soon. Most of these men are married, with kids to look after. But in the grim game ahead of us they are all looking forward to doing their full share.

"In the second place, they all have more than a few pals now in some active branch of war service. They know the sacrifices these men have had to make. They know the harder row they have had to face. And so their pride has made them stick closer to simpler living and the way of life that would leave them ready when needed.

Then and Now

"I've had linemen," Curly says, "who would report at 250 pounds. These men now come in at 230 or 225. They are ready to go. Others who were from 10 to 20 pounds overweight in other seasons, reported at about the same weight they knew after a hard year last winter.

"Practically all of these men have been keeping in shape for months. Maybe that isn't much to ask, but at least it is something. It may be more than many others are doing who haven't been called.

"This is all a new sign of the times," Lambeau continued. "It means we are going to have from now on a far better conditioned set of men. It means that millions of us realize the old, soft days are over. It means a big jump in national fitness. And I think we've needed this lesson.

"Life, as we knew it, had been pleasant. But has it been physically helpful? Haven't we had too many of our people who led soft lives, physically, who took poor care of their bodies? Who drank too much? Who ate too much? Who took little exercise? And so died well before their due time? I think so. So do most of the coaches and trainers who have seen men report from 20 to 40 pounds above the weight they should carry. And this goes for almost every part of our people.

A New Age

"With the expected exceptions," Curly carried on, "we are coming into a new physical age for the young and the middle aged—even for those past 60.

"They all read about and know about the rigorous training of the Commandos, the Naval Cadets, the Parachutists, the marines, the soldiers and sailors.

"Here we have a war that really means the survival of the fittest. Fittest, of course, means brain and spirit, as well as body. But please don't forget the big part that physical fitness plays in stamina and endurance, especially.

"This is why I still insist this country needs all the competitive sport it can get. And that is why I know that football plays, and can play, a big part in this program.

"Football means physical fitness, body contact, alertness, spirit, sacrifice, team play, and the ability to carry on when you are either hurt or almost out."

True Condition

Every football coach I've met feels the same way about the situation. I've seen any number of young college stars report for training when they were in no condition for a pillow fight.

But it taken no great amount of brains for them to see they are facing a new age—a different world. Before too long they will be flying above strange seas, using the bayonet, handling a tank, or swimming in oil-fired water. Their best chance against the odds is to be trained and fit for what they have to face.

What will happen to sports in another year is another guess. It may move into a blackout.

Baseball Umpires

But the main idea is to get from hard, competitive sport all we can at the moment, so that other millions called at least will be partially ready for the job ahead. I believe the majority of those in sport have this understanding. Those who haven't can be listed with "the beautiful—and the damned."

There has been a tradition in baseball that aggressive teams are those which attack the umpires. This tradition is all wrong.

Conservation Farming Most Effective Way

Nation's Farmers Learned Lesson During Last War

This time it's going to be different!

American farmers learned a bitter lesson from the last World war. In today's war they are answering the demand for more food by careful planning to avoid the ruinous exploitation of soil resources which cost so much last time.

Conservation farming in the most effective way to boost output now and make even greater production possible tomorrow.

"Plow to the Fence for National Defense" was the cry during the World war. Forty million acres of grass never before broken were uprooted by the plow. Much of that land should never have been permitted to be sown to anything but grass.

Conservation practices were forgotten in the zeal for "more of everything."

This time farmers have a national wartime farm program developed by farmers and co-ordinated through the United States department of agriculture adjustment and conservation agencies. It is a plan for getting more of the right things and it stresses conservation farming.

Experience has shown conservation farming is the most effective way to boost output now and make even greater production possible tomorrow.

Farming on the contour, for instance, has increased corn production twofold on farms in test areas. Also, it has required 7 per cent less time and 10 per cent less fuel in preparing land and seeding small grains than non-contoured farming.

It is estimated that if contouring were extended to one-third of the corn acreage in the corn belt, production would be increased 100 million bushels, an average increase of six bushels per acre.

In West Virginia, a 30 per cent increase per acre in tomato yields was achieved through use of strip cropping.

By following good range management, a West Texas rancher increased the weight of his calves by 75 pounds at selling time.

This year a minimum of 20 per cent of the crop land of a farmer participating in the AAA program will be devoted to soil-conserving crops and land uses.

A. C. A. A. Photo.

C. D. Blubaugh, Danville, Ohio, weighing the harvest from a strip cropped field. He is one of the some three million farmers in 693 soil conservation districts.

Conservation is already paying war dividends. Without the advances of recent years, America's farms would not have a chance of reaching 1942 production goals, not to mention the strain of producing even more in 1943.

Thus farmers recognize conservation as the key to getting the most of the right products now and continuing to get them as they are needed without permanent injury to our land resources. That is the lesson they learned from last time.

Agricultural Notes

Domestic consumer demand for farm products will continue to rise during the next few months.

All Out FOR VICTORY AT Firestone

ARMY E NAVY

To the men and women of the Firestone organization, whose loyalty, skill, and efficiency have won the nation's highest industrial tribute, we extend our sincere appreciation of the fine spirit and whole-hearted cooperation which merited these Army-Navy Production Awards.

To our fellow Americans, we of the Firestone organization affirm that we regard this high honor as a challenge for the future as well as a reward for the past. It shall serve as a continuing inspiration to all of us to strive for increased quality and quantity of production in further contribution to the war effort and to final victory.

Mr. Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., President
Firestone Tire & Rubber Company
Firestone Park Plant
Akron, Ohio

Dear Mr. Firestone:

This is to inform you that the Army and Navy are conferring upon the Firestone Park Plant of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company the Army-Navy Production Award for high achievement in the production of war equipment.

This award is the nation's tribute to the spirit of patriotism and production effort of the Firestone Park Plant and its employees. The men and women of that plant have every reason to be proud of their great work in backing up our soldiers on the fighting fronts.

In conferring this award the Army and Navy will present a flag to be flown above the plant, and will give to every member of that organization a pin which they may wear as a symbol of their personal contribution to human freedom. This symbol is accorded only to those plants which are exceeding all production expectations in view of the facilities at their command.

I have full confidence that your present high achievement is indicative of what you and your employees will do in the future.

Sincerely yours,

Robert P. Patterson

Musings

Yesterday is gone forever.
Tomorrow never comes.
Today is in my hands
If I shirk today's tasks I shall be adding to my wasted yesterdays.
If I postpone today's duties I shall be increasing tomorrow's burdens.
If I accomplish what today sets before me, I shall be doing my best to atone for yesterday's failures, and to prepare for tomorrow's successes.
Therefore, I will endeavor to use my time and opportunites that today shall leave me a little wiser and abler than it found me.

NICHOLSON NEWS—

"My grace is sufficient for thee." Spiritual strength enables us to pass thrcugh darkest trials.

Themany friends of Charles Otis Morgan are glad to hear of his convalescence under skillful treatment of Dr. F. A. Daugherty of Independence.

Mrs. C. B. Peoples, highly efficient funeral director and one of Butler's most prominent citizens was a recent caller. Deeply appreciated was his kindness in ordering the first box of our Christmas cards to help along a poor, helpless "shut-in" which is certainly commendable and his noble example is truly worthy of emulation.

Most heartily do we thank Mr. and Mrs. Myron C. Stephens of Piner, for recent kindness.

To the righteous soul there is no death. What seems so is transition. This life of mortal breath is but a suburb of the life elysian whose portal we call death. He has but gone within the veil. Just a step or two our mortal eyes are holden. We can not get this view of life immortal, Life eternal! Real life at last "In the eventide of an active Christian life Mr. J. Will Rush of Independence recently responded to the call of our Heavenly Father to "come up higher." A little shadow passed over his placid face like that of a soft cloud upon the serene waters of the lake with the calm repose of eternal rest upon his brow. Death never stilled a truer, nobler soul; and he has passed on to receive of his Maker the welcome plaudit, "Well done," promised to those who have been faithful to His cause. Ever touched by the needs of his fellowmen he knew the joy of giving and extending a helping hand, and he so lived that "many rejoiced that he had passed their way." He was a man of high character and earnest sincerity keenly interested in all things worthwhile. His going was indeed like the dawn giving way to the day. Possessed of a cordial friendliness, a shadow of sorrow was cast upon a wide circle at announcement of his passing. For an extended period he had lingered on the borderland ,but he knew that whether "in green pastures beside still waters," or "in the valley of the shadow" there would ever be "a rod and staff" to comfort him. Heartfelt sympathy goes out to all over whom sorrow has hung her somber mantle and may God, bring consolation that faith gives event in the shadow of the tomb, in the assurance that beyond the grave we live again. Scripture asserts that there is a life beyond and Nature demonstrates immortality. How deep would be the grief over the grave did not the rainbow of Christian hope span the dark gulf between time and eternaty. "So live that when thy summons come to join the innumerable throng which moves to that mysterious realm where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death that we may be sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust and approach the grave as one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams.

BRACHT STATION NEWS—

The autumn days are here and the harvesting of bountiful crops and vegetables is quiet a pleasure to the tillers of the prosperous land. We should be thankful that our Almighty Savior gave us such a grand and fruitful year, also that He gave us strength to sow our seeds and reap a bountiful harvest. For He hath said: 'Well done good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things. Matt.25:33.

Great victories are built out of innumeral small ones. Learn the secret and start with self mastery.

And it came to pass when Pharoh had let the people go, that God led them by the way of the land of the Phillistines, altho that was near; for God said; lest preadventure the pople repent when they see war. Exodus 13:17.

The shortest way is not always practical. Fear stands in the way. But God says: Fear not, I am with thee. Be not afraid. I will strengthen thee and give thee aid.

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us dare to do our duty as we understand it.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Walton were business visitors in Maysville one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Potter of Miriamont, Ohio, visited friends at the Maple Lawn Farms Sunday. In interest of the fine herd of Guernsey cattle on this farm.

Mrs. E. Huff visited her mother and sister of Carthridge, Ohio several days last week.

Several of the boys of this vicinity are being called in Service for the October draft.

Visitory! On to victory, cries the Great Commander. On we'll move at His command. We'll soon possess the land of loyalty—loyalty to Christ. Let this be our daily thought and prayer; that Jesus our Savior will lend a helping hand and win for us victory, and cease this troublesome war. For nothing can be accomplished without Jesus, our Savior.

"STEP LIVELY" IS THE WORD

DURING 1941 the railroads moved the greatest volume of freight in their history.

In the first 6 months of 1942 they carried 36% more than in the same period of history-making 1941.

One reason the railroads have been able to do this has been the all-out cooperation of shippers.

Cars have been loaded heavier, sent away faster, emptied quicker.

This is important. For to carry everything the Government, Army, Navy and Business have to haul, cars have to be kept moving.

So you see why there's no room for sleeping shipments. It's transportation we have to deliver—someone else will supply the storage accommodations.

And so to keep war equipment, foods and commercial goods on the move, "step lively" is the word.

"The first World War taught the Government and the railroads and the public a lesson they will never forget. First, that those experienced in transportation can better conduct transportation than the Government or any inexperienced agency. Second, that railroad cars are never to be used for storage, but for transportation. Nothing shall be put in a car that cannot be immediately dispatched and unloaded at destination."—COLONEL J. MONROE JOHNSON, Member of Interstate Commerce Commission in Charge of Bureau of Service.

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. When they arrive in Tierra Libre they find both Zora and her husband dead. It is Mitchell's job as chief engineer for a fruit company that Jeff has been called to fill. Later Jeff's friend Bill Henderson is also killed, and Jeff suspects his employer, Senor Montaya, of murdering him and the Mitchells because they had found a clue to the strange things going on at the plantation. Other sinister figures are the company chemist, Dr. Toenjes, and the flyers, Ryden and Lannestock. A U. S. Army plane is forced down, but Senor Montaya does not appear alarmed by the presence of the army men. Jeff and Lee discover that their housemaid is spying on them. Now Jeff is talking to a man named Collins.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII

The man's eyes veiled suddenly. Curt flared.

"Well, make up your mind whether to trust me or not. I can't manage a tete-a-tete very often. You're from the Canal Zone. And you drink about as much as I do. Your general appearance needs to be explained." Curt dared a little guesswork. "You came in through Soledad on the destroyer that called there a week ago Monday!"

A rigidity in the other convinced Curt he was right. He went on.

"You've hult yourself into a tramp by sleeping in old clothes and not shaving for ten days. Your skin isn't used to a beard, it itches. You keep scratching your face. But you couldn't resist the comforts of a clean body. You got those hleary eyes from going without sleep, and that hungry look from doing without food. For about two days, huh? Three days? The whole thing's a build-up. Why?"

Collins gave in.

"I needed a good hackground. McInnis says I can trust you. I think so, too, first judgment. It's a long story, and I can't even give it to you. All of it, anyway. I'm asking you, as a fellow American," he emphasized the words, "to give me a job. I want to get estahlished here."

Steps mounted hurriedly to the door in the outer room. The door snapped open. Curt picked up the application hlank Collins had been working on, and was studying it as Emilio entered, hlack-browed.

"Everything is ready," the native announced hardily.

Curt looked up. "Okay. We'll have to hold it a few minutes. All right, Collins," he snapped at the ragged man, "it so happens I do need men. I'll give you a try-out, but you better he as good as you say you are. You can go up to camp with me now."

He looked the man over with distaste. "First, go to the next room and take off those rags. Get under the shower and I'll find you some clean clothes. There's a razor in the hathroom. Get those whiskers off. And hustle it up."

Scarcely a word passed on the chugging trip to the levee camp. Estehan, the Carib launch boy, sat at his controls and stared straight ahead. Emilio sulked.

As for Collins, after a few minutes of that stare he simply turned his back on Emilio and gazed at the river's edge slipping by. Collins was a far stretch from the tramp of an hour ago. In spare shirt and breeches Curt kept on hand in his Tempujo quarters, Collins showed up a tall, rangy, athletic person.

Curt had plenty to occupy his mind. His guess, confirmed by the other's silence, that Collins had come to Soledad on the destroyer, was proof enough that something was hrewing. But what?

The man had said he came "to see Mitchell," hut Mitch had heen dead for days hefore Collins had—presumahly—left the Canal Zone. Did he come to investigate Mitch's death? If so, then he had plenty more to investigate.

True, violent deaths of three Americans would assume an importance that Mitchell's alone didn't have, but these other deaths hadn't occurred until Collins was already on his way. So that couldn't be the answer. Besides, he wouldn't have needed a disguise for this.

Now, it was to the United States' interest, Curt reasoned, so far as it could to see that peace was preserved throughout these countries. Did it mean that Montaya, innocent as he appeared to be of such aspirations, actually had political yearnings?

But here again were objections. Dr. Areca, the "provisional" Presidente of Tierra Libre, was a good executive, the people not ahused, their economy prospering reasonably well. You can't have a revolution among satisfied people.

Monahan's shift was coming off duty as the launch made the levee camp's landing. Curt took Collins ashore—under Emilio's watchful eye—and while the camp cook was replenishing the lunch basket, he turned the man over to Monahan.

"Put him on a drag this afternoon, Slats. You can tell one way or another about him by the time I get back this evening. Luck, Collins."

Curt left his musette bag in camp, went briefly into the few questions accumulated since he was here two days ago, then took off upriver again.

There were three of them this time—Curt, Emilio, and the Carib launch boy.

They reached without incident a spot above the C. A. T. holdings, past the point where the Rio Negro levee made an elhow to join the first arm of the Quehrado range. Here Curt had the Indian pull the launch in to the south shore. Then he put on his carefully prepared act. He appeared to deliberate.

"Very well, Emilio," he said at last, "here's our program. I want you to pace off the shore line and plant these flags every forty steps. Be sure they can he easily seen from across the river. This won't be hard to do, with the river now at a low mark, though you may have to use your machete on small hrush. When you reach that hend up ahead, wait for us there.

"Meanwhile, Estehan will set me down at that hill opposite. I'll climh to the highest point, get some pictures for further study, and come down the other side. The launch will pick me up, then we'll cross and get you. Is that clear?"

Emilio fumhled with the flags. "Could not Estehan plant the flags? Then I could stay with you—"

"We need him on the launch. Neither of us could handle it in these rough waters." For some distance they'd been fighting the increased current of the lower rapids.

"But Senor Montaya gave me strict orders—"

"Of course, of course," Curt in-

He could see Emilio was watching him.

terrupted impatiently. "He told me, too. That's for where there could he danger of attack such as came to Mr. Mitchell. There can be no danger here. Come, we'll have to get going if we're to get hack to camp hy dark."

He hustled Emilio, still protesting and hlackly reluctant, off along the shore line, jumped hack into the launch, and was set down on the other shore. As the launch boy headed upstream for the rendezvous, Curt took one look hehind him. He could see Emilio was watching him.

Curt was now in somewhat familiar territory. On this bank rose a considerable hill thickly covered with a jungle of trees, lianas, undergrowth. Because of the hill, Finca Urana, the Associated's farm, didn't touch the river at this spot.

Curt plunged into a path used by the women of the farm laborers when they came to the river to wash clothes. He picked up a mule trail at the edge of the banana plantation, hroke into a trot.

Banana farms are laid out evenly, the "hits" planted twenty feet or so apart. The plants grow rapidly, shooting up suckers, of which the strongest are allowed to remain, and each single plant eventually becomes a ring of plants, like a bed of gigantic cannas. Their long broad leaves meet twenty to thirty feet overhead, allowing only scattered rays of sunshine to reach the earth.

A banana plantation is a lovely, peaceful spot—if one has the time to enjoy it. Through these sunheams hrilliant hirds and butterflies dart; there are rustlings underfoot of field rats or iguanas—or snakes; and all is hushed as a green-windowed cathedral.

It was along such a lane, hot, the air still, that Curt trotted. If all went well he could get to the farmhouse of Urana and back to the river in thirty to forty minutes. He would have to explain this lapse of time, hut he'd worry ahout that later.

Out of breath and sweating heavily, he reached the farmhouse. His khaki shirt was dark with perspiration.

There was only a native timekeeper in the farm office, which was the ground floor of the two-story house, while another mozo was raking the corral. He looked up, amazed, at the stranger who appeared out of nowhere, hut Curt gave him no chance to put his curiosity into words. He took the initiative.

"Donde esta hoy el Senor McInnis?"

"Creo que fue al Tigre, Senor."

Curt went to the old wall phone and turned the handle sharply. The hell in the hox tinkled. The thick soft voice of the exchange operator answered.

"Ring Finca Tigre." He waited. "Senor McInnis there? How long would it take to bring him to the phone? Oh?" He thought a moment. "All right, thanks, won't wait." He hung up. He couldn't risk half an hour.

His eye fell on a typewriter. Seizing a piece of paper, he rolled it into the machine and began to punch out a note:

"Jerry. You've heard of Zora Mitchell and Bill Henderson without a doubt. Convinced of danger here, hut don't know what it is. Old Man Moore has confidential file on everyone of consequence in Tierra Libre. Hates to give out hut I must know all I can ahout Montaya. Make him spill to you, and meet me at Riverbend about nine Saturday night. Hiring Collins, no chance to talk to him yet. C."

He cast about for an envelope, found one, sealed and addressed his message.

The native timekeeper had been staring at him throughout all this, half in amazement, half in resentment. Curt asked his name.

"Rafael Diaz, Senor."

"Bueno, Rafael," said Curt. "Tell no one about this. See that Senor McInnis gets this as soon as possible. Phone him to come here. Put it in his hands yourself. Understand?"

As Curt made off at a trot across the clearing, to disappear under the hanana plants, the timekeeper, note in one hand, money in the other, shrugged his shoulders, muttering, "Locos — todos locos, Americanos. Siempre tienen prisa . . ." (These crazy Americans, always in a hurry.)

On his way back to the river Curt thought of his sweat-sodden shirt. He ripped it off as he trotted and let the breeze he created nearly dry it by the time he reached the hill, when he put it on again. It would still show wet but that could be accounted for by his exertions along the river.

He saw a brilliant orchid in bloom, an epiphyte fastened to a slender dead tree limb within reach. It was one of the "butterfly" orchids Lee wanted, and had two three-foot candelabra branches covered with dozens of small bright yellow blooms, like butterflies alighted.

Here was his excuse for lost time! Curt put on the rest of his act with deliberation. He studied the opposite shore, the rising hills hehind, put away his field glasses, took his pictures, then fought his way through the undergrowth down the hill to meet the launch.

"It was some time you were gone from view," said Emilio, when at last picked up. The man was jittery. "I worried. You had difficulty?"

"Some," admitted Curt. "But this is what lost me many minutes. My wife wants an orchid collection. She had one when we lived here before."

Curt exhibited the plant with such real pride that it appeared to satisfy Emilio, and the man fell into narrow-eyed sullenness.

"Well, I'm through here," said Curt, tapping the camera. "Let's go."

They picked up the flags Emilio had planted—in his pictures they would mark 100-foot intervals, though this was no more essential to Curt than the pictures. But the ruse had worked. During this process Curt also hunted a couple more orchids to bolster his excuse for the delay across the river.

Then they proceeded to eat lunch in the boat, in the lengthening afternoon shade of a stand of mangroves. Roots of these trees, sprouting from branches in mkiair, had taken hold in the river hottom, making a natural awning against the sun.

Perched on a branch not far from the launch, a noisy kiskadee jawed incessantly. Estehan, the Carib, called it a "heet-gee-gee." At first it was merely annoying, hut hefore the meal was finished the bird had become a definite nuisance.

Curt pulled his pistol, took aim, fired. His brows shot up in astonishment!

There had heen no kick when he squeezed the trigger, and the bullet, expelled without force, made a curious arc and plopped harmlessly into the water.

He tried another shot, but with the same result. Then he removed the clip and examined the remaining bullets. They seemed to be all right. The brass shell case from the first shot had ejected over the side, but the second had fallen into the boat.

Curt picked it up and examined it. Undoubtedly, it was from the same lot as the rest of the clip. Suddenly he noted that Emilio's sullenness had disappeared, that the native was eyeing the proceedings with a dead-pan countenance and completely indifferent eyes.

The bird meanwhile had merely hopped a couple of steps at each shot and was still jabbering its raucous notes. Curt snapped home the clip, tried a third shot. Another dull thud. So he shrugged, rehol-stered the automatic, and said, "Huh. Bad lot of ammunition." Nothing more.

JUDAH: AN EXAMPLE OF SELF-SACRIFICE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:18-34.

GOLDEN TEXT—Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.—I John 3:16.

The family is still the fundamental unit of society, and is therefore of more importance than the church, the state, or the social order of which it is a vital part. Every force which encourages the breakdown of the sacred relationships of the home and family is set for the destruction of society itself.

Men have too often chosen to go the way of the flesh, and therefore they have disregarded God's plan and purpose. But marriage is just as sacred as ever in His sight; the home is to be kept for Him; and brotherly love still finds a high place among the virtues of real men.

Today's lesson is a continuation of the story of Joseph's life. As we study it we must bear in mind Joseph's dealinga with his brethren, who as yet did not recognize him as the one they had sold into captivity. He was bringing them kindly but definitely to the point of real repentance, so that he could show himself gracious to them.

To do so he had brought disaster upon them. Being happily on their way homeward with a new supply of food, they were overtaken and proved to be thieves, and Benjamin, the beloved of their father Jacob, stood condemned hy their own words, to death.

In that crisis the mouths of the others seemed closed, but Judah, who had really saved Joseph's life (Gen. 37:26, 27) and who had apparently come to himself as a man of essential goodness, pleaded for Benjamin's life. That plea presented a truly sacrificial brotherly love, as he manifested

I. Courage (v. 18).

Easy rests the yoke of family life as long as all is joyful and prosperous. But when adversity strikes, when sorrow comes, or sickness, or sin, then the true test of devotion is at hand.

It was a brave and manly thing for Judah to stand before the one whom he knew only as the man who was "even as Pharaoh." The circumstances were all against him. He expected the flaming anger of the offended ruler. His brethren had collapsed in despair. It was one of those dark hours which come to every family when someone must demonstrate true love by being strong-hearted and steady.

II. Intelligence (vv. 19-29).

Crises call for more than a cheerful smile or an encouraging word, much as they may mean in such an hour. We must be prepared by our close contact with our loved ones to speak and act with vigor and assurance.

Judah's plea is a masterpiece of argumentation and appeal, demonstrating that he was not only well-informed about his family and its problems, but ready to use his knowledge skillfully and effectively.

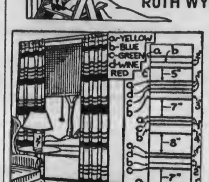
III. Self-Denial (vv. 30-33).

One step deeper goes the devotion of this man to his father and his brother. He had done no wrong that merited punishment, but evidently his brother Benjamin had been guilty. Had he been of the spirit of Cain he would have said, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and let him answer for himself. Why should Judah suffer for another? Why should he allow himself to be imprisoned in a strange land to save his father from sorrow and his brother from what seemed to be the just reward for his deeds?

Thus reasons the man of the world, but such is not the language of the true brother, who says, "Let thy servant abide instead of the lad as a hondman."

IV. Love (v. 34).

Love for father and brother underlies all of the courage, conviction and self-sacrifice of a man like Judah. In his younger years, and possibly under the influence of his brothers, he had failed in that respect, but now his real devotion to his brother was evident.



That affection was a real, powerful, and beautiful thing, and yet it is hut a faint prefiguring of the affection of the One who "sticketh closer than a brother," who "though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich" (Prov. 18: 24; II Cor. 8:9).

Let us improve the opportunity to review our relations with our own family, to determine whether there is aught that we in intelligent and courageous self-sacrifice should do for our own.

Know Your Neighbors

Know your neighbors. Call on them to meet together, in your home to exchange information. This friendly association, this neighborliness, will create courage and confidence—the morale so necessary for victory.

THESE curtains were made of the long pieces of good material from each side of a pair of sheets that were worn in the center. They were dyed a soft cream; then wide strips of gingham and narrow ones of prepared bias trimming were stitched in place to make stripes. The chart shows the colors used and also gives the widths and spacing of stripes. In case you should want to use short lengths of goods for the foundation part, stitch these together with seams on the right side; then place contrasting strips over joinings. Colors used should repeat the colors in rugs, pictures, books or bric-a-brac.

While Firestone, Edison, Ford, and Burroughs were touring, a light bulb and a tire on the car went wrong. Mr. Ford went into a store and said to the proprietor: "What kind of lights do you have?"

"Edison," was the reply.

"And tires?"

"Firestone."

"You may be interested to know that Mr. Edison and Mr. Firestone are in my car, and that I am Henry Ford."

As the man was putting on the tire, Mr. Burroughs, with long white whiskers, leaned out of the car, and the man, looking at him, said: "Yeah, I know, you're Santa Claus."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Do not cut the skins from apples when making applesauce. Remove blossom end, stem and parts that are not good. When thoroughly cooked, put through a coarse sieve. Made in this way the skins give the sauce a pink coloring.

To help prevent peeled pears, apples and bananas from darkening when they're to be used in a fruit cup, cover them with grapefruit juice and chill.

When making raisin breads, cookies, etc., cover the raisins with hot water and simmer them for about five minutes before using. They will be larger and softer.

• • •

Make an oilcloth cover for your ironing board, to use when brushing and sponging garments.

A good spice tip: Try putting cinnamon in lamb stew.

Talkin' to a fellow the other day, I couldn't help thinkin' that lots of folks claim they have an open mind when the fact o' the matter is it's only vacant.

Which reminds me that if you really think straight about vitamins, you'll see why I keep tellin' folks about KELLOGG'S PEP. An' that's because this swell cereal is extra-rich in the two vitamins most often short in ordinary meals—B, and D. And believe me, PEP is a mighty slick-tasting cereal. Why don't you try it tomorrow?

Potatoes?
A nourishing food, Mr. Hitler!

WE HAVE potatoes in America. We also have fruits, meats and green and yellow vegetables. For every crop you harvest with forced labor, we have a larger crop grown by men who work hard from dawn until dark because it's their land, their country. You've never met an American farmer—or his wife—have you, Mr. Hitler? Too bad. Otherwise you might have thought twice before you started this war.

Our cellars are used to store foods, not as bomb shelters. But our boys know the meaning of bombs. How did you like that first air raid, with not a single U. S. plane lost? Those boys didn't live on potatoes—they had meat, milk, fruits, vegetables . . . all the things we have at home. American food follows them to the corners of the earth.

How can we do it? American women are doing it—home-canning for the home front and saving money for War Bonds at the same time! Do you know how much of it they're doing? Well . . . what would you give for FOUR BILLION JARS of home-canned foods, Mr. Hitler?

BALL BROTHERS COMPANY
MUNCIE, INDIANA, U. S. A.

Can Successfully! Put some of those 4 billion jars on your shelves; they represent a dependable, low cost food supply for your family. But be sure your home-canned foods keep. PADDY BEAVER WORKING HARD

Work, work all the night
While the stars are shining bright;
Work, work all the day,
I have got no time to play.

THIS little rhyme Paddy the Beaver made up as he toiled at the building of the dam which was to make the pond he so much desired deep in the Green Forest. Of course, it wasn't quite true, that about working all night and all day. Nobody could do that, you know, and keep it up. Everybody has to rest and sleep. Yes, and everybody has to play a little to be at his best. So it wasn't quite true that Paddy worked all day after working all night. But it was true that Paddy had no time to play. He had got too much to do. He had had his playtime during the long summer and now he had got to get ready for the long cold winter. Paddy is an industrious little fellow, you know, and he knows that once the summer is over winter comes very, very quickly indeed. So Paddy was going to be prepared for it. Even in the Green Forest it is always best not to leave anything for tomorrow if you can get it done today.

Now, of all the little workers in the Green Forest, on the Green Meadows, and in the Smiling Pool none can compare with Paddy the Beaver, not even his cousin, Jerry Muskrat. Happy Jack Squirrel and Striped Chipmunk store up food for the long cold months when rough Brother North Wind and Jack Frost rule, and Jerry Muskrat builds a fine house wherein to keep warm and comfortable, but all this is as nothing to the work of Paddy the Beaver as you shall see.

As I said before Paddy had had a long playtime through the summer. He had wandered up and down the Laughing Brook. He had followed it way up to the place where it started. And all the time he had been studying and studying to make sure that he wanted to stay in the Green Forest. In the first place he had to be sure that there was plenty of the kind of food that he likes. Then he had to be equally sure that he could make a pond close by where this particular food grew. Last of all he had to satisfy himself that if he did make a pond and build a home he would be reasonably safe in it. And all these things he had done in his playtime. Now he was ready to go to work, and when Paddy begins work he sticks to it until it is finished. He says that that is the only way to do to succeed, and you know and I know that he is right.

Now Paddy the Beaver can see at night just as Reddy Fox and Peter Rabbit and Bobby Coon can, and he likes the night best because he feels safest then. But he can see in the daytime too, and when he feels that he is perfectly safe and no one is watching he works then, too. Of course the first thing to do was to build a dam across the Laughing Brook to make the pond he so much needed. He chose a low open place deep in the Green Forest around the edge of which grew many young poplar trees, the bark of which is his favorite food, and through the middle of this flowed the Laughing Brook. At the lower edge was just the place for a dam. It would not have to be very long and when it was finished and the water was stopped in the Laughing Brook it would just have to flow over the low open place and make a pond there. Paddy's eyes twinkled when he saw it. It was right then that he had made up his mind to stay in the Green Forest.

So now that he was ready to begin work he went up the Laughing Brook to a place where alders and willows grew and there he began work, and that work was the cutting of a great number of trees by means of his great front teeth, which were given him for just this purpose. And as he worked Paddy was happy, for one can never be truly happy who does no work.

Coal Waste Is Freight Car Waste

Homeowners should have their stokers and furnaces and boilers carefully inspected this summer in the interest of war economy and relieving railroad bottlenecks. During World War I it was soon realized that every carload of coal wasted by inefficient combustion, uncovered steam piping, cracked settings, and other efficiency leaks, was not only a load of coal wasted but a freight car trip wasted. Iron Fireman engineers are carrying on an extensive summer servicing program.

Heap High the Cookie Jar!
(See Recipes Below.)

That Sweet Tooth

"Mom, may we have some cookies, please?"

That question asked in a childish voice with real pleading is going to be as daily as the sunrise and sunset these days as your younger members of the family feel the snap of fall in the air. School days with their demand on youthful energies will perk up summer's lagging appetite too!

Very few of you can say "no" to a request for cookies. Far from spoiling the appetite for dinner, a cookie or two with a glass of milk will help the child get gracefully through the late afternoon hours until dinner time.

Keeping the cookie jar full may have been your major problem in former years. This year it will be that plus making cookies with a ration of sugar. But you'll do it, I know, and these recipes will help you:

Oatmeal Crispies.
(Makes 4 dozen)

- 1 cup shortening
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 cup dark corn syrup
- 2 eggs, beaten
- ½ cup sour milk
- 2½ cups sifted flour
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 2 cups oatmeal
- 2 cups raisins

Cream sugar and shortening. Add corn syrup. Blend. Add beaten eggs. Sift together dry ingredients. Add alternately with sour milk. Stir in oatmeal and raisins. Drop by spoonfuls on an oiled baking sheet. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 15 minutes.

Ginger Snaps.

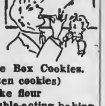
- 1 cup molasses
- 3½ cups sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup butter
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ½ teaspoon soda
- 1½ tablespoons ginger

Heat molasses to boiling point and pour over fat. Add sifted dry ingredients to molasses and fat. Mix well and shape dough into a long, thin roll. Wrap in waxed paper and place in refrigerator to chill overnight. Cut into thin slices with sharp knife and bake in a moderate oven until lightly browned. Remove from pan while hot and store in tightly covered container to keep crisp.

That son of yours may be grown-up now and in the service, but my guess is that some of those good, homemade cookies of yours will be mighty welcome to him at camp:

Honey Fruit Bars.
(Makes 3 dozen)

- 2 eggs
- ½ cup honey
- ½ cup sifted flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon baking powder
- ½ pound pitted dates, sliced
- 6 ounces mixed, candied fruits



Beat eggs and honey to blend. Add sifted dry ingredients and fruits and mix well. Turn into a greased, wax-paper lined pan. Bake in a moderate-to-slow (325-degree) oven for 45 minutes. Remove paper. Cool and cut into bars. Roll in powdered sugar if desired. Store in covered jar for several days to mellow.

Chocolate Chip Cookies.
(Makes 3½ dozen)

- ½ cup butter
- ½ cup honey
- 1 small egg
- 1 cup sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup semi-sweet chocolate chips
- ¾ cup nutmeats
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter and honey until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Sift dry ingredients twice, and add to butter mixture. Add vanilla and blend well. Fold in chocolate chips and nuts. Chill, then drop by spoonfuls on a greased cooky sheet. Bake at 375 degrees for 12 minutes.

Can you spare a cup and a quarter of sugar? I think you can if you know that you will spread that sugar over eight dozen cookies as in the following:

Vanilla Nut Ice Box Cookies.
(Makes 8 dozen cookies)

- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- 1½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 6 tablespoons butter or shortening
- ¾ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1 cup chopped nuts
- 1½ teaspoons vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt. Sift again. Cream butter and sugars gradually, creaming thoroughly. Add egg, nuts, vanilla and mix well. Add flour gradually, mixing well after each addition. Shape into rolls, 1½ inches in diameter and roll in waxed paper. Chill overnight or until firm enough to slice. Cut in ⅛-inch slices. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in a hot oven (425 degrees) 5 minutes or until light, golden brown.

A fruity, unusual pie is this one combining prunes and bananas with cornflakes and coconut. A sugar-saver, too:

American Prune Pie.
(Serves 6 to 8)

- 2 cups cooked prunes
- 1½ cups whipping cream
- ⅓ cup honey
- 1 cup sliced bananas
- Few grains salt
- 2 cups uncrushed corn flakes
- ½ cup shredded coconut
- Baked pastry shell (9-inch)

Cut prunes from pits in small pieces. Whip cream. Measure one cup and blend with honey. Add fruit and salt and stir to blend. Add cornflakes and blend lightly but thoroughly. Pour into baked pie shell and sprinkle with coconut. Top with remaining cream and serve soon after preparation.

Lynn Says:

Preserving Food: Eat and can whatever you can from your Victory garden. But you still may have some left, you say?

There are several methods to take care of the surplus. First, investigate to see whether your community has one of those storage lockers where you can rent space in the freezing locker. Cleanliness and speed are important factors in this type of storage. Food must be well selected to warrant the expense of this type of preserving.

Drying at home is another excellent way and one of the oldest methods available. Driers can be bought for a reasonable sum and used to advantage for drying and storing fruits and vegetables.

Other foods such as root vegetables, pumpkins and squash have good keeping qualities if stored in their natural state under well regulated temperatures such as in attic or cellar. Dried beans, peas and cured onions may be stored in an attic. Squash and pumpkins require a relatively warm place with free circulation of air.

Sentinels of Health
Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.
When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.
Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.
The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

FARM ITEMS

Sterling Rouse of near Limaburg reports he is ready to cut the second crop of red clover hay from last fall seedings. The first and second crops are estimated to have yielded approximately five tons per acre which is almost a record yield. The most unusual point from the standpoint of common practice is that the red clover was seeded on September 12th, 1941. Clover is prtecically always sown in the spring.

Vernon Scott of Burlington, R. 2, has recently added several pure-bred Hampshire ewes to his flock. Boone County needs more good consistent breeders of live stock of all kinds.

Truck crop growers report a successful and profitable year. The home "Victory" garden and the "Live at Home Program" has not produced the surplus on the market anticipated last spring.

Every farmer and farmer's wife should plan to can, store and preserve for the coming year's food supply all surplus food products.

The September 1st crop report just released give the 1942 Burley tobacco crop estimated at 341,819,000 pounds, compared with the 1941 crop of 337,051,00. This is close in line with consumption which has been showing a marked increase. Reports are speculators have already bid 30 cents on a few crops. Some tobacco men are talking about a 35 cent average.

WALNUT LICK—

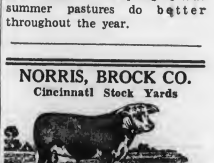
SPECIALIST GIVES 1942-43 CROP-LIVESTOCK SUGGESTIONS

Roy E. Proctor, Farm Management Specialist, College of Agriculture, recommended to Boone County farmers in a meeting at Burlington last Thursday evening a more extensive type of farming with high crop yields and efficient livestock production to meet the 1942-43 production problems. Fifteen farmers attended the meeting and those keeping complete farm account records last year were supplied with business anlysis.



A summary of the next year's recommendations were as follows:

1942 and 1943 Crop Suggestions

High yields of all crops are especially important when prices are high and labor is scarce. Select land for each plow crop with care to see that it is suitable for that crop. Save and use farm manure fully and add limestone and fertilizers in amounts needed for high crop yields.

Produce the feed crops that give the greatest feed value per day of labor, especially good pastures and alfalfa hay. In order to extend the period over which such crop may be used, surplus grasses and legumes may be ensiled. Seed winter small grains (with vetch in some cases) on row-crop land for early spring pasture. Winter small grains save plant food by preventing washing and leaching. They help to keep livestock off of regular pasture late enough in the spring so that summer pastures do better throughout the year.

A MacArthur In the Making
Don't Let Poor Eyesight Lessen His Chances for Leadership
Give Him Better Light for Better Sight

He has only one pair of eyes to last a lifetime. Safeguard them with better light.

Most children are born with perfect eyes. But it is an appalling fact that by the time they leave grade school, one out of five has defective vision. At college age, two out of five have faulty eyesight.

Why risk your child's eyes and his chances of future success? Give him enough light and the right kind of light for safe seeing. Put an I. E. S. Study Lamp on his study table. And have plenty of light elsewhere in your home—well shaded and free from glare. Light all of each room, too, not just part of it.

Remember: eyes are priceless; good light is cheap! Have better light tonight!

Homework's a snap with an I. E. S. Study Lamp equipped with 100-watt bulb. Its white glass diffusing bowl sifts out harmful glare... provides an abundance of both direct and indirect light. Ask for free trial.

INCORPORATED
GOOD LIGHT IS SPEEDING WAR PRODUCTION 24 HOURS A DAY

We Americans Must—

1—Prosecute the wars vigorously and efficiently to a speedy American victory, calling upon the best men in America to assist the President in directing our war effort regardless of political considerations.

2—Prohibit forcing immature boys, too young to have a voice in their Government to fight our wars except as a last resort.

3—Preserve constitutional government in America by eliminating all unnecessary restrictions upon agriculture, industry and the lives of private citizens, and by restoring "Government of the people, by the people and for the people" in the fullest sense immediately upon the cessation of hostilities.

4—Perpetuate American freedom and independence by preventing the rise of Communism, Nazism, Fascism, or any other foreign ideology in America, and by scrupulously avoiding permanent political and economic alliances with foreign nations.

5—Procure lasting peace in the Western hemisphere by building a national defense so strong that no aggressor, or combination of aggressors, will ever again dare attack us.

6—Protect American agriculture, industry, and labor from ruinous competition with cheap foreign labor by maintaining adequate protective tariff barriers and immigration restrictions.

7—Produce natural and synthetic rubber as well as other vital raw materials in the Western hemisphere to make the United States independent of the Old World and the Far East.

8—Prepare to solve the post-war reemployment problem by keeping intact in skeleton form essential civilian industries upon which to build a sound reconstruction program.

9—Provide real old-age security for millions of thrifty Americans by adopting a sound financial policy to include reduction of all non-war expenditures to a minimum and abolition of the practice of building huge political machines at public expense.

10—Promote faith in our American form of government by replacing New Deal rubber stamps now in Congress with strong intelligent and courageous men who will protect the interests of the American people both during the war and afterwards, and who will dedicate themselves to preserving America for Americans.

Boone County Quota Goes Over One Million Pounds Of Scrap Metal

EVERY CITIZEN MUST HELP TO WIN THE WAR! FIRST MEETING HELD IN WALTON MONDAY

This campaign was announced last Thursday in Louisville at a meeting attended by representatives from virtually every newspaper in Ke ntucky's 120 Counties.

Mr. Pryor C. Tarvin, Editor of the Ky. Times Star, was appointed chairman of this district.

A meeting of the Salvage Directors from Kenton, Campbell, Pendleton, Grant, Gallatin and Boone, with Chairman Tarvin, was held at the Walton School auditorium Monday afternoon, to arrange six speaking dates over a period of two days, for Mr. Mullican. At this time the Newspaper Scrap Metal Campaign f r Boone County was inaugurated, and the quota set at one million and 85 thousand pounds of scrap metal to be acumulated in the 3 weeks, or from Oct. 12 to Oct. 31st.

Mr. Charles Mullican, prominent business man, of Louisville, will make the first talk on the local drive on Friday, September 25, at 4:00 p. m. E.W.T., at the Court House in Burlington.

We have been collecting scrap and citizens are urged to put out their best efforts to cooperate in every way. Each of us should do our best and help in this endeavor as we have never before. A goal of 100 pounds for every man, woman and child in Kentucky has been set by the Government.

This is an urgent appeal to all Boone County citizens to come to the Burlington meeting on Friday afternoon, and hear this well informed man. Our boys are out there fighting for us, let each one show his gratitude for the members of all our armed forces.

You, Boone County, are sending your finest young men to war which they might lose by the margin of scrap metal you fail to turn in. All ministers, County leaders, civic workers, and every citizen has a very special responsibility in being present at this meeting.

Our fighting men are doing their share. Here at home the least we can do is put 10% of our income in War Bonds for our share in America.

PINER CLUB MEETS

The September meeting of the Piner Homemekers Club was held at the home of Mrs. James Kidwell.

The roll call was anwered by seventeen members present, each giving an account of their summer activities and what they had contributed to the war effort.

Miss Zelma Byer.y gave a lengthy discussion on the correct use of electric appliances.

Mrs. James Kidwell gave a discussion on "Clothing for Victory."

The following new officers being elected for the coming year: President Mrs. Charlie Cupp; vice president, Mrs. Elbert Guttridge; sec.-treas., Mrs. Frank J. Rust; publicity chairman, Mrs. Malcolm Oliver, Leaders: Landscaping, Mrs. Otis Fisk; foods, Mrs. W. R. Brown and Mrs. Jas. GIRL RESERVES

Once again the time has come to put away memories of a happy summer and take up our books and studies. This year we have 332 pupils enrolled in our shcool. This should make our school a successful year.

Severa. improvements have been made in the school. The windows have been made larger in the basement, letting in more sun and air. Also a basement exis made in the event of a fire.

We are glad to welcome several new teachers to our school: Miss Sleet, Mr. Osborn, Mrs. Caroland. We are glad to have all of them with us and hope they enjoy their new post.

Many of the clubs have been organized. The Girl Reserves initiation party at Lucy Pennington's Friday night, and all who attended had a grand time.

Twenty-two girls, Miss Rebecca Sleet, our sponsor; Rev. C. G. Dearing, and Mr. and Mrs. Levi Pennington were present. ganized last week.

The Literary Club was also organized yast week.

There will be an X-ray meeting on Tuesday to elect its staff. Our paper will be small this year on account of the war, and the paper shortage, but we hope everybody will enjoy it as much as we enjoy putting it out.

Jean Farris was chosen president, Ruth Dearing, vice president; Margaret Hanks, secretary, and Mary Louise McCubbin, reporter. Because the Freshman girls were absent, no treasurer is selected.

Ella Mae Chambers, Rep.

Major Project Training School for Homemakers

The first major project training school for project leaders of local Homemakers clubs will meet at the Court House Thursday, September 24, at 10:30 E. W. T. Miss Vivian Curnutt ,Home Furnishings Last The Duration." duct the class. "Making Your Furnishings Last tre Duration." All clubs are expected to have representatives.

Castor Beans Now Being Harvested by 4-H Clubs

Harvest of Castor Beans grown by 4-H members was started last week but only a small part of the crop was ripe enough to gather at that time, according to Franklin Frazier. After these beans are properly dryed they will be sold to the Government.

Club members have raised 4.2 acres of these beans to help with the war program since castor oil, manufactured from castor beans, is widely used as a lubricant for air plane engines and in war plants. Vital shipping space will be saved by producing this crop at home because formerly it was necessary for this country to import large quantities annually.

All burs on a stalk do not ripen at the same time, and 4-H members expect to continue picking until frost. When brown mature burs are brought from the field, they are spread on the floor to dry several weeks.

To Register Ky. Marines

Special efforts to secure the registration of every former merchant marine seaman an dofficer living in Kentucky are being put out by all United States employment offices, it was announced at Frankfort today by W. H. Fraysure, director of the U. S. Employment service for this State.

"Thousands of men who formerly went to sea are undoubtedly living in Kentucky," said Mr. Fraysure. "There is no better way they can serve their country now than to help man the two thousand new ships of the Victory fleet which will be built by the end of 1943."

Only Two More Home Game by Cincinnati Team

Cincinnati:— Only two more home games remain on the Reds' schedule for this season. The club is due to meet the Pittsburg Pirates in a ladies' day game Saturday, Septemeber 26, then close the season with these same Pirates the following afternoon.

During the week, the Reds purchased a new catcher for 1943 delivery. He in Ray Mueller, who has been with the Braves and Pirates in the National League. Mueller has had a great season on the Pacific Coast with Sacramento, and is considered by far the peer of his league's catchers. He has worked all but a dozen of his team's games, has hit consistently over .300,and has done a fine all around job. A new catcher is a necessity with the Reds, because Ray Lamanno probably will be in the armed forces before the next season games are now on sale at the downtown ticket office at 307 Vine Street.

Tickets for the Reds' final two rolls around.

SPECIALIST GIVES 1942-43 CROP-LIVESTOCK SUGGESTIONS

High yields of all crops are especially important when prices are high and labor is scarce. Select land for each plow crop with care to see that if it is suitable for that crop. Save and use all farm manure fully and add limestone and fertilizers in amounts needed for high crop yields.

Produce the feed crops that give the greasest feed value per day of labor, especially good pastures and alfalfa hay. In order to extend the period over which such crops may be used, surplus grasses and legumes may be ensiled. Seed winter small grains (with vetch in some cases) on row-crop land for early spring pasture. Winter small grains save plant food by preventing washing and leaching. They help to keep livestock off of regular pasture late enough in the spring so that summer pastures do better all of the year.

Abundance of good feed is important to livestock production. Small grain fields which are pastured tend to give better sets of grass and clover seedings than those which are harvested for grain.

All land too rolling or erded for good yields of row crops must be treated and used for pasture or hay to provide the most feed per acre and per day of work.

Corn returns more grain per acre, but winter barley (Ky. variety No.1) on fertile upland will give much more feed per day of labor than can be secured from corn.

Those truck crops for which there is a ready market and can be expanded easily should be increased. Vegetables for home use are important in the War Effort.

Mr. and Mrs. John Moore, of Hebron, called on friends in this locality Sunday evening.

Sergt. William Donovan,of Ft. Lewis, Wash., has been here for a visit with relatives.

A congenial group of ladies met at the Richwood Community House on Tuesday for the regular monthly meeting of the New Haven Homemakers Club. The president, Mrs. Jake Cleek, presided at the meeting. After the regular business meeting, Mrs. Harry Moore gave the lesson on "Style Trends." At noon a cover dish luncheon was served, that was enjoyed by all. The next meeting of the club will be held at the New Haven School on October 20, at 1:30 p. m. E.W.T. All women of the community are invited to be present.

Hempfling Co. Campaign Chairman For Kimberly

Hon. William Klicke, of Southgate, Campbell County, who is general chairman for Lewis R. Kimberly, Republican candidate for Congressman from our Fifth Kentucky district, expressed his gratification over the action of Boone County Republican Chairman George Baker in appointing C. Liston Hempfling, Constance, as county campaign chairman.

Mr. Klicke states a meeting of all county campaign chairmen will be held with the general committee within the next ten days to map a vigorous campaign to be conducted during October.

Mr. Kimberly delivered a forcible address in Carrollton last week.

BEAVER LICK—

All members of the Beaver Lick Christian Church are urged to attnd a call meeting t obe held at the church Saturday, September 19, at 3 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. David Houston have given up their business at the Hill Top Service Station, to the regret of the folks in this section.

The New Haven Homemakers Club will meet at the Richwood Community House Tuesday for their regular monthly get together..

Regular services at the Baptist Church by the pastor, the Rev. Spahr, will be in charge.

M. and Mrs. Ross Atha and little son, L. C., of near Bank Lick, called on relatives here last Sunday.

It is the patriotic duty of these men to make themselves available to the War Shipping Administration for assignment as they are needed by registering now at their nearest United States employment office. Every man who has had experience at sea as a sailor, cook, radio operator, engineer or officer will be needed if supplies are to reach our forces overseas when they are repuired.

FEATURES IN THIS ISSUE

You have heard some talk and gossip about a fourth term. The President's close friends do not believe that he will seek another term. But he is deeply interested in controlling Congress during his remaining years in office. Drew Pearson in his column, Washington Merry -Go -Round, writes about this and also tells of a trip to the Middle West the President will take next month.

Most people like to read good, clean fiction. That's why we publish around three complete novels each year, all by outstanding writers. A survey recently made by the editor of a Kentucky paper showed that 47% of his subscribers read the serial story.

Baukhage, in the Washington Digest column, writes at length on the subject of co-operation between capital and labor to increase war production demands.

Yank Fliers and Subs Blast Jap Ships In Battles for Supremacy in Pacific; Rubber Czar Speeds Synthetic Output; Fuel Oil Rationing Covers 30 States

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

William M. Jeffers (right), newly appointed rubber administrater, confers with War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson concerning problems to be solved in the nation-wide rubber conservation program which he heads. The former president of the Union Pacific railroad called for the co-operation of all Americans in making the program effective. Task number one for Mr. Jeffers is to step up the production of synthetic rubber and increase the capacity of new plants making it.

PACIFIC FRONT:

Jap Ships Smashed

The Japs got a taste of American air and undersea power when aircraft and submarines struck at widely separated points on the far-flung Pacific battlefront and damaged or destroyed 18 enemy ships.

In the Solomon islands, American bombers attacking the enemy base at Retaka bay, north of the American airfield at Guadalcanal, damaged two cruisers and destroyed vital enemy shore installations.

In the Aleutians heavy army bombers and long range fighters inflicted severe damage. Included in the American score were two mine sweepers sunk, three large cargo vessels damaged, three submarines hit and trapped and "several small craft" damaged. In addition the U. S. raiders set fire to storehouses and supply dumps ashore, destroyed six enemy planes and killed or wounded approximately 500 Jap troops.

Elsewhere in the far western Pacific, submarines sank four ships and damaged four others. The successful attacks on these eight ships raised to 107 the total of Japanese vessels of all types which the navy has reported sunk or damaged by American submarine attacks since the outbreak of war.

FUEL OIL RATION:

Forecasts 65 Degrees

Home owners in the 30 eastern and midwestern states affected by the WPB's fuel oil rationing order were told by Price Administrator Leon Henderson that domestic allotments would be pegged to a daytime temperature of 65 degrees under average weather conditions.

Approximately 3,140,000 oil-burning residential units in the rationed area will be affected by the order. The plan is designed to reduce consumption 25 per cent in the designated area.

Mr. Henderson said the amount of oil allowed each heating unit would be based largely on the floor space and the amount of fuel used last year. In order to obtain coupon rationing sheets, householders will be required to furnish local rationing boards with detailed information concerning the dwelling and furnace.

DRAFT:

Fathers or Boys?

Congress was given its choice between drafting 1,500,000 youths of 18 and 19 years of age or the same number of married men with dependent families by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director.

In a statement before the house committee investigating national defense migration, Hershey said: "We are going to get 18 or 19-year-olds, or 1,500,000 men out of the family." He added that the war department has certain reasons for wanting younger men and that industry would be disturbed less by taking the youths.

RUBBER CZAR:

Tough Job Ahead

Blunt, energetic Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers hed a big job on his hands and he knew it. War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson knew it too, for when he announced Jeffers' appointment, he called it "one of the toughest" assignments in the whole war effort.

As recommended by the President's special inquiry committee, Mr. Jeffers was given full authority over every phase of the rubber program. He was charged with reorganizing, consolidating and administering the government's efforts to alleviate the rubber shortage.

One of the new rubber czar's biggest tasks was to drastically step up synthetic rubber production. The report of the President's committee headed by Bernard M. Baruch had noted that there was "grave danger" that construction delays might hold up the present program as much as four months, leaving rubber supplies next year insufficient even for military needs.

Directness was one of the things Jeffers was noted for as president of the Union Pscific railroad. He showed the same approach when he said:

"This means I have a tough job. But it is also a job for all the people of the United States. The biggest stockpile of rubber we have is on the wheels of our automobiles. I ask every motorist, every truck driver, everybody who runs a car, to remember that he is now the custodian of a material more precious than gold."

RUSSIA:

Needs Second Front

As the news from Russian battle sectors had become gloomier, the increasing necessity of an Anglo-American second front in western Europe to take the pressure off the battered Red armies and thus avoid complete disaster was urged by Soviet military experts in London.

Although the eleventh-hour arrival of thoussnds of crack Siberian troops at Stalingrad had enabled the Reds to throw fresh reserves against Marshal Von Bock's Nazi legions, the over-all picture remained somber. The need for a diversion elsewhere appeared as pressing as ever.

Soviet representatives in London were said to believe that Allied invasion of western Europe would draw 30 to 40 German divisions away from the Russian front.

Meanwhile as massed squadrons of the RAF had continued their smashes at German industrial centers in a "softening up" drive, Production Minister Oliver Lyttleton declared:

"We are approaching the breathless moment when, if Russia holds a few more weeks, the gathering forces of the greatest alliance the world has ever seen will give us the first evidences of victory."

Captain Lyttleton had predicted in July that the next 80 days would be the war's gravest.

LABOR DRAFT:

Looms for Millions

Approximately 18,000,000 Americens faced the possibility of being shifted, hired or replaced, es Paul V. McNutt, war manpower director, told congress that the national labor shortage is becoming so acute that compulsory home front service for both men and women appears inevitable.

McNutt said the nation must find 4,000,000 new workers between now and 1943 and that a large number necessarily must come from the ranks of women and of men either too old or too young for military service.

There were 57,000,000 persons employed in June, 1942, he said, and between 62,500,000 and 65,000,000 will be needed by December, 1943. There is no "evidence," he added, that labor reserves—including women, Negroes and other minority groups—would prove adequate.

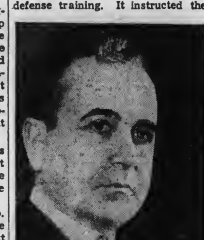
The manpower chief said he believed "the mere existence of statutory power to force an individual to serve where he is needed" would be all that is necessary to establish a system of labor allocation that would help meet the problem.

FARM MACHINERY:

On Ration List

New farm machinery and equipment went on the rationed list when Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard signed an order in Washington. The present order applies to sales for the remainder of 1942. Mr. Wickard seid a permenent order would be issued later governing 1943 sales and production.

The curtsilment program was made necessary by military requirements, the secretary added.



"The temporary rationing system for 1942," he said, "is designed primarily to control the distribution of the limited supply of farm machinery and equipment now on hand and to assure its greatest possible contribution toward meeting the goals of our food-for-freedom program."

BRAZIL:

War in Earnest

Brazil showed that it meant business in its war against the Axis when President Getulio Vargas ordered general mobilizetion. With a population of 41,000,000, this nation represented the largest source of untapped military power in the Western hemisphere.

President Vargas' military decree ordered all Brazilians to take home-defense training. It instructed the government ministers and all other federal, state and municipal agencies to take measures dealing with military, economic, scientific and labor measures necessary to defense.

Already in force was compulsory military service for males between the ages of 21 and 45. Men between the ages of 21 and 30 were placed in the "first line" with all others placed in the "second line." Action against Axis submarines was being steadily taken by the Brazilian air force. Internment of Axis fifth-columnists had been accomplished and Axis-owned banks, insurance companies and other enterprises had been closed.

MORE CHICKENS:

To Supplement Meat

More chickens in every pot were forecast when Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard called on poultry raisers to produce 200,000,000 extra fowl this fall and winter to help counteract a prospective meat shortage for civilian use.

National poultry organizations estimated that 600,000,000 additional pounds of poultry could be produced for consumers if 200,000,000 birds were reared to a weight of three pounds each. Secretary Wickard was assured that poultrymen and farmers, utilizing existing brooder houses and other production equipment not normally used to capacity during the season would participate in the program.

MIDWAY AFTERMATH:

Taps for Yorktown

Part of the price America paid for victory over the Japs in the Battle of Midway became known when the navy announced that the aircraft carrier Yorktown had been sunk after the battle as a result of Japanese bomba and torpedo attacks.

Although it had been known that the 19,900 ton carrier was put out of action during the battle, the actual loss of the vessel had been a closely kept secret.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

LONDON: Home guards throughout England are to have live ammunition for training with the weapons they will use in the event of invasion, a war office communique said. Within the next few months, millions of rounds of ammunition will be released for rifles, Sten guns, Lewis and Browning machine guns and Spigot mortars with which home guards have been trained.

OTTAWA: No relaxation of prices in Canada and no compromise in the fight against an inflationary increase in prices in commodities will be tolerated, Donald Gordon, price control head, declared. Canada's counterpart of Leon Henderson issued the statement following rumors to the effect that a breathing spell might be accorded to admit an adjustment of prices.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

FOURTH TERM DATA

Not much has been said about it publicly, but already the question of the Fourth Term has come in for a lot of backstage discussion.

Republicans, worried about it, want to do everything possible to block it. And in the vicinity of the White House, some of those who would like to stay around indefinitely, want to do everything possible to encourage it.

But those closest to the President are convinced that there will be no Fourth Term. Even if he could get it, they say that this is the last thing Roosevelt wants.

Or even if there should be a tremendous demand on the part of the public against changing horses in midstream, they don't think the President would yield. His ideals for preservation of the democratic system are too deep-rooted, they say, for him to continue in office for what would be a total of 16 years.

However, the President does have one very definite political goal, and that is to retain control of congress during his two remeining years in office.

He remembers all too clearly, when he was assistant secretary of the navy, the chsos which the country faced when Woodrow Wilson lost control of the house of representatives. He also remembers the troubles faced by Herbert Hoover, Calvin Coolidge and his cousin Teddy Roosevelt when they faced a rebellious congress during their last two years in office.

So the President is out to win the house, and win it at all costs next November. To that end he will leave Washington—something he hasn't done since 1940—and take a swing through the Middle West some time in October.

JOBS TO REPUBLICANS

Some of FDR's political advisers, among them Democratic Chairman Ed Flynn, tell him privately that the battle to control the house in November will not be easy. One trouble is patronage.

Patronage is a word which may bring a bad smell to the public, but to the politician it is like the smell of raw meat to a circus lion. He will not perform without it.

Back in the early days of the New Deal, Jim Farley kept a little card index of how every congressman voted on important issues and what jobs he had received. When the congressman stopped voting right, he stopped getting jobs for his constituents. That system worked like a charm—for a while. But in recent years Roosevelt himself has given more and more jobs to Republicans, while Leon Henderson, the greatest job dispenser of war times, has placed everything in the hands of state governors, a large proportion of them Republicans.

So today, the President's political friends say that his definition of patronage is: "Something which you hold out to your friends, but use to reward your enemies."

And these friends have had the short end of the patronage stick for so long that, as November approaches, FDR is finding a lot of the old politicoes unwilling to go to bat for him, while the rewarded enemies won't stay put.

So the congressional elections are going to be tougher than a lot of people realize, and you will probably see certain seasoned political seadogs, among them Ed Flynn, resigning from the picture before many weeks are over.

Note: Patronage under the old congressional system had a lot of faults, but it was not half as bad as under the present dollar-a-year man system, where somebody gets a key WPB job or a cellophane commission merely because he is the friend of a big accounting firm or a partner of a Wall Street broker.

WPB Seeks Greater Unity With Invitation to Labor

AFL and CIO Representatives Will Work With Management Members to Help Further Production Demands.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

When it was first announced that Donald Nelson had invited the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations to submit a list of names from which he might choose two new vice chairmen of the War Production board some eyebrows were lifted in discreet doubt.

"Politics," said the cynical. "Nelson is in a tough fight to keep the army and the navy from running away with the WPB. If he makes a generous gesture toward labor it will help him with the administration."

Later on, however, some of the labor people, neutral as between CIO and AFL began to psss the word around that Nelson was becoming sold on a greater participation of labor in councils where war production policies are being settled.

His agreement to have "a frank talk," they said, was not merely a matter of clever politics. Meanwhile, the military men have by no means given up their struggle to get control of war production and, for that matter, control of ships and shipping, the Maritime commission's domain, but that is another story.

There are many indications that labor is being brought into the foid, not merely because the union officials would naturally join forces with Nelson in any struggle between mufti and khaki, but because many people are beginning to feel that it will be a healthy thing for the much-assailed capitalistic system and the institution vaguely described as free enterprise.

In other words, it is better to try to get co-operation between capital and labor by forcing each to share the other's troubles around a table than it is to depend on fighting it out on the picket line. Especially when there are a lot of New Deal planners whose plans usually tend to give labor the break.

Two things probably have done more to bring about a growing faith in the idea of co-operation at the top instesd of strikes and lockouts at the bottom than anything else.

One is a phenomenon which has set some of the old-timers in the labor department rubbing their eyes. It is the way representatives of industry and labor on the War Labor board have pulled sround. A real, mutual respect and admiraiion has developed among some of the members of these twe camps who have been trained to believe that all on the ether side were horns. As one veteran conciliator put it to me, "We have witnessed a miracle."

The other thing that has helped has been the way in some instances (not all, by any means), that the labor-manegement committees have been able to work together. In many places this attempt to have the management of war industries sit down and talk over the problems of how to increase production has been an utter failure. In many of these cases I am told personalities are to blame. The word "personalities" covers a multitude of sins—and sinners.

Seeing Other Fellows' View

In this particular case really more than personal characteristics have been the snag. It is a case of finding men on both sides who not only have the mental and spiritual breadth to see the other fellows' view. But just plain every day experience and training have a lot to do with it, too.

When labor first spoke up and said: "We want to lend a hand," many people sympathetic with the labor viewpoint were exceedingly skeptical. They said: "Who will do the lending since labor has not yet developed in its ranks enough 'hands,' sufficiently trained in the upper-bracket category of complicated administration." That may be true.

There are outstanding exceptions in both the AFL and the CIO, but these exceptions, these men who have revealed their ability to deal with problems above the routine of union administration, politics and negotiation are so loaded down with responsibilities now that they simply cannot take on new burdens.

That is one of the difficulties that Donald Nelson knew he would have to face if he had to select two men from labor for his board. He has found it hard to find sufficient men whose breadth of viewpoint equalled their business experience in the field of industry. For that matter, it is hard to find men in any field, or in any country, who measure up to the colossal tasks the war has imposed upon them—in business, in government, in the army and navy.

If Mr. Green and Mr. Murray choose a man apiece who can live up to the requirements they will make a real contribution to the war effort. One government agency which, of its own accord, asked for such a co-worker from the ranks of labor, received one whose record proved to be so unsavory that it took some maneuvering to cloak the incident from what might heve been some very unpitying publicity. We have witnessed several similar "mistakes" in the dismissals from the WPB.

However, there is considerable optimism expressed in seme circles to the effect that labor will be able to contribute its share. The optimists point to examples of high caliber men representing opposite sides of America's work bench getting their heads together without clenching their fists. They cite the War Labor board as an example.

And these hopeful observers contend that this "miracle" which they have seen performed can be repeated. They even say that it will have to be repeated, for if labor and capital continue to fight after the war while innocent bystanders suffer in the melee, there is no escape for America from what they call the "hoosegow of State socialism."

Notes From a Broadcaster's Diary

Two men who had served in the Midway battle were interviewed on the air recently. The broadcaster, as is the custom, talked with them beforehand, wrote out the script and then submitted it to the two men. In the description of the engagement in which the men took part one man turned every "we" the interviewer had written in the script to en "I." The other turned every "I" into a "we."

Colonel Lord, a brilliant army officer who has been the right hand of Vice President Wallace in his important behind the scenes job in the Board of Economic Warfare, was recently ordered to shift to the War Production board to take charge of inventions. I ran into him in the club the other dey and asked him if he had taken up his new work. He had not, he said, and never might, because he thought he was going to be assigned (as all of his ilk would like to be) to active duty in the thick of things.

He made no comment but a brother officer sitting beside him and also chained to a desk against his will, remarked: "It's got so now that they tell us we are cowards if we try to desert Washington to get to the front."

I was crossing the park late one night. A full moon spread a coat of silver over silent lawn and sleeping trees. Suddenly I noticed ahead of me on a bench, an officer and a girl. He was a tall, attractive fellow, the ideal fighting man, squsre-shouldered, handsome. The girl was beautiful in the moonlight. They sat close together, talking earnestly. I stopped in the shadow. I felt embarrassed. It was as if I were walking into a room, an intruder, shattering the romance and beauty of that scene. They had not noticed me, so instead of walking past them I turned off and cut across the grase that carpeted my footfall.

It was quiet and as I passed behind them I could not help hearing:

"Dearest," he was saying, "you know perfectly well that you can get those extra gasoline ration tickets from your office."

We Lost This 'War'

IF WE Americans are given to boasting that "we have never yet lost a war," we'd better not look too closely into the records of one which Uncle Sam was fighting just 75 years ago. For the fact is that we actually did lose this one in the sense that we failed to whip the enemy and, having thus failed, were forced to resort to peace negotiations to end it. Moreover, it was probably one of the costliest wars we ever waged—in terms of the total cost in relation to the forces engaged and the "per capita cost of killing an enemy."

This all-but-forgotten conflict was the campaign waged against the Sioux, Cheyennes, Arapahoes, Kiowas, and Comanches in Kansas and Nebraska by Generals Winfield S. Hancock and George A. Custer in 1867. Its causes are not easy to state, involving as they do the usual elements of treaties broken by land-hungry white men and raids against the settlements by ambitious young warriors whom their chiefs could not control.

Gen. W. S. Hancock

When Hancock set out from Fort Leavenworth in April, 1867, he had a force of 1,400 men—infantry, cavalry, artillery and a pontoon train—the largest army that had yet been sent against the Indians of this region. With this necessarily slow-moving force, he started out to fight the most mobile type of light cavalry in the world—the Plains Indians who had been mounted warriors and buffalo-runners for generations.

Even the fact that four troops of the Seventh cavalry under Lieut. Col. George A. Custer was a part of his army offered little encouragement for the belief that it could campaign successfully against the wild riders of the Plains. As one of Phil Sheridan's "boy generals" in the Civil war, Custer had been an outstanding cavalry leader, but he was new to Indian warfare. His troopers—most of them raw recruits from the East—were poor stuff to send against such adversaries as the Indians soon proved to be.

Gen. G. A. Custer

By his heroic conduct during the Civil war, the commander of the expedition had justified his right to the title of "Hancock the Superb." But he was considerably less than that in dealing with the Indians and the net result of his blundering methods was to bring about a war instead of preventing one. At a council with the Kiowas at Fort Dodge he blustered and threatened but failed to frighten their chiefs into promising to make their warriors behave. He was equally undiplomatic in a council with the Sioux and Cheyennes near Fort Harker and when the Cheyennes abandoned their village as his army approached, he burned it to the ground.

Naturally the Cheyennes went on the warpath, killing settlers and employees of the stage line while Hancock's army slowly crawled over the hot prairies in futile pursuit of an enemy that couldn't be caught. Nor did Custer's cavalry fare any better. For, no matter how hard they tried, they could never catch up with their elusive foe.

By July the charge was made in the United States senate that "the war is now costing daily at least $150,000 and if it lasts through the summer (and at the present rate will certainly do that) it will cost us $100,000,000 without having accomplished anything." The war did last through the summer and, according to George Bird Grinnell in his book "The Fighting Cheyennes," Hancock's command, "while he was in the field and later, in four months of active campaigning, had killed just four Indians." If the senate estimate and Grinnell's statement are correct that meant that it cost the United States more than $4,000,000 to kill each of those four warriors! That is why it was one of the most expensive wars Uncle Sam ever waged, and by no stretch of the imagination can it be said that he won it. It was not until the Medicine Lodge treaty was signed the following October that peace returned to the Plains.

One little-known fact in connection with this little-known war is that it almost resulted fatally for the military reputation of one of its leaders. For Custer, driven almost frantic by the frustration of his efforts to win a victory over the Indians, was led into a series of rash acts that ended in a court-martial and his suspension from rank and command for a year. However, his victory at the battle of the Washita in 1868 restored him to favor of the authorities and started him on his successful career as an Indian fighter.

Feast for Fall Days—Baked Beans
(See Recipes Below.)

Pulling Purse Strings

Today, let's talk about budgets. Food budgets in particular, because they will be a major item in your life the next few months as prices slowly edge upwards, as the days slip into fall and winter and the summer bargains in foods become fewer and you have to do more juggling with figures to give your family the right food, at the best possible prices.

If you are Mrs. Average America, you will be more nutrition conscious this year than last, too. This will be not only because nutrition news has sprinted into the limelight, but because the demands of wartime living upon energy have become so great that you will have to have right foods to do your most and your best.

But, how can budgeting help you to serve "right" meals, you ask. That's simple. Buy the right foods with your dollars and you can't help serving meals that are correctly balanced.

First, divide the food dollar into fifths. One-fifth, or 20 cents, should go for vegetables and fruits. Use the next fifth for milk and cheese. The third of the fifths goes for the basis of your important meals—meats, eggs and fish.

Another fifth will be set aside for breads and cereals, while the very last 20 cents is allowed for accessory items such as butter, fats, sugar, tea, coffee and spices.

General Guide.

The 20-cent rule is not a hard and fast rule. It is only a general guide because prices of the different groups of food vary from season to season, from section to section. Use your judgment in spending.

Perhaps you get milk from the milkman, vegetables from the peddler who comes to your back door three times a week, eggs from the farm, and meat from a favorite butcher. Or, you may get all your food from one place. There is no one way to shop. Pick out what the best way is from the facilities available, but be sure to investigate those facilities before you fall into one pattern.

Shopping Carefully.

Conservation's an important note in these times. And it's mighty important in this fascinating business of stocking up the pantry. If you plan meals for, say three days, or better still, a week in advance, you will not be trotting up to the store twice every day, or calling up your grocer whose time is at a premium and whose delivery facilities have been cut in the midst of cake baking to tell him you simply must have vanilla. Make out lists, and then shop . . . for everything you need at one time.

When the snap of autumn gets into the air, use pumpkin, squash and Concord grapes. When the drifts of snow pile lightly against your door or the weather gets at least uncomfortably cold, use root vegetables and those cannad goods in the canning cupboard. In spring, strawberries, asparagus, and broilers should grace your menu. What I mean, is, serve foods-in-season! It's more than economy, it's food at its best!

Lynn Says:

The Score Card: Best bargains are found in American cheddar cheese at the present time. Production for the first five months of this year was over 50 per cent greater than for that corresponding period last year.

Apples, absent from the markets and fruit stalls during the summer, in greater quantities, are coming into their own now. Apples and honey are food affinities and will help you with sugar rationed.

Fall's bounty will also include squash, grapes, and pumpkins which add economy notes and flavorsome touches to menus.

This Week's Menu

Cream of Celery Soup
*Baked Beans
Lettuce Salad

Cheese Bargains.

Right in line with buying what is most economical at present are the bargains you can find in cheese. Cheese is much more than something you put between slices of bread or the golden orange wedge you serve with pie or crackers. It is the most economical source of protein and as such can be used as an excellent meat substitute.

Easily digestible and easily blending with almost every kind of food, it makes even the simplest dish a distinctive one because of the flavor it imparts to it. And remember, you'll get not only protein when you use it, but those other essential diet necessities like phosphorus, calcium, iron, and vitamins B, D and G.

As American as apple pie, are the American cheese stocks which we now have on hand. You'll be kind to your budget if you make use of some of these ideas:

Cheese and Baked Beans.
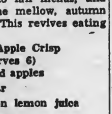
(Serves 6)



1 large can baked beans
1 cup American cheese, grated
1 cup grated bread
1 tablespoon chopped green peppers
2 tablespoons chopped celery
1 teaspoon chopped onion

Place beans in baking dish. Then add all other ingredients and three slices lean bacon over top of dish. Bake 30 minutes at 250 degrees.

Tuna and Cheese Souffle.
(Serves 6)

1 cup scalded milk
1 cup soft bread crumbs
½ cup grated American cheese
1 cup flaked tuna
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
½ teaspoon salt
3 egg yolks
3 egg whites
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Combine milk with bread crumbs and grated cheese. Flake tuna and add lemon juice, pimiento, salt and well-beaten yolks. Beat egg white stiff but not dry and fold into mixture. Turn into a buttered casserole, set in a pan of water and bake in a moderately slow (325-degree) oven 40 minutes or until golden brown.

Sugar-saving apple recipes do delightful things to fall menus, and help you get the mellow, autumn note in meals. This revives eating interest:

Honey Apple Crisp
(Serves 6)

4 cups sliced apples
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup honey
½ cup flour
¼ cup brown sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter
¼ cup walnuts, if desired

Spread sliced apples in a shallow baking dish, sprinkle with sugar, lemon juice and pour honey over all. In a bowl mix flour, brown sugar and salt and work in butter to make crumbly mixture. Spread crumbs evenly over apples (and nuts) and bake in a moderate oven (370 degrees) for 30 to 40 minutes until apples are tender and crust crisply browned. Serve with plain or whipped cream.

Tell me a Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BUILDING THE DAM

PADDY THE BEAVER was busy cutting down trees for the dam he had planned to build. Up in the woods of the north from which he had come to the Green Forest he had learned all about tree cutting and dam building and canal digging and house building. Paddy's father and mother had been very wise in the ways of the beaver world, and Paddy had been quick to learn. So now he just knew what to do and the best way of doing it. You know a great many people waste time and labor doing things the wrong way, so that they have to be done over again. They forget to be sure they are right, and go ahead, until they find they are wrong and all their work goes for nothing.

But Paddy the Beaver isn't this kind. Paddy would never have leaped into the spring with the steep sides without looking as Grandfather Frog did. So now he carefully picked out the tree to cut. He couldn't afford to waste time cutting down a tree that wasn't going to be just what he wanted when it was down. When he was sure that the tree was right he looked up at the top to be sure that when he had cut it it would fall clear of other trees. He had learned that when he was quite young and heedless. He remembered just how he had felt when after working hard, oh, so hard, to cut a big tree he had warned all his friends to get out of the way so that they would not be hurt when it fell, and then it hadn't fallen at all because the top had caught in another tree. He was so mortified that he didn't get over it for a long time.

Then he placed the poles side by side.

So now he made sure that the tree was going to fall clear and just where he wanted it. Then he sat up on his hind legs, and with his great broad tail for a brace began to make the chips fly. You know Paddy has the most wonderful teeth for cutting. They are long and broad and sharp. He would begin by making a deep bite, and then another just a little way below. Then he would pry out the little piece of wood between. When he had cut very deep on one side, so that the tree would fall that way, he would work around to the other side. Just as soon as the tree began to lean and he was sure that it was going to fall he would scamper away so as to be out of danger. He loved to see those tall trees lean slowly forward, then faster and faster till they struck the ground with a crash.

Just as soon as they were down he would trim off the branches until the trees were just long poles. This was easy work, for he could take off a good-sized branch with one bite. On many he left their bushy tops. When he had trimmed them to suit him he would tug and pull them down to the place where he meant his dam to be. There he placed the poles side by side, not across the Laughing Brook like a bridge, but with the big ends pointing up the Laughing Brook, which was quite broad but shallow right there. To keep them from floating away he rolled stones and piled mud on the bushy ends. Clear across on both sides he laid those poles until the land began to rise. Then he dragged more poles and piled on top of these and wedged short sticks crosswise between them. And all the time the Laughing Brook was having harder and harder work to run. Its merry laugh grew less merry and finally almost stopped, because you see, the water could not get through between all those poles and sticks fast enough. It was just about that time that the little people of the Smiling Pool decided that it was time to see just what Paddy was doing, and started up the Laughing Brook, leaving only Grandfather Frog and the Tadpoles in the Smiling Pool, which for a little while would smile no more.

Clean Your Paint Brushes

With imported hog bristles from which the best quality paint brushes have long been made, as scarce as the proverbial "hen's teeth," due to the war, it behooves every owner of a real imported hog bristle paint brush to take the very best care of it for the duration. Thorough cleaning with turpentine or other available paint thinner or solvent, and suspension of the brush in linseed oil to the full depth of the bristles is an effective way to prolong the life of these quality tools.

SPAGHETTI?

What's Happened To Yours, Mussolini?

GONE to feed Nazi soldiers? Something's wrong with that picture, Mussolini. Maybe you did start out with ideals, but you got into bad company.

We have spaghetti in America—plenty of it. We send some abroad to the United Nations. We also send great quantities of tomato juice, fruits, vegetables, meats . . . and still have enough left for the home front.

Yes, it's a job. We've never tried to feed half the world before and some equipment is lacking. Our food-canning industry is taxed to the limit. But we have the finest women in the world, Mussolini; they're fighting this war with kettles and spoons, pressure cookers and home-canning jars . . . preserving food at home, each for her own family. You see, it not only means a low food cost and a balanced diet—it means that commercially-canned foods can be loaded on hundreds of "food ships" for our fighting sons and brothers.

That's typical of America, Mussolini—this nation of weaklings. Come over and learn a lesson.

EASTERN TEACHERS COLLEGE

Inaugurates Most Important Work In Its History

The fall quarter of Eastern Teachers College opened Monday the 21st, in all departments including the college, training and high school. Freshman registration and orientation was held Monday and Tuesday. Upperclassmen all registered and classes began the following day.

Registration will close September 29, and Friday, September 25, is the last day to register for a full class load. The fall puarter will end December 19, with a winter quarter scheduled to begin January 4.

A program speeded up to the wartime tempo is offered at Eastern. Courses re included in the class schedule especially for training for the armed services and war industries. Amoug these are basic radio training (electronics), a general physics course made more complete and requiring less time to complete, mathematics courses, woodworking, the metal working, machine shop and other classes in specialized fields.

Eastern's R. O. T. C. field artillery unit will provide training for more than 150 boys who are candidates for commissions in U. S. Army. Eastern also has a big quota for the naval reserves, including Navy Class V-1, V-5, and V-7.

Ten members of the Eastern faculty will not be back for the 1942-43 school year. Seven are on leave of absence to do war work, while the other three have resigned.

Because of chances in teaching load and rearrangement of schedules, only four of these are being replaced at thepresent. S.R. Stevens, of Macon, Ill., will teach accounting and other commerce classes; Harvey B. Meyer, Richmond, will teach industrial arts; Miss Stella B. Yates, of Aberdeen, S. D., will teach typewriting and other commercial subjects in the high school; Raphael Flanagan, of Madison, Wis., will teach violin and public school music.

School bells began to ring last Monday and the children were called in from their vacations. Mrs. Gladys Cotton and Miss Mabel Kemper are teaching in the Dry Ridge School; Mrs. Nelba Webster, Allena King, Della N. Jones, Vadis Elliott and Kathryn Satterwhite are the local teachers, and Mrs. C. B. Love is teaching in the high school at New Liberty.

Corp. Bradford R. Kemper, of Camp Livingston, La., surprised his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Kemper, by coming home last Tuesday night for a ten-day furlough.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bromley entertained last Sunday with a birthday dinner for Mrs. Bromley and daughter, Mrs. Hazel Berkley. Those present to enjoy the day with them were: Mr. and Mrs. Jake Berkley, Berlin Berkley, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Bromley, Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe L. Beatty and family and William Smith.

Miss Evelyn Greene left Sunday for the University, where she will attend school.

Those who attended the birthday dinner given for Mrs. Lucy Stamper at her home last Sunday, were: Mrs. Nora Brock and three children, Lonnie Stewart and two sons, Clarence Burk and wife, Bob Noel and wife, Chester Noel and wife, Dallas Stewart, wife and son, Tom Thornton and wife, Mrs. Birdie Herndon and three children, Misses Verna and Naomi Stewart, Margaret and Freda Stamper, and Girtie Jameson, Eual and James Stewart, Allie Franklin Noel, Cline Cannon and son, Bill Stamper and Gayle Stewart. All enjoyed the day.

The right to
when we please

THIS is a fight-to-the-finish we are in—a grim war for survival. The stakes are the highest in all the history of mankind. And one of them is the American's traditional right to come and go when he pleases.

Our enemies say that they will erase this birthright of ours; that they'll tell us when we can come and go. But they'll find that it's easier said than done.

No goose-stepping Nazi; no squint-eyed Jap is going to tell Americans that they can't run down to the seashore or vacation in the mountains or take the children to visit Aunt Mary back home. For we are going to win this war!

How? With the bravery and the brilliance of our men in uniform. With the toil and sweat of millions of loyal workers in forest, field, factory and mine. With our genius for invention, organization and production. With the willing sacrifices of every patriotic American.

Yes, we will win this war—even if we have to lay aside for awhile our right to come and go when we please.

That's why the officers and employees of the Southern Railway System have solemnly pledged their all to the winning of the war. That's why our entire transportation plant; all our resources of man-power and experience are enlisted for the duration in the service of the nation. That's why we put the transportation needs of Uncle Sam first—before any and every civilian need—that your right to come and go when you please may be preserved for you and for the generations of Americans yet to come.

In the first seven months of this year we have carried almost 600,000 men in uniform, all moving under orders. They traveled in 24,915 coaches and Pullmans; in 1,564 special trains and 5,563 extra cars attached to our regular passenger trains. And these figures do not include the additional hundreds of thousands who have traveled over our lines on furlough or in small groups on transfer orders.

That's why our trains are often late—troop trains and war freight have the right of way. That's why they are often crowded—so many boys want to visit home at the same time. That's why we have pressed old coaches into service—in our desperate effort to help everyone to come and go when they please. That's why we have had to lower temporarily the standards of service of which we have been so proud. And that's the way we know you want it to be.

Your willing sacrifices of some travel comforts and conveniences are more than a personal contribution to the war effort. They are an inspiration to those of us who railroad to plan for the day when victory comes; to plan for a better Southern Railway System better to "Serve the South". For, with victory, we know that a new day will come to our Southland; a new day of prosperity and happiness and peace; a new day with freedom to come and go when you please.

That is worth fighting for!

Are You Needlessly Suffering Constipation?

Many people think that constipation is "one of those things" you must put up with. That the only thing you can do is take a purge or cathartic—and hope it doesn't come soon again. How foolish that is if you like millions of others, have the ordinary kind of constipation that's due to lack of "bulk" in the diet.

Kellogg's All-Bran is probably just what you need! This crisp, delicious cereal has the "bulk"-forming properties your intestines need to function "regularly"! It gets at the cause of your trouble and corrects it — helps you get back to normal, easy elimination. Eat All-Bran regularly, drink plenty of water, and help free yourself from constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, it's wise to see a doctor.

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. When they arrive in Tierra Libre they find both Zora and her husband dead. It is Mitchell's job as chief engineer for a fruit company that Jeff has been called to fill. Later Jeff's friend Bill Henderson is also killed, and Jeff suspects his employer, Senor Montaya, of murdering him and the Mitchells because they had found a clue to the strange things going on at the plantation. Other sinister figures are the company chemist, Dr. Toenjes, and the flyers, Ryden and Lannestock. Jeff and Lee discover that their housemaid is spying on them. A man named Collins arrives from the Canal Zone to see Mitchell, and Jeff hires him without arousing Montaya's suspicions. Jeff finds his cartridges have been tampered with.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIV

Before going to bed Curt talked with Monahan about Collins.

"He'll make a good man," Slats reported. "A little awkward at first, but he knows Dieseis and I'd say he had the makings."

Evidently Collins had raised speculations in Monahan, too, for Slats' voice was asking questions—who, what, why? But Curt didn't know the answers himself—and Emilio shared the same tent with him now that he had shared with Montaya on his first visit to this camp.

But the matter of Collins didn't end there. As Curt called at Montaya's office on his return to San Alejo—the following noon, Friday—he found "The Dark Lily" frowning and in a bad humor. The Spaniard came to the point without his usual circumspect approach to a subject.

"You hired a man named Collins, no?" he commenced bluntly. "I had not forbidden this especial, Mr. Curtis, but it must not be repeated. If the occasion arises to hire a person locally, I must first interview that person and decide for myself."

Curt stared, unbelieving, then fazed.

"In other words, you don't trust my judgment? Or is it me you don't trust?"

Montaya's voice became icy. "Such is not the question. If I had not trust in your judgment I would not have hired you. This, Mr. Curtis, is an ironclad rule I will not have broken." He paused, then added, "Do you know this man?"

"No. But I had a man I do know try him out. Monahan tells me he's satisfactory. I need such men badly and my hiring him doesn't tie my hands. He's not under contract."

Curt's anger showed in his face. Montaya went on to an equally irksome subject, but in a milder tone, as though to forestall an explosion.

"There is another thing. Emilio tells me you were separated on the trip."

Curt glared.

"He—ah, feared I would censure him if I should learn about it. He told me in order to protect himself. Mr. Curtis, I told you distinctly that Emilio is to accompany you—"

This was too much for Curt. He broke out hotly, "Senor Montaya, if I'm in danger I want to know it! And what the danger is! Standing a bodyguard over me hampers my movements—"

"But I do not wish to alarm you. I repeat, you are in no danger personally—so long as Emilio accompanies you!"

Curt was in a rage when he left Montaya—such a rage that he couldn't go home and face Lee at once. Too quick to read him, was Lee. Nor did he want to go to his office in his present state. So he had a Tom Collins at the club bar, then another. With the second drink he recovered himself to the point of lighting his pipe and headed for home.

There he found that Lee and the children were at the swimming pool behind the clubhouse, had been while he'd been fuming to himself just a few yards away. The cook, about to climb into a hammock slung under the house for her midday siesta, called the information to him. Ines was off duty in the middle of the day—from eleven to three—so the house was empty.

Just as well, Curt thought, for this gave him a chance to inspect his stock of cartridges. The incident of the evening before was still sharp in his mind.

He went to the escaparate in the bedroom, the tall two-door wardrobe that held his things and Lee's. From the top shelf he took down the small paper box that held the rest of this lot of bullets.

He turned it over in his hands, read the label, spilled the contents onto the bed. He examined the shells one by one, but could detect nothing wrong with them.

The bullets he'd shot simply hadn't had standard charges. Then the rest could be faulty, too. While turning this over in his mind his hand was pushing the bullets absently into piles of six, the number held in a clip.

His brows knit. He counted the piles again. Yes, six in each, and there were four piles. But here were three bullets left over! Twenty-seven bullets on the bedspread.

He thought back. He hadn't shot the gun since about a year ago, when he'd done some target practice using three full clips—eighteen shells—from a fresh box. A fourth loading of six from the same box had been in his gun ever since landing here.

Each box held fifty. Eighteen and six and twenty-seven are fifty-one. There should have been but fifty. Someone had replaced his supply of cartridges—and those loaded in his gun—with cleverly forged, undercharged shells. Ha! but they'd made a mistake in counting his good bullets and had left one too many in their place! This must be the explanation of those duds he'd shot.

Now, who could have done this? Who had access to the house? Ines, of course! Her name leaped to mind, knowing as he did that she deliberately spied on him in his family life. Lee took the children to the pool each day, the girl had plenty of opportunity.

Thoughtfully Curt went to a wardrobe trunk in a corner of the room, unlocked it, and took from one of the drawers a fresh box of cartridges. This he broke open, to load his clip with shells he knew to be good. He also loaded two spare clips which he slipped into his pocket.

The two three-yard shovels ordered before Curt took over, would arrive on Saturday—tomorrow. So Montaya had said. Curt wanted to be on hand at Cabeza de Negro when the ship docked. This meant he would have to go down river on the first boat at daylight, all of which gave him an excuse to spend the night at Tempujo and thus avoid the questions he knew Lee would have for him—when she caught his present mood.

He packed his musette bag with fresh clothing, scribbled a note for Lee, and left.

The afternoon he spent at his office cleaning up detail work, then pulled out for Tempujo. There, too, he plunged into paper work for an hour, then at seven had supper at the mess-hall. Emilio, of course, clung like a leech.

"Senor Montaya will be here early on Sunday," Curt told his shadow. "He wants to talk with Collins. Get word to camp by the supply launch in the morning for Collins to come to Tempujo on its return. It'll be the last chance to get him here in time."

He got to bed early, put in a good night's rest, and, after snatching breakfast in the cold gray of the false dawn, made an uneventful trip down river to Cabeza. Emilio Vargas was silent with early morning sulks.

Two ships were in port. One was Japanese—the Keilo Maru. It had docked the day before. The other was a Norwegian steamer chartered by the company for the New Orleans run. This ship carried the two tractor shovels, minus their booms and dippers, as a deck load.

Ryden was on hand and in a short humor. He spoke in grunts or monosyllables. Curt tried a pleasantry or two and when these didn't work fell silent.

It was midmorning by the time the tarpaulins had been removed and the first shovel lowered over the side to the dock. Its own brakes released, the big machine was hauled by the dock's baby tractor to the side of the river steamer then loading.

Curt's purpose in coming to Cabaza had been two-fold. First was the natural anxiety to get at the new machines, the child's reaction toward promised toys. But, specifically, he'd intended trying to jolly Ryden into delivering them at the job upriver, instead of at Tempujo.

In any case, Ryden's present humor meant a definite refusal of Curt's plan, together with possible unpleasantness, perhaps even a quarrel, so Curt remained silent, puffing steadily at his pipe as he glumly looked on.

He stood on one foot, the other planted firmly on a keg. Emilio straddled another keg nearby. Ryden came up behind the two and now offered his first voluntary remark of the day.

"Am I handling satisfactory so far?"

There was no mistaking the guttural-voiced sarcasm. Curt swung around leisurely, looked at Ryden a moment, and his lips framed a natural reply. But, determined not to quarrel with the man, instead of answering insolence with insolence Curt indicated a huge, square case then being hoisted by the thick-rope cargo carried to the deck of the river steamer. The box hovered over the open hatch, then slowly disappeared into the hold. There was a twin to the box on the dock awaiting its turn.

Both cases were of heavy lumber, were marked from Hamburg via Vladivostok, and the labeled inscription said they were generators. Electrical equipment was of prime interest to Curt, who was responsible for the electric plants at San Alejo and Tempujo, if not for the small plant at the airfield.

Pointing with his pipe stem, he asked mildly, "Those generators. Are they for me? I didn't know of any on order."

The Swede stared through and through Curt. At length he said thickly, "Ask Senor Montaya, if you must know. I know only my own job."

Curt's temper had been building up for a blow-off ever since his encounter with Montaya yesterday. Still, he'd nursed himself along so far and nothing was to be gained by words. With a jerk of his head at Emilio he strode angrily from the dock. Vargas, his features set incuriously, followed, trotting to keep up.

"Clubby chap, what?" said Curt, with a short laugh, when he could trust his own voice. To help cover his feelings he fumbled with his pipe, knocking out the ashes, stuffing it again. Then he simmered down and added grudgingly, "Of course, he's right in a way, but aren't we all working toward one end here? I need a drink. How about you?"

Ha was about to turn into the cantina he'd visited the day of landing here, but Emilio held back.

"There's another bar down the street," he said hurriedly. "You may like it better."

Curt, however, was in a mood.

"Man, what's the difference, this one, that one? Come along!" He pushed Emilio into the room and to the bar.

Fresh from the glaring sun, his eyes didn't take in the scene immediately. He was half blind as he mounted a stool, ordered a drink, and indicated with a wave of the hand that Emilio should order for himself.

Then his pupils expanded. In the mirror behind the bar he saw the Tierra Libre customs official and his lieutenant. They were drinking and playing poker dice with a man whose face was vaguely familiar. Curt had noticed on the dock that morning that there had been no customs official to inspect freight as it was unloaded. He'd given this no special thought at the time.

To cover his thoughts, but still frowning, Curt pulled a notebook from his pocket, scribbled a few words, ripped out the page. He pushed the paper toward Emilio.

"I need a hundred men at Tempujo by one o'clock," he growled. "Also, the launch will have to make another trip to the leves camp to bring down Monahan. Get this message off for me, will you?"

All the while, however, he was racking his brain over the third man with the customs officers. He was a Nordic, certainly. At last it came to him. Tha man was one of the mechanics who'd been working at the C. A. T. airfield the day of his visit there.

As they returned to the dock Emilio had the radio message sent off, and by eleven they were on their way back to Tempujo with the one machine this steamer could carry.

Reaching the river port by one-thirty, he found Collins and the rapidly gathering gang of men. Monahan arrived by two o'clock, and the rest of the day was spent in getting the two machines assembled, serviced, and on their way to pick up their sectors of levee work.

This job went smoothly, however, and it was just as well, Curt was thinking, that he hadn't made an issue of his plan to unload on the river bank at the job. If things went as well tomorrow, the two shovels would be at work Monday morning.

But it had been a strenuous, tiring job. After an early supper at the Tempujo mess-hall—with Collins and Monahan occupying a table not far from Curt and Emilio—Curt returned to his bungalow.

He switched on the lights, flung his hat to the table by the door. Emilio settled himself on the porch, with magazines and his ever-ready pack of native cigarillos. Curt had his trip across the river in mind. This was Saturday, the night he'd arranged to meet McInnis at Riverbend. He had to get rid of Vargas somehow.

"I'm going to bed," he told the man. "Need a good night's rest. You'd better get one, too. When you leave, see that the night latch is on. Good night."

"Buenas noches, Senor."

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

I can remember, many years ago, a physician putting his fingers on the pulse of one of my relatives and telling her sister afterwards that the patient's arteries were 20 years older than they should be for her age. Blood pressure instruments were not in general use at that time. Had the blood vessels been soft, more elastic to the touch, the physician could have given a more hopeful outlook for this case of apoplexy.

Dr. Barton

Today, every physician uses the blood pressure instrument, in addition to feeling the "resistance" of the blood vessels. Even if the blood pressure is high at times, if blood vessels are not hard, the physician assures the patient and family that the trouble is not organic but functional. Functional disturbances are usually due to nervousness and emotional disturbances which cause the individual to be in a state of continuous tension. Tension of nerves, muscles and blood vessels can alter tha workings of the various organs of the body and cause symptoms resembling symptoms caused by true or organic disease.

The explanation of functional high blood pressura is simple; tha tenseness of nerves and muscles causes a tightness or partial closure of tha blood vessels. Naturally it takes more pressure to push blood through small blood vessels than through large blood vessels.

What causes true or organic high blood pressure?

In the functional type the blood vessels are not changed in structure, they are still elastic, but are in a "tightened" condition only at times. In true or organic high blood pressure the elastic walls of the blood vessels (due to infections or other conditions) have lost some of their elastic tissua which has been replaced by hard, fibrous or scar tissua. Thus, as the walls of the blood vessels cannot stretch when blood is being pressed or forced through them because of this "hardened" condition, more pressure must be used to push blood through them. And as tha walls are "always" hard so will tha blood pressure be always high.

However, even when the walls are permanently hardened, physicians can, by prescribing rest, proper diet and sometimes surgery, enable the patient to liva many years and delay or prevent heart or brain stroke.

Nicotinic Acid for Meniere's Disease

In suggesting the use of nicotinic acid and thiamin chloride in the treatment of Meniere's disease, Drs. Harold E. Harris and Paul M. Moore Jr., in Medical Clinics of North Americe, outlina their understanding of what is meant by Meniere's syndrome, Meniere's disease, and Meniere's symptom complex as it is variously called. The symptoms or characteristics ara:

1. Sudden attacks of dizziness in which the dizziness is of the turning variety rather than up and down.
2. Deafness, more marked in one ear, and gradually growing worse.
3. Tinnitus—ringing or noises—more marked in the ear with tha greatest loss of hearing.
4. Nausea and vomiting usually present, depending upon the severity of the attack.
5. The attacks come at irregular intervals and gradually increase in number and severity.
6. Aside from ear noises and deafness, the patient is perfectly well between attacks.

What is the cause of Meniere's disease? There is apparently no one cause; infection, anaemia, kidney, stomach or liver disease, ear conditions, allergy or sensitiveness to foods may be causes, but in most cases the cause is unknown.

Drs. Harris and Moore found that these patients were almost all vegetarians, or ate a lot of starch and very little meat. The absence of grinding teeth was also noted. By the use of nicotinic acid and thiamin chloride given by mouth, the patient is usually free of attacks at the end of three months.

In addition to this drug treatment, plenty of proteins—meat, fish, eggs—and a high vitamin diet are used. The patient is asked to eat one-half to three-quarters pound of rare, red, ground meat per day, also one-half pound of liver three times per week, wheat germ and raw vegetables.

QUESTION BOX

Q. What is considered a normal pulse rate for men and women?

A. Normal heart rate is about 72 to 76 for men, 76 to 80 for women. Normally heart rate and pulse rate are the same.

Q. Please describe the symptoms of cirrhosis of the liver. Is this curable?

A. Cirrhosis of liver is hardening of cells of the liver. General health must be kept up. There is no known treatment. It may last for years.

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for September 27

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

JOSEPH: AN EXAMPLE OF FORGIVENESS

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 45:1-15; 47: 11, 12.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Ephesians 4:32.

Forgiveness, opening the way for the restoration of fellowship and the showing of kindness, brought the story of Joseph and his brethren to a happy ending. Under the good hand of God the story which began with tragedy is brought to a conclusion of blessing.

Following the earnest plea of Judah, the heart of Joseph could no longer withhold itself from the full expression of affection and devotion to his family.

I. Love Overcomes Fear (vv. 1-4).

Joseph tenderly shielded the family troubles from the eyes and ears of strangers by sending out the Egyptians. It was tha first step of consideration which paved the way for reconciliation. How often just the opposite is done—airing family affairs before the world, and humiliating those who may be in the wrong, thus making it difficult for them to admit their guilt.

Then, too, this was a moment too tender and delicate to be seen by outsiders. The tears of a strong man like Joseph mean a deep movement of spirit—a solemn and often a sacred moment.

It should also be noted that the brothers were afraid, and well they might be, because of their sin against Joseph. After almost 50 years these unrepentant men found themselves face to face with the one whom they had supposed they had disposed of, and they knew their sin had found them out. It always does, sooner or later, but inevitably.

How great and noble was the forgiving love of Joseph; an example to us, especially appropriate and needed in a world of hate and bitterness.

II. Grace Overrules Sin (vv. 5-8).

The guilt of these men was none the less and Joseph could not remove it, but he encouraged them by showing how God had used their evil devices to work out His own good pleasure. He can make the wrath of man to praise Him (Ps. 76:10).

It is worth stressing again that in the very hour when the prospects for Joseph's future usefulness seemed ruined, God was opening the door to the greatest experiences of his life and was preparing him to serve the thousands whose lives were saved by his wisdom and ability in the years of famine.

Nothing is more important in the life of a child of God than to be yielded to His will, unmoved by circumstances, abiding His time, responding to His guidance whether it be by the opening or closing of doors, prosperity or adversity. And herein is the marvel of it all—even sin may be overruled by God's grace for His own glory. That does not invite anyone to sin that grace may abound (Rom. 6:1, 2), but it does offer encouragement to the one who has fallen, that God can redeem the years that the locust have eaten (Joel 2:25).

Our lesson also sets us an example of how true forgiveness acts, something we need. So often when forgiveness is asked or granted there is an "I can forgive but I can't forget" attitude, which means that while hostilities have ceased, at least temporarily, there is no real friendship or the disposition to show kindness. Is there any real forgiveness at all in such an attitude of heart and mind? We fear not.

III. Kindness Provides the Best (vv. 9-15; 47:11, 12).

It might have been enough to send food and a kind greeting with the brothers to their own land, but love does not seek the minimum expression of its feeling. It asks not how little, but how much can I give or do.

Bringing his aged father and brothers into the land of plenty was not enough, Joseph also gave to them the "best of the land" (47:11). His thoughtful consideration in sending for his father (Gen. 46:5-7) was part of the same piece of kindness.

Joseph puts to shame the modern "hard-boiled" attitude toward needy and aged members of the family. In their eager and relentless pursuit of fame or riches, many ignore or trample upon the members of their own families. Often they are ashamed of the broken bodies, the humble apparel, the broken or uneducated speech of their parents. They fear lest their new-found friends in the circle of wealth and supposed "position" will think them strange or ridiculous. God pity the man or woman who is ashamed of a humble or aged father and mother!

Joseph, who really had an exalted position gained by merit and by the blessing of God, never forgot his place before God as a son in the family and as a brother. Let us consider him and do likewise.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous matter to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

CHEERFUL GUY

"Very few mosquitoes here, aren't there?"

"Yes—but the hotels all sting you."

HIS LINE

A man went to the vicar about having his son christened. "What do you want to name him?" asked the clergyman.

"Homer," was the somewhat disconcerting reply.

"Ah!" said the vicar. "You're fond of the classics, eh?"

"Classics," said the man absently. "No, I don't go in for horse-racing much. Pigeon racing's my line."

POOR TOM!

"Are you sure Tom's wife is back from the country?"

"Oh! Yes. He returned my poker chips this morning."

By Grantland Rice

Grantland Rice

JUST how much training and hard driving can the human system stand? When it comes to a matter of lifting a human being to peak form, training is one of the most subtle of all the arts. It is a job that calls for expert treatment.

For example, I was talking about this with Col. Bob Neyland, head coach of the army team. Colonel Neyland knows what condition means as well as anyone I've run across.

"The point you have to watch," he said, "is the human limit. You can't afford to pass that point. In my many years of coaching I've seen squads brought up to 80 per cent efficiency when it came to blocking or tackling. When we tried to lift this 80 per cent to 85 per cent by harder work and longer time, on almost every occasion the squad would drop back to 75 per cent or even 70 per cent. They were willing enough to give all they had, but physical and mental fatigue would leave its poison and the extra work was worse than wasted. It was harmful."

Football and War

If this goes for football, it also goes for training needed in war. A good many people, knowing that war is a tougher game than football, or any other game ever invented, can't understand why a soldier shouldn't be worked from daybreak reveille to nightfall. They can't see why any recreation is needed.

But those who know their business in the army and navy understand the cracking point.

When anyone is packed with mental and physical fatigue, there must he resting spots, as every good trainer knows. After that point he can't absorb any further development in skill or condition for the time being.

This is why both the army and navy have been smart in getting so many physical conditioners who know what should he done.

Golf, for another example, is not a killing game. Bnt a fatigued golfer is rarely any good. The message that comes from a tired brain to tired nerves and muscles is always badly blurred.

The Surest System

The surest system is to start training kids from 13 to 16 years of age. They can he trained to walk from 10 to 12 miles a day. As they get a little older this can he lifted to 15 miles or 20 miles. We have too many hundreds of thousands of boys from 13 to 16 who have known far too little leg work. At that age body contact should be light, to he increased from year to year.

Someone was smart enough in both Germany and Japan to start training these younger boys as far back as 10 years ago. Standing before the Army-Redskin game in the Los Angeles Coliseum a few weeks ago several of us from the top tower looked down on the Olympic swimming stadium, recalling Jap swimmers from 14 to 16 years of age winning distant swimming events. These youngsters had been started at the age of nine or ten. Some of them were among the Jap troops that swam to Hong Kong.

I have mentioned before about the hundreds of thousands of German kids from 12 to 16 who were in hard training all over Germany during the 1936 Olympic games. In this respect both Germany and Japan, knowing the inevitability of a war they were going to start, made this youth training a national plan.

This youth training isn't a matter of surmise, but a matter of fact and of record. I still recall an old Southern Civil war poem to Little Giffen of Tennessee. Part of it ran like this—

"Smitten with grapeshot and gangrene—
Sixteenth battle—and he fourteen."

The Only Way

Almost every athlete of any importance started his game as a kid. You never develop stars who start after 25 or 30.

Bob Jones began playing golf at the age of eight. Jack Dempsey was street-fighting at the age of 10. Babe Ruth was playing baseball at 11.

You never make the Big League starting some game after 20. The knack comes to younger minds and younger muscles—to kids who came along to championships later on.

If this is true in sport, it must be true in many phases of combat work in war—flying, marching, shooting, swimming, parachute jumping—any part of the war games that calls for skill and stamina. So far this has been overlooked in this country.

For the army or navy I'd much rather have a 16-year-old boy than a civilian beyond 30 or 35. The latter are game enough. They will have just as much courage. But they can't have that unbeatable gift of youth—so much more easily taught, so much more effective when the showdown arrives.

Farmers Should Fill Own Nitrogen Needs

Increase of Legume Crops Stops Depletion of Soil

By growing legume crops that produce nitrogen naturally in the soil, American farmers are making it possible for Uncle Sam to use a very large amount of the commercial nitrogen supply for turning out bombs, shells and submarine depth charges with which to heat the Axis, according to a statement made public by the Middle West Soil Improvement committee.

"How essential nitrogen is in the war effort," says the statement, "may he understood from the fact that there is enough of this element in a ton of nitrate of soda to make three aerial bombs or three submarine depth charges.

"As the war progresses, more and more nitrogen will have to be diverted to the armed forces. This means that farmers will have to produce more of their own nitrogen supply through a greatly increased acreage of legumes this fall and next spring.

"Science has revealed that the air is about four-fifths nitrogen. Legumes such as alfalfa or clover have the ability to fix atmospheric nitrogen in nodules on their roots. Under proper plant food and bacterial conditions in the soil, a good crop of legumes will add over 100 pounds of available nitrogen to an acre of land, plus a goodly supply of organic matter.

It is all right by farmer Asa Ashworth, Singer, La., if the demands of war use the commercial nitrogen for explosives to put an end to the Axis. He's talking things over here with a few soldiers from a nearby camp.

"Fortunately for agriculture, the commercial supply of phosphorus and potash is sufficient to meet the needs of farmers everywhere for fertilizer. This is especially important in view of the fact that legume crops require a hountiful supply of phosphorus and potash to insure good stands and promote the fixation of nitrogen."

Cranberries

Good news for cranberry growers is the discovery of "ursolic acid" which is derived from skins discarded in the making of cranberry sauce. The acid is an emulsifying agent which helps make oil and water mix, and is so rare that it is valued at $80 an ounce.

From the oil of cranberry seeds is obtained vitamin A which can be added to other foods lacking in this vital element. Until this discovery, cranberry seeds were discarded in canning. It may be some time before either of these new products will he manufactured commercially.

Meanwhile the canning of cranberries and hottling of cranberry juice are growing industries. Experiments are under way to find a use for the wax-like coating of the cranberry.

The best land for the cultivated berry are the bogs and marshes of Massachusetts, Wisconsin and New Jersey where the bush once grew wild. The land is flooded to prevent drouth, to protect the bushes from frost, and destroy insects. It is drained for the ripening and picking season.

Cranberries got their name from the trailing branches and stems curved like the neck of a crane, and the tiny flowers, shaped like a crane's bill. The original name, craneberry, was shortened to cranberry.

Home Pork Consumption

There should be a 225-pound hog slaughtered on every farm annually for each two members of the family, says Ellis V. Vestal, extension swine specialist of North Carolina State college. The average person on the farm requires about 72 pounds of pork and 15 pounds of lard each year.

The extension swine specialist recommends the selection of feeder pigs which are of a medium-weight type, and have good-sized bones.

WALTON COLORED HOMEMAKERS CLUB

The Colored Homemakers of Walton met Wednesday, September 16, at the home of Mrs. Elmer Ross. The meeting was very interesting. Roll call was answered with "Why I'm Thankful I Live in America." The new officers filled their places, and the club pin was presented to Mrs. Joe Howlett, the new president, by Mrs. Estill Sleet,the retiring president. The members and all their friends are doing their bit toward the war problem by contributing used fat. The major project given by Mrs. M. Moore was "Hints and Ideas of fall and winter clothing." Remodeling and making over old clothes. Mrs. Hess Vest gave a few suggestions concerning fall and winter headwear.

After the business session a delicious covered dish luncheon was served. Members present included Mrs. Walter Sleet, Mrs. W M. Sleet, Mrs. Robert Sleet, Mrs. Joe Howlett, Mrs. James Riddell, Mrs. John Brown, Miss Annie P. Ross, Mrs. James Ingram, Miss Martha Johnson, Mrs. Lucy Johnson, Miss Adeline Sleet, Mrs. Clint Riley; Leaders, Mrs. W. W. Rouse, Mrs. M. S. Moore, Mrs. H. NICHOLSON NEWS—

"Prepare for the coming of the Lord and flee the wrath to come" many have forgotten God, but in this hour of stress and care when darkness is sweeping over the earth, may there be a general turning unto Him. Christians are privileged to work with Him for the salvation of men.

Dwight Maddox, noble young son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Maddox, was guest of honor at a family gathering at the residence of his paternal grandmother, Mrs Joseph Maddox, Sunday. Realizing that our freedom was imperilled and that no price was too great to pay for victory and all that we hold dear, he expects to enlist shortly and take up arms in defense of our beloved country. Don the uniform and help in the greatest emergency the world has ever faced. His many friends wish him God speed and the very best of good luck, arcently hoping that he will return soon triumphantly. He recently was united in marriage to Miss Martha Weldon, attractive daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Courtland Weldon. Through the kindness of Mrs. Walter Maddox and Mrs. Boyd Elliott, and bright little children, we received two plates of the lovely "going awey" dinner consisting of all of the delicacies of the season, which was deeply appreciated.

It's "An Old Army Custom"

A SOLDIER'S time is not his own. Every minute of furlough means a lot to him and to his morale. He's away from home and his dear ones and the few hours he gets "in town" mean much to give him a "lift" in spirit and fighting ability. With the service man, every minute counts and when he must report back at a certain time—it means just that, not one minute later.

When granted a furlough, these men turn naturally to Greyhound because schedules are frequent and well-timed . . . no long waits that waste precious hours. Greyhound buses operate right up to most military post gates, saving time, money, and inconvenience. Greyhound gives preference to military men in boarding buses because it is vital for them to report to duty on time. Many of them are changing posts, or reporting to duty for the first time and it is a national expediency that these men be given the fastest means of transportation FIRST. Civilian needs must be secondary. Remember, those boys are in there fighting for you and me.

Yes, both the military and civilian armies prefer Greyhound . . . and Greyhound is bending every effort humanly possible to serve them both.

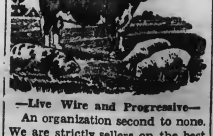
GOOD LIGHT MEANS BETTER GRADES NOW AND A BETTER JOB LATER

Sight is the most precious of the five senses. Eighty-seven per cent of all that children learn is through their eyes and their ability to fill useful jobs and enjoy the things of life depends so much on good eyesight.

You want your child to have every advantage, so see that he has plenty of good light for home study. Time and again it has been proved that good light helps children learn more rapidly . . . results in better grades.

Homework's a snap with an I.E.S. Study Lamp equipped with 100-watt bulb. Its white glass diffusing bowl sifts out harmful glare . . . provides both direct and indirect light in abundance. Ask for a free trial.



Put an I.E.S. Study Lamp on the table where your child does his homework. And have good light elsewhere throughout your home—well shaded and free from glare. Light all of each room, too, not just part of it.

Good light today is so inexpensive that no one can afford the cost of poor light. Protect priceless eyesight. Enjoy better light tonight.

WALTON HIGH SCHOOL REMAINS IN CLASS B CRED.

Therehas been in the past few days some discussion as to the status of Walton-Verona High School.

This is an official notice dated December 15, 1941, from the State Department of Education, Frankfort, Ky.

Mr. Walter F. Coop, School Supt.
Walton, Ky.

Dear Mr. Coop:

This is to advise you that at the last meeting of the accrediting committee, held in this office on December 13, the Walton High School was reaccredited Class B.

Very truly yours,
MARK GODMAN
Director of Supervision

The following statement is taken from the University of Kentucky Bulletin.

"Graduates of Kentucky high schools accredited by the Kentuky Association of Colleges and Secondary are admitted to the University on certificate, provided they have fifteen units of high school work acceptable to the University. These fifteen units must include five basic units as follows: three in English, one in algebra, and one in plane geomctry. The remaining ten units----may be distributed among the other subjects usually offered in high school."

Class A high school:

According to the rules of the State Department of Education a six-year high school (Grades 7-12) with seven full time teachers and an enrollment of 150 pupils of which 100 are in grades9-12 may be Class A high school. Your high school has none of these requirements

Class B high school:

A six-year high school (grades 7-12) must employ at least four full-time teachers and have a bona fide enrollment of not fewer than eighty-five pupils, sixty of whom shall be enrolled in grades 9-12. Your high school has more than this requirement. Your high school has four and one-half full-tim e teachers, sixty-nine pupils in grades 9-12 and 114 in grades 7-12. This makes your high school Class B. If you wish to make it a Class A, then you should do your bit to get more pupils in your high school. Improvements will come only with a larger enrollment. With this years increase plus the number who did not return your high school would have almost met the requirements of a Class A high school this year. If this year's increase continues one more year and had those not left your school next year you would have had a Class A high school.

Whether a high school is Class A or Class B attaches no stigma to a high school graduate who enters college. You will note this in the above quotation taken from the University of Kentucky Bulletin.

The greatest single source of scrap metal in the county—the farms has not yet been worked intensively. The simple reason for this is the fact that since early spring few farmers of the county have had any time for diversion from the all essential job of producing food for our country at war and our Allies.

It's been a busy, busy season, with pressure on every farmer, working short-handed or with no help at all. But now, with harvest about over it's a foregone conclusion that our farmers will respond to the urgent appeal, and to the last man.

The need for scrap metal to make steel, with which to implement our war efforts is critical NOW, and before the month is out we want every pound to be on its way. Here's what every one on the farm can do as his part.

First. Right now start gathering in to a yard near your road every piece of scrap iron or steel on your farm. Search everywhere, in the house in and around the barn, the tool shed and all other buildings; along fence rows, in fence corners, in a gully. Do not leave a piece. Rubber of any kind, rags, rope and burlap are also wanted and will be collected but scrap metal is most important. We must have that, and quickly too.

Second. Keep wire, metal sheets and lighter pieces separate from the heavier, solid ones. Keep copper, brass zinc, aluminum seperate too. This will make handling easier and bring more money when delivered to a scrap dealer.

Third. Have accurate information or estimate ready when a canvasser calls. This may be a Boy Scout, 4H club boy, WPA worker or a neighbor. If he hasn't yet called he will be to see you sometime in the next week or two. Tell him what you have, its location; estimate its weight. Also whether you have means to deliver in town; or if necessary to a nearby point on wagon, sled or log chain. Lastly, whether you wish to receive the proceeds of sale of your scrap or whether you wish the proceeds to go to any charity or organization you name.

Fourth. When canvasser calls back turn over your scrap promptly at the place and in the way he has arranged. The place may be at your gate, down the road two a farm, or at the head of your road. It is his job to arrange deliveries according to the weights, locations and trucking facilities so that everyone's scrap can be handled in the easiest, quickest way, and with the greatest effectiveness and economy.

Just a word about the sale of your scrap. Many people designate Red Cross, USO, Boy Scouts, a church, a school or some favorite charity to which the money therefor is to go when received from scrap dealer. That is fine and is greatly appreciated by all. But don't hang back or be in any way ashamed to demand the money from the sale of yours. You may have a personal use or you may wish to make a contribution in person, or may feel you have done your share. That's all right for in either case our Country needs your scrap.

Let's do our share. Let's get in the last pound. All deliveries to count now on the newspaper awards. Let's earn one for the county, for our club or for ourselves. Most of all, let us all be loyal and true to our country and our armed forces, defending our freedom.

Mrs. Allen Gaines and Mr. Heizer, Campaign Managers of the Scrap Metal Drive, and several from Walton attended the meeting at Burlington, Friday afternoon.

Mr. Charles H. Mullican, of Louisville, gave a very forceful address, urging that every effort be made to have the people understand the necessity of this campaign.

Mr. Pryor L. Tarvin, of the Covington Times-Star, also added his message, to encourage our efforts.

"We are going to make a great effort to reach our quota in Boone County, and if our citizens do their duty as good Americans to meet this vital issue as so impressively pointed out by our speaker, we will greatly exceed our quota.

Not next year, but today, we stand face to face with the vital, critical, urgent and immediate problem of finding and collecting every single piece of scrap metal in our country for the drive commencing Oct. 12 to Oct. 31

We have received a letter from Frankfort, stating: "Kentucky's Highway Department, actin guder orders of Highway Commissioner J. Lyter Donaldson, will give its fullest cooperation in the salvage drive for scrap metal and all other such materials to aid in the nation's war effort."

Now With The U. S. Navy

Malcolm F. Simpson, an employee of the Walton Advertiser, for more than 12 years, and Editor for the past three years, left Monday for Great Lakes Training Station. Mr. Simpson enlisted in the Navy several weeks ago. He was allowed time for a short vacation and to arrange his affairs before leaving. He will be greatly missed by his many friends here, who extend to him their best wishes.

REVIVAL AT BIG BONE BAPTIST CHURCH

Revival meeting will begin at Big Bone Baptist Church Sunday, Oct. 4th, and continue thru two weeks, with Evangelist Paul Montgomery, of Louisville, bringing the messages. Mrs. Montgomery will be with him, and will render special solos. The meeting will begin Sunday with an all-day session, and other speakers will talk throughout the day. Everybody invited to bring dinner and enjoy the day.

ANNUAL MEETING OF HOMEMAKERS

John F. Williams, referee and director Boys Department, Juvenile Court, Cincinnati, will be the guest speaker at the Boone County Homemakers Seventh Annual Meeting. Mr. Williams has been president of the Cincinnati Social Workers Club, a vice president of the American Association of Social Workers; and is at present a member of the National and Ohio Probation Associations.

The meeting will be held on Tuesday, October 6, at the Florence Methodist Church. Registration will be at 10 a.m. E.W.T., and the lunch. 35 cents, will be served by the Missionary Society.

The Florence high school band will be a feature of the program.

Each club will se e which one has the largest percentage of members present.

HOME-COMING AT CARTER'S

Sunday, Oct. 11, Carter's Chapel Methodist Church, Gardnersville, will hold its Annual Home-Coming. Former pastors and preachers, old friends and members from the surrounding community and as many as three States have gathered together at this sacred spot for six successive years on the occasion to enjoy gospel preaching, singing, and a fellowship with old friends.

This year is to be no exception. Church School begins at 10 a. m. central war time. Get the children there for this service. At the 11 o'clock worship hour, one of the former preachers of the local church, will bring the message and special music will be rendered. Lunch will be spread at 12:-30 The afternoon service will begin at 2:30 p. m. ,and many good things in sermon, song and testimony await those who come.

Carter's Chapel extends a cordial invitation to all its friends to enjoy the day of spiritual blessings. T. O. Harrison, Pastor.

Rouse; Secretary, Ora Stone; Treasurer, John L. Vest; Conductress, Glenna Cleek; Associate Conductress, Helen Bedinger. At the close of the meeting a lovely lunch was enjoyed by all members present.

W. C. T. U. TO MEET

The October meeting of W. C. T. U. will be held in the Methodist Church, Friday, Oct. 2, at three o'clock.

Mr. Guy R. Downs, of the Guy Downs Realty Co., Shelbyville, visited friends here Monday.

THE GARDEN

Cabbage — As in other years, some gardeners had cabbage failures, but the causes were old, old ones, the diseases Black Rot and yellows. Black Rot causes the blackening and dropping-off of the leaves. At best, only small heads form and these, lop-sided and unfit for use. When "frost-proof" plants are used, a certain amount of Black Rot loss must be accepted, because the plant growers as a rule do not treat the seed, and the disease is seed-borne. Sometimes, the gardners themse,ves are at fault, in that they do not observe rotation, but follow cabbage with cabbage, or radishes or turnips with greens of the cabbage family, and so keep the disease "alive." For example, radishes and turnips with "black tails" are a sign of cabbage Black Rot.

To escape Black Rot, plants from disease-free seed must be used, and there should be a "skip" of a year between cabbage and its kinfolks.

Yellows is the disease that causes outright death of cabbage plants, sometimes even before it is a sign of a head. This disease carries over in the soil and stays, nobody knows how long. Rotation is no control, but using yellows-resistant strains and varieties is the only way out. All seed catalogues carry a complete list early to late, and some "seed-boxes" carry at least one: "Wisconsin All-Season."

USE COVER CROPS EARLY AND SAVE FEED COST

This year the use of all cover crops on cropped land during the past season is vitally important and every effort should be made by farmers to sow a record number of acres in Kenton County.

Cover crops are needed for four reasons,—to produce cheap feed for livestock in the form of pasture and grazing, to check soil erosion, to add organic matter to the soil, and to add nitrogen to the soil by using winter legumes, winter vetch.

Good cover crops, seeded early on good land, supply large amounts of highly nutritious feed to all classes of livestock. Reports show that feed costs may be reducedfrom 15 to 50 percent where good cover crops are available for pasturing. Balbo rye, barley, oats and wheat, or mixtures of these crops with winter vetch make good pastures if seeded early enough to become established before freezing weather.

NITROGEN FERTILIZERS LIMITED IN 1943

Nitrogen fertilizers in 1943 will be available in limited quantities for only a few crops. Mr. Russell Hunt, tobacco specialist from theKentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics, is recommending that where the 1942 tobacco crop was grown on good, well fertilized land,a winter legume like hairy vetch should be seeded immediately. By this practice the same land can be put back in tobacco in 1943.

The turning under of winter vetch that has been properly inoculated a large amount of nitrogen is added to the soil.

The same principle applies to corn, potatoes, and other crops.

SUCCESS WITH COVER CROPS DEPENDS UPON EARLY SEEDING, GOOD LAND, A PLENTY OF SEED AND PROPER SOIL PREPARATION.

LIST WAYS TO KEEP LIVESTOCK HEALTHY

Farm animals and poultry really struggle to live in response to one of the basic instincts of life, provided they are given a reasonable chance. The care, feeding and management of farm animals should be planned with the idea of controlling diseases and parasites either by eradication or prevention.

The Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics says the following precautions will aid in preventing the introduction of diseases or parasites into flocks of herds

1. Keep animals healthy by providing clean barns, sheds, lots, houses, pastures and ranges.
2. Feed them enough of the proper food and supply plenty of clean water and common salt.
3. Clean the barns, sheds and houses at regular intervals.
4. In infected areas, keep live stock protected against certain diseases, such as hog cholera, chicken pox and blackleg, by vaccination.
5. Do not visit farms where disease is known to exist.
6. Place herds under supervision of qualified practicing veterinarians or State or Federal live stock sanitary officials for the eradication of such diseases as tuberculosis, Bang's disease and pullorum disease.
7. Make every effort to obtain disease free stock for breeding and feeding purposes.
8. Place additions to herds or flocks in quarantine for at least 10 days. Be sure they are not sick and are not badly infested with external or interna. parasites.

Curb on Civilian Meat Consumption Eases Problem for Armed Forces; Hitler's Russia Time-Table Slowed Up; 'Work or Fight' Is Edict of Draft Head

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of the newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Two Australian seamen, W. D. McBurnie (left) and F. E. Miller, are brought ashore in a lighter at an Australian seaport after being wounded in action in the Solomon islands. They are survivors of the Australian ship Canberra which was lost in action when American marines and naval units supported by Australian forces made their historic attack on the Japanese-held Solomon islands.

RUSSIA:
'If Winter Comes'

Chill autumnal winds that swept the Russian steppes bad reminded the Nazi invaders that Adolf Hitler's timetable of conquest was behind schedule. Every day the Russian lines held was that much time lost for the Germans. Every day they held was that much closer to winter.

Up the Volga river from the Caspian sea to beleaguered Stalingrad bad come a Soviet naval flotilla. There, southeast of the city proper, the ships poured shellfire on the attacking Germans, answering the thunder of the big guns the Nazis were using to reduce the city. Meanwhile tank battles, air assaults and band-to-hand encounters bad raged in and around the city.

While the berole Red forces had held their ground and even forced the Germans back in places, the situation remained grave. Defeat on the Volga would mean incalculable injury to the Russian war effort, with vital communications disrupted and the connecting Red armies of South and Central Russia split.

In the Caucasus, the Germans still had goals to reach. Still in the hands of the stout-hearted Red defenders was the south and eastern half of the peninsula. .

DRAFT EDICT:
Work or Fight

A "work or fight" edict to end the occupational deferment of men who stay away from their jobs or go on strike in war plants loomed as Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of selective service made public an amendment to selective service regulations which stated:

"Whenever the director of selective service advises a local board that a deferred registrant or group of deferred registrants is not supporting or is adversely affecting the war effort or the national health, safety or interest, the local board shall immediately terminate the deferment and consider anew the classification of such registrant or registrants."

Local boards bitherto bad authority to reclassify such persons and in a number of instances bad done so.

ALEUTIANS:
'Japs' Wings Clipped'

Heartening news from Alaska was brought to Washington by Congressman Warren G. Magnusen on his return from an official visit to American fighting forces in the north. The navy, said Mr. Magnusen, had definitely turned Japanese occupation of the Aleutian Islands to our advantage.

"The situation is good in Alaska," he said. "The joint army and navy command is clearly now offensive-minded. The occupation of the Aleutian Islands by Japan has been turned to our advantage by the navy, giving us the opportunity to sink Japanese ships we otherwise would have been unable to get to.

"The navy has clipped Japan's offensive wings if she had any idea of using the Aleutians as a stepping stone for an attack against Alaska."

MEAT RATION:
Aids Armed Forces

A voluntary meat ration of 2½ pounds per week for every American was urged by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard when he announced that civilian meat consumption during the last three months of 1942 would be restricted to approximately 79 per cent of the amount delivered by packers for civilian use during the last quarter of 1941.

After January 1, it was indicated, rationing coupons will be issued.

In his role of cbairman of the War Production board's food requirements committee, Mr. Wickard disclosed that to assure sufficient meat for army, navy and lend-lease needs, deliveries of beef and veal to civilians would be 80 per cent of the amount sold during the last quarter of 1941; lamb and mutton deliveries would be 95 per cent; and pork deliveries 75 per cent.

The proposed 2½ pound weekly meat allowance, he said, was entirely adequate for good nutrition. Individual housebolds may use any method the family prefers in effecting the rationing, he added. However, if there are invalids, aged persons, young children, or vegetarians in the home, the housewife should reduce ber purchases accordingly.

Simultaneously with bis announcement of a limitation in the civilian meat supply, Secretary Wickard warned of a food shortage "in the not too distant future" in urging congress to consider labor draft legislation as one means of haiting the mass exodus of farm workers to war industries and the armed forces.

10-DAY MIRACLE:
Performed by Kaiser

Shipbuilder Henry J. Kaiser had broken many a naval construction record and been justly proud. But proudest of all was he when the 10,500-ton Liberty freighter Joseph N. Teal hit the water in Kaiser's Portland, Ore., shipyard exactly 10 days from the time its keel was laid. This amazing feat clipped 14 days from the previous speed record for shipbuilding.

Addressing shipyard workers, maritime commission representatives and shipyard officials, Kaiser said:

"Our original contract called for the delivery of ships in about 150 days. Many experts shook their heads and said we could not do it. Yet here beside us is this great craft—only 10 days from keel laying to launching. It is a miracle, no less—a miracle of God and of the genius of free American workmen."

Kaiser saw in the new record a promise of future prosperity for America.

"If American brains and ingenuity do what they should do," be said, "I will have no fear for the future. We will have to rebuild what we have destroyed. Prosperity can go on and on."

Meanwhile Kaiser was recruiting an additional 50,000 workers to assist bim in the construction of three mammoth aircargo planes as the nucleus of a huge air fleet.

MADAGASCAR:
Safe for Allies

Active Vichy French resistance on the island of Madagascar came to an end when British occupation forces supported by South African armored units and East African troops took over Tananarive, capital of the strategic island.

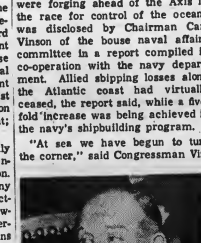
The communique that told of the British capture of Tananarive also disclosed that Antalya, 200 miles from the northern tip of Madagascar on the island's northeast coast was also occupied.

Allied control of Madagascar, lying athwart Africa's southeast coast and commanding sea lanes from Capetown to Cairo and to Australia and India meant that a strategic setback had been handed the Axis. It had been known that the Vichy authorities on the island had been friendly to Axis agents and it bad even been reported that Japanese submarines had put into out-of-the-way harbors on the island for fuel and supplies for their forays against United Nations shipping in the Indian ocean.

SCRAP METAL:
Need 17 Million Tons

America had stopped living on its metal "fat" and now must dip back 40 years for steel and iron junk, leading steel producers declared in assaying the nation's critical scrap metal situation.

"Many millions of tons of iron and steel scrap must be collected if the tremendous tonnage of steel needed in the nation's war effort is to be produced," said Eugene R. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel corporation.



At least 17 million tons of scrap would be needed before January 1, when war production was scheduled to reach its peak. Monthly consumption of scrap was running about four million tons, the greatest in history, but still not enough.

"Every farmer and every householder has a beavy responsibility for the country's production of guns, tanks, ships and shells," said Ralph H. Watson, vice president of the U. S. Steel corporation. "The recovery of scrap is one of the most important war jobs facing America today."

NAVY:
Gains on Subs

Evidence that the United Nations were forging ahead of the Axis in the race for control of the oceans was disclosed by Chairman Carl Vinson of the bouse naval affairs committee in a report compiled in co-operation with the navy department. Allied shipping losses along the Atlantic coast had virtually ceased, the report said, while a five-fold increase was being achieved in the navy's shipbuilding program.

"At sea we have begun to turn the corner," said Congressman Vinson. "Directly or indirectly the first fruits of American naval expansion are already influencing the course of the war."

REP. CARL VINSON
". . . begun to turn the corner."

Citing the American victories in the Solomon islands as an indication of the offensive spirit among the United Nations, Mr. Vinson revealed that at the beginning of July, the United States was building 3,230 combat, auxiliary, patrol and mine vessels for its own navy. This compared with only 697 ships of the same category under construction e year earlier.

VATICAN:
Post-War Plans?

No official announcements from the Vatican followed the conferences of Myron C. Taylor with Pope Pius XII. But seasoned diplomatic observers viewed the visit of President Roosevelt's personal representative to Vatican City as a step in paving the way for collaboration in post-war plans. This was given credence in the light of Mr. Taylor's subsequent conferences with the British and Frencb envoys to the Vatican and the representatives of conquered Poland and Jugoslavia.

Immediately in the foreground as reasons for Mr. Taylor's journey to Rome were: the need to discuss American interests in protecting American Catholics in Japanese-occupied territory; relations between the United States and South American countries; and the American government's protest to Vicby against persecution of the Jews, in the bope that the Vatican formally would support the protests.

But over and above these immediate objectives appeared the possibility that the groundwork was being laid for post-war collaboration.

LITTLE BUSINESS CRUSADER

Donald Nelson's "get tough" policy gets increasingly unfortunate reverberations. Part of this is because Donald, nice as he is, and well liked as be is, just doesn't seem to have a knack for feeling the public pulse.

For instance, he should have known that the most popular man in Washington, as far as little business is concerned, is Guy Holcomb, head of the justice department's small business bureau. Yet Nelson reached into the justice department and demanded that the attorney general fire Holcomb. The reaction against Nelson bas been bad.

Nelson had no jurisdiction over the justice department, and it is unusual for one executive to reach into the affairs of an outside office. However, Holcomb has been consistently critical of WPB's failure to award war contracts to little business; bis cracks got on Nelson's nerves, and he demanded that the attorney general fire him. So to keep peace in the official family, Holcomb was "permitted to resign."

Actually, Holcomb was a hustling young business man from Atlanta, Ga., who knew nothing about red tape, spurned bureaucracy and went around saying exactly what he thought of people who seemed to be lying down on the job. Result: He made a lot of enemies, but he got an awful lot done for little business.

For instance, be discovered that only three companies in the entire United States got all the contracts for putting boilers in merchant ships.

ALASKAN ATTACKS

The senate military affairs committee got some encouraging news when it met behind closed doors to hear the report of a subcommittee which has returned from an inspection tour of our Alaskan fortifications.

For military reasons, the greater part of the report cannot be revealed. However, this much can be told:

The subcommittee, composed of Senators Happy Chandler of Kentucky, Mon Wallgren of Washington and Rufus Holman of Oregon, was unanimous in declaring that our aerial defenses in Alaska were strong enougb to repel any attempted Jap invasion.

Remarkable progress has been made since Pearl Harbor in establishing new land and sea bases in the Alaskan area. The three senators also paid high tribute to the morale and skill of U. S. airmen, who are forced to fly in the worst kinds of weather conditions.

Though refusing to predict on bow soon we can start an all-out air offensive to drive the Japs from their footholds in the Aleutians, the subcommitee reported that one obstacle which has been holding up such an offensive bas now been licked.

Hitherto we have been unable to send protectiva convoys of fighting planes with bombers raiding Jap positions in the Aleutians, because our fighters do not have the flying range for the 1,000-mile round trip from the army base at Umnak island, nearest outpost to the Japs. However, this problem has been solved by the installation of "belly" gas tanks on fighters. They carry several hundred gallons of fuel and can be dropped after they are emptied.

The subcommittee also reported that interference with army and navy radio communications in the Alaskan area, caused by bad weather and the Aurora Borealis, was being largely circumvented by compass flying.

UNFOUNDED RUMOR DEPARTMENT

The Rumor: One of the Freuhauf brothers in Detroit, who manufacture trailers, gave his yacht to the navy, but before doing so said be wanted to take it on a farewell cruise. He bad no sooner got a few hours offshore, however, when be received a peremptory demand from the navy to return, after which Harry Hopkins and his new bride took over the yacht and sailed away on their boneymoon.

The Truth: Harry Hopkins doesn't like yachting, gets seasick easily, spent his vacation in Connecticut. Harry Freuhauf, interviewed by this columnist on the telephone, said: "My brother did turn bis yacht over to the navy, but the arrangements were entirely emlable, and Harry Hopkins never was on it at any time or place. We have beard all sorts of rumors about this, but there is absolutely nothing to them."

Wheat Price Minor Factor In Present Cost of Bread

Improved Merchandising, Manufacturing Methods Boost Baker's Bills; Raw Material Cost Relatively Slight.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

The recent debate in congress over the stabilization of prices and wages goes as deep into the home and the farm and the factory as any national issue ever has.

I received a typical letter on the subject—a query about the relative cost of wheat and bread, what the farmer gets and what the baker charges. In trying to answer it, I found a mountain of statistics and a wide variance of opinion; but it was a childhood memory which gave me the most convincing part of the answer.

First, the letter from my listener in Bismarck, N. D.:

"Before you put too much blame on farm products for the rise in the cost of living, please explain soon in one of your radio talks, why during World War I, when wheat was selling for $2.25 to $2.50 per bushel, that bread was selling for ten cents a loaf while now, posted local prices at this point, are 92 cents (for wheat) and bread retails at 13 to 15 cents e loaf . . ."

Now the memory:

It was a clear summer morning. School was just out and there was a treat in store for me. I got up long before the family was awake, slipped into the summer kitchen and poured myself a glass of milk and put a couple of cookies in my pocket. As I went quietly out the front door, I tiptoed across the stoop where the empty pan with a red milk-ticket lay beside it.

I walked down Locust street to Arthur Barnes' house just in time to climb into the bread wagon beside him and his father. We crunched down the driveway and through the empty streets to the New York Central station. Before we got into the freight yards the train from Buffalo was rolling in. By the time Mr. Barnes had backed the wagon up to the freight station platform the bread crates were waiting.

Fast Delivery

We stood beside the crate. Mr. Barnes was in the delivery wagon. I wasn't nearly as adept as Arthur, of course, for he had much more practice in extricating and tossing the loaves and he often had to wait a second or two, while he typed with the unwrapped loaf before I had managed to toss mine to Mr. Barnes who deftly caught it and put it in place in the layers that rose from the wagon's floor. This lack of dexterity on my part made me a little nervous and one loaf went wild. Mr. Barnes reached out nobly but it hit the side of the wagon and caromed over into the cinders.

Mr. Barnes was a man of deeds, not words. He leapt out of the wagon and recovered the treasure. I looked sheepishly at Art. There was balf my pay gone, surely. But no! Mr. Barnes was frowning, he looked around, whipped out his knife and with a few expert incisions removed the cinders, gave the crust an affectionate stroke with his bare wrist and leapt back into the wagon with it. The leading continued in silence for a moment. Then Art leaned over and said in a reproving whisper, "Don't say nothin' about that."

It was that concern over a possible aroused public opinion over a lapse in our sanitary discipline which foreshadowed one of the developments that has increased the cost of bread.

The incident I have described took place about 1898 and it reveals some of the primitive methods of the baking industry which sanitary laws, popular taste, cost of labor make impossible today.

Take the most obvious: packaging. Can you imagine bread being shipped in crates and massaged by human hands today? Yet even as late as the time of which my correspondent writes, 1914—wrapping bread was unknown in many communities.

This one sanitary measure is only one of many which have made the cost of bread higher—the conditions with the bakery have changed even more radically. Of course, labor is the most important factor. In 1914 men worked much longer hours for much less money.

Cost of Ingredients

And when we come to the content of the bread, of which wheat, the commodity which most concerns my listener, is the most important, we find it almost negligible in figuring the cost of the finished product. Experts studying the question, state that there are few food commodities in which the chief raw material provides so small a fraction of the final cost as in bread.

According to current statistics it would take an increase of 60 cents a bushel in wheat to cause an increase of one cent in a loaf of bread.

Compare this with potatoes for instance. When a housewife buys potatoes, she pays only for the spuds themselves plus the cost of handling.

Now all of these factors are mentioned merely to justify an increase in the price of bread since 1914. Officials concerned with food costs were careful to warn me that they do not all justify the amount of the increase. There is not complete agreement on that subject by any means. Some members in tha department of agriculture say that bread could be sold much cheaper and still yield e profit to the baker.

Probably one of the most important factors in the price of bread is the fact that the public just prefers to pay more for it than to bake it themselves.

As one official said to me: "In the last war when I lived on a Kansas farm the women in the small towns in the vicinity as well as the farmers' wives baked their own bread. Today you'll see the bakery wagon making deliveries right out in the country. Perhaps if the women who still bake their own bread charged for their own time, they would find it cheaper to go to the bakery. Meanwhile, it is another case of charging what the traffic will bear—and in this case most of the traffic is willing to bear it."

There is one comforting thought for the farmer. When Price Administrator Henderson puts into effect the measures to stabilize all prices, be will still have to let wheat go up quite a ways before it hits its own ceiling—parity. But bread, for all its yeast, won't be allowed to rise much more.

Aviation Accidents Show Marked Decrease

The number of crashes of military planes in this country reported recently in the newspapera bas served to disturb some people. Officials in Washington have received many letters on the subject.

One whicb I received recently from an obviously intelligent woman, may be typical. In it, she meticulously listed the number of accidents, reports of which had been published, all of which involved fatalities to military personnel. There were 77 deaths within a comparatively short period. The writer was shocked and asked if the cause migbt not be an organized campaign of sabotage.

Because I feit that there should be some official comment on the subject, I talked at length with an officer in the air force.

The rate of accidents in flying in this country today, he told me, is 68 per cent lower than it was in 1939.

I think the adjective "remarkable" is justified when you think of the number of planes that are in the air now as compared with the number 12 years ago. We are not allowed to reveal the number of planes now flying but General Marshall recently stated that the goal of the air force was two million men and one hundred eighty-five thousand planes by the end of this year. We know that we are well on our way toward that goal. With these facts in mind the number of accidents seems incredibly low. One reason for the reduction in the number of accidents is the Air Force Safety program. This program is in charge of a colonel who has the authority to give orders to a three-star general if he violates any of the safety regulations. The air force goes on the principle that it is just as important to prevent the loss of planes and men from accidents as it is to prevent their loss at the hands of the enemy.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

America's bombing planes are the lethal successors of the weaponless planes which were used exclusively for observation purposes in World War I, says the Aviation News committee.

TO YOUR Good Health

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

SINUS DISEASE

In my student days the treatment of old or chronic sinus disease was by surgery. Tha thought behind surgery was to open up the sinus so that it would drain more readily; also any obstruction in the nose such as a bent septum was straightened as far as possible so as to get more air, more ventilation, into the sinuses. What was not realized at the time was that surgery destroys to a considerable extent the lining of the nose, which is the air conditioner of the body. This lining is warm and moist and helps to destroy harmful organisms in the air entering the lungs. It is covered with tiny bairs whicb belp to prevent dust or other substances entering the lungs.

Dr. Barton

Today surgery is used only in cases where pus or mucous and pus is unable to get out of the sinus thus causing congestion and often severe pain.

In "Notes From the International Assembly," reported in Clinical Medicine, Dr. George E. Shambaugh Jr., Chicago, associate clinical professor, ear, nose and throat, Rush Medical college, states that the sinus patient needs rest. Rest from trying to "condition" air can be obtained by closing the windows of the sick room; keeping the air warm, moist, and free from smoke (including that of tobacco) constantly; putting the patient to bed and opening up the sinus openings so as to permit free drainage. This opening up can be done by instilling into the nose, two or three times a day, a 1 to 16 solution of Neosynephrin in physiologic salt solution. Surgery is not used unless there is pressure of an abscess in the eye region or inflammation and pus formation of the skull.

In acute sinus inflammation rest is all that is necessary, as the disease runs a limited or definite time.

In chronic sinus infection allergy is often present and the allergic substance or substances must be sought. If the allergic substance is in the air, skin tests may help to locate it. If the allergic substance is food, diets from which the suspected food is omitted are used. Wheat, milk, eggs, chocolate, orange and coffee are the commonest foods causing allergic sinusitis, and must be avoided once they are found to be causing the symptoms.

It is gratifying to know that surgical treatment is not necessary in most cases of sinus disease.

Early Correction For Crossed Eyes

As a youngster I can remember only two children in a school of medium size who wore glasses. The glasses were worn, as I remember, because the children had crossed eyes. Today every school has many wearing glasses to enable the youngsters to see the blackboard, rather than for crossed eyes.

It is not because there are not many cases of cross eyes but because parents now know that cross eyes should be corrected before the child goes to school. Formerly parents were told to do nothing about cross eyes as the eyes would right themselves by the time the child was 15 years old.

Why are some parents still opposed to early operation for cross eyes?

In the Canadian Medical Association Journal, Dr. Lloyd Morgan, Toronto, states that the arguments against early operation are: 1. Fear of an anaesthetic, but this would apply to any operation. 2. If operation is done early, the eye may turn out later. Formerly this was true in some cases but now with improved knowledge and skill this rarely happens.

That operation is set always necessary as so many parents think, is shown in the report of 800 cases at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, of which operation was performed in about 25 per cent only.

After outlining the different types of cross eyes, bow they may be recognized and the treatment—eye training and operation—Dr. Morgan suggests that, (1) proper diagnosis—finding the exact cause, which eye muscle is too weak or too strong—is most important. (2) Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the importance of early treatment. No child should be allowed to go through school with crossed eyes. (3) If an operation is necessary, it should be done before school age.

QUESTION BOX

Q. Is it possible to have tuberculosis and still have sputum tests turn out negative?

A. Yes. More tests should be made. X-rays should be of help in this case.

Q.—What causes me to yawn frequently despite the fact that I get at least eight hours a night sleep?

A.—Yawning is often a habit. Usually due to lack of oxygen. Ask your physician to test the iron (hemoglobin) of your blood.

U. S. '42 Farm Output Planned to Fill Needs

AAA Authorities Say Two Records Broken This Year

Farmers from Maine to California will chalk up two history-making achievements when their 1942 harvests are in, according to the United States department of agriculture.

Harvest like this of potatoes on the C. A. Brown farm of Dallam county, Texas, have been planned in advance in order to insure the right amounts of the right products to fill anticipated needs of the U. S. and United Nations.

Americans farms this year will produce more than any nation in all time and, for the first time, the nation's total farm output will be planned to fill needs determined in advance.

This double-barreled record will be the American farmer's ringing answer to the challenge of war.

The great harvest will consist of the right amounts of the right products to fill anticipated needs of the United States and the United Nations.

These goals have been broken down into goals for states, counties and individual farms for farmers to shoot at.

Goals have been used for years by AAA for basic crops. But this year ALL crops have goals to insure abundant Food for Freedom. The food will make America strong, feed her Allies' soldiers and civilians and create reserves of such easily stored concentrated products as cheese, evaporated milk, dried eggs and canned fruits and vegetables.

Export commodities will be an important part of the output. Lend-lease pork purchases, excluding lard, have already exceeded the equivalent of 11 million hogs. Egg-drying capacity has been expanded from 50 million to 300 million pounds annually.

Exports alone for the current fiscal year are expected to require more than twice as much acreage as in 1941.

When Pearl Harbor suddenly cut off all imports from the Far East, the 1942 production goals established as the original Food for Freedom goals were jacked up. Revised goals call for one-fifth more production than the average of the 1930s and 5½ per cent more than in the record year of 1941.

Last fall, after war needs had been canvassed, more than 135,000 AAA farmer committeemen, under the direction of USDA war boards, began calling on farmers to see what they could do to meet heavy war demands.

Virtually every farmer in the United States was given an opportunity to pledge all-out war effort on his farm by controlling production of products not urgently needed for war and intensifying production of those in great demand.

Sportlight

by GRANTLAND RICE

SOME alert statistician has figured it out that the next two months will see more big football games than any season in history. Even with the call of the bugle there will be a greater number of stars in action, and a greater number of headline contests.

Grantland Rice

But what about the size of the crowds? How will the transportation snarl be settled? This is where the big guess enters.

George Preston Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, would like to make a wager that his big professional team will outdraw any other squad in the country, college or pro, and that it will equal its best year in this respect.

Whether or not he can outdraw Notre Dame is still part of future happenings. Frank Leahy has one of his finest squads at South Bend, and from the present outlook he will play to capacity in most of his contests. This will be true against Army, Michigan, Navy, Northwestern and Southern California. Capacity won't be far away against the others, including Stanford, Iowa Naval Cadets and the Great Lakes squad.

It would not be surprising to see Notre Dame close to the half million mark.

Naval Cadet Teams

The Georgia and North Carolina Naval Cadet teams will attract fully as much interest as any college squad, especially if they can get away with fair success. They are still gambles to a certain extent, but they won't be weak. They are taking the hardest training in any service for future flying, and will be physically ready for even their starting assignments. They are all ably coached, and they all have the heart and the fire to give all their systems can carry.

The major cities, such as New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco, etc., will draw big crowds. The smaller bowls or stands that call for automobile transportation will have a rougher road ahead. There also will be less railroad travel on the spectator's side.

Close to the Top

Pennsylvania, with a hard nine-game schedule and the outlook for a first-class team, should be close to the leaders in packing them in. Philadelphia is one of the best of all football cities.

Michigan is another team facing a big attendance year. The Wolverines won't be far from the front with such teams to meet as Great Lakes, Michigan State, Iowa Naval Cadets, Northwestern, Minnesota, Illinois, Harvard, Notre Dame, Ohio State and Iowa. This is what you might easily label a package of heavy trouble. It is close to being the hardest schedule in the country.

Fritz Crisler has a fine squad with such backs as Tommy Kuzma and Paul White, but no one can expect the Wolverine to claw its way unbeaten through this barrage of human flesh. Minnesota and Notre Dame alone are twin bundles of dynamite.

Fritz Crisler

There will be no bother about big crowds in the Middle West, including Ohio State's home at Columbus, with so many feature games and so many featured stars.

In the East

What about the East? New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore will be beyond the average.

New York, with several games transferred to its subway service, will have its best football year. Between the colleges and the professional Giants the Polo Grounds and the Yankee Stadium will set new records.

Even with the transportation odds against them, all other sports have shown an amazing attendance record. This goes for baseball, golf and racing, especially.

As football happens to be the best crowd magnet of them all, there is no reason why the fall season just ahead shouldn't more than keep pace with other forms of competition.

Although at least a hundred stars have been taken by the various services from the pro camps, there has been no lapse of public interest as the Chicago and Los Angeles games have already shown, with close to 200,000 at these two opening salutes. Teams are expecting capacity crowds from Denver to Boston and Baltimore, via New York, and I don't think they will be disappointed.

There may be a dizzy drop later on, but 1942 will set some form of record before the final block is put on and the final pass is thrown on the gridiron.

"Going far?" asked the chatty little man in the club car as the open fields began to whisk by the train windows.

"Only to Pittsburgh," replied the grouch, who had been in Washington filling out questionnaires. "I'm in the steel brace business. My age is 53. I am married. My name is Henry Smith. I have a son 22 in the field artillery. And a niece with red hair. I shoot around 89 in golf. Is there anything else I can tell you?"

"Yes," replied the chatty little man amiably. "What oil do you use for your tongue?"

... to stand guard over eyes at work
You're working harder these busy wartime days and that means your eyes are working harder, too. Spare yourself the added fatigue that comes from straining your eyes under inadequate light. Treat them to the soft, generous light of an I. E. S. Better Sight Lamp. Then you can relax and read or sew in comfort. You'll find it will help you wake up refreshed for the next day's work ... free from the nervous muscular tension that accompanies prolonged eyestrain.

How I.E.S. Lamps Help Eyes

I. E. S. Better Sight Lamps were especially designed by lighting engineers to provide safer, easier seeing. The white glass diffusing bowl under the shade sifts out harmful glare and provides both generous, soft, downward light for close visual tasks, and upward light for general room illumination. Try an I. E. S. Lamp beside your favorite easy chair. See what a lift it gives to tired eyes.

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. When they arrive in Tierra Libre they find both Zora and her husband dead. It is Mitchell's job as chief engineer for a fruit company that Jeff has been called to fill. Later Jeff's friend Bill Henderson is also killed, and Jeff suspects his employer, Senor Montaya, of murdering him and the Mitchells because they had found a clue to the strange things going on at the plantation. Other sinister figures are the company chemist, Dr. Toenjes, and the flyers, Ryden and Lannestock. Jeff and Lee discover that their housemaid is spying on them and has replaced Jeff's cartridges with duds. A man named Collins arrives from the Canal Zone to see Mitchell. Now Jeff is going to meet Jerry McInnis.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XV

Curt left the bedroom door ajar slightly, for better circulation of air than he could get from the two-foot lattice-work portion of wall under the ceiling. He stripped, showered, and flung himself on the bed under the mosquito bar. Outside, Emilio hadn't moved, simply went on reading, smoke curling up past his squinting left eye.

Curt had no intention of falling asleep; he only wanted to outwait his shadow. But he was so muscle weary that he did succumb to a catnap—with one ear on the alert.

The click of the outer door latch brought him to. He glanced at the luminous dial of his wrist watch. Eight-twenty. He'd been dozing for nearly an hour.

Quietly he left the bed and went to the door, but remained out of the wedge of light coming from the porch. The door was wider ajar than he'd left it. He grinned to himself.

Because of the fan-shaped layout of Tempujo, Curt's bungalow was in plain view of the mess-hall, used as a clubhouse outside of meal hours. He could see Emilio enter the long, screen-front building, select a table where he had good view of the lighted porch he'd just left, and settle himself. He was joined at once by a couple of natives —Curt recognized them as rodmen under Al Random—and a pack of cards was produced. Curt grinned again. That should tie up the hombre.

He made quick time of dressing. A minute sufficed to pull on shorts, breeches, shirt and socks, but it took longer to lace up his high boots. He slipped a flashlight into a big pocket, buckled on his gun belt. He thought of his hat. But be couldn't step onto the open screened porch without the risk of being seen, so he did without it.

He had one further thought. He'd like to make sure that no one entered while he was gone and discovered his absence. Emilio had a key. Lauriano Duro had a key. Curt skidded a magazine across the floor, landing it up against the screen door as though it had so fallen. No one could enter without displacing it, nor could anyone enter and leave again, and replace the magazine in just that position.

Quickly he unhooked the rear window screen and swung to the ground. Some hundred yards upriver from the dock were a dozen or more cayucas—wooden dugouts belonging to natives in the company's service. Carefully, taking advantage of every black shadow, Curt made his way to them.

He played his flash briefly, selected one, worked its line over the stake that held it to avoid trouble in duplicating the knot on his return, crawled in.

McInnis was waiting for him, slapping viciously at neck, arms, thighs. He seized the nose of the dugout to pull it onto the bank.

"Cripes, Curt," he complained, "if you'd been any longer you'd have found only bones. These mosquitoes are big as hawks."

"Yeh," Curt said briefly. "Been noticing. Let's get away from the bank and light up. It'll help some." Presently, their pipes doing the work of smudge pots, "Well, get the dope?"

"Yes. But remember Mitchell, Curt. His curiosity got the better of him just before he was bumped off. Mitch made a secret trip over here one night, just as you're doing now, and for the same reason. The Old Man told me. Now, two are better than one, pal, so I don't spill till you cut me in on it!"

"Jerry," Curt exclaimed, "there's something rotten on the griddle over there! I can smell it but I can't identify it. Look. You've heard of Zora Mitchell's death, of course, and Bill Henderson's.

"And Mitch's killing wasn't grudge work. Mitch knew something that had him in a dither, if you can imagine him getting worked up over anything. Monaban gives me that much. But what was it? Well, Mitch is gone, Zora's gone, Bill's gone, Monaban doesn't know beans. That's why I want the lowdown on Montaya. There may be a clue there."

He paused.

"Did you know Mitch had been sabotaging the engineering work? Slowing it down to such an extent the whole tract would have been washed out coma next rainy season? That wasn't like Mitch. Why'd he do that? It ties in somehow."

He supplied briefly facts McInnis didn't know. About the bodyguard who was more like a jailor, the housemaid who spied on his home life, the faulty cartridges. About being reprimanded by Montaya for hiring Collins.

"But Curt, you must have worked up some kind of idea!"

"Oh, I had a momentary brainstorm the other day," Curt admitted, "when that Army plane made an emergency landing at San Alejo. You know about that. For an instant I figured Mitch had got the wind up over those two planes we're fly. They're Junkers." He gave a sour laugh. "Other things Mitch had let drop indicated that perhaps he had the Panama Canal in mind. But Mitch was no fool! He undoubtedly knew those planes could be used to damage the Canal—if that's what he had in mind.

"Another thing I figured was that maybe Montaya had political ambitions. If he did have plans for a dictatorship unfriendly to the United States—"

McInnis cut in. "Old Man Moore's in a position to know, Curt, and he says positively there are no political strings to your friend."

"So far's known, he means," exclaimed Curt. "But no would-be dictator announces bimself in advance."

McInnis grunted. "I've never known the boss to be wrong, Curt."

Curt gave a short laugh. "Well, there are other things wrong with that idea. Let's bave the dope, Jerry."

"Yeh. Well, your pal Apolonio comes from an old family down this way. You'll recognize the family name. Lara. Coffee, cattle, hides, silver, cigarettes, cerveza.

"His grandmother was Luisa Lara

Or did the stuff come from Germany, via Vladivostok?

who married a Montaya. His mother was the only daughter of that union. She married a German settler, name of Kuhlman. The Kuhlmans had a number of kids, but Apolonio looked so much like Grandfather Montaya that he became the old lady's favorite.

"She was the chief moneybags of the old Lara clan, so you can't blame Apolonio for taking the name of Montaya to please her. He could by custom, you know, it was his mother's name. That's why I didn't know where the money came from for this outfit. The fortune was always associated with the name Lara.

"Well, be was educated at Harvard, and spent some years in pleasure trips between his own country and the States and Europe, but he went home to stay when the old lady died and left him the bulk of everything. No one knows exactly how many millions of pesos it ran to, but the guesses average fourteen to sixteen.

"There are some foggy spots to the story. One thing, he got hooked up somehow in the Cedilla revolt in Mexico, but got out of it with a whole skin.

"He's never married. Had several affairs of the heart, though, in his salad days. Most serious one was with a German countess—a married one," McInnis added cynically.

"German?"

"Yes. Germany, by the way, is his favorite foreign country. When there be uses his legal name of Kuhlman."

"Germany! Germany!" Something bothered Curt.

McInnis slowed down in his recital. "I suppose that raises the Nazi question in your mind, Curt. It did with me. But Montaya's never been known to have any connections with the Nazis—nor any trouble with them, either, if that means anything."

"Germany," Curt said again, thoughtfully. Those two square boxes — "generators." They came from Hamburg, via Vladivostok. On a Jap freighter. Those eight oversize coffins that had bothered Mitchell—"pump machinery"—came in on a Jap tramp.

"By Jove, Jerry! What a dope I've been! I've known all along that the Dutchman's formula was no excuse for all this hush-hush, all this spying on me, these murders! And all the time the real answer's been staring me in the face! What a cluck I turned out to be! Here's one of the slickest Nazi tricks—"

McInnis was rubbing his shin. "Well, let me in on it."

"I should've seen it before. I did ask one question. You'll remember it. How could he sink so much money here when the cost of handling fruit will mean so much in competition with you people?

"There's one country that'd be darned glad to subsidize him—within limits—this close to the Panama Canal—for favors received. The kind of favors he's in a swell spot to give. Nazi Germany!"

"Draw me a picture," said McInnis dryly.

A Nazi crew here, with Toenjes in charge . . . "Jerry, he's no more Dutch than I am. Overheard him and Montaya talking once. Assumed it was Dutch. Now I know it was German. Ryden and Lannestock, they're not Swedes!"

Curt sucked in his breath. His voice came in a croak. "And there's the answer to why Montaya 'likes children,' why he wants a family man for his chief engineer. Lee! And the kids! Hostages for my silence against the time they learn I've discovered all this.

"Jerry, those birds mean business!"

Curt returned to his side of the Negro, his face the color of old newspaper yellowed by weather.

He knew now what kind of spot he was in—more important, the terrible position of Lee and the children. But he knew. That was the saving point. He knew, and could plan against every contingency. And, he had two major trumps. One was a friend across the Negro. Unlike Mitchell, Curt was not going to play a lone hand. Two—so far, Montaya and his precious crew had no reason to suspect Curt's knowledge.

First, he must get bold of Collins. At once.

Slipping the cayuca's line over its shore stake exactly as he'd found it, Curt returned to his office-bungalow. He must make certain absence hadn't been discovered. Too much now depended on not tipping his band. The magazine be'd shied against the front door would tell, but be couldn't see this from outside. So he listened under his window, then climbed in.

A glance from the bedroom onto the lighted porch sufficed. The magazine was just as he'd left it. Well beyond, in the mess-hall, Curt could see Emilio still at cards, but now there were four men in the game. The watchdog still faced the lighted bungalow.

Who else was in the mess-hall Curt couldn't see from where be stood. He swung himself to the ground again, took a position from where he could view the whole long room. There were several small groups. Curt accounted for young Dr. Fisher, a few of the transitmen of the engineering force, most of the trainmen—whom he knew by now, engineers, firemen, brakemen. But Monahan wasn't there, nor Collins.

Skirting the pools of yellow cast by the Tempujo lights, taking advantage of every shadow, Curt made his way to the bachelor quarters reserved for transients. It was here Collins would bave a room for the night.

The building was simply a long string of small rooms, with a screened porch extending the length of it. There was one entrance from the footpath onto the porch. Each room had a window in the rear wall, another in the front wall beside the door which led onto the porcb.

Soundlessly Curt made bis way from window to window along the back of the building. Standing on pies as it did, Curt could only reach the window sills by stretching, and had to jump for a hand grip, then chin himself to see inside. Enough light came through the front windows to show bim each room dimly.

The first six rooms were not only empty but undisturbed, occupancy indicated only by a bag of sorts dumped on a chair, or a bottle and glass on a table, or a package bought at the Tempujo branch commissary before it closed.

The seventh room showed a mussed bed. There was no baggage in this room, no personal articles on table or dresser, just the rumpled bed and the mosquito bar swung aside to show that someona had lain here for a while.

The eighth and ninth rooms were made up and undisturbed, but the tenth and last was occupied. Slats Monahan, judging from the snore coming from under the mosquito netting.

Huh. That meant that Collins was abroad. But where? There were only two places where he could be in Tempujo at this time of night—the mess-hall or his room. And he wasn't in either. There was no other spot to bang out. Mulling this over, Curt headed back for his bungalow.

Ha still kept under covar. Near the river wbarf, wbere everything was locked up for the night and only two lights showed—ons in the dispatcher's office, one in the dock office—he stiffened into immobility. He'd caught sight of another figure, likewise hiding itself in shadow

FAITH IN CHRIST AS OUR PERSONAL SAVIOUR

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:13-15; Romans 5:1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.—Romans 5:1.

Salvation through Christ is the way, and the only way, into the Christian life; therefore, there could be no other subject more suitable than that of our lesson to begin our brief series of "Studies in the Christ Life."

Our lesson for today tells us first how one comes into a personal saving faith, and then gives Paul's statement of the result of saving faith in the changed life of the believer.

I. The Opened Heart (Acts 16: 13-15).

Paul and his companions on their important errand for the Master, bearing the news of the gospel, had first known His guidance by hindrance, by the closed door; and then by the direction of the Spirit into the open door, revealed in the vision of the man of Macedonia.

Here in Philippi they found not only an open door, but an open heart, one which the Holy Spirit had made ready for the preaching of the Word of God. "Faith cometh by bearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Rom. 10:17).

Note that while Lydia was a woman of ability and culture, and a worshiper of God, yet she needed the message of redemption through faith in Christ.

Lydia avidenced the truth of her profession of faith by open testimony and by a desira for fellowship in putting forward the work of God (v. 15). Salvation is by faith apart from works, but a saving faith is always one which works.

II. The Transformed Life (Rom. 5:1-11).

This is one of the great passages of Scripture, rich in doctrinal instruction, presenting through Paul an illuminating discussion of justification by faith.

This lesson affords an opportunity for teachers to learn and present to classes much needed truth along the lins of Bible doctrine. There is not enough teaching of this type. People seem to prefer a little devotional study, or the disscussion of current events, possibly in the light of prophecy. These are good, but it is of first importance that Christians be informed regarding doctrine.

We find in this Scripture the glorious transformation of life which comes to the one who takes Christ as Saviour, as we note the seven results of God's justifying grace.

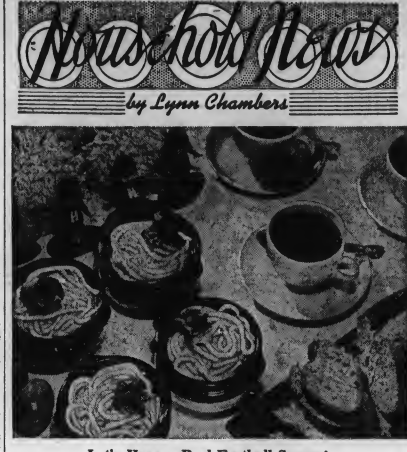
1. Peace (v. 1). The human beart craves spiritual peace and knows that it can be found only when sin has been dealt with and put away. For sin cannot be condoned or ignored. There must be justification, and that can come only through Jesus Christ our Lord.

2. Grace (v. 2). A peace with God brings the peace of God into our hearts. We have that peace because we have by faith come into the place of God's favor. No longer strangers or outsiders, we bave come in ("have access") to His place of grace and favor.

3. Hope (vv. 2b, 5a). Our faith not only brings present peace, but causes us to see future glory. Such a hope puts us in a right attitude toward God, and the things of life, including tribulations (v. 3), are rightly valued and understood. Even our troubles become evidences of His love in which we may glory.

4. Love (vv. 5b-8). God's love whieb gave His Son to die for our sins becomes the "shed abroad" portian of every believer in Him. It was as unmeasurably great love, and N all centers in Calvary.

5. Saved From Wrath (v. 9). The wrath of God is minimized or denied in much modern theology, but it is nonetheless a very "real and awful affection of the divina nature." But the Christ wha died for sinners will surely deliver the saints from the wrath of God against sin.



6. Reconciled (v. 10). The death of Christ, which justified man has accepted by faith, brought reconciliation. Atonement had been made for sin, and the One who died is alive again, a living Saviour.

7. Joy (v. 11). And why not? Such a revelation of what our redemption includes should make every believer in Christ rejoice in God. The One who is the sinner's judge is the believer's joy! That is the glorious transformation which takes place when one believes.

Some unbeliever who has read these lines thus far must by now be eager to have these things true in his life. Well, why not? "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31). Then read again those majestic and joyful words in Romans 5:1: "Therefore being justified by faith, we have"—yes, I have "peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Household Hints

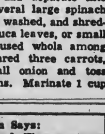
Let's Have a Real Football Supper!
(See Recipes Below.)

Football Supper

Thoughts for fall naturally bring to mind fall's favorita game, football, and foods that go well after the game. It makes no difference whether you bave been to one of the big games or whether you are going to feed the hungry crowd of youngsters who come in from playing in the nearest available field, the uppermost thought in your mind is good, hot, appetizing food.

Smart management dictates a delicious bot dish that you whisk out of the oven, a crisp salad for balance and contrast to the meal, and a smooth, light dessert. Your crowd will be thirsty, too, so don't forget coffee for the grown-ups and a hot, chocolate drink for the children.

Do something special for the table —even a little touching-up will bring the appreciative ob's and ab's from your family and guests. Perhaps there are a few chrysanthemums still in the garden or you might try to get together a few, small novelty footballs to make up into a centerpiece. A cloth in the burnished fall colors or deep brown, bright yellow, or wbat-bave-you will mark you as a hostess whose eye is ever on the calendar and season.



Bring on the food! And such food it will be if you serve spaghetti, done up in casserole with plenty of sauce and cheese for extra goodness:

Spaghetti Creole.
(Serves 8)

2 pounds long spaghetti
2 onions, chopped
1 clove garlic
¼ cup butter
¼ cup oil
2 cans tomato puree
2½ cups tomatoes
2 teaspoons worcestershire sauce
Salt, pepper
1 pound ground beef
Grated cheese

Cook onion and garlic (peeled and a toothpick run through it) in the bot oil and butter, slowly. Remove garlic. Add tomato puree, tomatoes, worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Cook meat in additional fat. Add to first mixture and cook very slowly for two bours. Cook spaghetti in boiling, salted water. Drain and rinse in hot water. Place in buttered casserole, first spaghetti layer, then sauce, grated cheese, and so on until casserole is full. Garnish with an additional slice of bacon if desired. Bake in a slow (325-degree) oven 45 minutes.

Contrast note to the Spaghetti Creole is a green vegetable chilled to a crispness. It's also a good idea to balance a starcby food with something as full of minerals and vitamins as an armload of greens clinging together with a light, tart french dressing:

Tossed Greens.

Wash lettuce and separate into leaves. Use several large spinach leaves, carefully washed, and shred. Add with the lettuce leaves, or small spinach leaves used whola among the lettuce. Shred three carrots, mince one small onion and toss among the greens. Marinate 1 cup of cooked green beans in french dressing for 20 minutes and add to salad bowl. Add more french dressing and serve.

A bit of the something different for the menu is provided if you serve this salad:

Chiffonade Salad.

Combine cooked, cubed beets with riced hard-cooked eggs and minced onion. Marinate and serve on crisp romaine or lettuce. You can turn out a cbill con carne in no time and it's a wonderful dish on these evenings with a fall tang in the air. The kidney beans, tomatoes and ground meat blend in delicious flavor:

Chili Con Carne,
(Serves 6)

2½ cups kidney beans
1 large onion, sliced
1 chopped green pepper
1 pound ground beef
3 tablespoons lard
3¼ cups tomatoes
1½ teaspoons salt
Paprika
3 whole cloves
1 bay leaf
1 tablespoon chili powder

Brown onion, green pepper and meat in hot lard. Add tomatoes and seasonings. Simmer two hours, adding water if necessary. Add beans and heat thoroughly.

Corn bread is a delightful variation for any kind of dinner but is especially welcome if you serve the golden wedges at your football supper. Piping hot is the order of the day:

Corn Bread.

1 cup yellow cornmeal
¼ cup wbeat flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 beaten egg
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon melted butter

Sift flour and mix with other dry ingredients. Combine egg with milk and add to dry ingredients. Add melted butter and pour batter into a well greased pan. Bake in a hot (425-degree) oven about 25 minutes.

Apples can be found in generous quantities now, so use them for thriftiness' sake. To save on your sugar, this recipe calls for part molasses and part sugar:

Apple Pandowdy.
(Serves 6)

1 Recipe Pastry
4 cups sliced apples
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup molasses
½ cup sugar
¼ cup water

Divide pastry into two portions and roll thin. Line shallow baking dish with pastry. Mix apples, salt, spices and sugar and put in pan. Combine molasses with water and pour over fruit. Dot with butter, cover with remaining pastry, press edges together and trim. Bake in a moderately bot (425-degree) oven 15 minutes. Lower temperature to slow (325 degrees) and bake 30 minutes. Remova from oven, chop top crust into fruit, return to oven and continue baking 1 bour. Serve with butter or with plain or whipped cream.

Football Brew.

Use 1 heaping teaspoon decaffeinated coffee, regular grind for each cup water. Pour cold water into pot or percolator. Set percolator basket with coffee in it. Cover. Let percolate 15 to 20 minutes slowly and gently.

Eggs, cheese and fish are obtainable at moderate prices and are wonderful props in place of meat, and are all rich sources of protein which is one of the main values of meat.

PREPAREDNESS

by the AMERICAN RED CROSS

ASSISTANCE to members of the nation's fighting forces and their dependents is the primary duty of the Red Cross.

This obligation is set forth in the charter granted the American Red Cross by congress in 1905, and in the army and navy regulations. It is also stated in the present selective service regulations, which require all draft boards to refer questions concerning the welfare of selectees and their dependents after induction to the Red Cross.

Red Cross help to service men and their dependents takes two forms: In every army camp and with every American fighting unit anywhere a Red Cross field director is on the job. His duty is to help the service man with his problems and relieve him of worry over them.

In nearly every county in the United States is a local Red Cross chapter, with a home service worker. Its job is to help the service man's dependents, and relieve them, too, of worry and need.

Assistance to members of the armed forces may take the form of advising them or their dependents on government life insurance, allotments or pensions, and of helping them in filling out the necessary application forms.

The Red Cross may even help members of the service man's family in getting employment, emergency medical treatment, or it may grant them money to tide the family over until an allotment is actually received from the government.

'Versailles of the Plains'

THIS month marks the 75th anniversary of the "Versailles of the Plains"—the famous Medicine Lodge peace council of 1867. Not only did it bring together a galaxy of frontier notables, both red man and white, but it was attended by a greater number of journalists than had ever before assembled for such an event. Some were destined for future fame and among these were:

JOHN D. HOWLAND

(From a photograph taken in 1867. Original in the collections of the State Historical Society of Colorado.)

No newspaper camera men were present at the Medicine Lodge council to snap pictures of the treaty-makers. But John D. Howland, "artist-correspondent" for Harper's Weekly, was there and posterity is indebted to his skilled pencil fer its only pictorial record of that historic event.

Howland was a descendant of John Howland who came to America on the Mayflower. His grandparents, natives of New Bedford, Mass., emigrated to Ohio soon after the Revolution and helped found the settlement of Zanesville where he was born May 7, 1843. One of his uncles, Len Owen, was a trapper in the West and a contemporary of Kit Carson and Jim Bridger. His tales of adventure on the frontier so stirred the imagination of young Howland that at the age of 14 he ran away from home and entered the employ of the American Fur company.

He accompanied a band of trappers up the Missouri to Fort Pierre, then crossed the plains to old Fort Laramie on the North Platte. The next year he joined the rush of gold-seekers to the new diggings in the Pikes Peak region of Colorado but, failing to make his fortune there, he returned to the fur company. Because young Howland was one of the few white traders who dealt fairly with the Indians, he became a great favorite of the Sioux. Under the tutelage of their warriors he became a skilled hunter with the bow and arrow and the women kept him supplied with handsomely beaded and fur-trimmed buckskin clothing.

At the outbreak of the Civil war, Howland enlisted in the First Regiment of Colorado Volunteers. He had a part in the campaign in New Mexico which saved the Southwest for the Union and he also served as a captain of scouts in the campaign against the hostile Indians in 1864. Mustered out of the army that year, the youthful frontiersman decided to satisfy his longing to become an artist.

In 1865 he went to Paris where he studied under several of the French masters until 1867 when he was notified of his appointment as interpreter for the commission appointed to make a treaty with the Sioux. During his stay in France he had acted as "artist-correspondent" for Harper's Weekly, so when he returned to America, Harper's immediately commissioned him to cover the negotiations with the Sioux in August and with the Southern Plains tribes the following October.

Thus it was that he went to the Medicine Lodge council and there drew the pictures, one of which, first published as a full-page illustration in Harper's for November 16, 1867, has become the classic representation of this high spot in the annals of the frontier and has often been reproduced in histories of the West.

Tell me a Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PADDY THE BEAVER HAS MANY VISITORS

PADDY THE BEAVER knew perfectly well that he would have visitors just as soon as he began to build his dam. He expected a lot of them. You see, he knew that none of them ever had seen a beaver at work unless, perhaps, it was Prickly Porky, the Porcupine, who also had come down from the north. So as he worked he kept his ears open and he smiled to himself as he heard a little rustle here and then a little rustle there. He knew just what those little rustles meant. Each one meant another visitor.

Paddy chuckled. "Seems to me that you are dreadfully afraid to show yourselves," said he in a loud voice, just as if he was talking to nobody in particular. Everything was still. There wasn't so much as a rustle after Paddy spoke. He chuckled again. He could just feel ever so many eyes watching him, though he didn't see a single pair. And he knew that the reason his visitors were hiding so carefully was because they were afraid of him. You see Paddy was much bigger than most of the little meadow and forest people and they didn't know what kind of a temper he might have. It's always safest to be very distrustful of strangers.

Of course Paddy knew all about this. He had been brought up that way. "Be sure and then you'll never be sorry" had been one of his mother's favorite sayings, and he had always remembered it. Indeed it had saved him a great deal of trouble. So now he was perfectly willing to go right on working and let his hidden visitors watch him until they were sure he meant them no harm. You see, he himself felt quite sure that none of them was big enough to do him any harm. Little Joe Otter was the only one he had any doubts about, and he felt sure that Little Joe wouldn't try to pick a quarrel. So he kept right on cutting trees, trimming off the branches, and hauling the trunks down to the dam he was building.

Anyway, they simply passed the time of day and hurried on.

Now, when the little people of the Smiling Pool, who were the first to find out that Paddy the Beaver had come to the Green Forest, had started up the Laughing Brook to see what he was doing, they had told the Merry Little Breezes where they were going. The Merry Little Breezes had been greatly excited. They couldn't understand how a stranger could have been living in the Green Forest without them knowing it. You see, they quite forgot that they very seldom wandered to the deepest part of the Green Forest. Of course, they started at once as fast as they could go to tell all the other little people who lived on or around the Green Meadows, all but Old Man Coyote. For some reason they thought it best not to tell him. They were a little doubtful about Old Man Coyote. He was so big and strong and so sly and smart that all his neighbors were afraid of him. Perhaps the Merry Little Breezes had this fact in mind, and knew that none would dare go call on the stranger if they knew that Old Man Coyote was going, too. Anyway, they simply passed the time of day with Old Man Coyote and hurried on to tell everyone else, and it so happens that the very last one they met was Sammy Jay.

Sammy was terribly put out to think that anything should be going on that he didn't know about first. You know, he is great for prying into the affairs of other people, and he loves dearly to boast that there is nothing going on in Green Forest or on the Green Meadows that he doesn't know about. So now his pride was hurt and he was in a terrible rage as he started after the Merry Little Breezes for the place deep in the Green Forest where they said that Paddy the Beaver was at work. He didn't believe a word of it, but he would see for himself.

Easy to Make Attractive Screens

Multiple purpose screens can be made from pastel colorkote panels by an amateur. Only materials needed are a frame of inexpensive crating lumber and hinges. Screens are highly decorative, can be used to balance a room, to obtain privacy or to block out unwanted view or objects. Screens made of insulating boards can have each panel of a different pastel color, and give clever artists an opportunity for creativeness. Those not so creative can stencil designs on the screen.

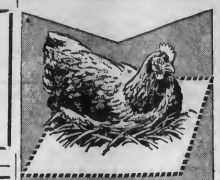
NICHOLSON NEWS—



"Him that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out." While he will receive all who come unto Him, still He will not force an entrance if the heart's door remains closed. Do not longer reject the Savior, which is the greatest of all sins, but open wide the portals and admit the Heavenly guest, fully realizing that eternal destiny is trembling with balance of decision and turn to the path which is crimsoned by the blood of Him, who gave Himself for them. The promise of redemption runs like a scarlet thread throughout the pages of the sacred Word. Under the most adverse conditions, the spirit of the indwelling Christ gives calm, undisturbed peace, soothing and comforting troubled hearts, for there was nothing more terrifying for this poor, helpless "shut-in" than to be evicted from he rhome in life's sunset.

Best wishes of a wide circle of friends follow Rev. and Mrs. Jae. H. Talley and son, Jimmy to their new home in Covington.

Fo rthe past three years he has been the highly efficient pastor of the Walton Methodist church, and as he assumes the duties of the pastorate of the Epworth church, may every success crown his untiring efforts for advancement of the Master's cause.

As the rosy tints of early morning streak the sky, we hear the dear, familiar strains of "Precious Name," the theme song of "Morning Watch."

Thousands of ardent admirers of Rev. and Mrs. Byron Crouch greatly enjoy their sweet ministry of song They possess voices of exceptional beauty, which blend most beautifully in hymns of praise to our Redeemer. He is a minister of distinction, and able announcer on the lovely program from Asbury College, in Wilmore. Deeply appreciated are his helpful, inspiring Gospel messages, as are also those of the guest speakers, rendition of sacred selections by Prof. Turner and other vocalists of ability and inspirational testimonies of the student groups besides his eagerly awaited weekly visits to "shut-ins," which are broadcast daily at 7:15 a. m. over WHAS, Louisville.

SCHOOL STUDENTS 100% IN SCRAP METAL DRIVE

Every Girl and Boy Work To Keep Walton's Collection At Peak.

BULLETIN!

The work of dismantling the county bridge over Wolper Creek on the Petersburg - Belleview Road was started this week. This will be weighed up and sold for scrap, and should add in the neighborhood of twenty tons to the county's total, to be counted in the current Scrap Campaign.

Boone County school children this week were organized into one of the most formidable armies ever seen in this county.

Organization of a scrap army was completed with the appointment of officers and personnel to extend the Kentucky newspaper scrap drive to all parts of the county. The pattern of the Army follows closely on that established in a comic strip "Little Orphan Annie," and will attempt to realize the stirring spirit attained in this patirotic masterpiece.

Throughout the county fathers and mothers were breaking down with all-out aid to their children from hitching up the "hoss" and dragging in the metal to combing attic and basement for all scrap available.

In a statement to The Advertizer from Joseph B. Heizer, Jr., it was set out that the children are depending upon their parents to aid them in this drive.

In regard to paper which has been collected in many homes Mr. Heizer said, "You have been wondering what you were to do with all that paper accumulated since Boy Scouts were forced to leave off collecting last Spring. Well, here's your chance to unload Saturday if you live in Burlington, Walton or Florence.

"Tie them up in bundles of 50 to a hundred pounds, using wire or strong twine and just leave at your curb. State Highway trucks will collect and proceeds of sale will go to Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts."

Mr. Heizer continued, "And don't forget to lay out any rags, rubber, and, most important, any scrap metal of any kind which you are willing to donate to the Scouts, together with Red Cross and USO. It's surprising how a piece of scrap will pop up when and where you least expect, and after you are sure it has all been disposed of. Seach again and help the Scouts make this collection."

Mrs. Allen H. Gaines, cochairman of the Salvage Committee, expressed her belief that Boone County would come through with its share of the nation's scrap.

Workers were asked to make the public realize that this scrap is vital to our war industries and that the lives of Boone County men are dependent upon the munition produced in this country.

Mrs. Gaines and Mr. Heizer concluded that "This is Boone County's chance to show that her heart and head are both working in the right direction."

On Monday the pupils of Walton, Verona High School started a very important scrap drive. This drive will continue through out the month of October.

All the pupils from the first grade to the seniors are helping in this drive.

Many of us are not old enough to fight and some of us are too young to understand war, but we do realize the least we can do to help our country is to bring in all the scrap we can find.

Already we have 10,000 pounds of scrap and lots more to be brought in.

The room that has the most iron or scrap receives a prize. War Stamps are given to the pupils for their scrap.

The Girl Reserve have got together as a group to collect the scrap. They will receive money instead of stamps.

Teachers will be the Captains. Among the children in each schoolroom there shall be appointed, on the basis of responsibility and production, Lieutenants, Sergeants, and Corporals. Other children will be Privates, eligible to promotion for meritorious performance of duty.

More interest and cooperation has been shown in the drive than any other adventure started by the school. And why not! If we expect to win this war it will take the cooperation of every citizen in the United States. It will mean giving up our luxuries, rationing of food, and we will have to make many sacrifices before the war is over.

We appreciate the cooperation help and assistance of D. L. Lusby, B. F. Elliott, Powers Conrad, Barnett Franke, Ottis Readnour and Community Public Service Company for the use of their trucks.

The total amount of scrap up to today is 11.860 pounds.

MAKE NO MISTAKE.!

War Program Citation Awarded

A citation for distinguished service in the National War Savings Program has been awarded to L. B. Wilson, president and general manager of Radio Station WCKY, Cincinnati, by Henry Morgenthau Jr., U. S. Secretary of Treasury. A. E. Anderson, chief of the Hamilton County, Ohio, War Savings Program Staff (left) is shown here making formal presentation.

In addition to war savings programs and spot announcements broadcast daily over WCKY, the L. B. Wilson station has been designated as a public center for purchasing war stamps and war bonds, is selling bonds among employees and is a joint sponsor of Cincinnati's Fountain Square Demolition Depot where everything from ammunition to tanks is "sold" for stamps and bonds ranging in price from 10 cents to $10,000.

4-H GARDEN CONTEST ENDED TUESDAY

The Victory Garden Contest, in which sixty-six Boone County 4-H Club members participated ended Tuesday, according to Mr. Franklin Frazier, Assistant County Agent. Five gold metals, provided by the Sears, Roebuck & Company, will be awarded to the winners during achievement exercises to be held by community organizations in November.

One of the five will be named to compete for State Honors, in which four representatives of the blue award group will each receive $25 War Savings Bonds. The State winner, selected from these four, will compete for sectional and national honors, the awards for which include all expense trips to the National 4-H Victory Congress scheduled to be held in Chicago next November, and $100 U. S. War Savings Bonds to the highest scoring participants in this Extension section.

HAMILTON FAIR OFFERS CLASSES

The Twelfth Annual Hamilton Free CommunityFair will be held at Hamilton School grounds on this Friday, October 9, between the hours of 10:00 A. M. and 4:30 P. M. Sixty-five classes are open to exhibitors. Chambers and Grubbs Funeral Home, Walton, and Dixie Chevrolet Sales, Walton, are donating ribbons for all exhibits.

A splendid school, 4-H Club and recreational program has been planned for the day. The community invites all patrons and their friends to attend and enjoy the day in the Annual Homecoming Day. Lunch will be served by the Hamilton Parent-Teacher Association.

W. C. T. U. SELECTS A CONVENTION DELEGATE

The Oct. meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held in the Mtehodist Church, Friday. The business was devoted to what is done in W. C. T. U. groups, in the Counties and States. Those taking part in the program were: Mrs. D. E. Bedinger, Mrs. R. O. Hughes, Mrs. Lottie Powers, Mrs. Horace Simpson, Mrs. D. K. Johnson, Mrs. William Sturgeon, Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, Mrs. Lula J. Hudson, Mrs. Bryan Rector and daughter.

Mrs. Lula J. Hudson was elected as a delegate to the Sixty-Second Annual Convention of the Kentucky W. C. T. U., to be held at the Christian Church, Harrodsburg, Oct. 19-22. Mrs. D. K. Johnson, as alternate.

We have a report given by our Treasurer as to what the W. C. T. U. is doing.

Women's Christian Temperance Union Pledge: "I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled fermented and malt liquors, including wine, beer, and cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage use of, and traffic in, the same."

The one dollar yearly dues are divided as follows: Fifty cents is sent to our State Treas., for expenses and subscription to the monthly paper, "The White Ribbon," which gives us the needs of the work and activities of other Unions; 20 cents is sent to the District Treasurer to help defray expenses, 30 cents is kept in our local treasury, with the $1 from honorary members.

The object of the Union shall be to educate public sentiment up to the standard of total abstinence, to train the young, rescue the fallen, and secure the perfect enforcement of the prohibition yaw. There are five very important departments: Evangelistic, Sabbath Observance, Health, Medical, Flower Mission, Relief, Young People and Children's Work.

Our boys in the army are wanting God's word to help them to get ready to live or die.

We, the women of Kentucky, believe it our duty under the providence of God, to unite and renew our efforts for the complete extinction of the traffic.

Recording Secty.

FELLOWSHIP DINNER

The members of the Methodist Church will enjoy a Fellowship Dinner at the dining room of the church on Tuesday evening, October 13th, at 6:30 Eastern War Time. Every member of the church and its various organizations is urged to attend. There will be a social time after the dinner, as well as some official business proceedure.

LEAVING TO ENTER NAVAL TRAINING

Another of Walton's citizens, Mr. Howe Rboerts, is leaving to-day (Thursday) to enter Naval Training at Norfolk, Va.

HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS

Girl Reserves and Glee Club Hard At Work

Glee Club began Tuesday for the Freshmen up to the Senior girls. The seventh and eighth-grade girls have it on Monday and Thursday.

The boys and girls are really in the scrap, taking an interest in the drive, which started Monday.

The Girl Reserves went together as a group tocollect old iron, in turn they will get money, instead of stamps.

The Girl Reserves are working on their Candle Lighting program this week, which will be given at 6 p. m. Sunday, October 11th, at the Methodist Church. Mrs. DeMoisey is to be the principal speaker. Everyone is welcome.

As yet the Seniors haven't decided on their motto. We will have a meeting and vote on the list submitted.

Joan Farris and Cordelia Leathers were chosen as our art editors of the X-Ray.

MRS. JUNE STANLEY

Well Known Church Mission Worker Comes To Christian Church Sunday

Mrs. June Stanley will be in Walton, Sunday, Oct. 11, in connection with the nationwide Emergency Campaign of the Disciples of Christ, and will speak in the evening service at Walton Christian Church.

This is the second year of the campaign which was launched as a two-year effort on July 18th, 1941. During the first year over two-thirds of the total goal or $1,000,000 was raised in pledges and cash. This is however the first visit of the Emergency Million effort to the State of Kentucky.

This campaign is to meet the emergencies of the educational and missionary work of Disciples of Christ, both of the continuing work and that brought about through our participation in the world war. The money will not only help to relieve the acute situation in this and other countries, but will help relieve the problems facing the local churches. Hundreds of schools, hospitals, and other institutions are depending on the result of this campaign.

The effort across the United States is to enlist 10,000 individuals giving $100.00 or more each to realize $1,000,000 for these emergencies.

Mrs. June E. Stanley is the Executive Secretary of the Kentucky Women's Missionary Society, auxiliary to the United Christian Missionary Society. Befort that she was State Youth Worker and later Associate State Secretary for about seventeen years. She served three years as the State Secretary of Mississippi.

Mrs. Stanley received her A. B. degree from the University of Louisville, and her Master's of Religious Education from the College of the Bible in 1931. Since that time she has traveled in Kentucky, helping churches with missionary education. She carries responsibility for the missionary education of Youth and Adults.

Mrs. Stanley has visited our mission stations in Mexico, and the home mission institutions in Texas, Mississippi, Pennsylvania, and Kentucky. Her sister, Miss Laura McDonald, is a missionary in Paraguay, and another sister, Mrs. Virgil Havens, spent fourteenyears in Africa.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The Navy is making a plea to civilians to turn in their binoculars for military use during the War. The Army and Navy both need binoculars for navigation and scouting purposes. Depending on the power of the lenses, they cost from $50 to $80 each.

If you have a set of 6 x 30 up to 7 x 50-power lense binoculars loan them to the Army or Navy. If not, your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps will help buy this equipment for our fighting forces. At least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every payday will do the job . . . and provide the "eyes" through which a scouting pilot may spot an enemy battleship.

THIS IS WORTH FIGHTING FOR

The right to

SPEAK WITHOUT FEAR

FREEDOM OF SPEECH is a keystone in the American way of life. Take it away and the torch of liberty will surely flicker out.

The conquered people know — now — how precious this freedom is. Today, they can't speak freely without fear of the bite of a whip, the slow torture of a concentration camp, or death.

But freedom of speech will not be taken away from Americans! To preserve that liberty we're working and fighting and sacrificing as never before. What's more, we're going to win this war!

Our enemies can find smashing proof of that in the courage and the determination of American fighting men; in the overwhelming number of planes and tanks and guns that are rolling off American production lines; and in the huge volume of war materials and supplies and fighting men being transported smoothly and efficiently by the American railroads.

The Southern Railway System, like other American railroads, has pledged its all to the winning of this war. We're terribly in earnest about it, and therefore we are placing war transportation needs ahead of everything else.

Last year the Southern carried more freight than it has ever carried before in all its long history, 31 percent more than it carried in 1940; and 46 per cent more than it carried during World War I; and more than twice as much as it carried in the depression years of 1932-33-34. Most of this increase has been due to war demands; raw materials for armament, tank and airplane factories; materials and supplies to equip, and food to maintain, our rapidly expanding land, air and naval forces.

In the first half of this year the volume of freight handled by the Southern again broke all records, exceeding the first half of 1941 by 37 percent and topping by far every previous mark of a half century of service.

We are proud of this achievement. Our pride is the kind that drives us on to even greater achievements. And in so serving the nation with our best in this great emergency, we are learning how better to "serve the South" when Victory has been won and the God-given right of free men to speak without fear has been guaranteed for the generations to come.

That is worth fighting for!

Ernest E. Norris
President.

THE SOUTHERN SERVES THE SOUTH

WHAT EVERY··· KENTUCKIAN··· MUST KNOW ABOUT ···AN IMPORTANT TAX SOURCE.....

Q: What benefits does Kentucky receive from the legal beer industry?

A: Nearly $8,000,000 in taxes paid into the State treasury since 1935; honest jobs at good pay for more than 15,000 Kentuckians; more than $70,000,000 to date, in salaries and wages for Kentucky workers; plus countless benefits to counties and municipalities throughout the State in taxes, license fees, etc.

Q: Does the State of Kentucky need the beer industry's taxes?

A: Yes—every dollar! Kentucky's Commissioner of Revenue recently estimated that the State will have $6,500,000 less revenue during the 1942-43 fiscal year than it had last year. With many sources of revenue drying up, the beer industry's $1,300,000 (estimated) taxes are more important than ever. Without this revenue, you might have to dig still deeper into your own pocket to help make up for the loss.

Q: How does the State use the taxes paid by the beer industry?

A: This revenue, which amounted to approximately $1,360,000 in the 1941-42 fiscal year, is used for educational purposes throughout the State; for Old Age Assistance, Aid to Dependent Children, Aid to the Blind, Health Service, Confederate Pensions, etc., and for expenses of State government.

Every county, every city and town, every individual in Kentucky benefits directly or indirectly from beer's taxes.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Aid for Small Business Urged by WPB; Allied Land-Air Offensive Relieves Jap Pressure on Critical New Guinea Front; FDR Envisions Higher War Production

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of the newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

British raids on the German lines in Libya have yielded considerable success in damage to enemy communications and supplies as well as in prisoners captured for questioning. Above photo shows some of the 97 German prisoners taken on a recent foray.

SMALL BUSINESS:
To Get Lifeline

With the nation's inevitable progress toward total war economy, many a small business man faced the prospect of becoming a postwar casualty unless a lifeline were thrown to him.

Help appeared likely, however, when War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson urged on congress the immediate creation of a war liabilities administration charged with the job of seeing to it that the little business man survived.

Four essentials for saving little business were recommended by Nelson in testimony before the special senate committee studying wartime problems of little business.

No. 1 is to help little business enterprises take care of overhanging liabilities they would have been able to discharge under normal circumstances. No. 2 is to provide a means for financing small business after the war. Third is to furnish technical and other assistance for small business after the war; and fourth, is to provide a mechanism giving small business enterprises a priority in the acquisition of machinery and equipment when the war is over.

ROOSEVELT:
High Goals Ahead

Expressing the opinion that war production was proceeding at an extremely satisfactory rate and that the rest of the nation was far ahead of Washington in war spirit, President Roosevelt returned to the White House after an unprecedented secret inspection of war activities from coast to coast. Mr. Roosevelt said that even higher production goals would be set in months to come.

Although every detail of the historic journey remained a military secret during its progress, the publicity which followed it reverberated across the nation once the censorship curtain was lifted. In a dramatic press conference that paralleled in drama his famous "horse and buggy" attack on the Supreme court seven years ago, the President hit out at certain elements in congress, in the press and radio and in parts of his own administration that were either deliberately or misguidedly hampering America's war effort.

The President had warm praise for the nation as a whole. The people in general, he said, have the finest kind of morale.

PACIFIC AREA:
Yanks Infiltrate

In the New Guinea area of the Southwest Pacific, Allied mountain troops gave the Japs a taste of their own medicine by taking the offensive, sifting through jungles and over mountains to recapture Nauro in the Owen Stanley range, well beyond Ioribaiwa, the high water mark of the Nipponese advance on Port Moresby.

A communique from General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia revealed that American and Australian pilots attacked Japanese supply lines for 75 miles back to Buna, the main Japanese coastal base in New Guinea. Using native porters as pack trains the Allied troops covered difficult ground as rapidly as had the Jap invaders.

In the Solomon islands the marines continued to consolidate their positions and to strengthen the defense of the vital Guadalcanal air base against expected enemy assaults. MacArthur's airmen made repeated raids on the Jap-held northern Solomons.

Meanwhile in Washington the navy department reported the loss of two American transports in the original battle of the Solomon islands. These were the 8,378-ton naval transport George F. Elliott and the transport Gregory, a small auxiliary.

HITLER:
Boasts Anew

Making his annual winter relief address at the Sportspalast in Berlin, Adolf Hitler outlined a three-point program for winning the bulk of Russia's natural resources and converting them to the uses of Germany. He assured his audience that Stalingrad's fate was sealed, and said he and his high command were constantly preparing for an Allied second front wherever it might strike.

Listed as 1942 objectives on the Russian front by the fuehrer were: domination of the Don river area; capture of Russia's oil fields and coal deposits; and securing the German position in the Black sea area through settlement of the Crimea.

Observers who remembered Hitler's boasts of a year ago that "Russia is beaten and will never raise its head again" expressed the belief that winter once again would find the fuehrer's claims unfulfilled.

Indications that increasing RAF raids were affecting German home morale were seen in the applause that greeted Hitler's promise that "the hour will come when we shall strike back."

Ridiculing the prospects of a second Allied front, Hitler declared that if the British tried again to invade Europe, they could count themselves lucky if they stayed for nine hours as at Dieppe, for "we have made thorough preparations to welcome them."

USED TIRES:
Frozen by OPA

Price Administrator Leon Henderson's action in "freezing" all used tires and tubes in the hands of present owners until a normal rationing program can be worked out was regarded as a further effective step toward accomplishing the rubber conservation program recommended by the President's rubber investigation committee.

Mr. Henderson said the new order would add considerably to inventories of rubber available to assure American motorists of "tires for essential uses."

In the order, the OPA prohibited the transfer of any used tires and tubes by dealers and consumers. The order, however, does not prevent the sale to a consumer of an automobile equipped with used tires. Automobile dealers also are permitted to shift their used tires that are mounted on cars in stock to other cars in stock.

Car owners are permitted by the order to have their used tires and tubes repaired and to have tires recapped if they qualify for the latter service.

MISCELLANY:

LONDON: Plans for a London recreational center for the United States armed forces on the lines of the New York Stage Door Canteen were announced here by Harvey D. Gibson, American Red Cross commissioner in Britain. The center, to be known as the "Rainbow Corner" will be located just off Piccadilly Circus and will accommodate 400 persons at one time.

WASHINGTON: Unofficial compilations of war appropriations since Pearl Harbor indicated that the total would reach approximately 140 billion dollars before January 1, 1943. The staggering allotments—with others even greater deemed a certainty by congressional observers—already represent an amount four times the size of America's bill for World War I. Appropriations voted by congress do not represent actual expenditures, but constitute authority for administrative officials to commit the government for definite purposes.

PATTERNS
SEWING CIRCLE

IN TOWN and in country, at home and in the office this is a dress which is "tops" for style and comfort. Larger figures will particularly like the full-cut bodice and the six-gore skirt which fits with such admirable smoothness. We suggest it for gabardines, flannels, new rayon weaves.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1590-B is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 with short sleeves takes 4½ yards 39-inch material.

Frock for Work.

AS YOU join the ranks of the serious workers, here is a dress you'll enjoy having. Spartan simplicity is maintained throughout, in the simple rever collar, the straight cut sleeves, the button closing down the front. Wear it with or without a belt, make it with or without the pockets. It is a boon for home, office or factory workers!

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1603-B is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 18 (34) requires with long or short sleeves, 4½ yards 39-inch material.

Uncle Phil Says:

Too Busy Narrating

The man who is always going to do a lot of great things usually ends by doing a few small ones.

People who use splendid grammar in conversation seldom say anything brilliant.

One may not do so well growing old gracefully, but he need not do it grouchily.

But He Was Short of That

When Adam gave up a rib to create Eve, the result would have been appalling if it had been part of his backbone.

The expression, "The good die young" arises from a general belief that the wicked have more vitality and live longer.

"Gentleman" had a thousand definitions, and "gent" is just as hard to define.

Left-Right Handed

Nature has arranged that the brain shall be mapped out into definite departments, and overlapping is discouraged. One part of your brain deals with the sense of smell, another with the sense of sight, and so on. Roughly speaking, the right side of your brain governs the left side of your body, and vice versa.

By heredity and training you are right-handed? That means that the left side of your brain looks after your writing with your right hand. If the right side of your brain encouraged your left hand to write as well there would be waste of effort.

People who naturally can write equally well with right or left hand—the ambidextrous—are seldom successful in life.

Laughing at Misfortune

We laugh heartily when our fellowman slips on a banana peel and awkwardly falls. That laughter shows, basically, our resentment at any demonstration of the unusual, coupled with a comfortable realization that we ourselves are outside the disaster. There is unconscious brutality, therefore, in laughing at the sight of a fat man chasing his hat in a high wind. Higher up the scale of humor there is brutality in wit, which almost always holds an element of cruelty.

"He does — the lawn-mower, washing machine, vacuum cleaner and the errands!"

Wouldn't Hold Him to It

Father—Didn't you promise me to be a good boy?

Son—Yes, father.

Father—And didn't I promise you a thrashing if you weren't?

Son—Yes, father, but as I've broken my promise you needn't keep yours.

Still at It

The customer couldn't see eye-to-eye with the taxicab driver on the matter of fare. Finally he said in exasperation: "See here—I haven't been riding in cabs for ten years for nothing."

"No, but I'll bet you've been trying to," retorted the driver.

Backed Out

Police-Inspector—Got away, has he? Did you guard all the exits?

Constable—Yes, sir; but we think he must have slipped out through one of the entrances.

Looking Through Him

The aggressive wife of a meek little man was hauling her husband over the coals for having made a fool of himself when some friends called. He sat in dejected silence.

"And don't sit there," she shouted, "making fists at me in your pockets, either."

MAIL SOLDIERS' XMAS GIFTS BEFORE NOVEMBER 1.

READ THE RULES—The following rules, issued by the Postoffice Department in cooperation with the Army Postal Service of the War Department, apply to the mailing of Christmas parcels for members of our Armed Forces serving outside the continental limits of the United States.

TIME OF MAILING—Christmas parcels and greeting cards should be mailed during the period beginning October 1 and ending November 1, 1942, the earlier the better. Each package should be endorsed "Christmas Parcel." Special effort will be made for delivery in time for Christmas.

SIZE AND WEIGHT—Christmas parcels shall not exceed 11 pounds in weight, or 18 inches in length or 42 inches in length and girth combined. However, the public has been urged to cooperate by voluntarily restricting parcels to the size of an ordinary shoe box and the weight to six pounds.

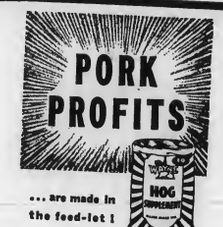
USE CARE IN PREPARATION—Remembering the great distance this mail will be transported and the necessary storage and frequent handling, it is absolutely necessary that articles be packed in substantial boxes or containers and be covered with wrappers of sufficient strength to resist pressure of other mail. Each parcel is subject to censorship and delay may be minimized by securing covering to permit ready inspection of contents.

PROHIBITED MATTER—Intoxicants, inflammable materials, poisons or compositions likely to damage mails are unmailable. No perishable matter should be included in parcels.

HOW TO ADDRESS PARCELS—Addresses must be legible. Parcels addressed to overseas Army personnel should show in addition to the full name and address of the sender, the name rank, Army serial number, branch of service, organization, A.P.O. number of the addressee and the postoffice through which parcels are to be routed. Units located within the continental United States may be addressed direct, using name, rank, organization and location.

POSTAGE MUST BE FULLY PREPAID—The rate on parcels of fourth-class matter (exceeding eight ounces) being the zone rate applicable from the postoffice where mailed to the postoffice in the care of which parcels are addressed.

GREETING MESSAGES PERMISSIBLE—Inscriptions such as "Merry Christmas", "Don't open until Christmas" and the like may be placed on the covering of the parcel if it does not interfere with the address. Cards may be enclosed and books may bear a simple dedicatory inscription.



INSURANCE AND REGISTRY—Gifts of value should be insured. Articles of small size and considerable value should be sealed and sent as first-class registered mail.

MONEY ORDERS—The Army Postal Service recommends use of postal money orders to transmit gifts of money to members of Armed Forces outside the United States. These are cashed at A.P.O. in local foreign currency at rate of exchange on date of presentation.

A WEEK OF THE WAR

Rubber Administrator Jeffers, acting on two important recommendations of the Baruch Rubber committee, directed the Office of Defense Transportation to limit driving speeds to 35 miles an hour and told the Office of Price Administration to prepare rationation gasoline throughout the Nation on the same basis that is now rationed in the East.

The limitation on speed will go into effect October 1, for all vehicles except those operated by common carriers. Common carriers—trucks and buses, operated on regular schedules over regular routes—will be given until October 15 to adjust their schedules to the new top speed. Enforcement of the new speed limit will be left up to the States for the present, ODT announced.

THE RED CROSS

All county schools were visited by the nurse during September, and most of the children in the second grade had a full health inspection.

There is an unusual amount of impetigo (fall sores) this year. The best way to handle this would be for each child to go to his doctor for treatment. This is done as far as possible, but some of the little children can not get to a doctor, and for these we are trying to treat them through the school.

A young girl whose case has just been diagnosed as tuberculosis is in a serious condition. There are a number of small children in the family, and if possible she will be gotten off to the one and only State Sanitarium in the state. This is crowded, and even if one has the money it is next to impossible to get in. No one can go for less than $1.25 per day plus X-ray and other incidental expenses.

One P.T.A. which thought they could not do anything on corrections last year has appointed a committee for this and asked the nurse to report needy cases.

Several urgent tonsil cases are pending until plans can be made to get them done.

If the tire and gas rationing do not prohibit a Home Nursing Class will be started in Bulletsville district in October. This is the same class which was started last spring, but the women were too busy with gardens and canning to get to it, so we decided to postpone it until fall.

Plans for October are mostly work in schools and emergencies.

Such an attitude as this, caused the "INS" Congressman to remark that his opposition "wouldn't even be close" so, said he, "I am just going to make a few speeches."
If these poor thoughtless tools of the machine and their "IN" are right, then the soldiers on the battle line are going to be wondering after after election, just what it is they are dying to preserve.

HERE is a way to give an old couch a new lease on life with style and comfort.

Start with 9½ yards of 36-inch-wide cotton twill to cover an average couch and three cushions. Here a soft tan is used to match one of the tones in the rug. Seams are accented with a second stitching, as shown. And there is no untidy slipping and sliding for this cover. The seam allowance around the top is sewn to the couch pad with long stitches of carpet thread. The cushions are made to stand erect by using an inside core of newspapers tightly bound together with muslin bands, and then padded with cotton batting.

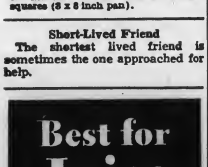
ALL-BRAN FUDGE SQUARES—BEST YOU EVER TASTED!

Every mother in the land will want to bake these scrumptious cookies. Children will demolish a plate of them in a wink. Grown-ups rave about their "different" taste and new crunchy texture. They're made, of course, with the famous cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN FUDGE SQUARES



2 squares unsweetened chocolate	1 cup sugar
	¾ cup flour
	½ cup All-Bran
½ cup butter	½ cup nutmeats
2 eggs	1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Melt chocolate over hot water and add butter. Beat eggs well, add sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Add melted chocolate and butter. Stir in flour, All-Bran, chopped nutmeats and flavoring. Pour into greased pan, making a layer about one-third inch thick. Bake in moderate oven (375°F.) about 30 minutes. Yield: Sixteen 2-inch squares (2 x 2 inch pan).

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. When they arrive in Tierra Libre they find both Zora and her husband dead. It is Mitchell's job as chief engineer for a fruit company that Jeff has been called to fill. Later Jeff's friend Bill Henderson is killed, and Jeff suspects his employer, Senor Montaya, of murdering him and the Mitchells because they had found a clue to the strange things going on on the plantation. Other sinister figures are the company chemist, Dr. Toenjes, and the flyers, Ryden and Lannestock. A man named Collins arrives from the Canal Zone to see Mitchell. A talk with Jerry McInnis has revealed that Montaya is part German and is dealing with the Nazis. Jeff has gone to find Collins.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

For several minutes neither man moved. Gradually Curt edged himself into deeper blackness, got closer, put the figure between himself and light, the light from the Comandancia not far distant. The outline looked like Collins.

He called the name softly. No answer. He tried again.

"Yes," came the low acknowledgment.

Curt approached. "Looking around, huh?"

No answer.

"Find anything?"

Silence. Then, "No."

"Well, my friend, it's time for you and me to have a talk. First, your credentials. Let's see them."

No move from the other at first, then an amiable "Sure," and Collins reached into a pocket.

"That's better. Lieutenant, Naval Intelligence, eh? Glad to have you. Shake."

It was the handclasp that turned the trick. Collins unbent. "I need a friend here," he confessed.

"You armed?"

"Yes. Had my service pistol cached."

"Good. It's nearly eleven. The village will be asleep by midnight, I expect. Go back to your room. Unhook your rear window screen to be sure you make no noise later."

"I did. Got out that way."

Curt grunted. "Well, go back to bed for a while. You've likely sized up the place and know who's here?"

"Sure."

"Then when they're all abed and have had time to get to sleep, wake up Monahan. He's in the last room."

"I know."

"Bring him out along the main track to the motorcar shed, middle—" Curt broke off, stared toward the mess-hall. Some groups were breaking up for the night, judging from the sounds. "—middle of the yards. Got that? Enough for now. Get back to your room, I'll see you later."

Curt returned to his bungalow, Collins disappeared into the night. Outside the mess-hall Emilio was having a few last words with his erstwhile partners before heading for the engineering bungalow. Curt had barely time to climb in, hook his window screen behind him, hang his clothes over a chair as they had been earlier, and stretch out under the mosquito bar. He'd have to leave the magazine against the door and hope that Emilio would give it no thought, or at worst suppose a freak burst of wind had knocked it to the floor.

He heard Emilio fumble at the lock, the slight scrape of the magazine as the door pushed it back over the floor. A shadow blocked out the light at his bedroom door. He simulated deep breathing and closed his lids until he could see only through his lashes.

Emilio looked and listened, then withdrew. Presently the porch light snapped off, the front door clicked shut, and Curt heard the man's steps headed for the bachelor quarters. They sounded sharp on the asphalt walk.

The luminous dial of his watch told Curt it was 11:30. Later than he'd thought. He lay relaxed for a few minutes, but dared not close his eyes, afraid he would fall asleep after his full day.

Soon he got up, dressed again, this time taking his hat, and let himself out the front way. He reconnoitered carefully.

Avoiding the street lamps, Curt made his way to the rendezvous and waited impatiently until at last two figures, little darker than the background itself, came toward him. He recognized Monahan's stride.

"Good man, Slats," he said when they were close enough. "This will do you out of your sleep, but it can't be helped. Get yourself a cudgel and keep alert. Collins and I will be gone three or four hours. We mustn't be longer, for the place'll be stirring to life soon after that. Hang out at my bungalow, Slats. Anyone starts snooping around, conk him. Tie him up, only don't let anyone find out I'm missing, and don't be recognized yourself. Got me?"

"Got yuh."

The motorcar shed was an open front building with three short tracks. His own car was headed out, fortunately the first car on its track. Curt remembered the speedometer and disconnected it. There must be no mileage record on this trip.

Curt didn't open the car wide. The engine was smooth enough, but iron wheels on iron rails in this still night air rang alarmingly loud to men who needed silence. Further, in running without lights at high speed over an uneven roadbed, even a snake unseen on the track might derail them.

Under way, Collins turned to Curt in the seat beside him. "I've followed blind so far. Where are we headed?"

Curt chuckled mirthlessly. "The one spot you want above all to visit." After a moment, "We better have it out, Collins. Suppose we begin with you. How did you get in on this? I reckon I know, but I'd rather you told me."

"I had a note from Bill Henderson. He enclosed a letter from Mr. Mitchell—"

"One thing. Did you know of Mitchell's murder before you left the Zone?"

"Yes. That's the reason I was sent. Mitchell hinted in his letter at a Nazi movement here which would endanger the Canal, and he wanted someone sent to confirm some serious discoveries he'd made and take action.

"But the letter was so involved and guarded and vague that we thought it crank stuff. We get more of that than you'd suppose. Nevertheless, we put out some feelers. No matter how wild the yarn that comes in, we can't ditch it in the waste basket.

"Naturally we have some pretty good sources of information here and there throughout these countries. First thing was to check up on Mitchell—the type of man, how responsible he was, and so on. Well, while we were doing that we got word of his murder. So that seemed to indicate a pretty thorough investigation was needed. I drew the detail.

This lower gate was locked.

"While over in Soledad getting the lay of the land, I heard of the other two deaths. That clinched it. The next step was to get in here on the ground, ferret out what was going on."

"Is that what you were doing, snooping around the docks at Tempujo tonight?" Curt chuckled. "What did you think you could learn there?"

"Listen, man," retorted Collins in a huff, "I couldn't just walk in here, look around, and ask questions. I had to get established first, so as to be accepted. You've planted me up river where there's obviously nothing to see. I've had one definite objective since our plane faked trouble the other day, but it's at San Alejo. Meanwhile, until I can get to it, there's no harm looking around where I can."

"Okay, okay," Curt apologized. "No offense. We'll give you a crack at that objective right now. Mitchell wasn't hitting the pipe. I've been smelling trouble myself for the two weeks I've been here, but only tonight did I click on it."

He told Collins the story Montaya had given him about the hangars first built, later abandoned to storage purposes because the flyers pointed out the bad location.

He told of the boxed airplane wings he'd seen the day of his arrival.

"I know," put in Collins enigmatically. "I had a talk with the men of that plane when they put down at Puerto Soledad."

Curt grunted and went on. He told of Mitchell's rising suspicions over a shipment from Japan—or through Japan, he added—of eight long, square-end boxes. Heavy boxes, like overstuffed coffins, Monahan had told him.

He told of having seen only yesterday another pair of big, heavy square boxes marked generators, from Germany via Vladivostok. So far as he knew, and he was pretty familiar with the project by now, they had no use for generators of that size, nor were any on order that he knew of, and he'd had access—presumably—to all engineering equipment orders then placed.

They reached the airfield spur. Here a wide stand of manzanitas made a black blob on the landscape. They dared not continue use of the motor, for sound rises and San Alejo was not more than a kilometer ahead and above them.

Pushing the car up the branch line, and backing out by the third leg of the "Y" onto the main line again, they had the car headed for Tempujo once more. They left it in the blackness of the low trees.

Curt fumbled in the tool box, stuck a chisel into a hip pocket, and the two men struck off down the airfield branch. Stars there were aplenty, and they gave some light, but there was no moon and the going was rough.

They followed the tracks to the spur that led to the bodega at the lower end of the field, then up this spur to the fence. This lower gate was locked, but Curt expected that. He led the way along the fence until they'd turned the corner at the end of the field, then on to the copse of trees that sheltered the big buildings. The blackness here was so thick it felt solid as they pushed into it.

"I doubt if we need to worry about a guard inside," Curt muttered. "The fence is ordinary protection and they couldn't keep a watchman at this end of the field without his showing a light at times. Lights down here would cause speculation if seen from San Alejo."

He seized hold of the fence and pulled and pushed experimentally.

"I don't know," he confessed, "but I suspect it's strung along the top for alarm. In any case, it'd be darn near impossible for us to get over that barbed stuff in the dark. We'll burrow under."

They used the flashlight, playing it close to the ground. Putting the chisel to work to loosen the earth, Curt scraped away with his hands until they had a hole through which they could crawl. He had a sudden thought.

"Hey, take off your clothes! I've got fresh ones at Tempujo for myself, but if I give you any others it might be noticed."

"Right."

Collins stripped to his shorts for the forage, and, minus a gun belt, had to carry his automatic in his hand. They circled the three buildings cautiously, the two hangars, the adjoining shed-roof between, duplicate of the hangars at the other end of the field.

"Haven't yet cut the grass here," commented Curt. "Huh. Probably don't intend to—it's a better indication that the buildings aren't in active use."

High in the walls was a continuous horizontal strip of windowing in ground glass. Not the faintest glimmer of light showed anywhere.

"Absolutely perfect camouflage from above," growled Curt. "Look how they built the center portion around trees. The trunks go up through the roof. I'll bet not a square foot of these buildings can be seen from the air. Only the tracks leading in here would tell anything, and they can't be avoided. But even the tracks, with the weeds not kept down, probably look like a cart path."

They were now in front. Down at the other end of the field only a few night lights showed.

"This loading platform along the front," went on Curt. "It's anchored only lightly to the buildings and the ground. My guess is it could be picked up by a couple of dozen men and swung out of the way in a few minutes. Pretty darn clever."

True, this loading platform, the height of a flat car, was not solid. It jiggled to a healthy push.

"Well, we can't force the doors, obviously."

"Can we dig under as we did with the fence, or do you suppose there's a floor?"

Curt pondered. "Bound to be a cement floor," he decided. "Anyway, we couldn't tamp down earth inside when we left. No, the wall is only corrugated sheet iron. Let's find a section to pry loose."

They searched along the back of the buildings, coming finally to a spot where Curt could use his chisel again with least likelihood of its being discovered. It took some minutes before they had one sheet of the sheathing sufficiently sprung to give them entrance. There was noise to this job, try as they would to muffle it, but they seemed to have the field to themselves. They crawled through the opening.

Only Curt had a flashlight. He played it about experimentally, then more boldly, taking care that neither the beam nor a reflection from it should hit the strip of windowing.

Then it fell on something and stopped dead! Directly above them spread wings of death.

"By God, Collins! What'd I tell you!"

His words sounded hollow, and echoes slapped back at them from the walls. The finger of light picked out the fuselage of a huge plane that towered above the two men, played along it back and forth. A long, slender, cigar-shaped body, its nose of glass, two-motored, its wings appearing stubby from this angle.

"A Heinkel!" exclaimed Collins, and again echoes reverberated.

A Heinkel it was. But on the under side of its wings and on the side of the fuselage was lettering and the circle-within-a-star-within-a-circle emblem to identify it as an American plane!

GROWTH IN CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:40-52; II Peter 1:1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT—But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.—II Peter 3:18.

Growth is a normal thing. We expect it of the child, and when it fails we know that something is wrong. Just so there is something very decidedly wrong in the life of the Christian who fails to grow in grace. If a child fails to grow we are alarmed, but if a Christian does not grow we hardly notice it, or at most only express our regret. We need a revival.

I. Normal Children Will Grow (Luke 2:40-52).

While Christ was God manifest in the flesh, He was at the same time true man, and as a boy He developed and grew in a normal way.

Unless we meet the tragedy of arrested development we need have no concern about the fact that a child will grow physically, mentally and spiritually. The Lord has placed in the babe in a mother's arms the potential qualities of the man or woman to come. Our chief responsibility is to provide the opportunity for the development of those abilities and qualities which the child has, and of guiding that growth in the right direction.

That is all a parent has to do, but it is enough to call for all the wisdom, judgment, patience and skill of the best of us. Yes, and even that is not enough, we need the wisdom of God and His grace upon our lives to do this vital work as we ought.

The qualities in a boy or girl which will count gloriously for God may be dreadfully effective for Satan if we permit him to get control of our children. May God help us to be alert and skillful in rearing our boys and girls.

While it is true that we can do more for the guidance of physical and mental growth than spiritual (because that is a matter of the grace of God), we can lead the steps of the little child to the house of God; we can teach him to pray and to trust God, and we can set an example of godly living before him. That is all we can do; but again we say, it is enough to demand our best effort and more.

II. Normal Christians Will Grow (II Pet. 1:1-8).

In Christ there are "all things that pertain unto life and godliness." There is no need of some added experience, or some new and striking enducement, for all the unbelievably great possibilities of Christian grace and growth are in Him. We need only to recognize that fact and yield to Him, and there will be the full development of Christian life and experience.

We have, in practice, so far departed from the normal in Christian life that we can hardly believe that the above is true. In place of the normal Christian life according to God's standard, we have established a standard based on the average Christian life. If we equal it we are satisfied, and if perchance we surpass it we count ourselves among the "more spiritual" ones. And all the time the average standard is far below the normal Christian life which God not only expects, but is ready to enable and empower us to live.

Peter tells us in this passage that the great and precious promises of God in Christ are not only to enable us to escape the corruption of this sinful world, but to go on to a place where we will neither "be barren nor unfruitful" Christians. How will this come about? Verses 5-7 tell us.

Faith supplies in itself (rather than "add to," v. 5), if there is "diligence" (that is, true Christian devotion), a number of other splendid qualities. First comes "virtue"—really moral courage, or nobility of character. What a fine step forward! Then comes "knowledge," that is, a discernment which will give practical skill in effective daily living for Christ. Such spiritual discernment will naturally lead to "self-control" — something much needed by most Christians.

The self-controlled one will always have "patience," that is, the endurance to stand every hardship and trial. We need to be more patient not only with others, but also with ourselves, even in this matter of Christian growth of which we are speaking.

A life like that is a life of "godliness," which will blossom out into real "brotherly kindness." There isn't too much of that in the world today, even among Christians. Let's revive it! Then what? The one who loves his brother will love the whole world (charity, in v. 8, should read "love"). Why not? Are we not all brethren, who know Christ, regardless of race, position or creed?

Let such virtues "abound" (v. 8), and no Christian life will lack in rich fruitfulness for God in Christ. If Christian people would let the new life within them grow, it would surprise us and them what God would do through them for His own glory.

Tommy Had Followed The Cat Rather Closely

The teacher was attempting to explain the meaning of certain words to her class. She came to the word "sufficient."

"Now," she said brightly, "let us suppose there was a cat here and I gave it a saucerful of milk, which it drank. Then I gave it another saucerful, and it drank it all. But when I gave it a third saucerful it would only drink one-half of it. We can then say that the cat had had sufficient. Now, Tommy, what is the meaning of sufficient?"

"Please, teacher," replied Tommy, who had been eagerly attentive, "it means a catful of milk."

NICHOLSON NEWS—

"Boast not thyself of tomorrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth."

When plans are made, we must always leave it wholly to the will of God, realizing that we shall be into His infinite Presence to render an account of the deeds we have done.

Lieutenant and Mrs. John Butler enjoyed a brief stay with relatives the past week. Heartiest congratulations are extended to him on his promotion. Hosts of ardent admirers unite in wishing him Godspeed and the very best of good luck as he holds aloft our cherished banner, which represents the highest ideals, and that he soon emerges from the conflict triumphantly.

"Not until each loom is silent and the shuttle ceases to fly, shall God unroll the canvass, and explain the reason why the dark threads are just as needful in the weaver's skillful hand as the threads of gold and silver, in the pattern He has planned."

Most deeply deplored was the untimely passing of Miss Edna Mae Richardson, fifteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Edna Richardson, of Independence, as a result of injuries suffered in a fire, which destroyed her home September 5th,and made desolate her home circle, "somewhere the shadows are lifting while sorrow is veiling our sight, for grief and repining a new star is shining and dark is followed by light. During her stay at the hospital willing hands vied with each other in acts of loving kindness and tender her solicitude, but despite the untiring skill and watchful care of physicians and nurses to avert the inevitable, and stay the hand of death, her spirit, like the shadow of a passing cloud, was wafted sweetly and gently to realms beyond . This tragic occurrence is another forcible reminder of the uncertainty of life, and friends everywhere are urged to be ready for the summons whether it comes in the morning, noon or evening of life. How cold are words in the presence of such a sorrow, and how deep the grief over the grave did not the rainbow of Christian hope span the dark gulf between time and eternity. May the Great Comforter soothe and comfort the grief-stricken mother, brother and other loved ones, as He alone sustains when shadows fall.

"Leaves have their time to fall and flowers to wither at the North wind's breath, and stars to set, but thou hast all seasons for-thine own, O, Death."

Deeply appreciated was the recent kindness of Mrs. Hugh Hemingway, who called Friday morning bringing a lovely dinner, consisting of fried chicken, sliced tomatoes sweet potatoes, jelly, tea and cakes. Her example is truly worthy of emulation. Most heartily do we thank Mrs. Harry Fisk for delicious cake.

Round-Up YOUR SCRAP this week

. . . so you can get in the SCRAP next week!

$5,000.00 in PRIZES

offered in Kentucky's Big State-Wide

SCRAP COLLECTION DRIVE

STARTING MONDAY, OCTOBER 12TH

in every COUNTY and CORNER and HOME in this State!

Donald M. Nelson says "There is enough iron and steel on farms alone, if used with other materials, to make twice as many battleships as there are in the world today, or enough 2,000-lb. bombs to drop three per minute from big bombers incessantly for more than three years." . . . The scrap is HERE, hidden, covered-up, forgotten. But it is vital to victory — and MUST be uncovered, dug up, rounded up, NOW! Comb your home, your farm, your business, this week, for every pound, and have it READY next Monday to turn in. You'll get credit for it in the big $5,000 contest. Kentucky will get in the SCRAP to win the war. Be ready when the collection call comes!

SCRAP COLLECTION CONTEST RULES

ELIGIBILITY—

Every person residing within a Kentucky county is eligible to contribute to the county's total collection.

Persons and their families engaged in the business of buying and selling scrap iron or collecting it on a commission are NOT eligible to compete as individuals or firms. They may, however, help to increase the county's total by initiating scrap collection, the contest credit to go to the original owner who turned it in.

All the organizations, competing as such for one of the prizes, are eligible to collect scrap metal to be entered in the name of that organization. The same material, however, may NOT be credited to both the organization and the individual.

Every individual living in the state and not engaged in the business of collecting scrap metal, is eligible to compete for the prize to an individual.

Every state Junior Organization (in units) such as 4-H Clubs, Boy Scouts, F.A.A. Clubs, Girl Scouts or Camp Fire Girls, is eligible to compete for Boys' and Girls' prizes.

2. PROCEDURE—

The County Salvage Committee in each county in the state will be in charge of collection of all scrap metal entered in the contest.

All scrap metal turned in, must be credited to the one turning it in by means of an official receipt indicating the pounds received at delivery point. Credit in the contest will be given ONLY on the basis of these receipts. Be sure to get and hold your receipts.

Credit in the Scrap Metal Contest will be granted only on scrap turned in from Oct. 12 to Oct. 31 inclusive.

3. CONTEST JUDGES

The judges of this contest will consist of a committee of three, to be named by Judge E. C. O'Rear, State Salvage Chairman, and Mrs. T. C. Carroll, State Salvage Chairwoman.

The decisions of this committee of judges as to the winners in the contest will be final.

THROW YOUR SCRAP into the FIGHT

THIS YEAR plan to get all the eggs you can from your laying house space—fill your laying house and keep it filled! One hen needs 4 sq. feet of laying house floor space—and a good hen, fed for production, can lay 200 eggs a year. That means 200 eggs a year from 4 sq. feet of laying house floor space—and that counts more than the number of eggs per hen!

Set yourself a goal—make every 4 sq. feet of laying house floor space do a capacity job. Keep a good hen in that space and feed your birds a real egg-making ration. Come in and see us for details of a plan for doing the job—the Purina Balanced Income Plan!

NEWSPAPER DRIVE GETS A FLYING START

For A Thorough Canvass Of Every Home And Brings In The Scrap

A lot A lot of scrap materia from the County is being hauled in to dealers without any record by the Salvage Committee. Unless this information is obtained such material is not counted in the County's totals, the work of those concerned with collection is almost doubled and the owner, too, will be subjected to repeated requests and trouble from unnecessary call baks.

Please therefore report any scrap hauled in by your own truck or hired truckers. Give date, your name, address and total pounds to one of the following:

County Agent's Office, .Burl. 412
Boone County Recorder .Burl. 30
Walton Advertiser ...Walton 30
Mr. Allen H. Gaines ..Walton 33
J. B. Heizer, Jr Walton 1365

419,255 pounds of scrap material were reported collected in the County last Monday night, when the School Children's Campaign neared its closing and the Newspaper Campaign opened. Over 300,000 pounds were trucked, carried, dragged and pushed by wheelbarrow to the school yards, where the children weighed, sorted and built mountainous piles under supervision of principals and teachers. This is a remarkable showing.

60,615 pounds were weighted at the school lawn, 12,900 pounds credit hauled in, making a total of 73,515 pounds credit to Walton-Verona School, Wednesday.

This makes a wonderful start in the Campaign sponsored by the State's Newspapers, in which our County's quota is 541 tons by October 31st. But no one can afford to lighten their efforts in this vital service to our Country. A lot more remains to be done and we are all resolved that the County shall disgorge its last pound this month.

The farm to farm and home to home canvass starts this week and everyone will be urged to avail themselves of the privilege to donate or sell until all scrap material has gone its way Please gather and have yours ready now for immediate delivery.

The County Salvage Committee will offer a $25.00 Series E War Bond to the Scout, 4H Club, Future Farmer, or other high school boy who, in this canvass secures delivery of the greatest number of pounds over 40,000. Rules for this award will be made known to those boys engaged for this work.

WALTON HOMEMAKERS

Walton Homemakers held their Oct. meeting at the home of Mrs. Ora Stone. The meeting was opened by our Pres. Mrs. Hess Vest. The roll call was answered by helpful household hints. Those present were: Mrs. Hess Vest, Mrs. W. W. Rouse, Mrs. John L. Vest, Mrs. Raymond Gross and daughter, Mrs. Leo Flynn and son, Mrs. Stanley Ransom, Mrs. Will Sturgeon, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. Harry Mann, Mrs. Ora Fry, Mrs. Ralph Carpenter and daughter, Mrs. Rod Hughes. Visitors: Mrs. Hazel Pickett, Mrs. Gardner from Lexington, a former member; Mrs. Harry Mann, our program chairman, gave such an interesting reading, "Just for Today." The morning program closed by singing, "I Would Be True."

After a delightful covered dish dinner the afternoon program consisted in the lesson, "Making Furnishings last for the Duration," and "War Time Care of Furnishings," given by Mrs. Leo Flynn, which was very instructive and interesting. Only hope more of the members can be present next month at Mrs. E. L. Mann's.

HOMEMAKERS MEET

The Homemakers met at the home of Mrs. Gladys Stewart Friday, Oct. 2, for the regular monthly session, with president, Mrs. Blanche Ransom presiding.

The club joined in singing "God Bless America," and roll call was answered with a "Penny Saving Idea."

After lunch the club reassembled, and, with Mrs. Ellena Hamilton at the organ, sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

The lesson on "How to Make Your Home Furnishings Last," was presented in a clear and efficient manner by our leaders, Mrs. Elizabeth Boyer and Mrs. Grace Renaker.

As usual, our recreation chairman, Mrs. Frances McCormick, had for us a most interesting contest.

Next meeting to be held at Mrs. Clara Vest's, November 6.

Those present were Mesdames Elizabeth Boyer, Dartha Dance and baby, Ellena Hamilton, Geraldine Harris, Frances McCormick, Lizzie Noel, Blanche Ransom, Grace Renaker, Ura Roberts, Lillian Stephenson and sons, Gladys Stewart. Maude Wilson, Clara Vest, Relda Powers, Messrs. Arch Noel, W. B. McCormick and Gilbert Stewart.

BARNES - WILSON

Corp. Robert Wilson, Randolph Field, Texas, was united in marriage Sunday evening, October 11 to Miss Verna Mae Barnes of 2109 Glenway Ave., Covington.

The ceremony took place in the parlors of the Baptist parsonage at Warsaw and was performed by Rev. Andrew Smith, the local pastor. H. C. Records and wife served as best man and maid of honor. Those witnessing the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Norman Brock, Mrs. Beverly Jouett, sister of the groom. Mrs. Wilson is a graduate nurse from Christ's hospital, Cincinnati, and a woman of rare culture and attainments. They left immediately for a bridal tour where they spent the honeymoon in Cincinnati.

They have returned to receive parental blessings where a wedding banquet awaited them. Robert is home on a fifteen day furlough, when he will return to Texas for service and Mrs. Wilson will enlist with the nursing staff of the army for over seas duty.

The best wishes of a legion of friends are extended for a long, happy and prosperous life together. The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wilson and one of Sparta's most dearly beloved boys.

NOTICE TO ALL FUEL OIL DEALERS
Training For Fuel Rationing Program

There will be a meeting for Boone County held at Walton, Kentucky on Friday, October 16, 1942 at 10 a. m. to give instructions covering registration of fuel oil dealers and operations of the fuel oil and kerosene rationing program.

ALL DEALERS IN FUEL OIL residing in the County, are requested to be present at this meeting, as it is very necessary that you receive the instructions in regard to the rationing of fuel oil.

Mr. Wm. C. Gates will be present to explain this program to those in attendance.

Boone County War Price And Rationing Board No. 8, R. E. Brugh, Chmn., Walton, Ky.

W. M. U. TO MEET

The W. M. U. members of Ten-Mile Association will meet with Mt. Zion Church, Oct. 20th, at 10 o'clock, for their group session and annual conference, led by Mrs. Flora Mason.

Also election of officers. We urge all officers and leaders to be present, others are welcome.

VERONA PLANS FIRST AID

Plans are being made to organize a First Aid Course at Verona. The class will meet at Verona school house Thursday evening at 7:00 p. m. (E.W.T.) for the first meeting. Mrs. J. C. Layne, of Florence, Ky., will conduct the class. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Come out for S. S. each Sunday morning. A gracious welcome awaits you.

"SEEING — IS LIVING"

To enjoy life, you must enjoy good vision. Neglecting your sight with improper glasses — or with no glasses at all, is wasting life's precious pleasures, opportunities. Come in today. Let us test your sight and furnish Correct Glasses, if needed.

NOW LIEUT.-COLONEL Lee N. Utz, Union Native, Advanced To High Rank

This is a success story about a Union man who this week was promoted from Major to Lieut. Colonel in the U. S. Marine Corps

But if a German sniper had aimed his machine gun a trifle lower on November 10, 1918, the day before the Armistice, this would never have been written. The subject of this piece would have gone to a hero's grave as a Private in the U. S. Marines.

The Hun machine gunner missed, the bullet pinged the young Virginian's helmet, and he went on his way to rise from the ranks of enlisted men to Lieut. Colonel, to Assistant Chief of Staff of the U. S. Marine Corps' Department of the Pacific with headquarters in San Francisco.

His name is Lee N. Utz, native of Union.

Veteran of 26 year's service with the famed Leathernecks, Col. Utz has served on convoy duty of Gibraltar, fought in bloody Belleau Wood with the Second Battalion of the Fifth Marines, been a member of the Army of Occupation in Germany, and served in Guam, The Phillipines, in China and Nicaragua.

In addition, he has trod the decks of the USS Oklahoma and the USS Minnesota, serving on the latter as an orderly to Vice Admiral R. L. Ghormley—the same Ghormley who planned the recent brilliant attack on the Solomon Islands.

Today Colonel Utz is an administrative officer, a Lieutenant Colonel wearing the Good Conduct ribbon with two bars, the Marine Corps Expeditionary medal, the World War 1 Victory ribbon with five stars, the ribbon for China service, and the ribbon for action in Nicaragua.

But once he was a Private—a Private in the hell that was Belleau Wood.

Then his commanding officer was named Wise. Today, in an adjoining office, is the same officer, Colonel W. C. Wise, now Chief of Staff. Lieut. Colonel Utz is Colonel Wise's assistant.

"FIFTY-YEAR MASONS

Benjamin W. Dulaney and Leonard L. Childress, who have been members of Good Faith Lodge No. 95, F. & A. M., of Erlanger, for fifty years, will be honored by their lodge on Saturday, October 17, with a celebration which has been designated as "Len and Ben" day. An outstanding program has been arranged. Luncheon will be served. All members of the Masonic fraternity are invited.

BAPTIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS TODAY

The Missionary Society of the Baptist Church will hold their all-day meeting at the church at 11 o'clock Thursday. A covered dish lunch will be served at the noon hour. Mrs. Tom Percival is the leader. The Ladies are requested to bring their chickens to be sent to the Orphans Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Beach and baby, Mr and Mrs. Alfred Beach and baby, and Mr. and Mrs Broadus Beach were visiting relatives here over the week-end.

ROSE SUB-DISTRICT UNION

Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearing, Mrs. Clay Myers and Miss Emma Jane Miller accompanied a group of the Youth Fellowship members of the Methodist church in attendance at the Rose Sub-district meeting held in the Erlanger Methodist Church on Monday evening.

Miss Mary Belle Alexander the president of the Sub-district union conducted the business and worship period after which Rev. William E. Garriott showed pictures of the western U.S.A. furnished by the Camera Club of the Eastman Kodak Company. Beginning at San Antonio the trip journeyed through Texas, Colorado, Arizona, California, Utah, and Wyoming, showing beautiful scenes along the route including Grand Canyon, Rocky Mountain National Park, Yellow Stone National Park, as well as scenes from the larger cities all taken in technicolor.

At the conclusion refreshments were served by the Erlanger Youth Fellowship group. Those in attendance from the Walton youth group were Misses Ruth and Louise Dearing, Geraldine Simpson, Mary Belle Alexander, Marie Myers, Lucille Mershon, Mr. Leon Pennington, Jack Connor and Corporal Russell Dearing.

ANNUAL POULTRY SCHOOL ANNOUNCED FOR KENTON COUNTY

Mr. J. E. Humphrey, field agent in poultry from the College of Agriculture in cooperation with the Extension Service and local poultry leaders has scheduled the Annual Poultry school for poultry producers in the county. Because of the tire shortage and the weather conditions in January, the school will be held in October instead. The meeting will be held at the Independence courthouse, Thursday, October 22nd. All poultry producers are urged to attend and learn about poultry management problems, changes in feed caused by shortage of animal protein, formerly recommended in feeding rations. Poultry and egg production and how poultry producers can help in the war food program, will be discussed at the meeting. Talk with your neighbors and plan to travel in groups to save automobile tires.

POULTRY POINTERS FOR OCTOBER

As we look at our flock of pullets now to see not only the efforts and expense that were necessary to produce them but also what they represent as future egg producers. If the growing stock has had good care and management during the summer months they will respond quickly by producing large numbers of eggs during the next few months when egg prices are highly favorable. If they have not had sufficient feed and water they will require much longer to show a profit and the best that can be done now is to feed them heavily and get them into production as soon as possible.

P. T. A. MEETING

The Walton Parent - Teachers Association will hold its regular monthly meeting at the school house Friday, October 16, at 3 p. m. All members are urged to attend, and other patrons of the school are cordially invited. Plans for the Hallowe'en Party will be completed at this meeting.

FIRE AT ST. CLAIR HOME

Faulty wiring is said to be the origin of a blaze at the dwelling of R. B. St. Clair, on Old State Highway, at 9:45 p. m. Sunday. Slight damage to the roof, and by smoke resulted. Chief D. Hess Vest and his laddies used water from the pumper in subduing the flames, and prevented the blaze from threatening the tomato cannery adjoining.

LOCAL P T. A. MAKES PLANS FOR BIG HALLOWE'EN FESTIVAL

The Parent-Teachers Association of the Walton school is making plans for a big Hallowe'en Social to be held at the Walton School. They hope to make this the most interesting and best Hallowe'en party they have ever had. Watch next week's paper for further announcements.

PLANT AN ACRE OF WALNUTS AND QUALIFY FOR THREE UNITS UNDER THE AGRICULTURAL CONSERVATION PROGRAM FOR 1943.

WALNUT PLANTING

"At least 2,400 walnuts per acre must be planted not farther apart than 6 x 6 feet, and 2 or 3 nuts should be planted in e ach space. Walnuts must be planted at a depth of 2 to 3 inches, and not later than April 1, 1943. Walnuts used for planting should be those collected (not stored) from the fal. crop o 1942. A good stand (approximately 750 trees per acre after thinning), properly protected from fire and grazing, and showing satisfactory growth, all must be secured in order to qualify for credit under this practice.'

WALNUT LUMBER NEEDED

It is very likely that there will be a demand for walnut lumber because of the war situation. It would be well for farmers to plant a supply of good walnuts, before selling or cutting the walnut trees for market. Many good walnut trees have been cut and no provisions made to continue these good strains in the neighborhood.

A good plan would be, to have a supply of walnut trees growing to replace the large trees that are cut down. A few nuts planted each year in the low places in hollows, and along fence rows between pasture fields will grow into producing nut trees in a few years with a little protection from fire and live stock.

WALNUT TREES DEEP ROOTED

The walunt tree has a tap root and requires deep soil to grow properly. Walnuts should be planted where the soil is several feet deep before reaching rock layers so that the tree can grow to a large size.

A GOOD HOBBY FOR GIRLS AND BOYS

You can encourage your farm boys and girls to locate the best walnuts in the neighborhood and plant a few nuts from these trees each year. In a few years these will grow into good producing trees and in time will produce walnut lumber.

FURNITURE FROM WALNUT WOOD IS HIGHLY PRIZED

This is the time of the year to gather your walnuts and to spot trees that have the best nuts. Make plans now to plant some walnuts this fall and winter.

EVERYBODY IS BUSY — GETTING IN THE SCRAP

Rural folks as well as city folks are active on the search for scrap metal to help in the National Salvage program.

The salvage program is not a one-week or a one-month campaign. Salvage is an all-out continuing effort and must be organized as such.

This is the people's job. It is a tangible task, that everyone can take a part in to help win this war.

HOW TO DO IT

There is no single "best way" to collect scrap. Donald Nelson says, "It is a problem that can be licked only by American initiative American organization ability, American muscle and American will to win."

The main objectives are:

1. To canvass in person every home, every farm, every office, every business establishment, and every institution.

2. To provide the necessary man power and transportation for an initial "cleanup" and to set up methods for periodic and dependable collection for the duration of the war.

5 AND 10-CENT PURCHASES OF KEROSENE COMPLICATE OIL RATIONING PROGRAM IN KENTUCKY

Dealers Advised To Trust Buyers To Give Coupons

The 5 and 10-cent kerosene purchasers were the headache yesterday at the State Office for Price Administration Bureau.

It all came about by dealers telephoning the office to ask, "What are we to do with the nickel and dime customers of kerosene?"

The dealers had been informed by the suppliers that they would be required to turn in a coupon for each gallon of kerosene sold after October 1 or no more kerosene would be supplied.

Kerosene Rationing Is News

To many, it was th efirst word that a strict governmental control had been placed over kerosene as well as fuel oil and that this month all dealers and consumers in Kentucky will be required to register for certificate control.

The OPA office warned dealers that they would be required to turn in to their supplier a coupon for every gallon of kerosene sold. Because coupons are not avaialble now the dealer must trust his customer — accept his IOU. The customer later will turn over to the dealer a coupon for every gallon of oil bought since October 1. Likewise, the supplier must trust the dealer

The OPA told dealers that one-gallon coupons would be the smallest issued and urged that they not sell in less than that quantity. They also urged that customers be limited to the amount of oil they had customarily been buying.

412,627 Users In State

If a dealer does not trust his customer, then he should not sell him oil, the OPA said. A trailer occupant, who was here today and gone tomorrow, complained to the OPA that he could not buy kerosene. The OPA was helpless to give him relief.

That many persons are affected by the kerosene control program was shown by the 1940 census to which has been added 25 per cent for increases. The estimate shows that 412,627 families in Kentucky use kerosene for lighting purposes and 51,031 use kerosene for cooking. The same figures estimate 252,894 farms in Kentucky.

FEATURES IN THIS ISSUE

It's easy to keep up on the most important developments of the global war by reading the News Analysis in each issue of the Advertiser. These events and other subjects are interpreted by expert analysis.

The editor prides himself on having Baukhage as the Washington correspondent for this paper His Washington Digest columns are always topical and authoritative. Conservation of meat and heat form the subject matter this week. Don't fail to read it.

You probably listen to Drew Pearson on the radio and he interests you by the predictions he makes. His comments on the farm parity battle are pertinent in the Merry-Go-Round column today.

More and more shopping and buying is being done in the stores right at home, rather than by traveling miles and miles from here. When gas rationing comes this local trading will naturally increase. The Advertiser is a good advertising medium and the prospective buyer should consult the ads before starting out on a buying tour.

Thyroid glands and treatment of kidney stones are the topics of Dr. Barton in the Good Health feature. He details the symptoms and suggests the advice of local physicians whenever they prevail

All of our readers do not have the opportunity to attend Sunday School. The lesson for Oct. 18 is printed for them, as well as for those who can attend and who wish to familiarize themselves with the subject in advance.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

1943 Farm Goals to Be Biggest Ever; U. S. Increases Strength in Pacific As Air-Naval Forces Blast Japanese; Nazis: 'No Need to Take Stalingrad'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

A secret landing by American forces in the Andreanof group of the Aleutian islands made it possible to establish an airfield from which planes could blast Japanese positions on Kiska island. The above photo shows American troops in a "bucket brigade" passing supplies ashore from a small boat.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC:
Yank Power Grows

The Japs learned a lesson about American air and naval strength in the Pacific when five of their ships including a heavy cruiser were damaged by a U. S. aircraft carrier task force which pierced Nipponese defenses at Shortland island in the north Solomons. In addition, an air field was blasted at Bougainville, main Jap air base, and numerous aircraft destroyed.

A navy communique reported that the Japs were caught by surprise and the American operation was carried out without loss of men or equipment.

Besides the heavy cruiser, the American battle score against the Jap forces included one transport damaged by heavy bombs, one seaplane tender and two cargo ships damaged by light bombs.

In New Guinea, the advance of the tough Australian bush troops continued over the Owen Stanley mountains which the Japs had penetrated weeks before.

Although craggy trails had prevented swift movement, the Australians had cleared the enemy before them and had removed the threat of a Jap surge that once had pierced to within 32 miles of strategic Port Moresby.

A communique issued by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in Australia disclosed that the Allies' New Guinea advance had been made "with practically no loss."

"Information from native carriers who deserted the Jap forces plus reports from our own patrols, indicates the retreating Japs were exhausted, living on short rations and badly needing supplies," the communique reported.

Much of the Australian success was said to be due to a constant air attack on Japanese supply lines.

FARM GOALS:
Boosted for 1943

A nation-wide wartime plowup next spring, reminiscent of the days of 1918, loomed as the U. S. department of agriculture drew up tentative production goals calling for even greater acreages and output of most farm products than was requested under the record 1942 production.

The goals for all farm crops but three—wheat, short staple cotton and commercial vegetables—were set higher than for 1942. Corn and other feed grains, beans, peas, peanuts, potatoes, sugar beets, hemp and vegetables for processing were given the green light. So were production goals for cattle, hogs, dairy products, poultry and eggs.

With less manpower, machinery and other facilities to operate with, farmers had their work cut out for them. Moreover, the needs of the armed forces and the Allies, particularly Russia, were said to be much greater than had been expected a few weeks before.

If 1943 farm goals are not reached, civilian consumers will have to tighten their belts. Consumer rationing was to be inaugurated January 1, but civilians had already been asked to limit meat consumption to 2½ pounds weekly.

A possibility remained that sooner or later, butter, cheese, cooking fats, vegetable oils, eggs, poultry and canned fruits and vegetables would be placed in the same category as meat.

RUSSIA:
Stalingrad Checkmate

Unnoticed at the start, Marshal Timoshenko's counteroffensive, begun far up the northern arm of the Don river in the vicinity of Kletskaya, had moved forward. Its object was to draw off German striking power from the Stalingrad area.

Timoshenko had struck first, in a 50-mile area between the Don and Volga northwest of Stalingrad and had extended his forces southwest to the German flank.

That Timoshenko's strategy had worked was indicated by a significant statement on the Berlin radio which announced that the Germans would abandon frontal attacks on Stalingrad and destroy what was left of the city with heavy artillery. "It is no longer necessary to send German infantry and assault engineers into the battle," the announcement said. "The finishing touches will now be entrusted to heavy artillery and dive bombers."

Observers noted that the German announcement was reminiscent of propaganda covering the Nazi withdrawal a year ago from Rostov, when the Russians gained their first victory of the war.

Southward, in the Caucasus the Nazis had succeeded in advancing in the Mozdok area, while Rumanian reinforcements were reported pushing southward from the German-held Black sea base of Novorossisk.

WAR COSTS:
210 Million Daily

War costs will exceed 210 million dollars a day by January 1, 1943, according to figures based on revised calculations by Budget Director Harold Smith. Mr. Smith's estimates placed total war spending at 78 billion dollars in the current fiscal year which will end June 30, 1943.

The budget director's upward estimate was about 25 billions more than President Roosevelt's figures last January and eight billions more than a previous calculation by Smith.

Increased expenditures for all war purposes would make it necessary for the treasury to borrow approximately $80,300,000,000 from the public during the current fiscal year.

LABOR:
Lewis Divorces CIO

Labor leaders and politicos had long awaited the formal secession of the United Mine Workers of America from the CIO. Bushy-browed UMW Chief John L. Lewis kept his own counsel, but chose a dramatic moment for the divorce. The occasion was the miners' annual convention at Cincinnati.

Brusquely warning the delegates that he would no longer remain the union's president if it remained in the CIO, Lewis obtained unanimous consent to withdraw. A committee report urging the separation charged the CIO with failure to pay a $1,650,000 debt to the UMW and denounced alleged attacks by CIO officers on Lewis.

The convention action merely gave public recognition to a situation that had existed for months. Lewis and Philip Murray, CIO president, were feuding after a friendship of years standing. Murray, a former miner and vice president of UMW, had been "read out" of the union, last spring.

ALEUTIANS:
Japs Fold Tents

As mysteriously as they first appeared, Japanese forces disappeared from the two westernmost Aleutian islands, a navy communique revealed. The two islands abandoned were Attu and Agattu, lying close together nearly 200 miles from Kiska.

Heavy bombing by American aircraft which destroyed most of the Japanese buildings on the two islands was cited as a reason for the withdrawal.

The Japs still held a foothold on Kiska island, but Yankee flyers made their tenure precarious. Army heavy bombers operating from the newly acquired American bases in the Andreanof islands in the Aleutians blasted Jap-held positions on Kiska in repeated raids.

The islands of Attu and Agattu were originally seized by the Japs shortly after the Aleutian campaign opened last June.

SCANDINAVIA:
Headache for Nazis

Germany's influence in the Scandinavian countries had been weakening. This was evident when a general election in Sweden had returned a record number of Communist, anti-Nazi delegates to the national assembly. It was evident, too, in frequent peace feelers from war-plagued Finland. Thus when rioting and disorders broke out against the Axis overlords in Norway and Denmark, few observers were surprised.

Swift was the Nazi action in countering with force the Scandinavian threat. The Germans proclaimed a state of emergency in central Norway from the seaport of Trondheim to the Swedish border. Reprisal executions followed. Reports from Copenhagen said tension had mounted to fever heat because of clashes resulting from the "overbearing and provocative" attitude of the volunteer pro-Nazi "Free Corps."

The Nazi radio gave official confirmation of Scandinavian unrest by announcing that the Norwegian emergency was proclaimed because of recent sabotage attempts "which if they had succeeded would have endangered Norway's supply system."

RUMOR MONGER:
Menace Described

Americans were called upon to beware of rumor mongers by Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war.

Speaking before the American Federation of Labor convention in Toronto, Mr. Patterson cited rumors assailing the quality of and effectiveness of weapons made by American labor as evidence of Nazi propaganda. "Criticism of the Garand rifle, U. S. tanks and P-40 planes as inferior died away in the face of actual performance," he said.

ROBERT P. PATTERSON
Warns of Nazi rumor factory.

"In the days to come Hitler will redouble his efforts to divide the nations now united against him. In this task he will make use of the rumor mongers among us.

"His agents will spread stories in the United States and Canada that will reflect on Britain. In Britain, his agents will spread the story that Americans are not doing their part in fighting, but are interested only in making money out of the war. And he will try to alienate us from Russia."

Mr. Patterson said that production of armaments for the Allied nations will cut deeper and deeper into production of civilian goods and require suspension of many peacetime standards of hours and working conditions.

SNUB VICHY:
Urges Ex-Envoy

Even as Pierre Laval imposed a labor draft to speed the delivery of 150,000 French workers for German war factories, Walter Edge, former American ambassador to France, urged withdrawal of U. S. recognition of the Vichy government. Such action, he said, would solidify 95 per cent of the French people behind the United Nations.

Emphasizing that he was speaking as a private citizen, Edge said it was "unfortunate that the government seems to feel it necessary to continue recognition of the Vichy regime."

"There may be many things that warrant continued recognition that I know nothing about," he declared, "but only a small percentage of the French people are in sympathy with the Vichy government. It must be discouraging to the majority to see their overlords recognized by this country."

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

NEW YORK: Supplies of tea on hand in the United States are sufficient to meet present restricted demands for the next six or seven months, Benjamin Wood, managing director of the Tea bureau, declared. Wood said estimated stocks were 28 to 29 million pounds, enough to carry the nation well into 1943, under quota regulations restricting tea sales 50 per cent.

MELBOURNE: Australian chorus girls must be over 45 years of age, according to a recent government order. The age limit is one of the new "austerity" restrictions in force in the Australian commonwealth. Able-bodied women under 45 years of age should be in jobs "that contribute more directly to the war effort," the government feels. Hence the new theatrical restriction.

FARM PARITY FIGHT

To Roosevelt advisers, the farm parity fight was an ominous runner-up of what many of them expect during the next two years—IF the November elections turn sour for the Democrats. It left people a little worried around the White House.

Up until now, the White House has been confident that the house of representatives would remain Democratic—despite the warning of Chairman Ed Flynn that the Middle West and probably California would go Republican.

So the fight over farm parity was a shock; and administration leaders shrink from the prospect of facing that type of congressional battling for two long years to come. But, if the Republicans organize the house, or even if the Democratic majority is appreciably cut, that is exactly what will happen.

Three reasons are given, backstage, for the faulty handling which resulted in the terrific farm battle.

1. The President himself, who couched his message to congress in terms of such a strong ultimatum, rather than the usual Roosevelt pep-talk strategy at which he is so adept. Incidentally, the speech was written in large part by brusque, bulldozing Leon Henderson.

2. Speaker Sam Rayburn, who dropped his usual kindliness and stormily told congressional friends that the President had promised him not to send a farm price stabilization message until later. Rayburn's attitude was a tip-off in deeds if not words "To vote as you please, boys."

3. Price Czar Leon Henderson, who was considered the political ogre and bogeyman for whom the farm stabilization bill was being passed.

WAR BONDS

A war savings bond salesman in Buchanan county, Iowa, was nonplussed when the spokesman for a colony of 75 families flatly refused to buy even so much as a 10-cent stamp . . . The salesman was about to leave, but was called back and handed $6,450 in cash as the colony's donation to the war effort . . . Seeking an explanation, the bewildered bond seller was told that the community was composed of Amish families and that their religious creed forbids them to make a profit out of war . . . They were willing to make a gift of the money, but could not buy interest-bearing bonds.

Presidential adviser Isador Lubin, after 36 straight hours of hard work, went to bed one morning at nine o'clock, slept until nine the next morning.

The infantry company at Fort Devens, Mass., boasts that every member of the company is buying war bonds, and it is 101 per cent correct.

ARMY SHOES

If you are a draftee with high arches or low arches, one flat foot or two flat feet, or even if your right foot is a half size larger than your left foot—it doesn't matter. The quartermaster will fit you anyway.

Even if no one of the 238 different sizes of army shoes fits you, instructions to army posts are that every foot shall be fitted, and fitted comfortably. This order is to be obeyed even if it means making a plaster cast of the odd foot and making a special shoe from an individual last.

In such cases, the individual last is tagged with the name of the soldier and filed away until he needs another pair of shoes. Such service would cost $25 a pair in private life.

Army experts declare that a soldier with sore feet is worthless.

NO CELLOPHANE COMMISSION

Siegfried Bechhold, president of the Armored Tank corporation, is now a private in the army. After making a small fortune in manufacturing tanks, Bechhold joined the army as a private, age 42, was sent to Camp Lee, Va. Friends expected him to be unhappy after exchanging his soft life for the rigors of the army. But when Bechhold got away for his first week-end, he declared:

"This experience is making a man of me, and I wouldn't miss it for the world! I've served in other armies, but there's no army to compare with this one. You talk about 'morale'—the soldiers don't need 'morale'; they already have it.

"You have to get out of Washington to learn what Uncle Sam's army is really like. If I had ten sons, I would tell them all to join the army."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Some doctors who passed their physical examination for the army three months ago have not yet been called. Yet the army is still appealing for more doctors.

President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth will be campaign manager for Republican Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire against ex-Republican Francis Murphy, now Democrat. Like Bridges, President Hopkins has been a militant supporter of Roosevelt's foreign policies.

Washington Digest
Civilians Aid War Effort Conserving Meat, Heat

Being Frugal With Coal and Oil for Home Heating, and Also Not Buying More Than Your Weekly Meat Allotment Helps.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

You have heard before that the one question, repeated most often in letters which come into the Office of Civilian Defense in Washington is: "What can I do to help win the war?"

I receive a great proportion of such letters. Many of you have asked this question yourselves. Some of you haven't been able to get a satisfactory answer.

Beginning this month there are two things you can do if you really want to help win the war. They are these: conserve heat and meat.

We have plenty of meat in the country, we have plenty of coal and oil. But some of the meat—about a fourth of it—has to go to our own fighting men and those of our Allies. And much of the coal and a great deal of the oil can't get to us because of a shortage of transportation.

Look at the heat situation first:

The war has depleted our coastal tankers which furnished 95 per cent of our means of transportation to the eastern states. Many of these tankers were needed by our fighting forces and our Allies, many went to the bottom as a result of the U-boats. Many that once plied the eastern seaboard go to Melbourne or Murmansk—some have already gone to Davy Jones' locker.

Last November the railroads were hauling 68,000 barrels of oil a day. Now they are carrying 800,000 barrels a day.

But remember it takes four or five trains, of some 70 cars each, to haul as much as one tanker. And there is of course a tremendous increase in the amount of oil and gas consumed by war activities, civilian and military.

Fuel oil is already rationed. Gasoline will be rationed nation-wide soon. That process is automatic but there are other things you can do to help.

You can make your home heat-tight with weather stripping; you can convert from oil to coal (if you can get coal in your locality); you can be frugal. According to estimates given out by the War Information office you can save the nation, by reasonable conservation, 25½ MILLION tons of coal this winter. You can save over 18 million barrels of oil between October 1, 1942, and May 1, 1943.

Conserve your heat—now what about your meat?

Beginning this month there is one thing that you can do. It is easy to check up on yourself as to whether you really want to help in this respect. All you need to be able to do is to count up to three. Not even that far, just two and one-half.

That is the number of pounds of meat you ought to eat each week from now on. More than that will rob somebody else—less than that isn't enough to keep you going.

By February you will have no choice. You'll have a ration book and you'll get the amount the government says you can have. Meanwhile it is your patriotic duty to ration yourself.

This is the reason: One-fourth of the meat supply of the country has to be turned over to the fighting forces of the United Nations. If they could, the American people would buy 21 billion pounds of meat in the next 12 months. There are about 17½ billions available.

Second Step: Rationing

The government has taken one step, is preparing for another. The first is to limit the deliveries by the packers to civilian outlets. The second is rationing. The machinery for that takes time—by February it is hoped the rationing system can be in effect.

Now in this intermediate period, although there is a limit to the amount of meat the market gets, there is an limit on what the individual can buy as long as the butcher has it. That is up to you. So it becomes a question of sharing. The Food committee in Washington, using the best information available, has set 2½ pounds per person per week as the limit.

You may be able to get to the meat market early. Many housewives can't. A lot of them are working in defense industries or have other duties. If you overbuy there won't be enough to go around.

Two and a half pounds isn't nearly as much as many people would like. But it is a lot more than most people need or, in fact, are used to. In the 1930s we consumed an average of 130 pounds per capita per year. But many people are sharing this new big 115 billion dollar national income and one way they are spending it is on meat. Without gasoline for the car they can't get out to so many shows and other entertainment. There is more money left for the dining-table.

We like meat for its flavor as much as for its nourishment. The wealthy and the middle classes have always bought more meat than they needed for their health. The poorer people frequently had less than they needed. Now, with a shortage and plenty of money, the competition is higher. It will be easy for the greedy to rob the less fortunate.

Why, you may ask, don't we establish meatless days for everybody? That would not be fair to poorer classes who get so little meat anyhow. But some regular limit has to be adopted by eating houses and agreed upon among them. Otherwise there will be unfair competition. The place that co-operates and cuts down on one day or one dish, will simply lose out to the restaurant which serves meat that day.

At home, considerable responsibility rests on the housewife. She has to adjust her menus to provide a balanced diet.

Meat contains four important nutritive elements: Protein, iron, thiamin (vitamin B1) and niacin.

As far as the protein goes it can easily be provided by serving more milk, eggs, cheese and legumes. A nice steaming pile of pancakes, for instance, if they are made from milk and eggs, will give some protein as well as that comfortable feeling of well-being within.

But such foods do not give you the other things that you need which meat offers. You will have to have whole grain products and that means, when you take them in the form of bread, it must be enriched bread and even then you won't get the iron and niacin contained in whole wheat. The dark leafy green vegetables, potatoes and legumes (peas and beans) will help.

But where you'll really find the pinch is in the flavor. That, I think, is what the Germans complained about most in their rations. You can get the meat flavor we all crave with meat dishes that are diluted like soups, and hash and meat loaf.

But do it. See that you keep within your 2½ pound limit and you'll be helping win the war.

To Market

Some weeks ago Secretary of Agriculture Wickard received a postal card addressed to him at his Indiana farm home, urging him to get his pig crop to market early. He raises quite a lot of pigs and runs his farm as best he can while he tries to take care of the needs of several million farmers at the same time. He said he felt kind of foolish when the card came but he did what it asked him to do.

"I felt foolish," he said, "because I wrote that post card myself. (It was a card sent out pretty widely to pig-raisers all over the country.) And when I'd sent the pigs off I wondered whether I was really patriotic or not; because those hogs were a lot lighter than they would have been if I hadn't marketed them so early."

And right there you have one of the problems that faces a nation trying to feed itself and its lend-lease Allies under the difficult conditions which the war causes. The pig problem is tied closest to the farmer's number two headache, distribution. We could get more pounds (fatter hogs)—and fats are needed—if we slaughtered later, but the packers and the railroads aren't going to be able to handle the mammoth hog crop if it all comes at once.

There are some American officials who believe that England made a great mistake in calling off the Stafford Cripps negotiations in India. And there is strong pressure from a number of quarters to have them reopened.

It is estimated that 300,000 of the boys now in uniform are members of the American Legion.

ON THE HOME FRONT
with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

ANY dining room may be made fresh and smart with built-in cupboards, a little paint and inexpensive curtains. But what may be done to bring a set of outmoded chairs up-to-date? The one sketched at the upper right is typical of many that are substantial and sturdy though scarred by long use. All they need is an up-to-date frock to make them perfectly at home in a modern dining room.

If your chairs do not have the supports shown at the sides of the seat they will be easier to slipcover. This cover is of medium blue cotton rep with darker blue for the bias binding and the cotton fringe around the bottom. Large button moulds are covered with the slip cover material for the button-up-the-back opening. If you are not expert at making bound buttonholes, snaps may be used under the buttons. The narrow ties sewn to the corners of the inside of the seat cover hold it neatly in place.

NOTE: This chair cover is from Book 8 of the homemaking booklets available to readers at 10 cents each. Directions for other dining room chair transformations will be found in BOOK 7, together with an interesting array of conservation ideas which make use of materials around the home. We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

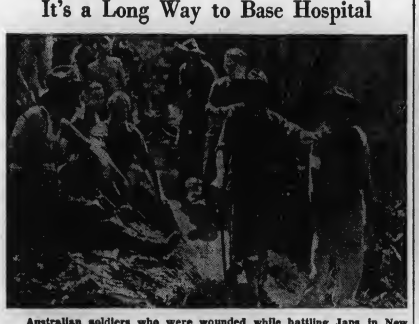
● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.



● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and of what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

'Versailles of the Plains'

THIS month marks the 75th anniversary of the "Versailles of the Plains"—the famous Medicine Lodge peace council of 1867. Not only did it bring together a galaxy of frontier notables, both red men and white, but it was attended by a greater number of journalists than had ever before assembled for such an event. Some were destined for fame in other fields and among these were

TWO EXPLORER-FRIENDS

Being "the man who found Livingstone" and the most celebrated African explorer of his day brought world - wide renown to the name of Henry M. Stanley. But that wasn't his real name. Born in Denbigh, Wales, on June 10, 1841, he was christened John Rowlands and that was the name he bore until he was 21. In the meantime he had come to America as a cabin boy and deserted his ship at New Orleans where a local merchant named Henry Morton Stanley, finding the young Welshman wandering destitute about the streets, gave him a home and later adopted him.

Henry M. Stanley

When Rowlands' benefactor died without making any provision for him in his will, the young man went to Arkansas where, at the outbreak of the Civil war, he enlisted in the Confederate army. Taken prisoner at the Battle of Shiloh, he later changed his allegiance and put on the blue uniform of the Union navy, at the same time assuming the name of his foster-father, Henry Morton Stanley.

The dispatches he wrote about the naval assault on Fort Fisher found a ready market in some of the eastern newspapers and influenced his decision to become a journalist. He continued sending news to these papers when the ship on which he was serving was ordered to Turkey and after leaving the navy he made a journey across the plains to Denver and Salt Lake City. As a result of his stories about life in the Far West, the Weekly Missouri Democrat of St. Louis engaged him to accompany General Hancock's expedition against the Indians in the spring of 1867.

His correspondence during the Hancock campaign and at the Medicine Lodge peace council had a human interest, "feature" quality, which distinguished it from the factual reporting of other correspondents there and James Gordon Bennett of the New York Herald was quick to recognize his genius. The result was Stanley's joining the Herald staff, the famous "find Livingstone" order from Bennett and his successful accomplishment of that mission which brought him deathless fame.

During Stanley's later career as a successful explorer, one of his closest friends was another correspondent and explorer whom he had first met at the Medicine Lodge council. He was Thomas Wallace Knox, a native of Pembroke, N. H., where he was born June 26, 1835. Like Stanley, Knox was left an orphan at an early age and, like the young Welshman, he had an adventurous spirit which caused him to give up his position as principal of an academy in New Hampshire and join the gold rush to Colorado in 1859.

Thomas W. Knox

In Denver Knox became a reporter and then city editor of the Rocky Mountain News but at the outbreak of the Civil war he joined the army as a volunteer aide and served through two campaigns. Next he became a war correspondent for the New York Herald but, being wounded during a skirmish in Missouri, returned to New York and newspaper work.

After the war Knox joined an expedition organized to establish a telegraph line through southern Asia and on this journey he traveled through Siberia 3,500 miles on sledges and 1,500 miles in wagons. During the seventies he traveled all over Europe, Africa and Asia and became one of the most prolific writers of travel books of his time.

Knox is said to have written on an average two books a year and by the time of his death on January 6, 1896, he was the author of more than 30 volumes. His first, and probably his best known, was called "Camp Fire and Cotton Field" and dealt with his experiences as a Civil war correspondent and the manager of a plantation in the South. Almost as famous were his "Overland Through Asia," the record of his journey across Siberia in 1866, and his series of 15 books for boys, published under the title of "The Boy Travelers."

To Your Good Health

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THYROID GLANDS

When an individual has a rapid heart beat, is very nervous, is a poor sleeper, suffers with stomach and intestinal distress, and has also bulging of the eyeballs, he is said to be suffering with the severe type of goiter. A metabolism test is made which shows that his thyroid gland is manufacturing too much juice. Thyroid juice speeds up all the body processes—heart rate, muscular movements of the stomach, and intestine, nervous system.

Dr. Barton

By more rest at night and during the day, some of these patients are able to live a normal life.

When there is so much thyroid juice being manufactured, part or all of the thyroid gland is removed by operation, radium or X-rays.

In other words many individuals whom we find to be too nervous and alert are suffering with an early or mild form of goiter.

Now, just as there is overactivity of the thyroid gland causing a speeding up of all the body processes with rapid heart beat, loss of weight, sleeplessness and other symptoms, so can there be a condition where the thyroid gland is not active enough—not manufacturing enough thyroid juice. And just as the very overactive thyroid gland caused the bulging eyes, rapid heart beat, extreme nervousness, that very underactive thyroid gland causes just the opposite symptoms—dullness of the eyes and whole expression of the face, coarse dry hair, dry skin, overweight and sleepiness. In women the monthly periods are not normal. By means of a metabolism test, it is found that the thyroid gland is underactive and thyroid extract is given to speed up the body processes to a normal rate.

Further, just as a slight or early case of overactive thyroid may not be recognized, so also may an early case of underactivity go unnoticed by the family, or even the physician, and the individual is thought to be lazy and to be below normal mentally.

Parents and even the patients themselves with these symptoms of sluggishness, mental and physical and overweight, with a dry skin (even if not waxy), should consult their physician regarding a metabolism test.

Treatment of Kidney Stones

For many years, where a patient had a heavy feeling in the upper right hand part of the abdomen and the X-rays showed stones in the gall bladder, it was considered advisable to remove the stones and drain or remove the gall bladder.

Today, as it is known that stones are present in a large percentage of individuals over 40 years of age, no attempt is made to remove the stones or have the patient undergo any form of operation unless he or she is having acute attacks of gallstone colic. The majority of individuals with gallstones do not know they have them.

While kidney stones are less common, the fact that they are present is considered a more serious condition than having gallstones, nevertheless physicians and surgeons today are not having as large a percentage undergo operation as was the case a few years ago. Thus, in a series of 125 cases reported in the Journal of Urology, Drs. J. Hoy Sanford and Willard T. Barnhart, St. Louis, only 17 (13.8 per cent), underwent operation, the other 108 cases being successfully treated by use of sounds to stretch the small tubes carrying urine to the bladder, thus allowing stones to pass into bladder and then out of the body. Naturally if stones are very large, they must be removed by surgery.

"In the silent unilateral stone (stone in one kidney only) when no symptoms are present and the other kidney is normal, surgery is advisable."

Why must this "silent" stone, causing no pain, obstruction or other symptoms, be removed when gallstones are allowed to remain when they are causing no symptoms?

This stone is removed because it has been found that such a stone, if not removed, may quietly kill the kidney. If, however, the patient is over 60 years of age, the stone is not usually removed as long as it remains silent and no symptoms arise.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Is there any particular test which I can take to determine the amount of iodine in my system? Is it possible for a patient with a duodenal ulcer to have a normal blood count?

A.—Your physician can arrange for a metabolism test which will answer the question regarding iodine. Yes, would be quite possible for a patient suffering from a duodenal ulcer to have normal blood count.

"Let your libht soshine that others may see your good works." Christians should use their light as a beacon to point lost ones in the dark places of the earth. So live that Christ would approve of your life.

"God hath not promised skies always blue. Flower-strewn pathways all our lives through. He hath not promised sun without, rain, joy without sorrow, peace without pain. But he hath promised strength for the day. Rest for the labor, light for the way. Grace for the trials, help from above, unfailing sympathy, undying love."

Thousands of ardent admirers of Rev. Robert Witty, Jacksonville, Florida, Box 2, greatly enjoy his helpful, inspiring Gospel messages in the early morning hours broadcast over WCKY at 6:45 a. m. When the baptismal rite was administered to him in a rippling stream, his thoughtfulness in also having his purse immersed with him is indeed commendable, and truly worthy of emulation. The spiritual gloss emanating from this man of God is felt even though miles apart from him. Most earnestly he pleads for 100 % cooperation from Christians every where in the Great Soul Saving Campaign, in which he is heartily engaged, and which has been launched for the glory of God. To all writing for them he will send tracts, pin, motto or paper absolutely free.

An Old Garden Shovel Will Make THREE Hand Grenades!

If You Have Scrap Metal to Turn In
- Take it to your nearest collection depot or junk yard and get a receipt for it.
- If it is too heavy to handle, contact your Scrap Metal Collection Chairman (call newspaper for name) and he will arrange to have it handled—and give you a receipt for it.

Half of the Steel In This U. S. Tank Is Scrap Metal From a Junk Pile
BOONE COUNTY WILL GET IN THE SCRAP!
To Make MORE TANKS — and GUNS — and GRENADES — and SHIPS

Kentucky is awake to the seriousness of the scrap metal shortage—and scrap metal is coming in by the tons. From farms, towns, churches, schools, factories all over the state the scrap metal is being rounded up and collected. Counties will win rich prizes—but more important—America will win an all-out victory because we turned our scrap into ships and guns and tanks in time to turn the tide. Comb every inch of your farm or your yard NOW—TODAY for every piece of old iron you can find—and turn it in AT ONCE. Kentucky MUST NOT fall in this, the PEOPLE'S job at home.

Questions That Come Up

Can I Donate My Scrap?
Yes, most people will donate their scrap. It will be picked up by a State Highway or some other volunteer truck in your county and you will get credit on an official contest receipt.

Who Gets the Money?
Proceeds from the sale of [illegible] is donated will be used for war, civic or charitable needs designated by your county committee.

How Can I Sell My Scrap?
Just phone your county [illegible] man and it will be picked up—or take it yourself to the nearest junk dealer. He will give you an official contest receipt for its weight.

Why Is Scrap Handled Through Junk Dealers?
The government requires that all junk must be professionally sorted into about 50 different kinds of scrap before it is shipped. Only an experienced junk dealer can do this.

Does He Make Big Profits?
No! The government has set a price ceiling which it pays the junk dealer, calculated to give him only a fair amount for his service.

How Can Mills Use Scrap?
The strongest steel is made by mixing 50% iron ore (of which we have plenty) with 50% remelted scrap metal (of which we have a serious shortage).

Kentucky Newspapers Offer

BOMBS BURST ONCE

By GRANVILLE CHURCH

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. When they arrive in Tierra Libre they find both Zora and her husband dead. Later Jeff's friend Bill Henderson is killed, and Jeff suspects his employer, Senor Montaya, of murdering him and the Mitchells because they had found a clue to the strange things going on at the plantation. Other sinister figures are the company chemist, Dr. Toenjes, and the Syers, Ryden and Lannestock. A man named Collins arrives from the Canal Zone to see Mitchell. A talk with Jerry McInnis discloses that Montaya is dealing with the Nazis. Collins reveals his identity as a U. S. naval intelligence officer. He and Jeff have just discovered a hidden German plane—a Heinkel bomber.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVII

"It's a Heinkel!" Collins repeated. "Look at the rounded slant-back wings, that tail assembly, the shape of the body. It uses inverted-V engines for smoother streamlining—"

But Curt couldn't stand there staring all night. He swung the beam of light about and immediately the plane was swallowed in blackness. Quickly the men went over the big building—one building, they found, now they were inside. Curt knew the two hangars at the other end of the field were separate buildings, the shed-roof chemical space between being walled off on either side.

Along the entire front of these three joined buildings were thin stacks of lumber piled to present the picture Curt had got through field glasses a few days ago, of stacks of pipe, or piles of boxes and crates. With doors open it would look like a solidly packed warehouse. Actually, all materials could be pulled down quickly.

The big plane they first came upon appeared to be ready for flight. In the other hangar was a second plane not yet fully assembled. The motors and propellors were missing, but Curt found the engines quickly.

The two square boxes he'd seen pass through Cabeza only that morning, the boxes stenciled "Generators," had been knocked apart, and the two motors for this plane stood revealed on the floor ready to be hoisted into position.

"What'd I tell you!" growled Curt. "As soon as I got the low-down on Montaya tonight all the pieces began to slide in together and I knew this was the answer. But man alive, in spite of my eyes, it's hard to believe! Such a long shot ranks with suicide!"

"There you have it!" Collins' voice was bitter. It had risen, but the slapping echoes brought it down again. "A surprise attack! The Canal has the best defense possible, and it's being constantly improved and extended. But protection for the Canal depends on sufficient warning to get planes into the air, to get anti-aircraft ground units into action."

"And these planes, coming over land, from unsuspected, close-in neutral territory—"

"Why, man, they'd be over the Canal before effective resistance could be organized. Why, some of our advance air bases and listening posts are farther out from the Canal than this."

A long silence followed, finally broken by Curt's sour, "Yeh, but we haven't got all night. There's something else to locate. Mitchell's cheap Jap 'pump machinery'—those boxes like oversize coffins."

Collins pointed briefly in the beam of light, and Curt swung it from one end to the other of a bulkhead which rose to the height of the window stripping along the back of the central section, the machine shop.

In front of the wall was a heavy work-bench on which lay in orderly precision small parts, tools, instrument panels, evidently intended for the unassembled plane. At one end was a door. They found it padlocked.

"Nothing we can do about that," muttered Curt.

He cast about for something to climb on, found a stool which he placed on the bench. Standing on this he peered over the top of the boarding.

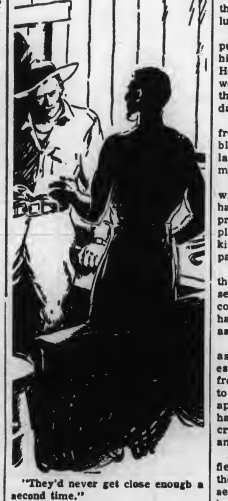
"Roofed," he said. He pulled the chisel from his pocket and pried about to find a plank looser than the others.

When he found a board he could force up and had cast his beam of light inside the bulkhead, his body stiffened, not a muscle moved. At last he climbed down silently, handed over his flashlight to Collins, motioned the other up.

Stacked inside the long storage room, securely braced on heavy timbers, was a single row of eight streamlined aerial bombs, each the height of a man. On the shelf above them was a neat row of eight nose fuses and eight tail fuses ready to be screwed into place.

"All right, we've found out what we wanted to know," growled Curt, and amended himself, "to know for sure. Let's get out of here. It'll take time to get back to Tempujo."

He replaced the stool exactly as he'd found it. Under the trees again, they forced back the panel of corrugated sheeting, bent nails sufficiently to hold it down—and prayed their entry wouldn't be discovered. While Collins climbed into his clothes again, beyond the fence, swearing mildly over some ticks he'd picked up, Curt filled in the hole, covered the ground with the brush and rubbish which had blown against the wire.



En route they worked out the angles.

Curt said, "You're on assignment, Collins. What are your orders? I mean, now you've got what you came for, what do your books of regulations tell you to do?"

Collins gave a short "Ha!" Then, weighing his words carefully, "Of course, there's a certain amount of red tape necessary in any line of work. Reports and so forth. On the other hand, an operative is frequently obliged to use his own discretion—"

This was enough for Curt. "Okay. Thought you'd come through. Now then, no secret is ever safe for long. Something's bound to give it away sooner or later, if only the flicker of an eye. And we're in the hands of a mighty suspicious crew. They've got a lot at stake.

"So we'll have to work fast. Here's my idea. If you have a better one, spill it and we'll rag it out. First, I have to think of my family. They're hostages, pure and simple. Well, tonight when I saw McInnis I laid the groundwork for getting them to Soledad. Since I'm certain these people don't yet actually suspect I know anything, it ought to work.

"They'd never get close enough a second time."

"Once they're safe, a report to authorities would no doubt turn the trick, but it would embarrass the Tierra Libre government and today every effort's turned toward good relations.

"Besides, I want to see the murderers brought to justice. Regardless of who actually did the jobs, we know who's responsible, who's behind them, but it could never be proved in a court of law. They'd go scot free. So, there's only one thing to do. How much do you know about those bombs?"

Collins hesitated, but only for a moment.

"I've had some training in American types," he admitted. "I expect the principle of these is pretty much the same. Anyway, there's no help for it. We can't send for an expert. I'll have to chance it."

"Good! Now for some details."

They talked, planned, argued this point and that, the full trip. It was after four when they reached Tempujo, pushing the car into the yards from a long distance outside, and Curt hooked up the speedometer again.

There was movement at the woodpile in back of the mess-hall. Smoke rose from the stove-pipe of the lean-to kitchen.

"Man!" muttered Collins, "what I'd give for a good cup of coffee!"

"Forget it," said Curt. "You've got to look your worst for Montaya. He's a pretty slick bombre. Go without breakfast, don't shave, and don't sleep. That worked on me."

They approached Curt's bungalow cautiously, found Monahan on the job.

"Nary a soul been around," the man said.

"Good. Slats, we've got a job on our hands. Bad job. Want in?"

"Hey! Why'd you suppose I squatted here all night without an argument?"

Curt chuckled. In the lee of the hibiscus hedge he told Monahan who Collins was, why he was here, what the two of them had just found.

"Jerry, Collins and I will have our work cut out for us, but a good deal depends on you, Slats. Your job will be to make your way up through San Alejo to the radio station above, get the drop one way or another on whoever's stationed there, and smash the sending apparatus beyond easy repair. This will cover our escape but leaves you holding the bag." Curt's tone was a little disturbed. "Only way of your getting out is over the Quebrados and across the Negro into Associated territory."

"Don't worry about me. I can make it."

"Good. This leaves one thing. We want to see the murderers of Mitch and Zora and Bill get what's coming to them."

"Yeh." Monahan spat.

"Well, we haven't figured out a synchronization to take care of all the ringleaders. All we can plan on are Ryden and Lannestock. If we can get them to the lower end of the field we'll be halfway satisfied. Now, the hangar entrances are bound to be wired for alarm, but we can't be certain there's no break in the circuit since whenever they last tested it.

"So we plan to fire the grass. Those two babies will be so concerned for the safety of the hangars it should bring them on the double. But it'll be midnight, they'll be abed, we can't even be certain they'll have a guard to raise an alarm. At one o'clock straight up you telephone the field—"

"Yeh, got your point. Can do."

"And we need some explosives. Dynamite, powder."

"Easy. I can get that."

"Well, then, that's the best we've worked out so far. See if you can think up anything. Meanwhile, good luck."

Montaya had said he'd be at Tempujo early on Sunday. Early for him must have meant ten o'clock. He was headed for Cabeza. Curt wondered why, then remembered that the Keito Maru, in port yesterday, was pulling out today.

With German shipping chased from the seas, with the British blockade pretty effective in the Atlantic, contact with Berlin had to make a detour. A long one.

Montaya had his black brief case with him and never let it leave his hands. Reports, decided Curt, and probably pictures of the assembler plane. Even gangsters want some kind of proof for the money they pay out.

The senor talked with Collins on the river docks, and Collins, while seemingly as slick and neat as he could make himself—except for not having shaved—put on a good show as a tramp.

Montaya looked him over coldly, asked him a good many questions, especially about the Rosario mines from which the man was supposed to have come recently. This roused apprehension in Curt, but Collins had schooled himself well before crossing the river. He knew the answers.

In the end Montaya was satisfied and Curt nodded dismissal to the man, saying shortly, "I'll be sending the launch up river at daybreak. Be on it. And keep away from the bar. One drink and you're out on your ear!"

Collins slunk away.

Montaya was using the launch for his trip to Cabeza today. Curt descended to the floating stage to see him off. And here the first step in his plans nearly misfired. Setting out from Riverbend was a small skiff. Though Montaya was patiently anxious to be on his way, Curt had to keep him talking long enough for that skiff to reach the Tempujo shore.

True, there was plenty to say, but it wasn't essential at the moment, with Montaya in a hurry, and it began to sound a trifle hollow when at last the little boat from Riverbend bumped the stage and out climbed a native with a letter for Curt.

Montaya's eyes narrowed. No longer was he in such impatience to get started. Curt ripped open the envelope, read the note. A grin split his face from ear to ear.

"From friends in Soledad," he explained. "McInnis, their Chief Engineer, invites me and my family over for an anniversary dinner tonight. Of course, I'd like to go, but I can't. I can't even spend the day at San Alejo. But I can send the car for my wife and the children—"

"Mr. Curtis!" Montaya's voice was frigid. "You've contracted to remain on the concession for the term of your contract."

Curt blinked, stared. "Hunh?" he said.

"Your contract, Mr. Curtis, binds you and your family to remain here."

"What do you mean? My contract binds my family to residence here with me, yes, but a visit to Soledad isn't breaking residence. And anyway," Curt began to show anger, "I won't have my wife cooped up, unable to see her friends who are so near. I don't care so much for myself, I have enough to keep me busy without a social life. With my wife it's different."

He drew a deep breath and rushed on.

"What are you afraid of? That I'll spill your secret formula? I don't even know it! That I'll lose time from the job? I shan't be going. But get this, Senor Montaya, and like it or not, I'm either sending my family to Soledad today to visit our friends there or I walk off this job right now, contract or no contract. And let's see you stop me!"

The knuckles of Curt's fist, clenching his pipe, were white as Curt jabbed home his words. The act worked. Montaya bit his lip, glanced at his wrist watch.

LOYALTY TO CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Mark 2:14-17; John 6: 66-69; Philippians 3:7-11.

GOLDEN TEXT—What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ.—Philippians 3:7.

Loyalty is undoubtedly one of the finest traits of mankind. Because of its strength, its fidelity to duty, etc., shrewd men have learned to play upon man's loyalty, making it serve evil and ignoble ends. Unworthy causes, having thus gained the interest of man by fair means or foul, have developed blind loyalty. Even in the carrying out of crime there has been the suggestion that there is some kind of a code of honor, a loyalty among thieves.

All this does not change the fact that there is a high and holy impulse in man to stand true to the right; and in the Christian, to be found ever loyal to the Christ, whose we are and whom we serve. Faith in Christ (our lesson of last week) is rightly followed by loyalty to Him. It manifests itself in three ways.

I. Following Christ (Mark 2:14-17).

Without obedience there is no use talking about loyalty. When Jesus said: "Follow me," Matthew (Levi) arose and followed. He was a sinner (v. 17), a man of the despised calling of tax-gatherer (v. 14), but he was ready for the call of Jesus.

Notice also that following Christ carries with it the privilege and obligation (it is both) of making Him known to our friends. Matthew did not wait until he had made a new circle of friends and then invite them to a feast. He celebrated his entrance upon the new life of faith by a friendly and effective testimony before his friends who were publicans and sinners.

Notice the words of Jesus in verse 17. It is not good people, satisfied in their own self-righteousness, who get to heaven. It is sinners, saved by grace, who will there magnify the Saviour's name.

II. Faithfulness to Christ (John 6:66-69).

It is one thing to begin, but quite another to persevere in well doing. Jesus had been doing many miracles and a host of followers had flocked to Him. He had not only done great deeds, but had spoken beautiful words about the Fatherhood of God, the power of the Holy Spirit, etc. He had fed the five thousand, and they liked that too.

But now He had talked about a broken body, about partaking of His flesh and His blood, and they did not like it. This reached too deeply into the necessity for a personal spiritual experience, and one that spoke of sacrifice, and many of the disciples "walked no more with him" (v. 66).

How perfect a picture of the "religious experience" of multitudes of men and women in our day.

The true disciple, however, stands truest in just such an hour. "We believe," said Peter, and he spoke better than ever before in his life. "We don't understand everything (that's the thought back of "To whom shall we go?"), but we believe, and we will stand fast." Blessed word of loyalty!

Observe that Peter and his brethren recognized Christ as the "Holy One of God," that is, God's Son in a unique and intimate sense, One close to and participating in the holiness of God. Loyalty will not hold on any lesser concept of Christ. There is no incentive to real service and sacrifice in the watered-out religious faith of the modernistic liberal!

III. Forsaking All for Christ (Phil. 3:7-11).

There were a number of things in the life of Paul as a natural man of which he was justifiably proud, but which in the light of his relationship to Christ paled into insignificance. The best this world can offer looks like rubbish (v. 8)—which it really is—when one catches a glimpse of Jesus Christ.

Turn your eyes upon Jesus,
Look full in His wonderful face,
And the things of earth will grow strangely dim
In the light of His glory and grace.

However, that experience of Paul's was only the beginning of a life of devotion to the Lord, which is expressed in words the depth of which we cannot fully plumb. What does it mean to know "the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made comfortable unto his death"? We do not fully know, but certain we are that it speaks of a fellowship with Christ that is very deep and intimate; a life of power, because He lives in and works through the believer; a sharing with Him of the hatred and bitterness of the world, yes, of death, if need be, for Him, in the assurance of resurrection.

This is an "all out" Christian experience, nothing held back, nothing thought [illegible] too difficult or trying—ever gladly given in unstinted love and devotion to Christ. Now the Christian church is languishing for the want of those who will forsake all to follow Him in complete faithfulness.

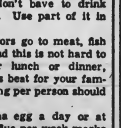
Vitamin Ways

Comes winter and fall when vegetables and fruits are more scarce than during summer and fall, and many a homemaker is apt to fall shy on serving her family these vital body regulating and protective foods.

Yet, this is the time when the body needs them most. These foods build up the body's resistance to disease—and keep you, to pick a common example, from having a cold as soon as warm weather and sun flee.

Minerals are busy building and repairing, replenishing body tissues that get torn down and used up, daily with every movement you make. Vitamins help you use the foods you eat.



Good-to-eat foods help the family take in all these vital minerals and vitamins. Drab, uninteresting dishes will send them off to eating other foods to take the edge off their hunger—wherever they can put their hands on something. I need not point out that in this way they may really be losing out on foods necessary to the body.

Cooking vegetables well, and doing pretty things to their appearance will help their consumption rating. A bit of sauce or extra seasoning will put an ordinary vegetable over and at the same time insure your family of what it needs most:

Scalloped Peas and Onions.
(Serves 5 to 6)

1 pound small white onions
1 No. 2 can peas
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons finely crushed bread crumbs

Parboil onions 25 minutes. Drain. Drain peas and reserve ½ cup pea liquor. Melt 2 tablespoons butter, blend in flour, salt and pepper. Add pea liquor and milk and cook until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Pour into casserole. Melt remaining butter, stir in bread crumbs, sprinkle over casserole. Bake in a moderately hot (375-degree) oven for about 25 minutes.

Lynn Says:

Vital Statistics: There are about seven inches in the Nutrition Yardstick which bear checking every day in every way so as to keep you and your family in the running:

The first inch includes milk: 1 pint per day for every adult and 1 quart for every child. Of course you don't have to drink all this milk. Use part of it in cooking.

Second honors go to meat, fish or poultry, and this is not hard to use up. For lunch or dinner, whichever fits best for your family, one serving per person should be counted.

At least one egg a day or at least four to five per week marks the third inch. Have it for breakfast or toss it in the hot bread for dinner, or custard for lunch.

Cereal's important, too. Serve it in the breakfast, or a pudding or even cookies. Bread and rolls come under this category, also.

Fifth inch includes the vegetables: two besides potatoes, one should be a leafy vegetable—spinach, lettuce, broccoli, romaine, etc.—and the other raw. Cabbage is perfect.

Now, the fruits. Two a day isn't hard to manage. Of course you start off with breakfast, and then include one for lunch or dinner dessert.

The last and seventh inch includes butter or some fat rich in vitamin A. This is for fuel and energy.

This Week's Menu
Browned Oysters
Scalloped Peas and Onions
Cranberry-Pineapple Salad
Hot Biscuits
Apple Juice Mince Pie
Recipes Given

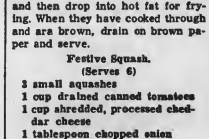
Vegetable Bouillon.
(Serves 2)

½ cup water
¾ to 1 cup juice strained from canned string or wax beans
1 bouillon cube
3 small sprigs parsley

Add water to bean juice and heat to boiling. Dissolve bouillon cube in boiling liquid. Serve hot garnished with parsley.

A one-dish meal that's good for fall is this one with many vegetable favorites:



Ham Hock With Vegetables.
(Serves 5)

2½ pounds ham hock
5 medium-sized potatoes
1 bunch carrots
5 medium-sized onions
1 medium-sized head of cabbage

Wipe ham hock. Cover with boiling water, cover and simmer two hours or until tender. Clean vegetables, add to meat, cook, uncovered 20 to 30 minutes or until vegetables are tender.

Fried Squash Cakes.

Slice squash very thin, being certain to slice it across. Place the slices in salt water, wipe them dry, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in flour, beaten egg and then in cracker crumbs. Repeat the process twice and then drop into hot fat for frying. When they have cooked through and are brown, drain on brown paper and serve.

Festive Squash.
(Serves 6)

3 small squashes
1 cup drained canned tomatoes
1 cup shredded, processed cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon chopped onion
2 cups soft bread crumbs
Salt, pepper
3 tablespoons melted butter
Parsley
Broiled bacon

Wash the squashes and cut them in half, lengthwise and cook in boiling salted water until almost tender. Scoop out the centers, leaving a ¼ inch shell. Cut the pulp into small pieces and drain thoroughly. Combine with tomatoes, cheese, onion, 1 cup bread crumbs and seasonings to taste. Pile this into the squash shells and sprinkle with remaining crumbs mixed with the melted butter. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until the crumbs are brown. Arrange in a round platter and serve with parsley and crisp, broiled bacon.

A few green leaves of lettuce, romaine, watercress or other salad greens guarantee much of the important, but bard-to-get vitamin D. Perhaps, you like the greens plain, or perhaps with a bit of color such as:

Cranberry-Pineapple Salad.

Cut slices of canned cranberry sauce and top with slices of pineapple. Arrange in lettuce nests. Soften cream cheese with milk and add a few chopped nuts. Shape into balls and place among lettuce leaves. Serve with mayonnaise.

Apple Juice Mince Pie.
(Makes 1 8-inch pie)

1 package orange flavored gelatin
2 cups apple juice
½ teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup mincemeat
Cream cheese

Dissolve the gelatin in apple juice that has been heated to the boiling point. Add lemon juice and mincemeat. Cook until thick and creamy, then pour into a baked pie shell. Chill until firm, then decorate top with cream cheese put through a pastry tube.

Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

THERE was a certain cluttered up road leading somewhere between Avocourt and Montfaucon in France, late in September, 1918. The night was dark and the rain was even wetter than usual. There was an artillery captain, getting his battery through this muddle and mire, and he wasn't very gentle about getting the right of way.

"These guns go through," he barked, and you could see he wasn't particular about how they got through. Through the jumble and the tangle and the rain and mud and darkness this battery moved on its way.

Grantland Rice

The artillery captain was a fellow by the name of Larry MacPhail. He was a rough and ready officer looking for action, and he has been the same ever since.

Now he is on his way back to his old artillery job, and whether you like him or not, the army will. And that happens to be the main idea.

Then and Now

Larry MacPhail is no longer a kid. It has been almost 24 years since that night in France where refugees, stray army outfits and complete confusion almost blocked the road which MacPhail helped to open for his guns.

Since that time he has been the major factor in building up two pennant winners in the National league—first, Cincinnati's Reds, then Brooklyn's Dodgers.

There have been many times when he looked to be hard and ruthless, but he was always smart. As someone has said, "MacPhail's mistakes, and he had made many, have always been about minor matters. He has yet to make a mistake that was important."

If the charge that he has been hard and ruthless is true, there could be no bigger boost when it comes to the matter of winning this war.

McPhail and the Dodgers

MacPhail was talking about the Dodgers of 1942.

"When the season opened," he said, "I thought we could win. We had done all we could to strengthen a team good enough to win the pennant the year before. But when we were ten games in front you will remember I told you that I was worried about what might happen.

"The year before we were only thinking about winning the pennant. Through this summer we have been thinking only about meeting and beating the Yankees. It was easy enough to see our pitching was crumbling. It was also easy to see that we were no longer hitting. The box scores showed that better than any large bale of words could hope to do. No one could figure at that time that the Cardinals, a young hustling team, would suddenly move into a .900 per cent pace. But that's what they did.

Larry MacPhail

"Then there came the injury to Pete Reiser, who suddenly changed from a .355 hitter to a .240 hitter. These are no alibis. The Cardinals had their share of hard luck last year.

"The main point is that we ran into a change in mental attitudes. Last season we were pennant-hungry and world series money-hungry. By this season we'd gotten ours. The Cardinals hadn't. And don't forget this Cardinal team is quite a ball club. I mean skill, speed, and spirit.

The Difference

"Mental attitude," MacPhail continued, "is one of the big factors in any game. I've heard Bobby Jones say it was at least 75 per cent of golf. Any football coach will tell you the big part it plays in his sport. Of course, skill is important, speed is important and power is important. So is experience. But mental attitude is even more important.

"I recall late last summer when Whit Wyatt would walk into the clubhouse before some hard game and say, 'Listen, you bums, give me one run today. That's all I need.'

"And when the pinch came, that's all Whit needed. This season you had the feeling that for many of our pitchers even three or four runs were not quite enough."

About Football

Lou Little said some time ago that 1942 would be football's best offensive season. Columbia's mandarin makes few bad guesses. It will take some remarkable defensive formations to keep the combined speed and power under check which most teams have to meet.

That Missouri backfield will be one of the best. It has speed, drive and experience, headed by one of the best in Steuber, a big fellow who can move.

Tell me a Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE DAM OF PADDY THE BEAVER GROWS

PADDY THE BEAVER kept right on working just as if he hadn't any visitors. You see it is a big undertaking to build a dam. And when that was done there was a house to build and a supply of food for the winter to cut and store. Oh, Paddy the Beaver had no time for idle gossip you may be sure! So he kept right on building his dam. It didn't look much like a dam at first and some of Paddy's visitors turned up their noses when they first saw it. You see they had heard stories of what a wonderful dam builder Paddy was, and they had expected to see something like the smooth grass covered bank with which Farmer Brown kept the Big River from running back on his low lands. Instead all they saw was a great pile of poles and sticks which looked like anything but a dam.

"Pooh!" exclaimed Billy Mink. "I guess we needn't worry about the Laughing Brook and Smiling Pool if that is the best Paddy can do. Why, the water of the Laughing Brook will work through that in no time."

Of course, Paddy heard him, but he said nothing—just kept right on working.

"Just look at the way he has laid those sticks," continued Billy Mink. "Seems as if any one would know enough to lay them across the Laughing Brook, instead of just the other way. I could build a better dam than that!"

Paddy said nothing—just kept right on working.

"Yes, sir," Billy boasted, "I could build a better dam than that. Why,

So the dam grew and grew, and so did the pond above the dam.

that pile of sticks will never stop the water."

"Is something the matter with your eye sight, Billy Mink?" inquired Jerry Muskrat.

"Of course not!" retorted Billy indignantly. "Why?"

"Oh, nothing much, only you don't seem to notice that already the Laughing Brook is over its banks above Paddy's dam," replied Jerry, who had been studying the dam with a great deal of interest.

Billy looked a wee bit foolish, for sure enough there was a little pool just above the dam and it was growing bigger. Paddy still kept at work, saying nothing.

So the dam grew and grew, and so did the pond above the dam. Of course, it took a good many days to build so big a dam; and such a lot of hard work! Every morning the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows would visit it, and every morning they would find that it had grown a great deal in the night, for that is when Paddy prefers to work. By this time the Laughing Brook had stopped laughing wholly, and down in the Smiling Pool there was hardly water enough for the minnows to feel safe a minute. Billy Mink had stopped making fun of the dam, and all the little people who live in the Laughing Brook and the Smiling Pool were terribly worried. To be sure Paddy had warned them of what he was going to do, and had promised that just as soon as his pond was big enough the water would once more run in the Laughing Brook. They tried to believe him, but they couldn't help having just a wee bit of fear that he might not be wholly honest. Jerry Muskrat was the only one who seemed absolutely sure that everything would be all right. Perhaps that was because Paddy is his cousin and Jerry couldn't help but feel proud of such a big cousin and one who was so smart.

So day by day the dam grew and the pond grew, and then one morning Grandfather Frog down in what had once been the Smiling Pool heard a sound that made his heart jump for joy. It was a murmur that kept growing and growing until at last it was the merry laugh of the Laughing Brook. Then he knew that Paddy had kept his word.

Complete Religious Freedom

There is complete religious freedom in India. In 1833, the Charter act provided that no native of India should be disbarred by race, color or religion from holding any office. In 1858 Queen Victoria proclaimed that "none be in any way favored, none molested or disquieted by reason of their religious faith or observances." Only practices menacing human life, such as thuggee (a murder cult) and suttee (widow burning) have been suppressed by law.

300,000 Acres Hemp Needed From Farms

Increased Use of Fiber Caused by War Demands

Because of the unprecedented war-time demand for hemp, U. S. farmers are planning to produce a record crop of this fiber in 1943.

In the face of a sharp drop in imports of hard fibers, the U. S. war production program—calling for a two-ocean navy and the largest army of all time—demands a tremendous increase in the production of rough, tough fiber. In addition the average American citizen uses almost four pounds of hard fibers per year, or the equivalent of 1,850 feet of binder twine, or 13 feet of one-inch rope.

The minimum goal for U. S. farms is 240 million pounds of hemp in 1943. To obtain that much fiber, it will require, assuming an average yield of 800 pounds of total fiber per acre, roughly 300,000 acres of hemp. This, in turn, will require 350,000 bushels of seed. To produce this seed, assuming a yield of 10 bushels per acre, will require 35,000 acres.

Already Kentucky farmers have planted 36,000 of hemp as a seed crop in anticipation of next year's record-breaking acreage for fiber.

Hemp is a soft fiber, but it is durable, strong and flexible. It can be produced successfully in Kentucky, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Illinois.

Now that many of the hard fibers used for these and other purposes are not as readily available and cannot be produced in this climate, hemp becomes an important war-time substitute for them.

Hemp fiber can be used in many ways. It can be used for small hawsers for the navy, which urgently needs these ropes; for ham strings, mattress twines, harness thread, for tying chair springs, as oakum or packing material, and as special twines requiring strength and durability.

On the farm heavy hemp rope is used as a cable to hoist tons of hay into the barn or to perform other heavy-duty work.

If you have ever watched an ocean liner dock at an American port, the chances are you received a never-to-be-forgotten thrill when the giant ship, loaded with passengers and valuable cargo, was safely tied to its mooring with a large, stout rope. Seamen call this rope a hawser. Most ropes of this type are now made from abaca, a hard fiber which has been imported to this country from the Philippines and the East Indies.

Sentinels of Health
Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.
When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, feel tired, nervous, all worn out.
Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

Girl Reserves Have Service

On Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock the Girl Reserve gave their Candle Lighting Service in the Methodist Church. All the girls were dressed in white. The code was given by twelve of the girls. Several of our girls from Verona were unable to be present. Our speaker was Mrs. DeMolsey, who gave us an inspiring talk, at the end of the program our leader, Miss Sleet gave a talk and took a blue candle from which each of the officers lighted her candle. After the officers had lighted their candles they explained their duties. Then each member came fordard to light her candle, after the candles were lighted we sang: "Follow the Gleam," and marched out in pairs.

Monday we had a holiday. We reported at school then went out to gather scrap. Verona brought in 4,521 pounds, while Walton brought in 21,377 pounds, making a total average of 25,898 pounds, brought in yesterday. The grand total all the scrap brought in up to today and including yesterday is 55,960 pounds.

Possession of Guadalcanal by the Americans provides a springboard for further offensive action against the Japs.

SOLOMONS:
All-Out Struggle

Good news balanced bad as the navy made public accounts of thunderous encounters between American and Jap war craft.

On the credit side was the report that five Nipponese warships and a transport had been sunk in a midnight battle near the Solomons. Included in the sinking were a heavy Jap cruiser, four destroyers and a transport. In addition, another destroyer was reported probably sunk, three cruisers torpedoed and bombed and 15 aircraft destroyed.

On the debit side was the somber tidings that three heavy American cruisers had been sent to the bottom of the Pacific in a night engagement during the first phase of the Solomon islands offensive last August. Announcement of the sinkings had been withheld as a military precaution. The cruisers were the Quincy, Vincennes and Astoria.

The struggle for naval supremacy in the area was accompanied by engagements in the air and on land for control. On strategic Guadalcanal proper, the marine defenders had been re-enforced by U. S. army units. Offsetting this added American strength, the Japs had landed re-enforcements of their own, covered by heavy naval concentrations. Continued possession of their positions including the Guadalcanal air base by the U. S. forces meant that a heavy gun was thrust in the ribs of Japan's positions to the north and east.

WILLKIE:
Persistent Advocate

Back from a 31,000-mile aerial tour of 14 countries in the war zone, including embattled Russia, the Middle East, India and China, Wendell L. Willkie reiterated a demand for a second front in Europe. He had made this demand frequently during his tour.

Reporting personally to President Roosevelt the results of his observations and of conferences with Joseph Stalin, Chiang Kai-shek and other Allied leaders, Willkie emphasized his conviction that the United Nations inevitably will defeat the Axis and that "Germany will never crush Russia."

In an interview later the 1940 Republican presidential candidate defended his right as a non-military expert to advance proposals which he believes will help shorten the war, reduce its cost in human life and help shape a better post-war world.

EMPLOYMENT:
To Reach 62,500,000

Eventual employment of 62,500,000 Americans in all lines of industry, commerce and agriculture by December, 1943, was predicted by the National Industrial Conference board.

The board reported that current employment figures were 57,700,000 with the total moving steadily upward.

Rise in employment in the past 12 months has been 4,000,000, while 10,000,000 have been added to payrolls since the defense program was undertaken in 1940.

18-19 DRAFT:
Oldsters Go Home?

Symbolic of the nation's united determination to prosecute the war vigorously was the swift congressional action which followed President Roosevelt's radio recommendation that the minimum draft age be lowered to 18.

A larger and younger army, fit to cope with the exhausting demands of modern combat was envisioned by Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. chief of staff, as a result of making youths 18 and 19 years old eligible to fight. The army's goal is 7,500,000 by the end of 1943, compared with an enlisted strength of 4,250,000 at present. There are 2,000,000 men in the 18-19 category, it was estimated, of whom 1,500,000 would be physically fit. About 100,000 men will become 18 during each month next year.

Declaring that some of the older men already inducted are a burden on the army because of physical handicaps and their lack of training, General Marshall said that many of these men may have to be discharged from the army.

ROOSEVELT:
Outlines Manpower Plan

Reviewing the war effort at home and abroad, President Roosevelt outlined for the American people the harsh necessities that face the nation in the future and proclaimed that the United States is winning the battle of transportation and production.

In unequivocal words the President recommended that 18 and 19-year-old youths be drafted for military service. He warned, too, that compulsory allocation of manpower to war industries and agriculture might become necessary.

Recommending a program to ease the manpower situation, Mr. Roosevelt urged: a virtual freeze of workers to their jobs; a system to "stop employers from stealing labor from one another"; a system to use "older men, handicapped people, more women and even grown boys and girls wherever possible; elimination of nonwar enterprise by measures to "stop the wastage of labor in all non-essential activities."

RUSSIA:
Nazi's New Strategy

Hitler's new Continental strategy of consolidation and defense was evident in tactical moves centering on the Soviet front. As the Russian winter approached, Nazi attacks in the key Stalingrad sector and in the Mozdok area of the Caucasus were described as minor compared to the tumultuous battles which had rocked the Soviet Union for five months.

The Russian relief army that had edged down from the north of Stalingrad through the German left flank was reported making continued progress. Communiques revealed that American-made tanks were being used by the advancing Reds.

News from the Caucasus was more favorable to the Russians. Fighting time as well as the attacking Reds, the Nazis around Mozdok were slowed down in their drive to the nearby Grozny oil fields.

VICHY: For lack of merchandise to supply the half million saloons and cafes, or one for every 80 inhabitants, a virtual prohibition regime has been established in France. Thousands have gone out of business since it has become impossible to get supplies. When a cafe proprietor gets a little stock of liquor or wine there is an immediate run on his place.

MIAMI: Albert John Capone, younger brother of Chicago's former gang czar Alphonse Capone, obtained a court order here to change his surname from Capone to Rayola. The order covered Capone, his wife and their son Robert Francus. Capone told the court the family wanted the name changed for the future benefit of the child.

AIRCRAFT OUTPUT:
Approaches 60,000

President Roosevelt's goal of an annual airplane production of 60,000 planes this year is being approached, the aeronautical chamber of commerce revealed.

Reporting that monthly plane production was pressing at 5,000, the chamber noted that more than 4 billion dollars worth of airplanes, engines and propellers will be produced in 1942.

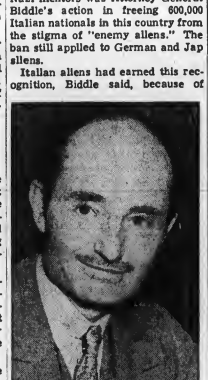
"From the standpoint of numbers," the report said, "it is estimated that what was once a year's production of combat planes is rolling out of the American aircraft plants in a single week."

As production mounts, quality improves, the report stated. "Despite the stellar performance of America's combat planes," it said, "the aircraft manufacturers are perfecting new and improved types which can fly higher, travel faster and spray more lead and destruction than the models presently in service."

TIRES:
Limit Is Five

The four tires they drove on, plus a spare for emergencies were all that American motorists could legally possess, as the U. S. government began acquiring excess civilian tires. The government was paying selling prices of from $1.50 to $11.15 for used tires, depending on the amount of tread.

Although the tire sale was voluntary, officials of the Office of Price Administration warned that car owners with more than five tires would be denied gasoline rations when the nation-wide registration took place November 9. Fines of $10,000 and prison terms of 10 years faced those who falsified their tire statements in applying for gasoline rations.



The government asked each motorist to keep the five best tires he had. Owners of two cars were told to keep 10 tires, five for each. The American Railway Express, with 23,000 offices in the United States, was the official collection agency.

The program to buy excess tires was expected to increase the national stockpile by from 2,000,000 to 5,000,000 units.

ENEMY ALIENS:
Italians Lose Stigma

Significant of the breach which the United Nations hope to effect between the Italian people and their Nazi mentors was Attorney General Biddle's action in freeing 600,000 Italian nationals in this country from the stigma of "enemy aliens." The ban still applied to German and Jap aliens.

Italian aliens had earned this recognition, Biddle said, because of

ATTORNEY GENERAL BIDDLE
". . . stigma unfair."

"the splendid showing they have made in meeting the test of loyalty to American ways and traditions since the attack on Pearl Harbor."

Under a new department of justice policy, the attorney general revealed that Italians would still be subject to internment if they proved "dangerous or disloyal." But he explained that the general regulations affecting enemy aliens, specifically Germans and Japanese, would no longer pertain to Italians.

LABOR:
More 'Farm Union'?

Extension of his attempt to unionize agricultural labor was announced by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America in a statement at the close of the organization's convention in Cincinnati.

"There are millions more to organize, clamoring for organization," he said. "Great segments of agriculture are knocking at the door of the UMW for help toward becoming free and independent citizens."

While Lewis' statement sounded optimistic, observers recalled that his previous efforts to unionize dairy workers in a number of states had failed signally.

CHURCHILL:
'Stern and Somber'

In ancient Edinburgh, once the home of the Scottish kings, Prime Minister Churchill served notice on the Axis that the United Nations have built up their striking power remarkably in the last two months.

One of Churchill's statements was interpreted by some observers as implying an early opening of a second front, when he said the United Nations had reached a "stern and somber moment in the war."

WICKARD FEARS FOOD CRISIS

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard has made it very clear in private conferences that he takes vigorous exception to Donald Nelson's recent statement: "We are going to have enough to eat throughout this war and we probably will not have to put any very drastic limitations on our range of choice in that regard."

On the contrary, Wickard says that we are going to be more and more up against it for food—unless we give the farmer more machinery and more labor.

Briefly here are the reasons why:

1. An army uses twice as much food as civilians, (a) because a lot is lost at sea, (b) a lot is lost in the field of battle, and (c) soldiers eat more than civilians.

2. We have to feed our allies more and more.

3. We will also have to feed the occupied regions when they are set free.

But meanwhile, farmers actually are killing good dairy cows for beef because they cannot get labor or machinery to keep up their dairy herds. In the Chicago milk shed alone, 1,700 dairy farmers have sold their herds and gone out of business.

In one specific case, a dairy farmer lost the use of his litter-carrier when the tub went bad. The carrier, complete with trolley and hoist, had cost him $250. A new tub to replace the rusted one would cost only $10. But he couldn't buy a new tub. And he couldn't find additional hands to do the work of the machine.

So he sold his cattle and closed the dairy.

Foreseeing this machinery shortage, Secretary Wickard asked WPB to permit manufacture of agricultural machinery up to 38 per cent of normal. The request was made July 22. He did not get a reply until this week.

Principal log-jammer is WPB's civilian supply committee, headed by Joseph L. Wiener, which has to act on a great variety of civilian problems and does not pretend to be expert in agriculture.

Its lack of expertness was indicated by two questions asked by members of this committee, in discussing farm problems:

"If there is a labor shortage on the farms, why can't farmers work overtime, just as factory workers do?"

"What is the difference between a wheel type tractor and a crawler type?"

So the United States may fail as the larder of democracy if a farmer can't have a new plow point or some other item—and the necessary farm labor.

NO NIX ON NAVY'S PIX

On the important question of photographs, the navy has completely reversed itself, with the result that the stay-at-home public is seeing daily action shots of the war.

Until recently, there was a ban on taking pictures of "confidential" scenes. But on September 1, the navy issued General Order 179, which stated that "commanding officers are directed to obtain photographs at times of emergency, disaster, and combat action."

Picture taking in the navy used to be confined to "nuts and bolts photography"—routine shots of materials to observe their action under stress. But now the navy is taking pictures of some of the most dramatic and colorful incidents in the history of warfare, with some 1,400 photographers.

If you saw the picture of the Jap carrier sinking in the Coral sea, or the Jap heavy cruiser sinking at Midway, or the U. S. sailors leaping overboard from the carrier Lexington, you have seen the work of navy cameramen.

Some were appointed to do nothing else but take pictures of the battle, but some did their camera shooting only after laying aside a machine gun. The famous picture of the sinking Jap carrier in the Coral sea was taken by a machine gunner from the rear nest of a navy plane.

Primary purpose of the picture taking is not to inform the public, but to inform the navy. The pictures are used to check on operations, to instruct learners, and, most important, to study the enemy's position. Today, tomorrow and every day, navy planes are flying over New Guinea and the Solomons, taking pictures of whatever lies below. The developed shots may disclose that the Japs have moved into a new area, and that the little black spot, seen under a microscope, is an oil tank just installed.

'British Plan' Advocated To Solve Farm Problem

Shortage of Labor in Agriculture Remedied By England Through Job Priority Decree; Essential Farming Gets Preference.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

There is one question which the farmer wants answered but which a large part of the rest of the population doesn't realize is one of the most important questions of the day.

It is: Will the farmers get enough help to save the crops this year and enough help to produce the food for the "Food for Freedom" program next year?

I have spent the week talking to people who are going to be responsible for the answering of that question. And the composite answer as I get it is this:

"Generally speaking, yes. However, some of the crops raised this year will go by the boards. But we believe we can handle next year's bigger crops."

What is Washington going to do to solve this problem?

1. Much talk but no legislation until after elections.

2. That talk however will develop some unpleasant and important truths.

3. As a result, eventually legislative action, mapped on the British plan.

But meanwhile there will be

4. Temporary makeshifts which may alleviate but cannot cure the farmer's labor pains. The first, immediate effort will be on a voluntary basis. (I'll go into that later.) But it will leave a lot of spoiled tomatoes, among other things.

The second thing will be legislation which will be based on the British experience and (we hope) will give the farmer the help he needs to carry out his share of the battle.

In Great Britain they tried one measure and another, first voluntary and then gradually tightening regulations. Their experience ended in two things:

First, laws that kept the men who were in rock-bottom, necessary industries (including farming) in those industries.

Second, it put the men needed in those essential industries into those industries.

What the British did amounts to this, and it is what we have to do, and are going to do eventually—decree a rigid priority of jobs. And that means decide where and what a man must do. (Fight, make munitions, hoe corn, etc.)

Essential Farming

And, when it comes to farming, subdivide: Say what is essential farming and what isn't. If you are an essential farmer, you farm. Otherwise, you fight. That concept will be framed in a law, a law that is being studied today as you hear the various testimony of experts aired in the hearings before the various congressional committees — a law that is being studied today by a subcommittee of the Manpower commission, by the labor department, by department of agriculture experts.

It will be considered seriously before election day. It will not be acted upon by then, not merely because it is too hot a political potato but because it is just too complicated to be worked out satisfactorily before that time.

That is the analysis given to me by an old-timer in the government who is in a position to know. I naturally asked him why such a manpower plan had not been worked out before. He was very frank.

He said there were two reasons. First, when any human being who understands the implications looks at this question he gets such a headache that he simply has to lean back and think it over again.

Second, and seriously, the question of manpower in the present war presents a problem that no human being has ever had to meet before in the terms that it has to be met now. Britain has been able to deal with it in a measure—under the pressure and the easily recognized seriousness of falling bombs. As one man who had spent much time in England said to me: "It's easier to regulate farmers when there are shell craters in their fields."

How has Germany, the superefficient nation, met it? Only with slave labor, dragooned from conquered countries.

But we have to meet it. And we will. Before the year is out manpower for civilian service will be drafted, as manpower for military service is.

What, the farmer asks, is to be done in the interim?

The Voluntary Method

First, the voluntary method, the way the British began. There are a number of things to consider. Secretary Wickard says that the greatest reservoir of farm managerial and labor power lies in the people already with farm experience, who are not farming efficiently.

There are two million farm families (the sage) working land which won't produce enough to keep them decently, much less help the food for freedom program. Wickard says we have the money and the machinery to move them. The Farm Security administration has been doing it to some degree. They can do more. I know that about 125 men from Kentucky recently were sent to New York state to pick apples. The government paid their way.

Another factor is women—more women are coming into the field. The old tradition that women shouldn't work in the fields is breaking down. One farmer said to me: "A lot of women can run tractors. I'd rather have a woman who knows how to run my tractor than a man I don't know. These women are careful and they are just bustin' themselves to make good."

Secretary Wickard hates drafted labor and any farmer knows why. As one farmer put it: "I don't want a man on my farm who doesn't want to work on a farm. He'll break up more than he's worth."

Potential Farm Labor

But the secretary says that there is another reservoir of potential farm labor made up of men and boys with farm experience who are doing non-essential work now.

Now why, the farmer asks, haven't the smart people in the government foreseen all this and prepared for it? Why did they ask us to raise all these tomatoes when they ought to have known that we couldn't get the help to pick them?

Well, nobody in America has had the experience of total war. We have as big an army now as we had at the time of the Armistice. The army is way ahead of the schedule we thought they could make. And it takes a lot more men in industry and on the farm to run an army, a modern army, than it did sa army that size in 1918.

We never believed that this country could house and equip an army as fast as the job has been done. The calls of the draft were heavier and more rapid than any expert expected. But don't blame the Selective Service system for robbing the labor market. They did what the doctor ordered. Some of the others didn't fall in line.

War Man Power

I talked with a member of General Hershey's staff. I can't quote him officially but this is what he said to me privately and what he would say to you: "Listen to these figures: In some of the middle western states for every one man who has been drafted, 11 have gone into industry or enlisted in the army, navy or marines. The figures over the country as a whole show that out of every hundred men who have left the farm only 15 were taken by the local draft boards. In the dairy industry in California, it was shown 37 per cent left their jobs to take higher paid ones in the same industry and 39 per cent went into other industries or enlisted."

That is a cross-section of the manpower problem. America has volunteered nobly. But, alas, voluntary service is not the wisest in war time. We have one goal; we must reach that with balanced action. To obtain that, s most careful and complicated plan must be worked out. It hasn't been worked out yet because there is no man in Washington from the highest to the lowest who can do it alone. It takes a lot of study, and then unified action. That is coming. And it will come slowly, as they told me when I was a boy, like sucking sugar through a rag.

At least 35 merchant vessels have been saved from being torpedoed by Axis submarines along the Atlantic coast by the appearance over the water of Civil Air patrol planes, Dean Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, declared.

Leon Henderson, OPA administrator, is investigating charges that certain manufacturers of scarce commodities have been allbiting the big stores as much merchandise as they want, while the small stores are given less than they need or nothing at all. Often, it seems, small retailers are being forced by the manufacturers to buy goods they don't want or can't sell.

IT IS not necessary to make our economies so dull and dreary that they depress every one. Let's make them so gay and attractive that they give us a lift and a bit of a challenge too. This old rocker is an example.

A saw and a wood chisel were used for removing projections and rockers. An old quilt was found for padding and the feathers from an old bolster were packed into a thick seat cushion to raise the seat which has been lowered by removing the rockers. This required a yard and a quarter of ticking. Four and one-half yards of inexpensive chintz in a bold, modern pattern did the rest. Total cost for an up-to-date chair less than two dollars, that will serve well for the duration.

NOTE: This remodeled chair is from BOOK 5 of the series of booklets that are offered with these articles. In this book an old-fashioned couch is modernized; end tables from spools; new uses are found for a camp stool; other types of chairs are made over; and a love seat is made from an old car seat. Also patchwork designs and directions for designing and making hooked rugs. To get a copy of BOOK 5, send your order to:

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS
● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.
● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.
● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

Let's Have a Party . . . While Witches Play
(See Recipes Below.)

Halloween Pranks

October's the month which flaunts her gay, burnished colors as a prelude to winter. It's the month of apples and cider, of pumpkins and squash against dry sheaves of corn stalk, of fragrant gingerbread or doughnuts fried crisply tender in hot sizzling deep fat.

October's the month of Halloween—when witches, spooks and black cats make merry. Big ones or wee ones will love a party that mingles what's best in October with the spookiest of what's Halloween.

Pretty up with a party and give your spirits a lift with traditional food that's easy on purse strings, a hit with the party-goers. Decorations can be nature's own, a pumpkin or two whole or cut into a jolly face lit with candle glow, squash and apples banked with deep yellow, brown or red leaves, bowls of apples, grapes, popcorn and spicy drinks.

Let the children paste black cats, owls and witches onto mugs and invitations inviting guests to come as their favorite spook be it an owl, witch astride a broomstick, or a slinking cat.

Have a good hot dish if you are having the Halloween party indoors—something fixed in advance that you can put in the oven to get warm, slip out in a hurry to get to the table like tuna fish souffle, cheese fondue, macaroni and cheese with broiled bacon slices, or a hamburger roast.

Outdoor plans may include a wienie roast, with the children participating at the outdoor fireplace or grill. If you prefer hamburgers, fix the patties indoors with their seasonings, wrap in wax paper ready for broiling. Wienies require thorough washing.

Construct a simple grill outdoors for roasting wieners if you aren't lucky enough to have a brick grill. This will take a lot of the roughhouse outdoors and save wear and tear on your house. Games will most likely be outdoors if it isn't too cold as the revelers will want to roam with spirits and ghosts.

Few foods equal the deliciousness of wienies roasted over the flames on forks or sticks fashioned from branches, depending on your degree of going in for naturalness.

Plenty of long buns, already split indoors before the party and heaped high in a basket, are indicated. They're best when toasted—with lots of butter, mustard, relish, catsup or homemade chili sauce as accompaniments for wienies roasted to doneness with a taste of smoke and ashes.

If you go in for toasting marshmallows along with wienies, try them rolled in coconut just for a taste of something different. They're really good!

You can't have enough hot foods as the weather is bound to be on the crisp and chilly side. There will be cheers from the boisterous and ahs from the more conservative if you serve this golden, pineapple drink with a suspicion of spice. The vitamins B1 and C in the pineapple won't permit any let-down in morale and pep:

Mulled Pineapple Juice.
(Serves 4-6)

- 1 inch stick of cinnamon
- 3 whole cloves
- ¼ teaspoon cloves
- ¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg
- 1 qnart canned, unsweetened Hawaiian pineapple juice
- Pinch of salt

Tie the spices in a small piece of cheesecloth, add them to the pineapple juice, and bring to the boiling point, but do not boil. Add salt. Serve immediately.

Gingerbread wears a party air if you decorate the tops with a frosting outline of a Halloween symbol after it is cut into slices. Here's a recipe for gingerbread that's light as down and exquisitely fragrant with spices in correct proportions:

Gingerbread.

- ½ cnp shortening
- ½ cnp brown sugar
- ½ cnp light molasses
- ½ cup boiling water
- 1 beaten egg
- 1½ cups flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon soda
- ¾ teaspoon ginger
- ¾ teaspoon cinnamon

Pour water over shortening and add sugar, molasses and egg. Beat well. Add sifted dry ingredients, beat until smooth. Bake in a waxed-paper-lined square pan in a moderate (350-degree) oven. Cool in pan.

If it's doughnuts you've a liking for, I'd suggest the kind made with sour cream or milk. They have a lightness of a feather that is the criterion for a "sinker."

Sour Milk Donghnuts.
(Makes 2 dosen)

- 3 cups flour
- ¾ cnp sugar
- 1 tablespoon melted shortening
- ½ teaspoon soda
- 2 eggs
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ cup sour milk

Sift flour, sugar, nutmeg and salt. Dissolve soda in sour milk. Beat eggs well and add milk to eggs. Add to dry ingredients, then mix in melted shortening. Roll out and cut with a doughnut cutter. Fry in deep hot fat (360-370 degrees F.) until golden brown. Drain on brown paper.

Fun's in store for the youngsters if you let them polish off the party with these old-fashioned, sugar-saving popcorn balls:

Taffy Popcorn.

- 4 cups popped corn
- 2 cups shelled peanuts
- ⅔ cup molasses
- ⅓ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- ½ cup water
- ½ teaspoon soda

Mix molasses, sugar, butter, water and vinegar. Cook slowly and without stirring until the crack stage is reached. Add soda and stir well. Add remaining ingredients and mix well before pouring into shallow, well-greased pans. When cold, cut into bars or squares.

Don't Wait for Constipation to Hit!

What do you do when constipation comes? Do you rush to the medicine cabinet for an emergency cathartic? And then—have to do it all over again next time.

If yours is the common kind of constipation due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, here's wonderful news! There's a better way of treating your constipation. A way that prevents it—by correcting the cause! Start eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. ALL-BRAN corrects the cause by supplying the "bulk food" you need. Enjoy this crisp, crunchy cereal daily, drink plenty of water, and hit constipation before it hits you! ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, see a doctor.

NICHOLSON NEWS—

"By their fruits ye shall know them.,' It is unnecessary for Christians to shout from the housetops that they are followers of Christ, since "a tree is known by its fruit." "If I can let into some soul a little light, if I some pathway dark and drear, can render bright," if I to one in gloom can show the sunny side though no reward I win, I shall be satisfied."

Mrs. E. R. Rankin entertained relatives Sunday. Her kind thoughtfulness in sending a tray of delicious chicken dinner was deeply appreciated.

Donald Stephenson, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent I. Stephenson, has recently been called to the colors. On Wednesday morning Mrs. Stephenson paid a bright call en route to Ft. Thomas to visit her soldier son. On Sunday he enjoyed a visit with a number of relatives where a lovely repast was served, complimenting him and the celebrants of birthday anniversaries. His many friends units in wishing him God speed, as he dons the uniform and helps in the greatest emergency the world has ever known. God will give final victory in a cause so just as is ours, however long and better the struggle.

Most heartily do we thank Robt. E. Hawkins for lovely vegetables.

Stanley Armstrong, young son of Omar Armstrong, was honor guest Sunday at a farewell luncheon tendered him at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fisk, and their lovely little daughters., Misses Nellie and Janet. Best wishes of many friends follow him as he joins the ranks of heroic defenders. Through the kindness of Mrs. Fisk and Mrs. Wagner, we were the recipient of a generous portion ofthe delicious "going away" luncheon, for which heartiest thanks are expressed.

We would greatfully appreciate orders for Christmas cards, from a lovely assortment, from Advertiser readers, with or without names imprinted for one dollar a box. Wallace M. Morgan, Independence, Ky., Route 1.

STOP BEING AN ELEPHANT AND DON'T BE A DONKEY:

The symbol of the Republican party is an Elephant, and the symbol of the Democratic Party is a Donkey. The poor Elephant can be tied to a little stake in the ground from which he could free himself with the slightest jerk, but he is too dumb to know his great strength . . . so he weaves back and forth, and remains a captive and a slave to his puny masters.

The American people have been like the Elephant, for they have remained tied to a "puny" political machine, when five minutes spent at the polls on election day, would free them all. And how like the Donkey that the most of us are, when it comes to voting for the many yes men and stooges of the machine, who have so often been our only choice.

..But now that financial greed and corrupt politic's have gotten us into another great war, we are beginning to "WAKE UP" . . . and on November, 3rd., the little "Himmlers" who order State Employees to vote "yaw" and who make their demogogic appeals for party loyalty, may get the surprise they have had coming to them for a long time.

Your X uneder the V AND TORCH on November 3rd, will be your answer to those who would destroy that freedom which your soldiers are now dying to preserve, and result in a "moral awakening" of the people who believe the MACHINE CANNOT BE DEFEATED.

UNITY THAT GETS THINGS DONE IN A BIG WAY

• You hear a lot about pooling these days—pooling materials—pooling machines—pooling man power.

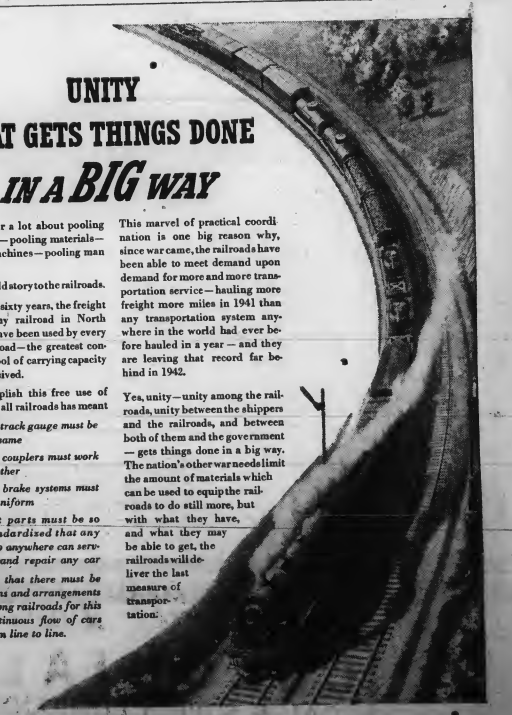
This is an old story to the railroads.

For nearly sixty years, the freight cars of any railroad in North America have been used by every other railroad—the greatest continental pool of carrying capacity ever conceived.

To accomplish this free use of any car by all railroads has meant

... that track gauge must be the same

... that couplers must work together



... that brake systems must be uniform

... that parts must be so standardized that any shop anywhere can service and repair any car

... and that there must be plans and arrangements among railroads for this continuous flow of cars from line to line.

This marvel of practical coordination is one big reason why, since war came, the railroads have been able to meet demand upon demand for more and more transportation service—hauling more freight more miles in 1941 than any transportation system anywhere in the world had ever before hauled in a year—and they are leaving that record far behind in 1942.

Yes, unity—unity among the railroads, unity between the shippers and the railroads, and between both of them and the government—gets things done in a big way. The nation's other war needs limit the amount of materials which can be used to equip the railroads to do still more, but with what they have, and what they may be able to get, the railroads will deliver the last measure of transportation.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is worth more than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. When they arrive in Tierra Libre they find both Zora and her husband dead. It is Mitchell's job as chief engineer for a fruit company that Jeff has been called to fill. Later Jeff's friend Bill Henderson is killed, and Jeff suspects his employer, Senor Montaya, of murdering him and the Mitchells because they had found a clue to the strange things going on at the plantation. Other sinister figures are the company chemist, Dr. Toenjes, and the flyers, Ryden and Lanesstock. A man named Collins arrives from the Canal Zone to see Mitchell, and Jeff hires him without arousing Montaya's suspicions. A talk with Jerry McInnis discloses that Montaya is part German and is dealing with the Nazis. Collins reveals his identity as a U. S. naval intelligence officer. When he and Jeff discover hidden German bombers, he realizes that there will be trouble. He has just persuaded Montaya to let Lee and the children leave "for a few days." NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVIII

"Bueno, bueno," Montaya finally said, more smoothly. "There is no need of this heat. It will be only for a day or two. But understand, this visit must not be used as an opening wedge for regular contact with the Associated people. That I will not have during our construction period."

His dignity recovered, he turned to Emilio, who had been standing by, staring incuriously into the distance.

"Help to get Senora Curtis and the children across to Riverbend."

"Si, Senor."

Curt mounted the steps. At the dispatcher's office he put in a call for his house at San Alejo.

"Hiya, Lee. Surprise. Pack for yourself and the kids. You're visiting Jerry and Marta for a day or two. They're having an anniversary dinner tonight—"

"But Jeff, what anni—"

"I'm sorry I can't go. As I told you, I'm completely tied up until the new shovels are in operation. Anyway, you have a good time for the hoth of us. I'm sending the car for you now. Can you be ready in forty minutes?"

"I think so, dear, but—"

"No 'buts.' I can't go and that's that. If you wait for me you may never see them. There's no telling when I can get a day from the job."

He hung up. This last should tell Lee the urgency of the situation without giving the operator—undoubtedly listening in—anything to chew on.

But Lee reached Tempujo hy noon. The kids bounced about in excitement, clutching at Curt. He turned them over to Emilio, together with the three small bags Lee had brought.

Then he held Lee close, whispering while pretending to kiss her, "Don't look so anxious, sweet. Keep a clear face. Everything's under control, and I'll be with you sooner than you think."

He managed to slip into her palm a note folded tightly. "For Jerry."

Curt then banded Lee into the boat and watched the crossing. He saw her met on the other hank—that would be Jerry, God hless him!—and they waved across at each other.

Monahan had been all day at the tractor-shoveis. Their progress had been slowed today by more difficult terrain. More filling, more matting had been necessary. He returned to Tempujo along with Curt and Emilio, and after the three bad showered and changed clothing, they had supper together. Collins was finishing his at a table by himself. He looked a good bit fresher than he had this morning. He'd shaved and it was clear he'd slept all day.

After supper Curt went to bis office, followed as usual by bis hody-guard.

Eight, nine, ten o'clock came, and still Curt applied bimself. There was plenty to be done, he might as well do it. Emilio looked in on him once, annoyed but making no comment. Curt merely looked up, then hack at his desk again.

Ten-thirty. Curt rolled up wbat prints be'd been using, stacked his papers. He came to the door of the drafting room, a stretching and yawning. In the middle of the stretcb he stiffened. Emilio looked up, instantly alert—almost suspicious. Curt's eyes, without having turned his bead, seemed to be piercing the darkness beyond the porch.

He banked on Emilio's drowsiness to keep him from realizing immediately that no one can aee into darkness from a lighted space. In a low voice, keeping his lips stiff, Curt said, "There's somebody out there, out behind those palms. Size and shape looks like—Collins, I'd say. Put out your light."

As be spoke be reacbed behind him inside the door of the drafting room and switched off the lights there. Emilio's reaction was to snap off the table lamp and move catlike to the door, reaching for his gun.

Then Curt struck. The butt of his own gun caught the native behind the ear. Emilio went down without a sound.

Curt hauled the unconscious man into the bedroom and shut the door. He closed the hinged bamboo shutters over his window, then turned on the light in the adjoining shower room and left that door open a crack.

There was no rope available, so he ripped a sheet into strips to hind the man's hands behind him, tie his feet, his legs. He soaked these strips in water so they couldn't possibly be worked loose. He fashioned a gag, pried open the teeth, secured it in place. Then he picked up the inert form and tossed it on the bed.

Before snapping off the bathroom light a glance at his wrist showed it was ten-forty. He'd better get the crew together. Jerry should be on this side by now, to meet Monahan upriver away from lights.

On Sunday nights Tempujo settled down earlier than on Saturdays. Already most of the residence lights were out, and only one end of the mess-hall showed activity. His eyes now adjusted to the dark, Curt could see through the screen door wbat looked like two trunks to the palm tree in the yard.

"Collins?" he called softly.

"Yo."

Curt picked up a camera and flash bulb be'd set apart earlier, then let himself out and down the short path.

For several minutes neither spoke, then as Curt was grumbling, "Wish they'd hurry, I'd like a smoke," Collins touched his arm and pointed in the dimness.

Curt grunted. "Yeh, that's them."

Two figures were making their way toward the bungalow, taking advantage of every patch of heavy darkness. The four men joined forces.

"Lee and the kids?" were Curt's first words.

"Okay," McInnis answered. "By luck, the San Timoteo's taking on Emilio went down without a sound.

fruit. They're aboard now. The Old Man's given orders to speed the loading and be ready to pull out at daylight with whatever load they have by then. He'll get back from Distribution," McInnis chuckled, "but I guess his shoulders are hroad enough."

Monahan stopped them at a cacbe be'd prepared earlier in the evening, and all four sbared the load—the big bundle of dynamite, the three cans of black powder, the fat coil of fuse.

Getting to the motorsbed and running a car outside the yard limits unseen proved easy. Once under way, Curt sketcbed a quick picture for McInnis of wbat they'd found last nigbt, what they were headed for.

McInnis grunted a couple of times, and at the end said, "Okay, wbat's the program?"

Curt went over it. At ona point Collins interrupted.

"We'll get there about midnight. Monahan's job is set for one. Not sure that'll be time enough for me. Got to study those fuse mechanisms. Chances are they'll be simple enougb, but I can't be sure."

"Okay, another half bour, think?" Collins considered. "We'll have to chance it," be said reluctantly, "can't take all nigbt. Anyway, these explosives will do the joh on the planes in case I can't set the bombs for explosion. Yes, make it one-thirty."

"Okay, got it," said Monahan.

"Another thing," Collins went on, "once you men get the dynamite planted you'll have to clear out. I'll finisb priming the bombs alone. Then if anything goes wrong we won't all grow halos. You'd be no usa to me anyway."

"Guess you're right," Curt growled. "Well, we can't all be heroes," and he mentally saluted the Navy man.

Midway across the flats he stopped the car to climh a pole and cut the two telephone lines—the dispatcher's line and the general offica link between San Alejo and Tempujo.

Nothing happened to impeda them. They reached the foot of the Quehradoa in good time, despite running without lights. There Monahan melted into the nigbt to grope his way up a trail.

A wide ditch circled the foot of the Quebradoa, a catch basin to carry off the torrential rains of the wet season as they flooded down the mountainsides. A wooden bridge carried the tracks across this channel. The three men quickly pushed the car through the airfield spur and mainline connecting tracks until it was beaded for the river again, and pushed it back across the bridge so it was clear for the run to Tempujo.

As Curt and McInnis were loading themselves gingerly with explosives—the dynamite and two cans of powder—Collins spoke up.

"It won't take all three of us to break in. I'll be planting this last can to knock out that hridge behind us. Have that much done."

"Good."

Curt cut a length of fuse for the joh, took the rest of the coil, and with McInnis got under way for the hidden hangars.

They reached the fence and Curt led the way cautiously to the spot where he'd broken through last night. He played his flash along the ground. Good. The leaves and debris scattered over the soft fill of the hole be'd used before was undisturbed.

"Yeh, but I don't like this, Curt. Looks too easy. I can't believe they don't keep some kind of watch. You would, I would, they're not dumber, are they? You could have got through last night by sheer luck."

"I know. It's been in my mind, too. But there's nothing we can do about it except keep alert."

McInnis' words were prophecy. It was as they were hauling at the strip of corrugated sheathing—a noisy job itself!—that they heard the running feet. So there was a patrol maintained! The two men jumped away from the wall and fell flat in tha dry grass. The feet pounded around the end of the building, a flash played back and forth and picked out the bole in the fence, the sprung sheet.

"Was ist das? Antworten sie!"

The man ran to the fence, then to the break in the hangar wall. The sheet had not heen ripped sufficiently to admit a person, so the man turned from the building and played his light about the space between it and the fence.

The two Americans couldn't possibly avoid detection long. Curt made a cautious move for his gun and the rustle of the dry grass gave him away. The guard shot wildly in that direction and doused his flash.

Curt and McInnis rolled apart instantly, hut neither used his gun in the blackness for the flash would give away his position. The guard, too, after the first wild shot, held his fire. But bis movements showed he was edging toward the fence.

"Alarm wire!" shouted Curt. "Along the fence-top! He's trying to reach it!"

The guard lunged for the fence, hut there came a shot from beyond it, from the other side. Collins! A quick stab from Collins' flashlight showed the German close to the fence, his arm outstretched, the man ready to spring. Another shot, and the man went down.

"Finished my joh at the tracks," Collins called anxiously, "and heard this guy as I neared the fence. Then the shot. Are you okay?"

"Yes," cried Curt. "There's a bole in the fence, Collins. Get busy, you guys. I'll see if the shots carried."

He raced around the end of the building and to the front. He had a clear view to the other end of the field. A few night lights showed, as they had last night. Under one of these, the one outside the clubroom, two figures stood like statues. Men listening. Presently they seemed to relax. They moved out of the light, not fast as though alarmed, and the clubroom lights snapped on. Curt relaxed, too. The shots had been behind the buildings here, the sounds wouldn't have carried sharply to the other end—he boped. He returned to the others.

Collins and McInnis had forced entrance to the bangar. All three had flashlights tonight, and Curt found McInnis taking a quick look-see for himself. Collins was at the bomh room door, forcing the lock. Curt and McInnis joined bim.

Inside the long partition they spent a moment studying the layout. The cylindrical casings were pointed at the bulkhead, which was constructed of thick planks. When assembled, there'd be a space of about two feet between the noses of tha bombs and the beavy wall.

"Okay, men, it'll work," Collins said. "Get busy on your joha, I'll bandle mine."

The room was wired with lights. Since no heam could escape outside, Collins snapped the switch and immediately got to work on a study of the first tail fuse at hand.

"Huh," he said dismally, "they're the arming vane type. Well, guess I can revolve them by hand. Nose piece, I understand that well enough. Pull the pin and they're set for impact."

These bombs were designed for loading on planes, assembled, but not set for explosion. On release from t' plane, the arming pin of the nose fuse would have to be pulled, to free the mechanical restraint that prevents the fuse from firing the detonator. In the case of tha tall fuse, bowever, that "brake" would be released automatically by the revolution of the arming vana as the bomb fell through tha air.

DEVELOPING MORALE

A successful furniture manufacturer, after having lost, through an unfortunate investment, his factory and plant, gave up in despair. Later on he was able to start a little factory employing a half-dozen men.

Dr. Barton

A hrilliant surgeon lost bis nerve or morala due to various infections. Despite the removal of these infections be still felt unequal to resuming his work. Visiting his farmer brother, chance gave him the opportunity to "build" a complete wagon for the brother, build a sun parlor for his own city home, and enabled him to visit the hospital to "watch" an operation. During the operation, the operating surgeon received a wire from a country doctor to go immediately to a critical case. He asked our surgeon friend to carry on the operation. The surgeon did so, did a few operations and finally opened an office in a large "professional" building because he had regained his nerve, his morale. Regaining nerve or morale in both of these cases was dua to "getting busy," "doing something," not just sitting and worrying.

A timely editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association speaks of an excellent project launched by the New York Academy of Medicine. Its object is the development of morale among the people of the United States by means of radio talks.

That these talks, arranged by experts in public health and psychiatry (mental ailments) will prove helpful in building morale can be seen as we read the program:

1. Mental casualties result not so much from threat of bodily harm as from disruption (disturbance) of the normal living.

2. The best antidote to panic is to engage the energies of people in some useful community work.

3. Those with anxieties can find relief from these anxieties in social activities.

4. Children tend to reflect the anxieties of their parents. Parents, knowing this, will protect their children.

5. To children under six, home is the emotional center, while to children under 11, school is the emotional pivot.

6. Food and warmth are all important in sustaining morale.

Sulfathiazole For Flu Cases

During the flu epidemic of 1918-19, there were many cases of sinus infection and also tonsillitis, followed by infection of the middle ear—otitis media. In many of these cases the infection extended right into the spongy mastoid bone behind the ear. When the symptoms were severe it was necessary to operate and remove a portion of this bone so that the infection could drain out through the opening. During the height of the epidemic the military hospital with which I was connected was averaging about one mastoid operation daily.

That flu itself and its complications—tonsillitis and otitis media—may be controlled more readily now, thus avoiding mastoid operation can be expected from the use of sulfathiazole.

Dr. K. Sigg, Basel, in the Swiss Medical Journal, reports his results from sulfathiazole in 28 cases of influenza, 8 cases of tonsillitis, and 12 cases of otitis media.

In the influenza cases the temperature was reduced to normal in 48 hours. This rapid reduction in temperature was very evident in those who had fever for some time before the sulfathiazole was given.

In tonsillitis and otitis media, not only did the temperature drop rapidly but the coating on the tonsils and the redness of the ear drum also disappeared. The temperature dropped in 30 to 48 hours, and the coating on tonsils disappeared in two to three days which meant that the patient felt better even before the coating on tonsils disappeared.

In otitis media the fever disappeared in 24 to 36 hours after the sulfathiazole was given.

Dr. Sigg advises large doses of sulfathiazole at the beginning which can be repeated the second day if temperature is not reduced. The dose can be smaller for children.

QUESTION BOX

In a recent article you mentior the fact that formaldehyda is usec in the treatment of perspiring feet. Will you kindly publish directions for the use of formaldehyde?

A.—Wash and dry feet thoroughly then paint soles of feet and in between toes with equal parts of a 25 per cent (commercial) formaldehyde and distilled water, four nights in succession. This usually lasts for four to six months when it can be done again.

STEPS TOWARD SOLUTION OF THE ALCOHOL PROBLEM

LESSON TEXT—Ecclesiastes 10:17; Amos 6:21-24; Romans 14:19-21; II Corinthians 6:17; I Peter 4:1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT—Let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream.—Amos 5:24.

Let's do something about it! That is the right word regarding tha liquor problem now. The time is past for theorizing or deploring—we need action. The liquor interests have redoubled their efforts of late because they fear the aroused public opinion of decent Americans. Why do not America's 65,000,000 church members say the word now, and curb this awful thing which is threatening to destroy us?

I. Right-Minded Rulers (Eccles. 10:17).

National leaders should set the example for the people—an example of sobriety, of clear-headed thought and full devotion to the cause of our country. Are they doing it? We quote: "Washington is the wettest spot in the nation. The per capita consumption of alcohol in the District of Columhia is almost twice that of the wettest state in the Union. In 1940, 4.26 gallons were consumed for every man, woman and child. Nevada, the wettest of all our states, consumed 2.65 gallons per person. There at Washington where they need the clearest heads, the steadiest nerves, and the bigbest morals, they are drinking the most booze" (Dr. I. M. Hargett). What about 1942? Those who have been able to observe, indicate that conditions are probably worse now!

The secretary of war and the secretary of the navy have insisted on the desirability of the sale of beer in service canteens. No wonder the Brewers' Digest of May, 1941, gloated: "One of the finest things that could have happened was the insistence by higb ranking officers to make beer available in army camps . . . Here is a chance for the brewers to cultivate a taste for beer in millions of young men."

America had better wake up!

II. Right-Spirited People (Amos 5:21-24).

God has no pleasure in the religious observances and the pious words of a people who profess to worship, but who come with unrepentant hearts and unclean hands.

Can God hless the man (or his money) who profits either directly or indirectly from the sale of intoxicants? Amos bas the answer. Let us heed his plea that righteousness should run through our national, as well as our personal lives, "as a mighty stream."

III. Right - Living Christians (Rom. 14:19-21; II Cor. 6:17; I Pet. 4:1-5).

We bave already suggested that there are 65,000,000 churcb members in America. If they were all right-living Christians there can he little question that they would long since have eliminated the liquor business, for it is certainly most unchristian. Apparently they are either not real Christians, or they are asleep to their responsibility. Our Scriptures in this section tell us that in a true Christian life there is

1. No offense (Rom. 14:19-21). The question bere is that of eating meat offered to idols, wbich does not concern us; but the great Christian principle here stated is of the highest importance and hears directly on our daily life.

None of us lives to himself (Rom. 14:7). Everything we do counts either for or against Christ. Such an ordinary (we regret) thing as staying away from church service speaks to the world and especially to our neighbors of our loss of interest and respect for the worship of God. Apply that principle to the use of any alcobolic beverage, and every Christian must he a total abstainer.

2. No Compromise (II. Cor. 6:17). We bave come to the unscriptural and deeply dangerous viewpoint that if a Christian wants to compromise a bit with the world, the flesh and the devil, that's his "business." God does not think se. He says: "Come out from among them, and be ye separate." The weakness of the church on this matter of liquor is that too many of the 65,000,000 are guilty of the sin (and that's what it is!) of compromise.

3. No Worldliness (I Pet. 4:1-5). Here again the assumption of many is that there are two groups in the church—worldly Christians and spiritually minded ones, and that each is as good as the other. Both classes are there, no doubt about that, but God never has and never will countenance worldliness on the part of His people.

Essentially, there are just two opposing principles in this world—self-will and God's will. We are either controlled by the flesh or by the Spirit of God. Peter makes it clear that tha one who claims to belong to Christ should no longer be controlled by self-will, but by God's will. Are we ready, fellow Christians, to yield to Him?

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Before rubber allocation programs, over large rubber companies manufacturing company made close to 25,000 separate rubber items. The weights of these items ran from fractions of an ounce to hundreds of pounds.

Supported by old inner tubes that have been blessed, natives of Benares, India, step in the waters of the Holy Ganges River for weeks at a stretch.

Rubber shortage was no worry when the first roads were constructed in the Empire of Assyria and Babylon in 1900 B.C. or when the Romans built their military roads in 302-292 B.C.

In 1941 80% of the rubber consumed in the U. S. came from lands that are now in the hands of the enemy or cut off from U. S. ships.

Two-thirds of all the natural rubber in the U. S. is in the tires and tubes on American cars.

MOUSE TALK

"Were you wearing a new pair of shoes last night?"

"No, that was me squeaking."

Cost of Living

"The cost of living is becoming intolerable."

"You may well say so. I can no longer save enough out of my household expense money to pay my bridge debts."

Legacy

Wife—Not so fast, Dick, you're frightening your poor old aunt to death in the back seat.

Hubby — Calm yourself, dear, there's a handsome legacy coming to me when she's gone.

Not Much

The amateur actors were rehearsing.

Mrs. Jones was required to kiss Mr. Smith, and as they arrived at that particular incident Mrs. Smith appeared.

"Oh," exclaimed Mrs. Jones, "I hope, dear, that you don't mind my kissing your husband like this?"

"Not at all, darling," was the icy reply. "I don't mind in the least—if he doesn't."

Profession

"Why do you wear your hair so long?"

"Well, I'm in training for our varsity eleven and, if I don't make it, I'm going to write poetry for the college paper."

Close Quarters

"Jones must live in a very small flat."

"How can you tell?"

"Why, haven't you noticed that his dog wags his tail up and down instead of sideways?"

LEARNING

"I knew that man when he didn't have a dollar he could call his own."

"Yes. He has gotten more nerve about calling things his own than he used to have."

Misspelled

The engineering student was stumped in the examination by a question concerning the bridging of a river which ran over a rocky bed.

Finally in disgust he wrote: "Damn the river and blast the bed."

He got full credit with one point deducted for bad spelling.

Vulnerable

"I hear Jane married beneath her."

"Yes; her husband plays a wretched game of bridge."

By GRANTLAND RICE

CONNIE MACK was talking about the Cardinals. "They take me back a long way," he said, and Connie can go back a longer way than any in baseball. At the age of 80 there is much to remember.

"I'll tell you what I mean," Connie said. "During the series I noticed them all hanging around the front of their hotel, looking at the sights. No motion pictures—no nightclubs — just a bunch of young fellows sticking together as we used to do a long time ago.

Connie Mack

"In the same way they take me back to the days of defensive baseball. They only ask a run or two, as a rule and then they're hard to handle. This means high class pitching and fine fielding. They are fast and aggressive on defense. They actually turn a defense into an offense. Baseball has been ruled by pluggers for many years. The Cardinals turned back the clock in the games I saw them play."

There isn't any question but that the Cardinals finished the season with one of the best pitching staffs in baseball history.

This list includes Mort Cooper, Ernie White, Pollet, Beazley and Max Lanier.

Starting Pitchers

I can't recall a team with so many good starting pitchers.

White and Pollet were afflicted with sore arms most of the season. If they had been in shape all year there is no telling how many games the Cardinals might have won. They might even have passed the old 1906 Cub mark of 116 wins. They had all these men ready for the main series—especially White who needed a shutout to win. Only brilliant pitching could have stopped Spud Chandler in that third game.

To allow one clean hit in eight innings is a working job that deserved something better than defeat.

One of the outstanding stars in this past series was Bill Dickey. This is Bill's 15th season with the Yankees. He has been suffering from a heavy cold, with a touch of allergic nose poisoning from rug carpets or anything that has a fuzz. He has been physically low. Yet he caught brilliantly and after the first three games was hitting around .445.

Bill Dickey didn't need this series to prove his place. He has caught more than 30 Yankee World Series games, and has never shown a flaw in all that time.

The Irrepressible

Old Irrepressible, better known as Ole Diz, is still one of the most colorful parties concerned with baseball.

In the years I've known him Dizzy Dean hasn't changed a leopard's spot. He never will.

Except for a tough break, an injury to his shoulder, he might have been one of the all-time greats.

I've never heard Dean complain about this tough luck. Nothing that can happen ever will wipe that quick grin off his face. And there is no mental expert who can make him quite sane.

Looking Back

Ole Diz is still around broadcasting and advising the players. Here are some of his forgotten classics:

1. The day in St. Louis with the thermometer at 108 when Diz, sitting on the Cardinal bench, built a fire and wrapped a big blanket around his shoulders.

2. The day in Florida when I went fishing with him and he overstayed his time six hours.

"What will Frank Frisch do about this?" I asked him.

"Ole Frank can't do nothing," Dizzy said, "except bail me out and fine me $200. What's $200?"

3. The day he walked into the Tiger ball park in 1934 before the World Series—wearing, among other details, a gray felt hat and a blue overcoat, he grabbed the bat from Mickey Cochrane's hands and hit one on the line—much to Mickey's astonishment.

"That's the way we do it," Dizzy said as he walked away.

4. Warming up before the Tiger game that year someone told Dizzy the odds were 2 to 1 on the Cardinals when he was pitching.

"Them gamblers," he said, "are pretty smart people. They don't miss no sure thing."

5. The day he was warming up, as a Cub, to face the Yankees.

"How do you feel, Diz?" I asked.

"Well," he said, warming up a sore arm, "I ain't what I used to be. But who in hell is?"

Mort Cooper, as a pitcher, is the closest approach to Dean that the Cardinals ever have known. Mort hasn't Dean's color, but as Ole Diz almost said: "Who has?"

Cooper is a big, powerful fellow who only came along this season as one of the best in the game. He still has to prove he is another Dizzy Dean.

'Versailles of the Plains'

THIS month marks the 75th anniversary of the "Versailles of the Plains"—the famous Medicine Lodge peace council of 1867. Not only did it bring together a galaxy of frontier notables, both red men and white, but it was attended by a greater number of journalists than ever before assembled for such an event. Some were destined for future fame and among these was:

MILTON W. REYNOLDS

Few of the correspondents who covered the Medicine Lodge council had more varied careers, either before or after that event, than did Milton W. Reynolds. He had the distinction of being an editor in five different states and of being elected to the legislature in three!

A native of Elmira, N. Y., where he was born May 23, 1833, Reynolds was taken as a child to Michigan where he attended Albion college and the University of Michigan, receiving two degrees from the latter institution. In 1857 he went west to become the editor of the Nebraska City (Neb.) News. The next year he was elected to the territorial legislature and was re-elected in 1861.

At the end of his term in the legislature, Reynolds returned to Michigan where he became commercial editor of the Detroit Free Press but three years later he heard again the call of the West and moved to Lawrence, Kan., to serve as editor of the Daily Democrat there. In 1865 he was named secretary of a federal commission appointed to make a treaty with the Indian tribes who had cast their lot with the Confederacy. At the council held at Fort Smith, Ark., Reynolds also acted as correspondent for the New York Tribune and other papers.

By the time plans were made for the council at Medicine Lodge in 1867, Reynolds was so well known as a "Western correspondent" that he was engaged to cover it not only for the New York Tribune but for the New York World and the Chicago Times as well. During this council occurred an incident which resulted in his adopting the nom de plume which he made famous.

Black Kettle, noted chief of the Cheyennes, became offended at Reynolds and threatened to tomahawk him. But Kicking Bird, one of the leading chiefs of the Kiowas, intervened and saved his life. The Kiowa chief and the "Paper Chief," as Kicking Bird called Reynolds, became fast friends and as a symbol of their friendship Reynolds adopted the Indian's name. Thereafter he signed all his newspaper correspondence "Kicking Bird."

Kicking Bird

Reynolds' next move was to Kansas where he established the Parsons Sun in 1871 and in 1876 he was elected to the Kansas legislature. In 1880 he joined the staff of the Kansas City (Mo.) Times and while there became active in the Oklahoma Boomer movement. He was among those who made the famous "run" on April 22, 1889, when Oklahoma was opened to settlement. Here he founded two newspapers—the Guthrie Herald and the Edmond Sun and again he was honored with public office. He was elected to the first territorial legislature but died on August 2, 1890, before he could serve in that body.

In later years Reynolds, in writing about the Medicine Lodge treaty, said: "We, that is, the commission, gave away empires to the Indians; anything they wanted in the way of lands and hunting grounds in the Indian Territory; anything to get them out of the state of Kansas." It is somewhat ironical that a few years later Reynolds, as a leader in the movement to have Oklahoma opened to white settlement, was instrumental in depriving these same Indians of what, according to the terms of the Medicine Lodge treaty, was to be their "home forever."

Use Native Material For Farm Structures

Building Substitutes Found Satisfactory

Although building construction is limited by government order to conserve materials for the armed forces, some agricultural construction is necessary and can be realized through the use of native and local materials which are not critical.

Among the materials recommended for use in farm construction in these times are concrete, concrete blocks, field stones, brick and tile. Unskilled labor can do a fair job with these materials. Poultry houses, machine storages, granaries, dairy barns, milk houses—in fact, practically all buildings normally constructed of wood can be built of these materials with assurance of excellent results. Electric and water supply facilities can be added after the war.

Wood stanchions and partitions will substitute for steel. Roll roofing provides an inexpensive and temporary covering which serves as a base for other types, excepting steel which should not be placed in contact with a tar or asphalt surface because of corrosion. Home-sawed lumber can be used in place of costly West coast supplies.

As important use for heavy hemp ropes is shown in this scene on the Harper Carroll farm near Ellicott City, Md.

Violation of the building conservation order, designated as Order L-41, which limits building to $1,000 for farm construction and $500 for house repairs, may result in being prohibited further deliveries or use of material under priority control.

For details about this order and how it applies in your case, contact your county agricultural war board. Your county agricultural agent is the secretary.

Maple Products

Nearly one-third of the annual yield of maple syrup in the United States, is puffed in cigarette and pipe tobacco. Manufacturers have discovered that by holding moisture, it gives proper burning qualities to tobacco. Syrup grades that are not up to fixed color standards are used for flavoring chewing tobacco.

The sugar belt runs from Maine to Minnesota, from Canada south to Maryland west to Arkansas and nearly every farmer raises sugar for home use. Vermont tops the nation in the amount of maple products, and has earned the reputation for producing the best.

It is no secret that a large amount of syrup from elsewhere is shipped into Vermont and processed and sold under Vermont labels.

The eastern states produce nearly all the maple products sold commercially. Some sugar groves are 150 years old and are still paying taxes on farms for the grandchildren of the men who planted them. Sugar trees do not reach top form until they have lived 50 years.

Old time open kettle methods were used in sugar making until 1875, when modern machinery appeared and the picturesque quality of the business disappeared. Now there are sterilizing hydrometers, evaporators and streamlined sugaring-off pans. In some camps where the contour of the land is right, an elaborate pipeline system collects sap and conveys it, by gravity, to the sugar house.

Hens Have High Body Heat

Hens have a body temperature of about 106 degrees F. The heat given off by the body of the hen is quickly lost with a few birds in a large house, or with any number of birds in a cold house. But if the house is tight and properly constructed otherwise, and if the house is filled to capacity, the body heat will many times keep it warm enough to make the birds comfortable, increase egg production, and reduce the danger of diseases.

MALCOLM SIMPSON HOME ON FURLOUGH

Malcolm Simpson, former editor of the Advertiser, who is now stationed at Great Lakes, arrived home Tuesday evening for a brief furlough. His many friends were pleased to see him looking so well in his suit of "blue."

HAPPY HELPERS ARE ENTERTAINED

Mr. and Mrs. E. Bruce Wallace delightfully entertained the Happy Helpers Class of the Methodist Church School at their farm on the Stephenson Mill Road on Tuesday evening. The affair was in the form a masquerade party and all came dressed for the occasion.

Mr. Reamy Simpson's large truck conveyed the party to their destination where, after a lengthy parade for all to get acquainted with their strange friends, one at a time they revealed their true identity. Great was the surprise of some and much laughter was enjoyed. Miss Emma Jane Miller was chosen for the best character representation as "Grandma" and Miss Rebecca Sleet for concealed identity, no one knowing who she was until she unmasked. After a long period of games and stunts, fitting to the season, refreshments were served, consisting of sandwiches, pickles, doughnuts and coffee. Before the party broke up, Mr. Wallace lead the group on a tour of his farm buildings and equipment, including demonstrations of his electrical machinery, which was of especial interest.

After sincere thanks and much praise they departed for their homes, happy but weary. Those enjoying this occasion were: Rev. D. E. Bedinger, teacher of the class; Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearing, Ruth and Louise Dearing, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Carlisle, Guy Olen Carlisle, Mary Belle Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Pruett, Beverly, Jim and Tom Pruett, Mr. and Mrs. Clay Myers, Marie and Donnie Myers, Geraldine Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Sam J. Hudson, Mrs. Mary Stephenson and Joe, Mrs. Faye Conner and Jack, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Glenn, Mr. Wm. Roberts, Dr. and Mrs. F. E. Bedinger, Mr. Harrison Robinson, Miss Emma Jane Miller, Miss Rebecca Sleet and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace.

There is a reaper whose name is Death, and with his sickle keen, he reaps the bearded grain at a breath, and the flowers that grow between. Very unexpectedly did the reaper visit the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gill, of Morning View, on the 26th day of September, 1942, following an appendectomy, he claimed as his own their little daughter Esther Lucille, age 10 years.

The death angel is never a welcome guest, but whenever he comes in the very morning of life when hopes seem high and life sems like one glad sweet song.

It was indeed a most sad disappointment, but may her loved ones courageously bear the bitter pangs of her pareting, and that she may love the joys of Heaven.

On Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 the Morning View Church was filled with sorrowing relatives and friends as a most comforting mesasge was brought by the Rev. Widwell, of Florence. Following services, interment was in Flour Creek cemetery.

Blosoms of the rarest beautiful flowers adorned the little casket.

In this trying hour may the great Comforter soothe and sustain the bereaved ones left here.

TOTAL OF 722,795 POUNDS REPORED BY SALVAGE COMMITEE SATURDAY

Last Saturday the Salvage Committee reported a total of 722,795 pounds of scrap collected since the start of the State Newspaper Drive. They are very hopeful of obtaining the county total of over a million pounds before November 2nd. The Walton school has weighed up over 102,000 pounds and the graded school at Belleview has a thousand pounds of scrap per pupil. No better records have been noted anywhere in the state.

Don't forget the scrap matinee.

WILL CARRY NO SHACKLES

I am glad that I am an Independent, because I know now that as such I will carry no organization obligations or shackles, and like Norriss, LaFollette and other Indepedents, I shall be able to support the people and win the support of men in both parties who put statesmanship ahead of politics.

For ten years I have fought for the preservation of our free farm and business system, believeing that of such was the foundation of a Christian Democracy that protected the home, the church and the school above all else, and if elected I shall continue this fight with growing vigor.

KENTON COUNTY FARM NEWS

Kenton poultry producers study their production problems at annual poultry school at Independence.

Feeding and management of laying flocks this fall and winter.

In discussing the above subject at the poultry school Mr. J. E. Humphrey pointed out that this is the time for poultrymen to cull out the unhealthy, and late developing pullets. Avoid crowding.

Leghorn breeds should have 3½ square feet per bird in the laying house and the heavy breeds should have 4 square ft. per bird.

See that the hens have plenty of water, plenty of hopper space

Laying pullets and late maturing undeveloped pullets should not be put into the same house.

Egg grading and marketing was demonstrated by Ray Wiseman, supervisor of grading service for Ohio Department of Agriculture. He showed how the egg begins to age as soon as it is laid and it is vitally important to get the animal heat from the egg as soon as possible and to keep it at a cool temperature to keep it from spoiling. He showed four United States Standards for eggs and pointed out that "only a cool egg stays fresh" and, is a good market egg.

Poultrymen who use oil for brooding equipment should find out if they can get oil for brooding baby chicks in the spring, if not they will have to rely on other forms of heat.

A call to the farmers and poultrymen of the country to help the meat shortage by raising extra chickens this fall and winter has been issued by Secretary of Agriculture, Claude Wickard.

It is pointed out that where chicks are grown in confinement during the winter months for meat, the best known husbandry methods should be practiced to keep down disease.

Officers for the County Poultry Asociation for 1943, are Fred J. Lowe, Chairman, Robert R. Scott, vice chairman, and Dawson McDannold, secretary.

STAFFORDSBURG—

Mrs. W. E. Hannah had as her week-end guest, Mrs. Alice Ervin, of Covington.

Miss Emma Yates had with her at S. S. Miss Bennett, of Erlanger.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Keeney and son Don returned Mrs. Tina Hetzel to her home in Grantslick after a few weeks' visit.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Solomons Battle Cost Mounts Steadily; WPB Cuts 1943 Farm Machine Output But Provides Adequate Parts Supply; Winter Helps Russ Defenders of Volga

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

With a picturesque South Sea island landscape as a backdrop, U. S. marines are shown taking bombs from a "bomb garden" concealed in the palm trees of Guadalcanal island. As operational flights against Jap ships, land forces and air bases in the Solomon islands have been stepped up, U. S. air forces have been increasingly employed.

FARM IMPLEMENTS:
20 Per Cent Slash

Farmers would not have new tractors or new plows to hitch them to in 1943, but they would have plenty of repair parts to keep their present machinery operating.

That was clear when the War Production board issued its drastic order slashing the production of 1943 farm equipment to 20 per cent of the 1940 total, but permitting repair parts production to be 130 per cent of 1940 operations.

Forecasting industrial readjustments in other fields, the WPB order concentrated the new farm equipment output in the hands of small manufacturers in labor-shortage areas.

Repair parts manufacture was left to the big producers. This decision represented a victory for these companies which had held out for retention in their own plants of all the repair parts production, thus preserving the identity of their specialized, trade-name implements. It likewise represented a concession to the department of agriculture which had strenuously urged a heavy program for repair parts manufacture, while it opposed any new machinery out below 50 per cent of the 1940 output.

RUSSIAN FRONT:
Ally Winter Comes

Winter was one ally that could give the hard-pressed Russians immediate help. For days past the engagements surging around Stalingrad in the northeast and Mozdok farther south in the Caucasus had been a race against time. Thus when snow swept across tha Don-Volga steppes the Russians knew their reinforcements had arrived.

Significant was the German high command's communique that the Nazi drive in the Caucasus had been impaired by continued bad weather, and that the Russians had undertaken strong, tank-led diversion attacks against the north flank of the Nazi thrust into Stalingrad.

The strength of Marshal Timoshenko's relief assault from the north was indicated in the communique which said the Russian onslaughts had been undertaken with "fresh, strong infantry and tank forces."

SUBMARINE MENACE:
'Will Get Worse'

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the U. S. Maritime commission, warned the nation that "the submarine menace is going to be progressively worse this winter."

Speaking before the Investment Bankers association, he said the menace would grow, because of winter's bad weather and longer nights, giving U-boats better opportunity for concealment.

SOLOMONS:
Battle Cost Mounts

Guadalcanal with tha only good airfield within hundreds of miles controls the southern Solomons, plus a sizeable area in tha South Pacific. Whoever holds and uses that airfield rules that area.

The efforts of the Japs to regain the Guadalcanal airfield from its American defenders thus had strategic implications affecting the entire southwest Pacific. If the Americans held, they could protect Allied supply lines, keep the Japs checkmated and prepara to expand their offensivs.

The cost of the battle was high to both aides. As planes, ships and land forces jockeyed for favorable position, the United States reported the loss of two destroyers, the O'Brien and the Meredith. American planes retaliated by damaging a Jap cruiser and a destroyer and shooting down 12 enemy planes.

Meanwhile, west of the Solomons, Allied hombers blasted enemy ships in New Britain's harbor of Rsbsul.

LABOR DRAFT:
62,500,000 Needed

Drafting of men and women for war work to meet the employment-armed service demand of 62,500,000 persons is "inevitable," Paul V. McNutt, war manpower director, declared in testifying before the senate military affairs committee.

McNutt listed three essentials which forthcoming manpower legislations must embrace: (1) Employers in any area must be required to hire all workers through a central bureau; (2) Methods of labor utilization must be controlled to prevent employers from "hoarding workars"; (3) Individuals must remain on the job, or transfer to one more important to the war effort.

FEDERAL TAXES:
43,000,000 Will Pay

More than 43,000,000 Americans becama subject to direct federal taxation when President Roosevelt signed the new war-time tax bill which congress has spent 10 months in compiling.

Designed to produce revenues of close to 25 billion dollars yearly, the new law extended the tax load to all American making more than $624 a year. Through the President's prompt action in signing the bill, 65 million dollars worth of higher excise taxes from liquor, travel, telephone service, cigarettes, telegrams and other items went into effect November 1.

Payable next March 15 are record-breaking normal and surtax levies on 1942 individual and corporation income.

A special 5 per cent Victory tax on all income in excess of $12 a week will be deducted from pay envelopes after January 1.

FRANCE:
'Hour for Revolt'

French workers seething at the Vichy government's attempts to draft labor for work in German war factories, heard three voices counselling action.

The first was the voice of Pierra Laval, who appealed for skilled French workers to co-operate with the Nazis so that "France won't be the victim of a German victory."

The second was the voice of Gen. Charles De Gaulle, fighting French leader, who declared that "the hour for revolt has come." Previously De Gaulle had urged French patriots to refrain from overt acts against German rule and to bide their time until the Allies invade the continent.

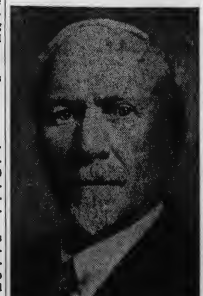
Third voice was that of American Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who said it was "gratifying to see signs cropping out increasingly through France that the people are awakening to the conditions which Laval is attempting to impose on them."

Meanwhile as Hitler had extended the time for Laval to deliver the workers, strikes and wholessle abandonment of jobs were reported by workers who hid out to avoid being sent to Germany.

FORTS VS. MUSTANGS:
Prove U. S. Air Power

Axis air commands learned long ago to respect U. S. army Flying Fortresses because of their uncanny ability to bomb strategic points at high altitude. More recently did tha Axis learn to fear American-built Mustang fighter planes.

Both these aircraft scored spectacular success in a single day when Flying Fortresses struck a knockout blow at the German submarine base at Lorient, on the coast of France, while Mustang planes made history by flying all the way to Germany to blast the Dortmund-Ems canal area.



The destructive results of the Lorient raid were reported by Vichy dispatches which reported 100 killed and 450 wounded and untold material dsmage. Lorient is Germany's chief Atlantic U-boat base. Here huge concrete shelters had provided a haven for raiders of Allied shipping.

The Mustangs performed a feat no British-based single-motored fighter planes have been able to achieve, by penetrating into Germany proper.

SMUTS:
Predicts Nazi Doom

Silvery-pated Jan C. Smuts, prims minister of South Africa, who helped plunge Kaiser Wilhelm's Germany into the tailspin of defeat in World War I, predicted a similar doom for Hitler's Nazi regime in World War II.

Sole surviving member of the war cabinet of tha last conflict still in high office, ths venerable Smuts told the housa of commons in London that "the stage is set for the last, tha offensiva phase of the war for the United Nations."

GEN. JAN SMUTS
". . . fully to overprepare."

The German army is "bleeding to death in Soviet Russia," ha declared. "Russia," he added, "is bearing more than her share of the common burden. Whatever help in whatever form we can give to Russia to sustain her in her colossal effort should be given in fullest measure and with utmost speed."

Once the time has come to take the offensive and strike while the iron is hot, "it would be folly to delay and overprepare and perhaps miss our opportunity," he concluded. Smuts predicted the war might continue two more years.

EVICTIONS:
Curbed by OPA

Cracking down on landlords attempting to evade rent control, Price Administrator Leon Henderson ordered that no tenant in a rent control area could be evicted except under special circumstances, without three months' notice.

Mr. Henderson explained that some landlords attempting to evada rent control had forced tenants to buy the house or had sold it to someone else willing to pay monthly installments in excess of the legal rent.

"Some of the sales," ha said, "have been nothing short of outrageous. Drastic action was necessary in order to maintain the morals of workers in war industry and protect the families of members of the armed forces who pay rent from the threat of ovarnight aviction for the war's duration."

OFFICIALS GO TO SCHOOL

All over Washington, grown men ara going to school again. Mora than 500 officials of a dozen different departments are doing "home work"—learning vocabularies, drawing maps, and studying charts. It's tha latest phase of the Good Neighbor policy. The government is teaching itself to know Latin-America.

With funds from the Rockefeller office, a school has been set up, known as the Inter-American Training center. Dr. Henry Grattan Doyle took a year's leave from Georgs Washington university to run it.

When Morris Cooke was saked to head an economic mission to Brazil, his experts attended Doyle's school before flying down to Rio.

Tha treasury department has 28 lawyars dealing with Latin America. All are boning up with Dean Doyla and his faculty.

Luncheon conferences are held all over town to discuss Latin America—usually in Spanish. Doyle provides a Latin expert for each luncheon.

WAR DULLS POLITICAL AXE

The fact that Economic Stabilizer Jimmy Byrnes is not letting politics creep into his job is evidenced by the appointment of bald, mustachioed Ralph E. Flanders, as one of tha two management reprasentatives on his advisory board. For Flanders, who is president of the Jones and Lamson Machine company of Springfield, Vt., has been one of the President's severest critics.

In fact if he could get his hands on a certain letter he wrote during the 1936 campaign, undoubtedly he would lose no time burning it up.

The letter was sent to Joseph Leib of South Bend, Ind., founder (in 1930) of ths first Roosevelt-for-President club. Leib had written Flanders asking if he thought business would receive the "breathing spell" promised by tha President during the campaign.

The Vermont manufacturer replied, August 25, 1936, that it was "increasingly difficult" to support New Deal policies, chiefly becsuse of tha tax bill of that year, which, he said, "makes it practically impossiha either to pay dividends or to lay aside reserves to meet future conditions of unemployment.

"I can only conclude," Flanders added, "that there is no such thing as a 'breathing spell' so long as Mr. Roosevelt is President."

Early in 1941 Flanders was appointed to a key job in the Machine and Tools group of the OPM priorities division. His company also has received several substantial contracts from the government. Taxes are a lot higher than in 1936, however, and there will be no breathing-spell for profits.

But when Leib again wrote Flanders asking if he still held to tha views expressed in tha 1936 letter, Flanders replied:

"Since we are now at war, much of the misunderstanding of tha peacetime situation no longer holds."

SYNTHETIC CHRISTMAS

This December 25—ona year after Pearl Harbor—will be a wooden Christmas with a synthetic Santa Claus. The spirit will be the same, but tha form will be different.

Skates, scooters, sleds, electric trains, rubber balls—these will be scarce everywhere if not absent entirely. Only the stores which placed their orders early last January will have the usual toys, and these probably will be sold out by Thanksgiving.

Experts of tha commerce department have made a survey of the toy situstion. They find that three types will be especially short—rubber toys, wheel toys, and metal goods.

A WPB order stopped production of children's bicycles last April. Velocipeds, scooters, baby carriages, "flexies"—all will be short. Clearly it will not be a rolling Christmas.

Makers of electric trains are 90 per cent converted to making materials of war. There may be 50 per cent of the normal train supply this year, but they are disappearing fast. Ice skates and roller skates ara almost unobtainable, and lead soldiers are practically extinct.

Meanwhile, warlike toys are appearing everywhere — toy bombsights, tanks, bombing planes, and even bomb-banks for the dimes and nickels instead of the old piggy bank.

In all this there is one consolation—for the girls. The war has not disturbed tha production of dolls, except for thosa made of rubber.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Uncensored reports from the Solomon islands, when finally published, will show that the U. S. marines fought with even greater heroism than we realize. It will be one of tha great epics in American naval history. The marines at Solomon islands were relatively unseasoned—only about eight months. The man who deserves chief credit for seasoning them is efficient Dan Barbey, U. S. navy, who supervised their training as a task force at Solomon Island, Maryland.

Axis Nations Face to Face With Strong U. S. Air Power

America's Theoretical Aerial Strength Translated Into Actuality; Japanese Revise Three Major Campaigns.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

As this is written Washington is discussing a pitched battle in the Solomons and the beginning of a sharp rise in American air activity over Europe. Exciting stories are coming in from all quarters of the globe about the achievements of our pilots and our planes but few civilians realize the significance of these separate exploits. The enemy does. And in the opinion of air force officials in Washington the Axis partners have at last been brought face to face with the fact that America is in the war, that the theoretical striking power of the United States has been translated into a practical impact of American strength which is now being felt on every front.

Since the smashing victory of Midway, the Japanese have been forced to change their whole campaigns in three different sectors: in the Aleutians, in New Guinea, in the Solomons.

And, as Rommel girds for another attack in Egypt, it is conceded that what might have been a victory in the drive on Alexandria was turned to defeat in a not unimportant measure by American bombers and fighters.

And lastly, with the great raid on Lille early this month, the Germans found themselves faced with the prospect of terrific destruction of their cities or the revision of thair whole program of air defense.

From the beginning, tha Germans knew that America had tha men, the money, the resources to build the most powerful war machina in the world. But they never thought the parts of that machine could be assembled in time. Now as we approach the anniversary of Pearl Harbor, we are still unable to furnish our Allies with the men and material required to make any single front, of the many we are feeding, strong enough for an offensive in which there is combined action, air, land and sea. But in one arm we have developed the beginning of superiority and for the first time we are emerging on many fronts as the growing giant of the air.

This is now possible because we have been able to do three things: provide a terrific engine of precision destruction in our mammoth bombers; provide those bombers with such fire-power that it makes up for their lack of maneuverability and thus offers in a single unit the power to carry out precision bombing of individual targets and at the same time the ability to fight off the enemy defense in the air, a combination perfected for the first time in this war.

A Comparison

To reduce this achievement to lay terms: Heretofore the big bomber which could drop tons of destruction on the earth below, was so oumbersome in the air that it was a prey to fast moving acrobatic fighter planes. Like the buffalo which could be pulled down by a herd of agile wolves. Now, because of the terrific effectiveness of the guns our bombers carry, those fighters cannot get near enough to them to damage them. The wolf pack is cut to pieces before its fangs can seise the monster.

In addition to giving our heavy ships their own protection we have built pursuit planes — the agile wolves — which are sinewed with some of the might of their bigger brothers.

Our pursuit planas are abla to carry bombs, too, and perform some of the functions of the dive bomber with the added advantaga of maneuverability.

With this equipment we have been able to maka the Japanese hold on the Aleutians untenable. We have already dislodged two footholds (Attu and Agattu islands, and will probably force the Japs out of the third, Kiska, before the winter sets in. That is ona radical change of plan which tha Japanese did not anticipate wa could hring about.

In tha southwest Pacific there has been wrought another changa of plan. In conjunction with Australian fliers, American forces have completely broken one offensiva, tha ona directed at Port Moresby, by smashing enemy bases and supply lines and forcing the Japs, who after incredible hardships had crossed the towering Owen Stanley ridge, to taka to their heels and flee.

And in Europe we have definitely affected the tide of battle on three fronts. In Russia, vicariously it is true, because we have sent no pilots there. But American planes played a vital part in harassing the Nazi advance.

In Egypt, tha British, according to dispatches, credit American fliers with a large part of the schievement of hreaking down General Rommel's advance into Egypt.

Attack on Rommel

There our heavy bombers helped to render Rommel's supply ports of Tobruk and Benghazi virtually useless. Against Nazi ground forces our planes, notably the Airacobra, acting as a shallow dive bomber and also as a strafer, played a vital part in smashing the Axis supply lines.

But it was—and is and will be—American bomber wings over Germany itself that cast the most alarming shadow across the Reich. The Lille raid brought home the fact that Germany must now face American might.

In that raid 112 American bombers, besides carrying out their mission of precision daytime bombing, were able to bring down 115 of the 120 Nazi fighter planes that were destroyed.

Germany must rebuild her planes to match ours, or suffer an incredible handicap.

And so we see the faith in air power and American invention justified. This, however, does not mean victory. It means merely the preparation. Smoking ruins are a triumph but possession is nine points of victory. No land is conquered until a human being stands upon it, his feet firmly planted, his position secure. And that means, in the last analysis, man power, not air power. That is the next step.

Aircraft Carrier—Fleet Spearhead

The aircraft carrier, says Rear Admiral Carl Sherman, naval hero of World War I, and commander of the Lexington, is "the spearhead of the fleet, the backbone of the navy, the slugger in offensive and defensive warfare."

The admiral may be a bit prejudiced, of course, but after you have read "Queen of the Flat Tops," which is the story of the Lexington's epic adventures, you may agree with him. Lest I he carried away with my own enthusiasm, I asked a lover of the sea what he thought about it. He pored over my copy and refused to return it. So I am going to quote his words.

"This is a fine book," he told me after he had read it. "The author, Stanley Johnston, sums up my opinion. He says that the 'flat-top' Lexington ushered in a new era in naval warfare which will rank with the battle of the Monitor and the Merrimac in the Civil war. And he makes you believe it."

Johnston was in the highly enviable position of being the only reporter on board, and now has given the world a first-hand picture of the terrifically important 1st cruise of this converted battle cruiser, right up to the time she was sent to the bottom by American torpedoes after withstanding Jap 'tin fish" and direct bomb hits.

Johnston saw it all from the "Lex," as she was affectionately known.

All of our new group of naval air heroes appear as modest young run-of-mine men, in Johnston's record. He was struck by the complete lack of heroics, as he was struck during evary action and particularly during the last terrible hours aboard the carrier, with the complete lack of confusion and the outstanding bravery of all aboard, even when tha gallant ahip was a blazing inferno. This is all the more remarkable when it is known that a great many of the ship's complement were making their first trip to sea. No naval or military man is going to miss reading and studying this volume, and no civilian ought to who has any interest in the methods of modern sea battling.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What is cause of epilepsy? What, if any, is tha cure? What is the proper and most effectual treatment?

A.—Cause of epilepsy is unknown. Some cases are due to injury. Treatment is to cut down on starch foods and liquids and increase fat foods. Phenobarbital, a quieting drug, is now in general use, with good results. Dilantin Sodium is even more effective, but has a reaction in some cases.

CONVULSIONS

When a youngster has a convulsion, the first thought has usually been to try to get blood away from the head by putting the child's fast in hot water. Placing tha child in hot water up to its hips has long been used by mothers at the first sign of a convulsion. Many are abla to tell when a convulsion is near because the child may be very irritable, hava an attack of vomiting or an abnormal appearanca of the ayes.

Dr. Barton

That other than nervous or digestive disturbances cause convulsions is now known, one of the latest being a lack of sugar in tha body blood.

In the Virginia Medical Monthly, Drs. W. W. Waddell Jr. and T. J. Humphries, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, suggest that physicians test the value of blood sugar in children with unexplained convulsions, unconsciousness, or irritable or unreasonable behavior. They record that a low amount of sugar in the blood can cause the above symptoms and this can be proven by testing tha blood at the time of tha attack of convulsions.

The symptoms ara the sama in children as in adults—sudden onset of the convulsion following irritability or unreasonable behavior. During the convulsion there may be vomiting, slow, labored or jerky breathing, deep respirations, rapid pulse rate, dilation of the pupils and rise in tempersture.

What is the treatment of thesa eases where testing the blood sugar shows that they ara caused by a decrease of sugar in tha blood?

Drs. Waddell and Humphries state that treatment consists of the prompt administration of glucose (sugar) in any available form; sugar, candy, orange juica, syrup by mouth or up into the lower bowel, by injection into a vein.

While this is a simpla method of bringing tha patient back to consciousness, parents ara naturally anxious to learn ways of preventing attacks. As it is known that a growth or tumor of the pancreas can esuse convulsions, the removal of this tumor by operation must be considered. However, before operation is performed, these physicians advise tests to make sure tha pancreas is at fault.

Our Mounting Life Span—And Why

The life span today is 66 years—an increase of 18 years in 42 years.

When we realize that in about 1,800 years the life span was lengthened only 15 years and in less than half a century it has been lengthenad 18 years, there must be some explanation for it. The explanation is simple. Research workers throughout the civilized world have passed their knowledge to practicing physicians and thus any discovery that relieves suffering and prolongs life is made known. It is now known that mosquitoes cause malaria, lice cause typhus; smallpox, diphtheria, typhoid and other diseases can be prevented; patients with diabetes and pernicious anemia can be kept alive for many years, the avarage life span in fact. Only about one child in avery 20 now dies at birth or during the first year; it used to be three in avery ten. Tuberculosis does not stand high in the list as a cause of death because of the persistent and determined fight that has been mada against it. Patients with heart disease are kept alive for many years.

What has been the result of all this saving of life? This saving of lifa has enabled so many to realize middle age and old age that today tha number of old people outnumbers the number of those who are young. A recent illustration shows that in 1900 the number of individuals over 45 years was about 43 per cent of the population; in 1930 it was 47, and in 1940 it was 51 per cent. In other words, the number of individuals past 45 years in aga makes up more than half the population. These figures apply to the people of the United States and Canada.

Just a few weeks ago when it was found that infant feeding was saving the lives of many infants and children, many young graduates in medicine became child specialists—pediatricians. Today and hereafter, more graduates will likely become specialists for the old—geriatricians.

Rogers' Rangers, 1942 Model

WHEN a party of United States Rangers went on a British Commando raid in German-occupied France recently, the ghost of doughty old Robert Rogers must have smiled grimly and appreciatively to his fellows in that Valhalla where wandar the shades of mighty warriors. For these American soldiers, trained like the British Commandos to climb mountains and jump down high cliffs, speed noiselessly through dense forests and kill silently with knives rather than with guns, gava such a good account of thamselvas against the Nazis as to prova their right to be named for Rogers' Rangers and thus perpetuate, with their deeds, the fama of those rough-and-ready bushfighters of long ago.

MAJ. ROBERT ROGERS

Rogers was born in 1727 at Dunbarton in the English colony of New Hampshira. His youth was spent as a hunter and trapper in the forests of New England and Canada and thera ha learned tha lessons in Indian warfara which were to make him invaluabla in the French and the Indian war.

At tha opening of that conflict in 1755 Rogers led a forca of hardy woodsmen from New Hampshire to Albany, N. Y., whara tha British and Colonial forces ware being assembled to attack the French forts at Crown Point and Ticonderoga. Sir William Johnson, the great Colonial leadar, knowing of Rogers' raputation, used him and his men as scouts. Making his headquarters at Fort William Henry, a new post at the south end of Lake Champlain, Rogers began a series of forays against the French and their Indian allies.

So valuable did thase New Hampshiremen prova to be as scouts and fighters that at the opening of the spring campaign in 1756, their leader was given a special commission by the Earl of Loudon, British commandar-in-chief, to raise a picked corps of bush fighters who wera to receive tha same pay as the regulars but who wara to carry on their operations in their own way. Thus came into existence that splendid body of military irregulars, known as Rogers' Rangers, who were to becoma tha terror of their enemies and set the pattern for fighting methods of American frontiarsmen for the next century.

Some of thair adventuras and their exploits make thosa of the dime novel heroes seem tame by comparison. When Kenneth Roberts cama to write an historical novel about Rogers' Rangers, it wasn't necessary for him to draw upon his imagination to make it thrilling. All he had to do was tell the facts—as anybody who saw the movie "Northwest Passage" can testify.

Rogers' reward for his service was small. He visited England and suffered from poverty until he borrowed money with which to print his Journal. Ha presented this to the king and in 1765 was appointed commandant at Michillimackinac. Accused of dishonesty he was sent in irons to Montreal and court-martialed. Ha went to England again but was soon imprisoned for debt.

Later ha returned to America and at the outbreak of the Revolution found himself suspected by both the Patriots and Tories. Arrested by orders of Washington, he was later placed on parole but ha was so embittered by this treatment that he broke his parole and openly joined the British.

Banished from America in 1778, he went to England whera his later career was described as "wild, improvident and extravagant." He died some time after 1800, "a victim to his evil habits." Thus ended in anti-climax the life of this "first-class fightin' man."

Among those who served as Rogers' Rangers were two who were destined for futura fame as leaders in the Continental army during the Revolution. One was another New Hampshireman, John Stark, later tha victor at the Battle of Bennington, a "curtain-raiser" to the decisive battle of the Revolution—Saratoga. The other was from Connecticut and he was associated with Rogers in some of his most daring exploits against the French and Indians. His name was Israel Putnam—"Old Put" of Bunker Hill and Long Island battle fame.

ON THE HOME FRONT
with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HERE is a sketch of a corner in a smart living room. Over the desk hangs a piece of applique work that any woman who can sew a seam can make with a piece of natural colored linen, a few scraps of gingham and odds and ends of embroidery thread. The design is of poppies, cornflowers and wheat, with graceful green leaves. The poppy petals and leaves are of gingham applied on the linen. The bright blue cornflowers, the yellow wheat and stems are embroidered in simple stitches.

This quickly made piece of hand work was framed by stretching it over cardboard, and it set the color scheme for the entire room.

No one would ever guess that the desk is a transformation of the fancy oak one shown at the left. The top was sawed off and a slant board added. The bookcases were then added at the sides and the plywood door was hinged to them.

It Would!

"What lovely salmon!"

"That's not salmon; that's cod blushing at the price they're asking for it."

He Should Know

"Does the foreman know that the trench has fallen in?" asked the contractor.

"Well, sir," replied the workman, "we're digging him out to tell him."

IN A WAY

"Did the hostess put you next to Mr. Speed at the dinner last night?"

"She told me his whole awful past, if that's what you mean."

Earlier Start

Two small boys at the charity dinner put their grimy hands side by side on the tablecloth.

"Mine's dirtier 'n yours!" exclaimed one, triumphantly.

"Huh!" said the other, disdainfully, "you're two years older 'n me."

A woman's face is her fortune—a long as it goes on drawing interest.

As Molded

"Figures don't lie."

"They're not supposed to. They are simply raw material in the hands of the expert."

The class had had a lesson on Eskimos, and were asked to write an account of it. One bright youngster began: "The Eskimos are God's frozen people."

Have a Care

"I owe my figure to swimming exercisas."

"Say, did you ever take a look at a duck?"

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Clay Myers and children Marie and Donnie made a business trip into Central Kentucky on Friday, spending Friday night and part of Saturday with relatives while there.

Mrs. Lotta Powers and Miss Mary Belle Alexander were Sunday dinner guests of Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearing and daughters Ruth and Louise Dearing. In the afternoon they drove to the scene of the airplane crash on the Mt. ion road, which occurred late Friday. They report the plane as a massof wreckage. Truckers were at the scene loading the remains for salvage.

Circle meetings of the W. S. C. S. of the Methodist Church scheduled for this week have been postponed due to the Week of Prayer and Self-denial Observance that has been announced at this time throughout the Conferences.

Dr. J. O. Adams of Louisville, spent the end of the week with his sister, Mrs. W. O. Richey and Mr. Richey.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jones and son Dennis left Saturday for Evanston, Ohio to join Mr. Jones, who is employed by the Trumbull Electric Co., of Norwod, O. They expect to make their home at Evanston for the duration.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smith and mother Mrs. Beach, attended the funeral of Mrs. Beach's brother, Ernest Johnson at Aurora, Ind., last Monday.

Mrs. John L. Vest and brother Mr. Howard Loomis, left Saturday for St. Petersburg, Fla. They were called there by the serious illnes of their father, Mr. Walter Loomis.

Mrs. G. C. Mathews, of Corinth was the recent guest of Mrs. Claude Norman, Mr. Norman and daughter, Judy.

Don't forget our Hallowe'en party Friday night at 7:30 at the school gym. The door will not open before 7:30.

Mrs. Glen Laws and son Tommy of Dayton, Ohio, are guests of Mrs. Lucy Breedcn and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Robinson are employed in Cincinnati, they were out over the week end at their home here.

HYBRID SWEET CORN DOUBLES YIELD

Hybrid sweet corn gave two times more the yield of common varieties of sweet corn this year, according to seventy demonstration reports received from local farmers in recent weeks, according to H. R. Forkner.

One hundred fifty-one farmers and home gardeners grew hybrid sweet corn this year. Six hybrid varieties were grown: Golden Cross Bantam, Golden Hummer, Silver Cross Evergreen, Iona, Span Cross and Kingscrost. Certified Golden Cross Bantam seed produced the most and sweetest of all hybrids. Silver Cross Evergreen was second. Golden Hummer did not give an outstanding yield but was third choice because of its earliness.

The high yield of Certified Golden Cros sBantam seed has proven a substantial improvement in increasing the home food supply.

SEVEN VARITIES OF HYBRID CORN SHOW INCREASED YIELDS

Seven varieties of hybrid corn grown by Kenneth Stephens, of Hamilton, produced an average of 52.2 percent more corn per acre than a local open pollinated variety grown in the same field, according to information received recently by Franklin Frazier, Assistant County Agent.

Weighed yields from each plot show the following percentage increases from hybrid varieties: Ky. 102, 86.3; Ky. 103, 72.6; U. S. 13, 49.9; Ky. 72B, 45.5; Ky. 72, 13; Ky. 69, 40.8; and Ky. 201, 27.2. When calculated to an acreage basis, the yield of Kentucky 102, for example, was 84.4 bushels per acre, while open pollinated variety (Woodburn) was only 45.3 bushels per acre.

Corn in this demonstration was planted the same day in the same field. All varieties were given equal cultivation. The difference was in the seed.

Dry weather which prevailed at the time this corn was in the blister stage was a primary factor in bringing about yields from hybrid corn that were larger than average. Since hybrids had a better and more extensive root system than the open pollinated variety, they were least affected. However, normally hybrids increase the yield by an average of 23.6 bushels of corn per acre, or 188.8 bushels for each bushel of seed planted. For each dollar spent on seed, a 27 bushel increase in production resulted, which would sell for about twenty-three dollars at current prices.

Today most Bone County corn growers realize they cannot afford not to plant an adapted variety of hybrid corn.

WHAT HELPS KENTUCKY HELPS YOU!

HARRY D. FRANCE, State Director

Every legitimate industry that contributes to the economic and social welfare of Kentucky is vitally important to you.

The legal beer industry gives honest jobs to 15,000 Kentuckians — pays them more than $10,000,000 in salaries and wages, every year. Its taxes—$1,364,658 last year, $7,904,876 since 1935—help to build schools and educate your children, contribute to old age assistance, aid to the blind, health service, confederate pensions and other public services.

The loss of beer's taxes would mean that you would have to dig still deeper into your own pocket to maintain these services.

To protect these contributions to Kentucky's welfare, the brewing industry carries on a self-regulation program to maintain wholesome conditions wherever beer is sold.

To date, through this Committee's cooperation with State and local law-enforcement officials, 39 retail beer licenses have been revoked because of law violations; 12 suspended; 4 places padlocked; 4 license renewals refused. . . .

YOU can help in two ways: (1) Don't buy beer in any place that disregards the law; (2) report any law violation to the authorities or to this Committee.

EYES AT WORK NEED BETTER LIGHT

In the production line or on the home front, you're working harder these busy wartime days and your eyes are working harder, too. They need all the help that better light can give them.

Time and again it has been proved in war plants that better light increases production, reduces errors, improves morale and lessens fatigue. And in the home, better light makes reading and sewing easier, speeds housework, saves needless waste of energy due to eyestrain.

Does the lighting in your home give your eyes the help they need for safe, easy seeing? We'll gladly measure it and show you how it can be improved at small cost. Ask for a free home lighting check-up today!

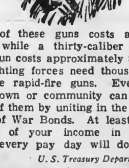
What You Buy With WAR BONDS



Essential in the equipment of every Soldier, Sailor, Marine or Flyer is a first aid kit, consisting of bandages and antiseptics for instantaneous use. These materials are packed into a compact box and cost about $1.50 each.

We need millions of these first aid kits for emergency treatment. They are also used by Red Cross workers, in field hospitals and wherever needed until hospital treatment may be obtained. Even a child could buy one or more of these kits through purchase of War Stamps. Buy War Bonds and Stamps every pay day and Invest at least ten percent of your income in these government securities. U. S. Treasury Department

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The 50-caliber Browning machine gun is one of the most efficient short range weapons used by U. S. Fighting forces. It is effective at ranges up to 2,000 yards and fires about 600 forty-five caliber bullets per minute.

One of these guns costs about $1,500, while a thirty-caliber machine gun costs approximately $600. Our fighting forces need thousands of these rapid-fire guns. Even a small town or community can buy many of them by uniting in the purchase of War Bonds. At least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay day will do the trick. U. S. Treasury Department

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills! You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

of those who are now fighting and dying for YOUR RIGHT to vote, and God forgive us if our soldiers read that we failed them by failing to cast our vote on Nov.3

THE MACHINE IS WORRIED! Its stooges are trying to make John Smith believe that his neighbor isn't going to vote, so that he too will say away from the polls while the "machine" rounds up its "herd" . . . because a light vote always returns the "yes man" to office!

THE IN'S ARE TRYING TO MAKE YOU BELIEVE, ALSO, that if you DON'T return them to office, that HITLER WILL BE AT YOUR BACK DOOR THE NEXT MORNMORNING, but don't be fooled! Like you, I would vote ALL THE GOLD BURIED AT FT. KNOX to save the life or limb of ONE SOLDIER . . . and if elected, I will never let you OR YOUR SOLDIERS down . . . now or AFTER THE WAR!

IN MY CAMPAIGN THROUGH THE LOWER COUNTIES, I have shook hands with more than 300 people who said they were PRAYING FOR MY ELECTION, and in tear-stained faces I saw what they had given to this second world war! If elected, I will never let them down, and shall go on fighting as I have for the past ten years, against the greed and corrupt politics that have brought so much misery to the world.

My greatest hope is to return to the towns I have visited the past few months, and to shake your hand again as your Representative in Congress, and with humility in my hart, I solicit your vote and your support. Believe me,

BOMBS BURST ONCE

By GRANVILLE CHURCH

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: Jeff Curtis and his wife, Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when he receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. When they arrive in Tierra Libre they find both Zora and her husband dead. It is Mitchell's job as chief engineer for a fruit company that Jeff has been called to fill. Later Jeff's friend Bill Henderson is killed, and Jeff suspects his employer, Senor Montaya, of murdering him and the Mitchells because they had found a clue to the strange things going on at the plantation. Other sinister figures are the company chemist, Dr. Toenjes, and the flyers, Ryden and Lazanstock. A man named Collins arrives from the Canal Zone to see Mitchell, and Jeff hires him without arousing Montaya's suspicions. Collins later reveals his identity as a naval intelligence officer. When they discover hidden German bombers, Jeff arranges to send Les and the children away. Now Jeff, Collins, Jerry McInnis and Slats Monahan are carrying out a carefully laid plan to destroy the planes and stop the Nazi activties in which Montaya, who is part German, is engaged. They are at the airfield now.

NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIX

Collins' job was to assemble the bombs and release all mechanical restraints so that impact on the noses would explode them. He started to wind the vanes.

Meanwhile, Curt and McInnis put saws to use. They cut half through all the ground supports which held the heavy wall firm, then sheered through the ceiling ties. So much wasn't necessary, perhaps, but it helped. Thus, an explosion of dynamite outside this wall would force it back against the noses of the bombs.

They then planted the dynamite, dragged the two motors to the spot, measured the fuse. Against the chance that Collins might not probebly set the bombs—for they were, after all, foreign to him—a can of black powder was planted in the cockpit of each machine. At length the three charges were set, with fuses that would allow Collins time to get away.

Curt grumbled. "Collins wants pictures. But we can't risk lighting up the window strip by the flash so early. He'll have to take them when he's ready to light the fuses."

They looked in on Collins. In the dead air of the tight-closed room he'd sweeted through all his clothes, his face was shiny wet. No picnic, this. He knew what his chances were if he guessed wrong on these bombs.

"Okay," he told them, "I'm about set. Only three noses left to screw in, then all pins to remove."

"It's late," worried Curt. "Close to one-thirty! Took us longer than we'd expected. Slats will be phoning them any minute now."

"Yeh. You two get going."

"Might's well." But Curt was reluctant. Then, "You've no watch, Collins, take mine. It's synchronized with Monahan's."

Curt and McInnis snatched up bunches of tinder-dry grass from sheltered spots as they ran to the front of the hangars. Curt was getting anxious.

His worry was short-lived! Curt and McInnis were brought up short as they rounded the end of the hangars. The tennis court at the other end of the field was now ablaze with lights!

Even as they stared, a small band of men wes emerging from behind the office building headed this way.

"Six of them, Jerry! The two of us can't count on holding off that gang with pistol fire!"

"Blaze the grass, Curt! All the way to the fence and around the other side of the hangars to the rear fence!"

Curt and McInnis raced across the black fields, stumbling constantly but making ground. There were shouts behind them.

Then came the furious chugging of a motorcar, headed from the upper end of the field.

"They expect to get behind us, Jerry, head us off! We'll have to stop that before they reach our car!"

They were close to the airfield branch. They turned, running at top speed toward the car, which hadn't yet rounded the curve of mountainside. There were half-rotted logs left from clearing the field. Curt and McInnis hed perhaps a minute and a half—a minute. They tugged and hauled at one of the logs. Rains had sunk it into the ground, set it. They pried it loose and alung it across the tracks. The driver would see it, but not in time to stop.

Then came the car. Around the curve of mountainside it sped. It hit the log, bounced from the rails, turned over. But not before a figure had snapped open the door and shot from it. A man rolled over and over, then scrambled to his feet.

"Toenjes!" shouted Curt joyfully.

Toenjes it wes—a wild man in the flare of the car's headlights which still worked, curiously enough, one of them slenting skyward. He had a gun in his hand but was helpless from both the glare of lights and the loss of his glasses.

Curt coolly put a bullet into the man's shoulder. "Explain that away, my fine friend," he grunted, "when the investigation breaks."

Between them Curt and McInnis seized the raging, helpless man and hustled him along the tracks toward their car.

They kept glancing up toward the radio station high above. No lights showed, it wes a black mountainside. They reached the car, bound Toenjes' hands behind him, gagged him to get rid of his insane, spluttering threats, and tossed him in the back. Another glence upward and a light popped on and off several times under and between the two shafts. A rectangle it showed, a window.

"Man, is thet a relief!" exclaimed McInnis. "They'll send no messages tonight!"

They looked back. The black bulk of the hangars showed up within a solid thick well of fire. The waist high grass blazed fiercely, throwing flames high into the air. They were licking at the trees overhead, they'd spread beyond the fence.

Against that sheet of light they saw Collins come stumbling their way. He reached them, out of breath, tossed the camera into the car, gasped out that things were ready to pop, and collepsed on the back seat. There he discovered Toenjes.

"Treveling companion we picked up to keep you company," said Curt.

They'd covered half e kilometer when McInnis, eyes on his wrist, said, "Helf a minute, Curt!"

Curt stopped the cer, all three got out. They stared back.

"Guessed wrong on the fuses," muttered Curt. "Or you didn't light them on the dot."

Then, before anyone could speak egain, there came a dull, muffled explosion. In the light of the fire, the straight lines of the hangar buckled, the roof mushroomed—on one end. But the walls held together.

"One of the planes," Curt gritted out from between set teeth.

"The completed one," added McInnis. "At least we got—"

The sentence was lost in another muffled explosion which merged instantly into a mighty, pulsating roar thet made their ear drums sche,

The sentence was lost in another muffled explosion.

and the aerial bombs exploded by two and threes a split second apart.

They turned to the car only to find it had been bounced from the rails. They hauled and tugged and lifted. Scarcely was it on the rails again than there came another explosion, closer at hand but lighter. They jumped apart. The charge set under the bridge behind them had done its work. No motorcar would be lifted across the drainage channel tonight.

"Cripes, I'd forgotten thet one," exclaimed McInnis.

He laughed. So did Curt and Collins, and it eased the tension. There was now no need for secrecy. They used the cer lights and stepped on the gas. But thoughts of possible trouble ahead tightened their nerves egain.

Collins began to take some interest in his fellow passenger. He played his flash on Toenjes, and turned the men's head this way and thet. Toenjes was beginning to suffer considerebly from pain in his shoulder, but his eyes were murderous. A slow, unbelieving smile spreed over Collins' face. He ripped open Toenjes' shirt and pulled it eway from the wounded shoulder. He found a puckered scer there, an old one, not three inches from the bleeding hole Curt hed mede tonight. And then he began to leugh. He laughed and he laughed until tears rolled down his face. The men in the front seat turned for an explenation. It came in jerks.

"On e silver platter," cried Collins. "Mr. Curtis, you've mede one of the neatest hauls this year. Dr. Toenjes? I hedn't seen him before, you know. This is Herr Albrecht Werner Fisch, no less. Red-handed. One of the biggest, slipperiest, agents the Nazis heve in Letin America."

And then it was tomorrow. The sun slanted down hotly on the after deck of the San Timoteo. The Associated vessel was pushing her way north over a smooth sea. There was a cooling breeze, and cumulus clouds moved serenely across the sky.

Buddy, Chuck, and Sylvia Mitchell, ell in sun suits, were playing under the watchful eyes of the ship's nurse. The boys were making clownish efforts to balance on their heeds their huge straw sombreros.

Curt end Lee were standing by, his erm ebout her waist. They were silent, and Lee felt Curt's arm tighten as the children's voices rose shrilly, hilariously. She looked up and saw the look in his eyes, the beads of sweat ebove his brows and on his upper lip, and she knew what he was thinking.

"Don't, deerest," she whispered.

He looked down at her, and his eyes slowly cleared. He kissed her lightly on the temple and they sauntered off, his arm tight about her. At the entrance to the central staircase he paused—and yawned, prodigiously.

"I could do with another nap," he said, on snapping his mouth shut. "You!"

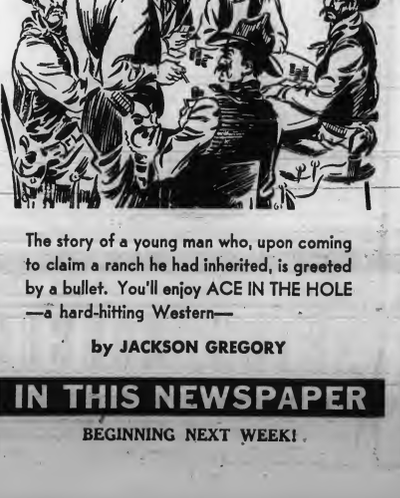
"We slept all morning!" she exclaimed. "We won't sleep tonight!"

"We can sit on deck tonight," hopefully.

"No moon."

"There'll be stars. And there's no charge for just sitting."

Lee laughed. "All right, silly. We'll go down again."



The door to the purser's office opened and there was movement in the corridor. A steward was tacking a paper on the bulletin board.

"News!" said Curt.

With Lee, he crossed the corridor eegerly, to stare at the typewritten sheet.

"Puerto Soledad, Tierra Libre," read the radio dispatch. "In a raid by army troops on the headquarters of the Compania Agricola Tropical at San Alejo this morning, what appears to have been a direct Nazi plot against the sovereignty of Tierra Libre was disclosed, with the arrest of Senor Apolonio Montaya and twenty-four persons of doubtful nationality . . ."

THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF MARRIAGE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 2:18-24; Matthew 19:3-6; John 2:1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT—Marriage is honorable in all.—Hebrews 13:4.

The home is not just one of the institutions of our social order, it is a part of God's plan for men. It thus holds a position of greater importance then institutions of society, and should take first piece in our thinking.

Home end the life which centers in it has lost much of its meaning and value in recent decades. It is appropriate and timely to study for four weeks in our Sunday schools the foundation principles of the home and to learn how we may hinder or help it in its influence. Teachers will wish to make much of this vital series.

We begin right when we inquire what the Bible teaches about merriage, and we find the instruction plentiful and to the point. Concerning marriage we learn of

I. Its Origin—Ordained by God (Gen. 2:18-24).

Nations and states heve marriege laws, and certain civil requirements must be met. But true merriage from the Christian viewpoint is far more than a civil contract. It is an ordinance which God Himself ordained from the beginning for the welfare of man.

When Adam gave names to the animals (which, incidentally, tells of his intelligence and ability) they passed before him. It became evident to him thet there wes no true fellowship between man and beest, thet there must be a "help meet" for man, one of his own kind, with his capacities of personal being.

God quickly and adequately meets every reel need of man, so He created out of Adam's own flesh one who was to be his true companion. "If man is the head, she is the crown," said Matthew Henry. "The man was dust refined, but the woman wes dust doubly refined, one move further from the earth. She was not taken out of his head to top him, not out of his feet to be trampled upon by him, but out of his side to be equal with him, under his arm to be protected, and near his heart to be beloved."

So God ordained marriage, but down through the ages man has seen fit to tamper with God's holy arrangements, adjusting them to suit himself, so we need to be reminded of the truth.

II. Its Control—Not Subject to Man (Matt. 19:3-6).

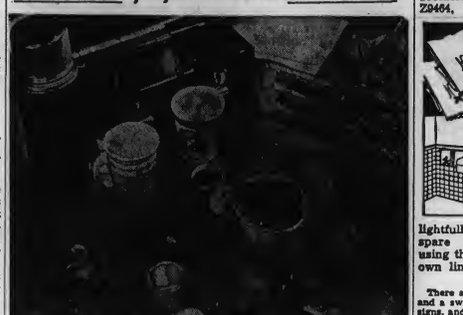
Because of the hardness of man's heart Moses permitted divorce (Mark 10:4, 5), but God did not intend it from the beginning. The Jewish rabbis had so stretched the interpretation of that act of Moses that a wife could be divorced for almost any reason. The same was true among heathen nations.

Our Lord makes it very clear that man has no authority to determine such matters at all, that the union of life in true marriage is by the act of God, and that no man has power to sunder such a relationship.

The whole trend of thought on marriage has been away from its sacredness as a divine institution, and we need to return to a proper appreciation of it as such. All too often, marriages are mere civil agreements, hastily made before a justice of peace. We need to encourage our young people to recognize

III. Its Dignity—Sanctioned by Christ (John 2:1-5).

The wedding ceremony tells us that marriage "is an honorable estate, instituted by God in the time of man's innocency, confirmed by the teaching and hallowed by the presence of our blessed Lord, and likened by St. Paul to the holy union that exists between Christ and the Church; and therefore is not by any to be entered into unadvisedly, but reverently, discreetly and in the fear of God."



At the very beginning of His public ministry Jesus performed His first miracle as His share of a wedding feast. It is true that He does share every occesion of joy and sorrow of His people, but it seems to be significant that this first occasion for His miraculous power was a wedding.

He was there to rejoice with and to bless those who had exchanged their vows in marriage. Should He not be the unseen guest at every wedding? Whether in the home or in the church; whether the occasion be a simple or an elaborate one; whether a host of friends attend or only the witnesses—always and everywhere Jesus Christ should be recognized as the One who stands by to bless, and to unite the two lives for His own glory.

This means that the ceremony should be a Christian one, with prayer a vital part of it, and the will of God paramount. Then indeed, God may end will join together that which no man can put asunder.

Pack a Lunch That Gives Them a Lift (See Recipes Below.)

Victory Lunch Box

How's the vim, vigor end vitamin content on the put-up lunches for your school children end defense workers? You may not realize it, but the three "v's" have an important bearing on their intelligence quotient, for good, well balanced food makes both child and edult fit for whatever the day may bring. A poorly nourished body isn't receptive to learning exposure, nor is it capable of meeting the intensive requirements of physical or mental work.

Lunches should pull no punches. Just because they are compact, and it's difficult to heve as much variety and hot food es when you ere preparing the lunch in your own kitchen, is no reason for skipping over the lunch lightly, in the hope you can make up these shortages at dinner. This meal in the middle of the day should take care of a third of the day's food requirements end as such is not a matter to be considered lightly.

Yes, it's a challenge, homemakers! You may bake the best cake in miles around or turn out a roast that's proud to behold, or a dessert that's purely ambrosial, but if you don't put up a lunch that your child or defense worker husband eats with gusto, you won't get my vote for excellence.

Now, let's get to work! Sandwiches are a standby, but let's make them something more than peanut-butter and jelly or cheese between a couple slices of bread.

Sandwich Ideas.

Sliced or chopped hard-cooked eggs, combined with pickle and moistened with salad dressing.

Sliced tongue or ham with mustard or horseradish.

Liverwurst, mashed and seasoned with catsup.

Chopped ham, chopped hard-cooked eggs, minced green pepper, cooked salad dressing.

Cream cheese, grated yellow cheese, chopped pimiento, chopped green olives, salad dressing to moisten.

Ground corned beef, chopped pickle, and chopped ripe olives blended with mayonnaise.

Peanut butter and honey or cream cheese and honey.

Meat loaf, lettuce, rye breed.

Have a hot dish, too. This makes for top-notch efficiency besides giving the luncheon a hearty and substantial angle that your children or defense-plant husband will welcome.

How to do? Simply use a thermos bottle for soup or a hot drink or unwaxed paper cups and containers for hot foods. Packing the kind of lunch your femily can work on should be your aim—an aim, which is fast gaining prominence because hours lost out of the plant or by children from school by illness, mean sabotage on the nutrition front.

LYNN SAYS:

Ideas in a Box: Surprises are as welcome in a lunch box as on a birthday. Try adding a few stuffed prunes (with cream, cheese, honey and peanut butter or dates) just as an extra. It will go over big, as will a few salted nuts, a bit of stuffed celery and whole carrots.

Dress up lunch with a perky salad. They'll like cooked or canned green beans with cooked or canned carrots with lettuce and French dressing. Shredded cabbage with shredded carrots, strips of green, pepper; grated carrots, diced pineapple and raisins; canned peas, chopped onion, hard-cooked egg. Devilled eggs are nice, too—with a touch of paprika for color.

Creamed meat or fish in the hollow of a bun which has been scooped out, and the top of the bun held on together with a toothpick is good. Try creamed dried beef, creamed sausages, tuna fish or salmon salad, or creamed stuffed eggs.

This Week's Menu

Lunch Box
*Vegetable Soup
*Tongue Sandwiches
*Grated Cheese Sandwiches
Grated Carrot-Pineapple Salad
Devilled Eggs
Fresh Pear *Honey Brownies
*Recipes Given

Do you ever realize how much the family reves over your good homemade vegetable soup? Yes, they do, and it will be especially welcome in the lunch box:

Vegetable Soup.
1 soup bone
2 quarts cold water
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup diced carrots
1 cup sliced okra
1 cup green beans, cut
2 cups diced potatoes
2 cups tomatoes

Wash bone and remove all loose, small pieces of bone. Cover with weter and let simmer for two hours. Remove bone from broth and cook all vegetables until tender. Season.

Salads make a complete meal of lunch besides providing the day's quota of vitamins. Neatly packed in small, waxed containers salads will retain their original freshness and appeal:

Vitamin Salad.
1½ cups apinach leaves, raw
2 tablespoons chopped, mixed pickles
½ cup diced celery
1 teaspoon chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 cup cottage cheese

Add pickles and celery, chopped onion and salt to spinach and mix well. Chill overnight in covered waxed paper container in refrigerator. Pack cottage cheese and mayonnaise in seperate small paper containers to serve with spinach mixture.

Bright, fresh, juicy fruits such as oranges, peers, apples, bananas, grapes, individually wrapped in waxed peper will give a lift in the middle of the day. Then for variety's sake you might have a pudding packed in an individual peper container like this one:

Apricot Cream.
(Serves 6)
4 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
Juice and rind of 1 lemon
2 tablespoons hot water
½ cup strained apricot pulp
4 egg whites
2 tablespoons powdered sugar

Beat egg yolks, add sugar, lemon juice, water and apricot pulp. Cook over hot water until thick. Beat egg whites stiff and add powdered sugar. Fold into cooled, cooked mixture. Place in refrigerator until thick and cold.

Cookies with fruit or puddings polish off the dessert course, and child or plant worker is ready for an afternoon of real "production." Favorite cookies made with honey to keep in tune with the times are:

Honey Brownies.
(Makes 2 dozen)
1 package semi-sweet chocolate chips
½ cup shortening
2 eggs, beaten
6 tablespoons strained honey
½ cup sifted flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup chopped nuts

Melt chocolate and shortening over hot water. Cool. Beat eggs until lemon-colored and add honey gradually. Add sifted dry ingredients. Mix in chocolate, add vanilla and nuts. Pour into greased, waxed-peper lined 8 inch square pan. Bake 35 minutes in a moderate (370-degree) oven.

Tom—Do you think she will return your love?

Dick—Probably. She told me she had no use for it.

Waste of Time

"Your handwriting's so indistinct I can hardly read these poems of yours. Why didn't you type them before bringing them to me?"

"Type 'em!" the would-be poet gasped. "D'you think I'd waste my time writing poetry if I could type?"

No Cigars?

"It's a boy, sir," said the nurse, entering the professor's study.

"Well, why bother me about it?" replied the professor. "Isn't my wife at home?"

Devotion

"Dearest Annabelle," wrote Oswald, who was hopelessly in love. "I could swim the mighty ocean for one glance from your deer eyes. I would walk through a wall of flame for one touch of your little hands. I would leap the widest stream for a word from your lovely lips. As always, your Oswald.

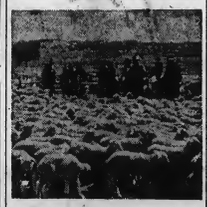
Nitrogen Fertilizer Supply Below Normal

Supply of Phosphorus, Potash Found Sufficient

The increasing use of synthetic nitrogen for war munitions plus the shortage of ships limiting the amount that can be imported has caused supplies of nitrogen fertilizers to be far below normal. Fortunately, phosphorus and potash supplies are fully sufficient for all farm needs, according to Earle Jones, extension agronomist, college of agriculture, Ohio State university.

Not roundup time in Texas, just sheep returning from feeding in the valley in San Benito county, California.



As a result of the current situation, the War Production board requested producers "not to manufacture, sell, offer for sale or distribute any fertilizer containing chemical nitrogen for use on fall-grown grains this year."

Fewer grades of fertilizer were available in areas where fall-sown grains were planted, but there were enough to meet the requirements of all kinds of crops. These fertilizers were of high analysis, which means that the farmer received a bigger percentage of plant food per ton. Important savings were made in the use of bags and in the cost of transportation.

For fall-sown grains this year, seven grades of mixed fertilizer were recommended by the college of agriculture of Ohio State university. While these were specified for Ohio, similar soil and crop conditions in other states would make their use satisfactory elsewhere. These grades were: 0-14-7; 0-16-8; 0-20-10; 0-12-12; 0-14-14; 0-20-20; and 0-10-20; as well as superphosphate.

Tests and practical experience have indicated that the quantity and analysis of fertilizer to use depends largely on the type of soil and the crop to be grown. On light colored or dark colored silt and clay loams, an 0-12-2 analysis is recommended. The quantity may vary from 300 to 400 pounds per acre on light colored loam and 200 to 250 pounds on dark loam, depending on whether the grain is to be seeded to a meadow or to a green manure crop, to be held one year, or two years or more. In the event such soils have been manured with an average of 8 tons per acre during the preceding year or on the immediate crop, a lower analysis such as 0-12-0, 0-20-0 or 0-14-7 is recommended.

On muck soils, peats and sands, an 0-10-20 analysis is recommended. Where such soils have been manured, an 0-12-12 is indicated.

It's a sheep shearing demonstration on a ranch at Ganado, Appache county, Arizona. The lamba have been separated from the ewes about to be sheared. Roman Hubbell and the Indian owners of the sheep are present.

Farm Notes

The 1942 lamb crop was about 2 per cent smaller than the record 1941 production, but the crop, estimated at 32,200,000 head, was the second largest on record.

The Real Check Back

SINCE the final day of the last World Series you could hear them asking what had happened to the Yankees—and to Joe McCarthy. Here is proof again how short man's memory is in the whirl of busy events.

They had overlooked the fact that Joe McCarthy and his Yankees had the greatest World Series record of all time — above John McGraw and his Giants, above Frank Chance and his Cubs, above Connie Mack and his famous Athletics.

Grantland Rice

All Joe McCarthy and his Yankees had done was to make it six out of seven in the World Series count — 25 victories against eight defeats. How much more can they ask of a manager and a team?

What other manager or what other team has turned in such a job? They forget the check back.

About Connie Mack

It was something more than a pleasure to have a visit with 80-year-old Connie Mack during this last series. We turned the clock back 40 years and I found Connie as keen and alert as ever, looking forward to whatever next year might bring.

During the last series game I turned the clock back even further. I ran into Arlie Latham, now working at the Yankee Stadium. Arlie was one of the star ball players of an era that goes back some 55 or 60 years. He was the crack third baseman of Chris Von der Ahe's old St. Louis Browns.

"I remember Connie Mack around 1885," Arlie said. "He was then catching for Pittsburgh as I remember it. What kind of a catcher was Connie? He was something on the Bill Dickey type. He knew how to handle pitchers. He saw everything that was going on. He was never in a hurry. Connie couldn't hit with Dickey, but as I remember it he was a great bat tipper. He knew how to bother you at the plate. He was smart even then. Things were different in those days. Anything you could get by with was legal and okay. But what a great fellow that Connie Mack has been for 60 years. You've got to have something extra to be better than good for 60 years."

Another 80-Year Old

This brought to mind another active sporting star who goes back 60 years. His name is Amos Alonzo Stagg, now coaching the College of the Pacific.

Lonnie Stagg was a member of Walter Camp's first All-America team, picked in 1889. Lonnie was no kid then. After all, that was only 53 years ago.

"You ought to see this kid Stagg," a friend writes me from California. "He is up early in the morning for a set of tennis. And don't think he coaches this team from the bench. He leads the squad in the field at a gallop. He works as hard as any man on the squad. He is out there showing them how to block and tackle. He is all over the place. Not so bad for a young fellow of 80."

Stagg is the only coach I've heard about who has been active on the field of play for 53 years. He went to Chicago university around 1891, and was coach and player.

The Iron Horse

Much has been said and written about Whirlaway's famous long tail, his speed and his stout heart. But his most remarkable assets are iron legs and an iron constitution.

Where most thoroughbreds are about as brittle as a pretzel, here is a horse which has been ready to run fast, far and often for the greater part of three years. And in all that time he always has been ready to run his race.

He gets beaten, but in spite of all the racing he handles, he never runs a bad race and inevitably he is in there driving at the finish.

"He's never seen the day when he wasn't ready to run," Trainer Ben Jones says. "They say I overwork him. I don't. He likes to run. He has never shown any sign of staleness, which is the main answer. And I don't care how hard the race is, he is always fresh on his way back to the barn."

"Once the rider lets him start running he is hard to hold back. I suppose that's one reason they don't want to turn him loose too soon."

Horse Ages

Tony, the 40-year-old Tom Mix horse, was scheduled for execution recently.

Several readers want to know the oldest horse on record. Tony must have been close. I asked a few veteran trainers and found none who knew of any other horse that had passed 38.

The two greatest, Man O' War and Exterminator, are still shy of 30. Exterminator is as frisky as a colt these nippy autumn days.

Few horses, however, pass 38.

Children's Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

FARMER BROWN'S BOY GETS A GREAT SURPRISE

ACROSS the Old Pasture to the feet of the Mountain back of the Green Forest tramped Farmer Brown's Boy. Ahead of him trotted Bowser the Hound, sniffing and snuffing for the tracks of Reddy or Granny Fox. Of course he didn't find them, for Reddy and Granny hadn't been up in the Old Pasture for a long time. But he did find old Jed Thumper, the big gray Rabbit who had made things so uncomfortable for Peter Rabbit once upon a time, and gave him such a fright that old Jed didn't look where he was going and almost ran head first into Farmer Brown's Boy.

"Hi, there, you old cotton tail!" yelled Farmer Brown's Boy, and this frightened Old Jed still more so that he actually ran right past his own castle of bullbriars without seeing it. Farmer Brown's Boy kept on his way laughing at the fright of old Jed Thumper. Presently he came to the springs from which came the water that made the very beginning of the Laughing of the Laughing Brook. He expected to find them dry, for way down on the Green Meadows the Smiling Pool was nearly dry.

"I don't know what it means," said he, talking out loud. "No, sir; I don't know what it means at all, but I'm going to find out."

But they were! The clear, cold water came bubbling up out of the ground just as it always had and ran off down into the Green Forest in a little stream that would grow and grow as it ran, and become the Laughing Brook. Farmer Brown's Boy took off his ragged old straw hat and scowled down at the bubbling water just as if he thought it had no business to be bubbling there. Of course he didn't think just that. The fact is, he didn't know just what he did think.

"I don't know what it means," said he, talking out loud. "No, sir, I don't know what it means at all, but I'm going to find out."

With that he started to follow the little stream which ran gurgling down into the Green Forest. He had followed that little stream more than once, and now he found it just as he remembered it. The farther it ran the larger it grew, until at last it became the Laughing Brook merrily tumbling over rocks and making deep pools in which the trout loved to hide. At last he came to the edge of a little open hollow in the very heart of the Green Forest. He knew what splendid deep holes there were in the Laughing Brook here, and how the big trout loved to lie in them because they were deep and cool. He was thinking of these trout now and wishing that he had brought along his fishing rod. He pushed his way through a thicket of alders and then—Farmer Brown's Boy stopped suddenly and fairly gasped! He had to stop, because there right in front of him was a pond!

He rubbed his eyes and looked again. Then he stooped down and put his hand in the water to see if it was real. There was no doubt about it. It was real water—a real pond where there never had been a pond before. It was very still there in the heart of the Green Forest. It was always very still there, but it seemed stiller than usual as he tramped around the edge of this strange pond. He felt as if it were all a dream. He wondered if pretty soon he wouldn't wake up and find it all untrue. But he didn't, and so he kept on tramping until presently he came to a dam—a splendid dam of logs and sticks and mud. Over the top of it the water was running, and down in the Green Forest below he could hear the Laughing Brook just beginning to laugh once more. Farmer Brown's Boy sat down with his elbows on his knees and his chin in his hands. He was almost too much surprised to even think.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Rubber is not the sap of a tree, but is the latex from vessels that run lengthwise throughout the inner part of the bark.

Individual car owners can conserve rubber. Never drive over 35 miles an hour, check inflation pressure once a week, check wheel alignment every six months, rotate tires (including spare) to different wheels every 3,000 miles. Fix a nail a difficult habit to acquire and it will keep you rolling longer.

Why built of 30 miles an hour restrictions? Because 6 miles an hour is the limit for automobiles, with the speed warnings printed in Arabic, Hebrew and English.

The Army is supplied by hundreds of thousands of rubber-shod trucks, just one of which for a 2½ ton vehicle, takes more than 7 times as much rubber as your passenger car.

Pontoon bridges are built on rubber floats that take more than a ton and a half of rubber.

Salvage Drive Planned By 4-H

Boone County 4-H Club members will make a County salvage and scrap drive during November according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The drive has been planned with the approval of the 4-H Council and the County Salvage Chairman.

All salvage collected in the drive will either be donated to the 4-H and Utopia Club Fair Grounds Debt fund or will be located for sale direct by the owner, with transportation assistance to be given by the County Salvage Committee in getting the scrap to market.

The cream of most of the scrap lying around on Boone County farm has been turned in or sold. However, it is estimated that several hundred tons remain untouched. All who have scrap materials that they would like to donate on our County 4-H and Utopia Club Fair Grounds debt are urged to notify their local 4-H Club members, leaders, or the County Agent's office, Burlington 412. Our County Fair Grounds debt stands at $1,600.00 and all donations are greatly appreciated.

SELLS SHEARLING LAMBS FOR $14.50 CWT.

Lamar Congleton, Burlington, reports the sale of 27 sheared lambs for $14.50 per cwt. The lambs averaged $12.06 per head clear. The lambs were sheared in August and had received no grain feed until the last 10 days.

The Government the past year requested farmers to shear their late lambs so that the fleece would be from ½ to 1 inch long at selling time. These pelts will be used to make aviator suits, and all such pelts are taken over by the Government.

FUEL OIL AND KEROSENE RATION DATE ANNOUNCED

The applications must be mailed in time to reach this office not later than Saturday, 7, 1942.

NEW HAVEN SCHOOL PRESENTS "THE END OF THE LANE"

What? Where? When? Why? How much? . . . Answers: "The End of the Lane," a 3-act comedy drama. At New Haven School auditorium. On Friday evening, November 13, at :30 o'clock (E. W. T.) To entertained the public to raise funds for the school library, and to promote dramatics in the schools. Admision 17c and 28c (tax included).

You can't afford to miss seeing Bud "Gumdrop" Nix and Martha Elizabeth Ann engaged in such a beautiful romance! These characters, hired servants, are portrayed by Bobby Slayback and Catherine Carroll, respectively. Does Bud really love Marthy? Is he a flirt? Is he fickle?

Darling Carol Randal (Mary Katherine Shields) and her irresistible appeal attracts more than one male. Who? Come and find out. Pa and Ma Randal (Walter Wharton and Betty Thomas) are always there to steady their daughter and the other characters as well.

Flirtatious Ellen Seabright, played by Norma Lalbly, with a mysterious glint in her eye and an active tongue in her mouth, is a serious contender—for whom? Well, we can't tell as yet.

Mrs. Kate Sanders (Kathryn Knox) has a cute little son named Harry "Hal" Sanders (Lloyd Shields) and the mix-ups that he doesn't get into wouldn't be worth mention! Just you wait and see!

And, of course, the central figure is Jim Denver (Jack), as portraved by Walter Ferguson, who finds himself at "The End of The Lane." He finds both heartache and happiness. Who is he? Where has he come from? What is his motive for his actions? Where—

By the way, a young smart-aleck messenger (Billy Clegg), starts things rolling—and with chewing gum, too.

Mrs. John Masters, as director of the play, wishes that the entire community might be present to see this play of local talent.

Now don't forget, the time is 8:30 p. m. on Friday, November 13! If you don't see this production, you won't even know what a delightful time you shall have missed. We'll be looking for you!

Mrs. J. S. Thornton and daughter Mrs. James Vest were at Ellistion, Monday, paying their respects to former friends and neighbors, the family of Mrs. Nola Connelly, who died suddenly Saturday evening at Seymour, Ind.

QUICK SIGHT WINS

Eyesight is more essential, these modern times, than ever. It should be preciously guarded. Faulty vision rarely reveals itself suddenly. It is a gradual slowing-up process, of sense, of response of—thought and action! An examination, by us, of your sight, might benefit you unlimitedly!

Poultry Meetings Planned Nov. 11th

Boone County poultrymen will hold three local meetings on next Wednesday, November 11, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. Methods of increasing the 1942-43 winter egg production and 1943 poultry production will be discussed at these meetings.

Jim Humphrey, poultry specialist, College of Agriculture, will address poultrymen at each of these meetings.

The meetings scheduled are all on Eastern War Time and are as follows:

10:00 a. m.—Conner's Hatchery, ½ mile south of Hebron. See the largest Hatchery in the County.

11:15 a. m.—Grant Maddox poultry farm, 2 miles South of Florence on U. S. 42. See one of the largest and most scientifically run farms in the State.

2:00 p. m.—Mrs. S. B. Sleet's, one-fourth mile South of Beaver Lick.

Poultrymen who are interested in making more money from their poultry flocks are invited to attend one or more of these meetings. Three meetings are being held instead of one county-wide meeting so that those attending will have less distance to travel.

HEMP GROWER REPORTS 12 BUSHEL YIELD

Hugh Stephens and son, prominent farmers of East Bend bottoms, are growing two acres of hemp this year in cooperation with our war program. This past week they threshed and cleaned a part of their crop, which produced an average of 12 bushels of clean seed per acre.

Mr. Stephens reports that his hemp shocks and several of his neighbors' shocks blew down during the high wind last week. The seed shattered easily and considerable seed was lost.

Brent Spence Re-Elected

Hon. Brent Spence of Ft. Thomas, well known Democrat in this district, was re-elected to the House of Representatives, carrying every county in his district.

Rep. Spence is a member of several high-ranking committees in the House.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearing, assisted by their daughter Miss Ella Mae Dearing and the adult workers Mrs. Myrtle Carlisle, Mrs. Mary Stephenson and Miss Emma Jane Miller delightfully entertained with a Hallowe'en party on Thursday evening for the Youth Fellowship Group of the Walton Methodist Church.

Characters of all kinds came, from ghosts to Little Orphan Annie, leapin' lizards. The best boy character was given to Buddy Rouse who was so fat he could scarcely walk even though aided by a cane. The best girl character was given to Miss June Haley, whose graceful evening gown and late "hair-do" won success for her.

After the judging of costumes by Mr. Jack Conner and Miss Emma Jane Miller all unmasked, revealing their identity. Miss Ella Mae Dearing led in various games and stunts fitting to the season.

Black cats, skeletons, etc., were at every turn. Not the least of excitement was created by the fortune teller, and we may as well say for most everyone caught on, she was none other than Mrs. Carlisle.

Refreshments of hot chocolate and Mrs. Dearing's own made cookies, that fairly melted in the mouth, were served. Favors, that popped, and revealed a fortune rhyme were passed with the refreshments. The children and young peopel heartily thanked the pastor and family for such a pleasant evening.

Enjoying their hospitality were Misses Anna Lee Coop, Mary Belle Alexander, June Haley, Beverly Pruett, Geraldine Simpson, ella Mae Simpson, Marie Myers, Llydia Burdine, Messrs Buddy Rouse, Joe Stephenson, Jack Connor, Gaines E. Huey, John M. Baker. Late comers were Charles Carlisle and Guy Olen Carlisle.

LOCAL GROUP MEETS

The Division of Christian Social Relations and Local Church Activities of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Walton Methodist Church was delightfully entertained for the October meeting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Stephenson and their son Joe. A delicious covered dish luncheon was served at the noon hour to some twenty-seven members and their guests.

In the afternoon the business session was conducted by the chairman, Mrs. W. O. Rouse. Each member of the W. S. C. S. was asked to bring (or send) a gift of either hose, gloves, or handkerchiefs (for children) to the meeting to be held on Friday in the home of Mrs. Batta Conrad, closing the Week of Prayer and Self Denial, which will be sent to the Alvan Drew School at Pine Ridge, Ky. It was also suggested that instead of the exchange of gifts at the December meeting, to bring gifts of clothing for this same school.

A program under the leadership of Mrs. Lula Hudson was arranged and opened with a talk on "Prayer and Faith" by the leader. A number of articles along this line of thought were read by various members. Mrs. D. E. Bedinger read an article entitled "The Password," which told of a dream by the writer. He had gone to the gate of Heaven and they asked him for the password which was "blood." The blood of Christ and remeption. Mrs. Grace Dearing read a story of the work of the Salvation Army entitled "The Peaceful Army that Fights For All Men." Closed with prayer by Mrs. Dearing.

Guests and members present were: Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Dearing, Ruth and Louise Dearing, Mrs. Lawrence Kendall, Mrs. Lawrence Kendall, Mrs. Lucy Breeden, Mrs. Myrtle Carlisle and Guy Olen Carlisle, Rev. and Mrs. D. E. Bedinger, Mrs. Sallie B. Miller and Emma Jane Miller, Mrs. Mayme Stephen, Mrs. Ida Simpson, Mrs. Lotta Powers, Mrs. J. F. Jockey, Mrs. Bertha Lancaster and Bobby Lancaster, Mrs. Emma Vest and Mabel Vest, Mrs. Bruce Franks and Donnie Franks, Mrs. Lula Hudson, Mrs. W. O Rouse and the host and hostess Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson and their son.

TEMPERANCE UNION WILL MEET FRIDAY

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the Walton Community will meet on Friday, at 2:30 p. m. Eastern War Time in the Methodist Church. Mrs. D. K. Johnson wil lhave charge of the program.

All women interested in the Temperance Cause are invited and urged to attend. Your membership will be greatly appreciated.

MANY LETTERS CROWDED OUT DUE TO SHORTAGE OF HELP THIS WEEK

Many letters from our various correspondents throughout the county have been crowded out this week, due to the lack of help and space. We regret to omit these letters, but due to circumstances beyond our control we are compelled to do so.

Corporal Joe Kannady, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kannady of Verona, Ky., who is stationed "somewhere across the waters" entered the Army in May. Integesting letters have been received by Verona relatives and friends. One friend remarked, "He is one of the true soldier boys, who sends money back to pay debts left behind."

Sixth Anniversary To Be Observed Sun.

Rev. C. J. Alford

Sunday, November 8th marks the sixth anniversary of Rev. C. J. Alford as pastor of the First Baptist Church, of Walton.

The church has been blessed under the ministry of Brother Alford and wife. More than 250 additions have been made to the church, the larger per cent being by baptism.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 there will be an ordination of deacons. Those to be ordained are Mr. Bryan Rector and Mr. Will Soden. The Rev. John Huss of the Latonia Baptist Church will bring the main message. You are invited to attend all of our services which are as follows:

Bible School 10:15 a. m.
Morning Worship 11:15 a. m.
B. T. U. 7:00 p. m.
Evening Worship 8:00 p. m.
Prayer meeting Wed. 8 p. m.
Choir Practice Wed. 9 p. m.

"The church with a friendly welcome." "We preach Christ crutified."

Says Leaf Stalks Are Worth Million

Stalks from the present tobacco crop, properly preserved and spread on the land, would be worth $1,000,000 to Kenton farmers, declares S. C. Jones, of the State College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

A ton of stalks which have not been exposed to the rain contain as much fertilizer nutrients as five to six tons of manure, according to Jones. Tobacco stalks are rich in nitrogen and potassium and also contain phosphorus and lime. A ton of stalks contain 60 or 64 pounds each of nitrogen and potassium and about six pounds of phosphorus and 20 or 35 pounds of calcium, or the equivalent of about 100 pounds of ground limestone. These nutrients, if purchased in commercial fertilizers, would cost some $12 or $15; hence all farmers should carefully conserve and utilize their tobacco stalks, which might return twice this amount or more in crop increases, with present prices of farm crops.

A large part of these constituents are soluble and are readily leached out of tobacco stalks and lost, when the stalks are piled in the open during the fall and winter rains. They should either be piled in the barn over winter, or spread thinly at once on winter cover crops or on pasture and meadow fields. Tobacco is being stripped early this fall, and, with the splendid growth of cover crops and pastures prevailing, they might well be spread as stripping proceeds. If they cannot be spread now, they should be kept in the dry and spread when these crops begin growth in the spring.

ENJOY PARTY

The Junior B. T. U. of Walton Baptist Church had a masquerade party last Thursday evening at the home of their leader, Margaret Wilson.

After playing a number of Hallowe'en games, all unmasked and were served refreshments. Those present were Virginia Lou Scwab, Ruth Ann and Louise Isabel, Bonnie Clemons, Emma Lou Farris, Beatrice McIntyre, Frances Burdine, Betty Northcutt, Marjorie Carpenter, Randolph Beach, Mary Kaye Wilson and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wilson.

HIGH MOISTURE IN CORN

According to Kentucky Seed Improvement Asociation, Lexington, Ky., from all over the Corn Belt comes reports that corn is not dried as well as usual this year in the field. Growers should protect their seed supply by rigging up some means of applying heat sufficient to thoroughly dry their corn in about 3 or 4 days. If the corn is apparently not as dry as normal when put in the crib.

Faster drying may cause loss in brilliance or luster on the kernel. If heat is used it should be kept at a normal room temperature for a week or two after the corn is put in. Where large quantities are being handled it is advisable to make some simple arrangement which will cause the air to circulate thru the corn at a litle higher temperature for 2 or 4 days after the crop is in. It is suggested that temperature used in drying seed corn be kept under 100 degrees. If the corn is exposed to a higher temperature than 100 degrees the seed will be injured and damaged.

Where corn is stored in the crib for feeding purposes, care should be taken to not pile it too deep until it has had time to cure. With high moisture content it is necessary to cure the corn well by providing plenty of air circulation and not piling too much corn in one place. Damaged corn may result this year unless care is used in storing the corn crop.

DATES SET FOR GASOLINE RATIONING

Everyone who needs to register for gasoline must register at your nearest school on November 12, 13, and 14th, and must bring with you your license slip or you will not be able to register for your gasoline ration.

Don't forget the place and date and register on those days or you will not get gasoline books as there will be no other days on which to register.

THANK YOU

The Parent Teachers' Association wishes to thank all those who helped in any way to make their Hallowe'en party the great sucess it was. They wish especially to thank the committees and wish to assure the public that their support was appreciated very much. Again they say "thank you."

FORMER RESIDENT FROM CALIFORNIA HERE FOR VISIT

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hudson, of Los Angeles, Calif., were visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Hudson, several days last week.

It had been 23 years since Lloyd left Verona to make his home in the West, where he has built up a sucessful business in Life Insurance.

In honor of his return and in celebration of the elder Hudson's 50th wedding anniversary, the following relatives and friends were assembled at the Hudson Home in Verona, on Sunday, Nov. 1: Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Santhrope, of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. Pat Santhrope and Mrs. Miller of Ludlow; Mr. and Mrs. Owen Hudson and daughter Nita of Latonia and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stagman of Independence; Mr. and Mrs. Hess Vest, of Walton and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hudson and Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Ransom and Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Hudson, the host and hostess.

Scrap Drive Yields 1,016,155 Pounds

The total scrap gathered in Boone County in the Newspaper Campaign ending last Monday totaled 1,016,155 pounds. While appearing to be just a little under our goal, this is regarded as highly creditable inasmuch as the Salvage Committee is confident that numerous loads by individuals left the county without the weights being recorded and included in the above total.

The school children excelled again and turned in a splendid performance with a total of 588,945 pounds for the schools of the county. They attacked the job with resourcefulness and spirited enthusiasm, and showed their full hearted patriotism at every

The standings of the individual schools follow:

Belleview 105.270.
Walton 102,775.
Hebron 100.000.
Burlington 63,000.
New Haven 60,115.
Florence 60,000.
Petersburg 43,400.
Verona 24,285.
Hamilton 15,000.
Constance 15,000.

The Belleview school with an enrollment of 87 averaged 1210 pounds per pupil and everyone hopes this will qualify them for one of the rewards offered to schools in the state for highest poundage.

HOMEMAKERS' SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED

Boone Homemakers' Clubs will continue their war-time conservation program this month by a study of the use of household accessories to make the home more livable. The local project leaders will teach the construction of attractive articles from corn shucks for home decoration or Christmas gifts, according to Mrs. Mary Scott Moore, Home Demonstration Agent.

Schedule for November meetings is as follows:

Nov. 4—Constance, with Mrs. Henry Kottmyer 10:30 EWT.
Nov. 5—Burlington, with Mrs. Courtney Kelly, 11:00 EWT.
Nov. 6—Verona, with Mrs. Chas. Vest, 11:00 EWT.
Nov. 11—Hebron, with Mrs. Howard Acra, 11:00 EWT.
Nov. 12—Petersburg, at the school, 11:30 EWT.
Nov. 13—Walton, with Mrs. Eugene Mann, 11:00 EWT.
Nov. 17—New Haven with Mrs. Barnard Brink, 11:00 EWT.
Nov. 18—Taylorsport, with Mrs. Edwin Aylor, 11:00 EWT.
Nov. 19—Bullittsville, with Mrs. Albert Willis, 11:00 EWT.
Nov. 20—Hamilton at the school, 11:00 EWT.
Nov. 24—Florence, with Mrs. Harold Conner, 10:30 EWT.
Nov. 18—Colored Club, with Grace Carroll, 8:00 p. m. EWT.

All women interested in home activities are invited to attend these meetings. Local clubs will welcome visitors or new members.

Act to Defer Stock and Dairy Farmers; Southwestern Pacific Control at Stake In U. S.-Jap Struggle for Guadalcanal; Wage Ceiling Sets $25,000 Limit on Pay

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

A cigarette was the first thing this wounded Australian soldier asked for and got, when the medical corps got him safely behind the New Guinea fighting lines. Fighting in the Port Moresby area, the Australian army succeeded in pushing the Japs back in the jungles beyond the Owen Stanley mountain range.

GUADALCANAL:
Nip and Tuck

It had become increasingly evident that the Japs had massed a more powerful naval force in the Solomons than the United States could assemble from a navy divided between two oceans. Moreover, the enemy had concentrated superior land and air forces in its supreme effort to knock out the United States defenders.

Outnumbered on three sides by Jap forces with heavy artillery, tanks and supplies, American marines and army units on Guadalcanal Island fought doggedly to hold a small strip of land six miles long and three miles deep and to retain control of Henderson air field.

Whether the embattled Yanks faced another "Bataan" was dependent on how soon planes, heavy weapons and supplies could be brought to Guadalcanal. That the Japs were paying dearly for every effort to dislodge the Americans from the airfield was evident from a navy communique which declared that "enemy losses in men and equipment in troop actions on the island have been very heavy as compared to our own."

Jap onslaughts were repeatedly thrown back. One attack pierced American lines south of the airfield, but prompt counterattacks recaptured the lost positions.

The critical nature of the situation was revealed by mass landing of Jap troops indicating control of the sea in the Guadalcanal area.

With the sinking of the aircraft carrier Wasp reported in a communique, navy losses in the Solomons fighting were brought to 14 ships, including three heavy cruisers, six destroyers and four transport vessels.

NORTH AFRICA:
Mediterranean at Stake

American-made and American-manned planes and tanks continued to play a prominent part in the British armored offensive against Marshal Rommel's Africa corps along the El Alamein front—an offensive which might decide the control of the Mediterranean.

Britain's cosmopolitan eighth army, comprising English, Polish, South African, Australian, New Zealand, Fighting French, Greek and American detachments, smashed at Axis troop and supply concentrations. In the forward areas, crack infantrymen picked their way gingerly through tricky land mines and fortifications.

Fighting on both sides had a cautious, feeling-out character in the early stages as Allied and Axis forces tested their strength for decisive blows.

Allied troops showed their mettle in beating back counterattacks by Rommel's tank corps. Meanwhile American and British airmen continued their assaults on key Axis supply ports, bombing Tobruk repeatedly, destroying enemy planes and shipping.

Elsewhere in Africa, evidence had been mounting for weeks that action was imminent. The Vichy government had concentrated most of its available ships and men at Dakar, while American troops were reported in Freetown and Monrovia, Liberia, south of Dakar.

FARM LABOR:
Deferment at Last

Steadily worse had become the farm labor shortage. Drastic action was necessary to prevent a breakdown in the all-out war program. Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower commission, supplied that action when he ordered into immediate operation a far-reaching plan calling for occupational deferment of 3,000,000 "necessary" dairy, livestock and poultry farmers.

Under the program, draft boards are to reclassify from 3A to 3B all such workers already deferred on grounds of dependency. Local boards were likewise requested to grant occupational deferment to other farm hands who are "necessary men" and for whom replacements are not available.

A further step toward keeping essential workers on the farm was the army and navy's agreement to refrain from recruiting key farm employees.

Employers, including war plants, were instructed to cease hiring skilled farm workers. The department of agriculture moved to stabilize wages on dairy, livestock and poultry farms, while the U. S. employment service undertook to recruit farm workers from less critical occupations and shift them back to agricultural jobs.

SALARY CEILING:
$25,000 Limit

From fabulous-salaried Hollywood stars to low paid shop girls, every American wage earner would feel the impact of Economic Stabilization Director Byrnes' order putting a ceiling of $25,000 on individual salaries and freezing all other wages at September 15 levels.

Purpose of the new regulation was to combat inflation and increase federal tax revenue on corporations.

Control of all wages and salaries up to $5,000 yearly was given to the War Labor board. Under the regulations salary increases could be granted only in cases of individual promotions, individual merit raises, length of service raises, or under the operation of employee trainee systems.

Jurisdiction over all salaries above $5,000 was assumed by the treasury department. After the order was issued, President Roosevelt instructed Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau to make future payments of his $75,000 a year salary conform to the regulations. The wage ceiling covers salaries only and does not affect income from stocks, bonds or other sources.

WILLKIE:
Reservoir Leaking

American radio listeners who may have expected a rousing, table-thumping tirade from Wendell L. Willkie when he reported on his recent globe-circling air tour, got instead a quiet, solemn discourse. But there was no mistaking the urgency of action he advocated.

Appealing for second fronts in Europe and Burma, Willkie urged that we give our Allies more than "boasts and broken promises" before the great reservoir of good will toward this country throughout the world turns into a gulf of resentment.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

BOSTON: Dr. Victor Heiser, medical consultant and author said that 42,000 American war production workers had been killed, either on or off the job since Pearl Harbor, "in spite of industry's best efforts to forestall accidents. Approximately 121,000,000 man days will be lost to vital war work this year because of absences from the job from all causes."

LONDON: The United States marine corps announced that additional units of marines have landed in the British isles. Col. William T. Clement, Navy Cross veteran of Bataan and Corregidor, commanded the troops. He will serve on the staff of Adm. Harold Stark, commander of United States naval forces in the European war theater with headquarters in London.

DEMOCRACY STREAMLINING

If the President and the country want to get a full realization of how democracy is streamlining for action they should think back to the summer of 1941, just one year ago, when, for what seemed like unending weeks, the congress stewed over extension of the selective service act.

Senate and house isolationists were haranguing the galleries on the iniquities of keeping the boys more than one year in camp; telling the public how the navy was already convoying ships; revealing in advance that Roosevelt had sent troops to Iceland.

Finally by the thin margin of one vote, 203 to 202, and thanks to the sage generalship of Speaker Sam Rayburn, the selective service act was extended. Had it not been for that narrow victory, we should have had no army to rush to Australia, and the whole war effort would have received a tragic set-back.

But last week, a war-geared house of representatives passed the 18-19 year draft extension act in three days; and it should be passed by the senate and signed by the President inside the week.

Politically and personally, nobody wanted the 18-19 year draft extension. It was the worst time to pass it, just before elections. But congress is doing a much better job than most people realize for streamlined democracy.

ATROCITY PICTURES

A strong debate is raging among propaganda chiefs over the question of atrocity stories and pictures. The government has received a lot of such material from Allied sources, especially the Chinese and Poles, including such horrible scenes as Japanese attacking Chinese women, and pouring oil on live bodies before setting the torch to them.

Opponents of publication argue that the atrocity stories of the last war were largely invented, and when so exposed left the public disillusioned; thus the people might now react unfavorably and charge the government with pulling the same tricks.

Other officials argue, however, that the material is authentic, that it is not posters and rumors, but actual photographs, and the public should know what sort of enemies we are fighting.

It is apparently a part of the German psychological warfare to treat British and Americans with reasonable humaneness in order to keep us lulled in a state of moderate warfare. They save their worst tricks for the conquered nations and the Russians.

The Poles and Chinese are urging use of the material as a necessary means of fully arousing the American public to the menace.

Elmer Davis' Office of War Information is set to go, once the debate is settled.

DAIRY MANPOWER

Forthright Sen. Berkeley Bunker of Nevada had a long talk with the President the other day on the war manpower problem, in which he emphasized the need of swift action to meet the labor shortage on dairy farms.

"I'm from a farm area myself and I know what these dairy people are up against," said Bunker. "Unless we move fast we will have a serious shortage next year. Already many farmers are beginning to slaughter their dairy herds because they can't get help to tend them."

The President admitted the problem was serious, and assured Bunker that the War Manpower commission was aware of it. He added, however, that he doubted any steps the government might take to relieve the farm labor shortage would be a complete answer.

"The government can't solve this alone," said Roosevelt. "We are going to have to depend on the farmers themselves for individual initiative. I'll give you an example of what I mean."

The President then told how a neighbor of his in New York state, owning a large dairy farm, had partly solved his labor shortage by employing students from a near-by high school to milk the cows.

"Boys did the milking in the morning and a group of girls from the same school took over in the afternoons," he said.

"That sounds like a good idea, Mr. President," observed Senator Bunker, "but it isn't exactly a new one. When I was a boy on a Nevada farm, I used to milk 10 cows every morning before school and 10 at night. And I had to ride eight miles to school on a bus."

Aviation to Revolutionize America's Living Habits

Civil Aeronautics Administration Provides Necessary Impetus; New Developments to Have Social as Well as Material Effect.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street N-W, Washington, D. C.

One thing the war will produce, upon which there is general agreement, is national airmindedness. And there will be basic changes in the living habits of the nation, produced by development of the airplane, as great or greater than were produced by the automobile.

The automobile and the good roads which made its use possible revolutionized small town life. The airplane, according to the experts who manage to snatch a moment to think beyond bombers and fighters to passenger and cargo planes, is going to change big town life and perhaps something far more important—small-world life.

Recently I had a long chat with one of the men who heads up a plant that is turning out planes for Uncle Sam. That is a fulltime job. But he is a dreamer, too, and the moment he gets a chance to lean back and think out loud about the future, he paints an epic picture of the skyways of tomorrow.

"What the roads did for the automobile the airfields will do for the airplane," he said to me watching imaginary airplanes in a blue cloud of cigar smoke. "We now have 25 times as many airports as we had before the war. They are in many remote places. Those places won't be remote any more."

Nest for Warbirds

When he said that I couldn't help recalling a trip I made recently on a special plane across the country. Because we were going to see a lot of airplane secrets anybow, we were permitted to "look"—I mean by that, the curtains weren't drawn as they are in all ordinary passenger planes these days. I won't reveal the details of what I saw, of course, but I can tell you it was hard to believe. Suddenly in the midst of nowhere the runways of a field below would be visible. A few miles away I could see automobiles or railway trains moving along like buga or worms. I knew the passengers were looking at the landscape as they passed. But plain and hill and river were all they could see. Just out of their range of vision there would be a busy airport. Only warbirds nest on it now, but some day commercial planes will rise from these thousands of tiny intersections in the sky routes that will lace the world together in a tiny ball.

The way these dots on the air map have increased is incredible. The Civil Aeronautics administration's first airport program got under way in 1941 with 385 defense landing areas designated for construction or repair. There were 282 new airports by the end of 1941 as well as 66 new seaplana bases and anchorages. The significant increase in landing fields since then is, of course, a military secret. At the beginning of 1942 there were 2,494 airports in the country, of which 1,086 were municipal institutions, 930 were commercial. That in itself is significant for it shows how communities themselves pushed forward to open their skygates without waiting for a commercial organization to do the job. The rest of the nearly twenty-five hundred fields were army and navy, emergency or miscellaneous; 30 were private.

Airport Development

Meanwhile, with the aid of the CAA laws were drawn up in many states which in the year 1942 resulted in the passage of 42 separate acts by state legislations designed to provide municipalities or counties or other political divisions with authority to cure defects in or develop airports. Ten states passed acts to acquire land and construct facilities and operate them. Some states built flight strips beside highways from unclaimed aviation tax refund money. All this shows how aviation was becoming a part of the national political consciousness.

During this time one of the problems of the air that few people, even those who constantly use air travel, realize, increased—the traffic problem. As one pilot expressed it to me, speaking of a field where he learned most of his flying: "Our traffic problem there was a lot more complicated than the one on Times square in New York city."

It is easy to see why. Consider that the block system on the railways is divided into one-mile sections; that is, a train is warned a mile ahead of the block in which there is an obstruction to traffic. In the air a comparable block is now 15 miles. When the cruising speed of the commercial planes goes up the block will have to be increased. Traffic control is regulated by a federal airways system. In 1941 it was extended to the point where it separated and controlled traffic from 14 centers, established by the Civil Aeronautics administration. Over a million and a half aircraft operations were recorded in that year.

Tha increase in speed which military developments in airplane manufacture have brought about will have a social as well as a material effect.

Cruising—At 400

"Think back," my air-minded friend said, "to World War I. Our maximum speed of war planes was about 180 miles. Today, 180 miles is the cruising speed of our commercial planes. Today our fast warplanes make much more than 400 miles an hour. Let's be conservative and say that in 1965 our commercial planes will be cruising at at least 400 miles.

"In my opinion we will race the sun from New York to Los Angeles and not do a bad job; leave New York at noon and be in Los Angeles at 4 p. m.—their time.

"Going in the other direction, leave New York at 5 p. m., get to London for breakfast. Leave London at eight in the evening and get to New York in the morning."

It is easy to see that when London, New York and Los Angeles are that near together in terms of time, they will be that much nearer together in terms of thought—in habits, customs and understanding. There can be no distant places, in the natural course of existence, Americans on business or recreation will move through Singapore, Tokyo, Buenos Aires, Rio, Moscow and their citizens will be a part of our cities.

When it comes to the makeup of our own towns, large and small, it is easy to see what will happen when a normal daily commuting distance to work will be stretched to a hundred miles. The residential area of cities will fan out in monstrous circles. There will be a much more general admixture of viewpoint and attitude of city and country, of community and community. The melting pot of America will produce a much more homogeneous broth of humanity. And it will temper the world.

'Austerity' Luncheon Makes Lasting Impression

My friend from Australia dropped in suddenly in an army bomber the other day, as friends have a way of doing these days. His business has kept him in Australia many years. He likes the folks "down under" and he's doing a good job for our soldiers there and for Uncle Sam now.

"Australia is not fighting a total war yet," he said, "but she's a darnsite farther along than America. We haven't started," he told me.

"Because," I suggested, "we didn't get the scare they got and are still getting."

"Yes," he said. "Nobody expected the Japs to try to get and hold Australia, but they did fear that if there wasn't adequate protection the Japs could bomb Australian cities and the big war plants all along the coast and put them out of business."

The thing he seemed to feel that had made a great impression on the "austerity."

"Take the austerity luncheons and dinners—that is what they are called," he said. "I invited an American Big Shot to lunch. I gave him the menu. He said: 'I'll take a dozen oysters.' 'All right,' I told him, 'that will amount to three shillings and will leave you sixpence, which is enough for a cup of coffee.'"

It seems that you can buy just so much, no more. You can spend 65 cents for lunch and 85 cents for dinner. You can have your luxuries, but it doesn't leave anything over.

And instead of a limit on income of $25,000 a year which has been suggested here; after taxes are deducted, $10,000 is all that is left.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

For years the U. S. has consumed over half the world's supply of rubber. Close to 70% of the rubber imported by the U. S. was used in the manufacture of tires and tubes and tire accessories.

Last year a 6.00 by 16 4-ply black sidewall tire weighed 21.54 pounds, of which 11.2 pounds was crude rubber. The balance of the weight was in rubber, fabric, wire and chemicals.

Several years ago a man from Seattle traded a small house for one of the earliest types of automobile tires, of which he was a collector.

The most welcome gift for a Dyaks bride of Africa is an old automobile tire, which she wears as a necklace on special occasions.

The tires on the "Spirit of St. Louis" in the Smithsonian Institution are fifteen years old and still good.

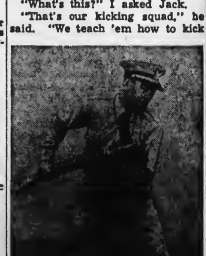
FORTY-SEVEN-YEAR-OLD, 210-pound hard-rock Jack Dempsey was putting in another busy day. Now a lieutenant in the coast guard at Manhattan Beach, the ex-heavyweight champion is directing the conditioning of several thousand men, who need this conditioning badly.

I spent the day with Lieutenant Jack, and I've never seen a busier man at work. From seven-thirty in the morning until nightfall he and his staff of instructors handle 3,000 recruits every day.

The wind was whipping in from the ocean as Jack moved from group to group, speeding up their work, giving out encouragement, helping his assistants on the job.



"They are great fellows," Jack said, "but they need this badly. More than anyone might believe. Do you know that out of 3,000 men here more than 2,500 never boxed, wrestled, or played any game to speak of? You'd be surprised how many couldn't even chin themselves once—just once. When they came here they didn't know how to hold their hands—nor how to stand. Look at 'em now."

The Dempsey Program

It was put up to Dempsey to work out this program and he's done a great job. We moved from group to group — 100 fighters here, 100 wrestling close by, a jujitsu class, a calisthenics class.

"What's this?" I asked Jack.

"That's our kicking squad," he said. "We teach 'em how to kick

LIEUTENANT DEMPSEY

the enemy and how to keep from being kicked.

"Nothing fancy here. It's all rough-and-ready, hard work, toughening up. No frills. And they eat it up. These kids are great. They average around 22 years and most of them never had a chance for any form of athletics before. They find out what it does for them in just a few weeks.

Building Confidence

"What we are working on beyond fitness," Jack said, "is speed and poise. But more than all, confidence in themselves.

"When they first come here they have no confidence at all. In about three weeks they are different fellows — heads-up, come-and-try-to-take-me fellows."

Jack moves around—"Hey, keep punching — keep punching — keep those hands up—what's the trouble—one in the stomach? Well, take a little rest. Then go and get him."

You would be more than surprised to see the difference between first-week classes and fourth-week classes. The improvement in speed, skill, poise, toughness and stamina is amazing.

Each group gets two hours a day of this in addition to coast guard duties, and that leaves little time for any resting spots. Putting in eight or nine hours a day, Dempsey at 210 looks as fit as he did at Maumee Bay 23 years ago. As fast? That's something else that belongs only to youth.

About Louis and Conn

I asked Jack what he thought about the heavyweight situation.

"After another year in the army," Dempsey said, "neither Louis nor Conn can expect to be near the old fighting form. Louis isn't a kid any longer. A year's layoff, or a longer layoff, is sure to tell heavily on his speed, his timing and his reflexes.

"I laid off at times too long myself. I know what it means to see a punch coming, but seeing it too late—or rather, not being able to call on my reflexes in time—is something else.

"If Louis and Conn remain in the army two years, it will be a miracle if either ever can come back to championship form. Both are great fighters and great fellows. But army training is entirely different from the speed and the sharpness you need in the ring.

"And there's that thing they call co-ordination. After a long layoff they just don't get any more—there's no team play between them.

"Joe and Billy may be better than anything left after the war, but they won't be the Louis and the Conn we saw in their big fight."

Honey Pumpkin Pie Inspires a Harvest Supper
(See Recipes Below.)

Harvest Supper Social

One of the nicest things about fall are those harvest supper socials when folks throughout the land gather together with the fruits of their summer labors and heap high the table with steaming chicken fricassee or beefsteak pies, fruits and vegetables, and pies, anything good to eat!

It's partially the food that makes these suppers unforgettable and partially, too, the way it brings old friends together before the long winter pulls in. Whether it's the local grange who sponsors the affair or the ladies' aid, or groups, the affair will be a tremendous success.

Remember the chicken fricassee?

Chicken Fricassee.
(Serves 8-10)

2 2-pound chickens
Salt, pepper, ginger
3 quarts boiling water
½ cup each, onion, carrot, celery
1 bay leaf
4 tablespoons chicken fat
4 tablespoons flour
Juice of ½ lemon
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 can mushrooms

Clean chickens, cut into pieces for serving. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and few grains of ginger. Cover with boiling water and cook slowly for one hour. Add vegetables and bay leaf and continue cooking until tender. Drain off liquid and surplus fat. Add flour to melted fat and cook until brown. Gradually add 3 cups chicken broth or 1½ cups chicken broth and 1½ cups rich milk. Season and cook until smooth. Add lemon juice and mushrooms. Place chicken in gravy with minced parsley and heat.

Baking Powder Dumplings.
2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
2 eggs, well beaten
Milk

Sift dry ingredients, and chop in butter. Add eggs with enough milk to form a heavy drop batter. Drop quickly by spoonfuls into chicken broth. Cover closely and cook 10 minutes without removing lid.

Cabbage and Apple Coleslaw.
(Serves 6)

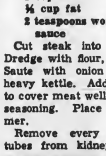
2 cups crisped, dried, shredded cabbage
Salt
1 cup diced apple
½ cup cooked salad dressing

Mix cabbage and apple with salad dressing and salt. Chill thoroughly and serve from a large bowl.

A highly prized and cherished favorite for these fall harvest suppers is Steak and Kidney pie, the meat floating in delicious gravy, topped with a flaky, crisp and golden crust:

Steak and Kidney Pie.
(Serves 6)

2 pounds beef steak (cut ¾ inch thick)
2 pork kidneys
2 small onions, minced
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper



This Week's Menu

*Chicken Fricassee
*Baking Powder Dumplings
*Cabbage and Apple Coleslaw
Spiced Crabapples
Bread-Butter Pickles
*Sauteed Corn and Green Pepper
*Honey Pumpkin Pies
Coffee Milk
*Recipes Given

1 cup flour
¼ cup fat
2 teaspoons worcestershire sauce

Cut steak into 1½-inch pieces. Dredge with flour, salt and pepper. Saute with onion until brown in heavy kettle. Add sufficient water to cover meat well. Add sauce and seasoning. Place on heat to simmer.

Remove every trace of white tubes from kidneys and cut into cubes. Place in kettle, cover with cold water, bring to a boil and drain, and repeat a second time. Add kidneys to meat in kettle and simmer together until tender, about two hours. Continue to add a little liquid and stir from time to time to keep meat from sticking. Remove meat to a casserole, add enough liquid to cover, and set aside to cool. Cover with a crust of plain pastry and bake in a hot (450-degree) oven 12-15 minutes.

There are so many good foods at this autumn banquet that unless your vegetables are pointed up, their consumption may lag. There's no danger of that if you have either of these combinations:

Sauteed Corn With Green Pepper.
(Serves 6)

2 tablespoons butter
3 cups corn, cooked
2 tablespoons green pepper
Salt, pepper
¼ cup cream

Melt butter in a frying pan. Add vegetables and seasonings with cream. Cover and cook slowly until liquid evaporates.

Savory Cabbage.
(Serves 6)

1 head cabbage
1 tablespoon chicken fat
1 tablespoon flour
Salt, pepper
Hard-cooked egg

Cook cabbage in boiling salted water until tender but crisp. Drain and chop. Brown flour in melted fat, add stock, cabbage and seasonings. Cook slowly for 10 minutes. Garnish with egg.

Honey Pumpkin Pie.
(Serves 8)

2 eggs
1 cup milk
½ cup cream
1½ cups pumpkin
½ cup honey
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ginger
1 recipe all-bran pastry shells

Prepare pastry shells. Beat eggs slightly, add remaining ingredients and mix thoroughly. Pour into individual, unbaked pie shells and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to moderate (350) degrees) and continue baking 45 minutes or until knife inserted comes out clean.

Pastry Shells.
(Makes 5)

¼ cup all-bran
1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
4 tablespoons cold water (more or less)

Roll cereal fine. Combine with flour and salt. Cut in shortening. Add water, little at a time, until dough is moist enough to hold together. Roll out on a lightly floured board to about one-eighth inch thickness. Place in individual pie tins. Trim edges, leaving one-half inch beyond rim of pan. Fold under and flute. Fill with pumpkin filling as directed above.

Sudsy Facts: Higher industrial activity and consumer income contribute to larger soap consumption, according to a Department of Agriculture report, making last year's soap consumption the largest on record.

Domestic oils and inedible tallow will take the place of imported and tropical oils for this year's soap supply.

Healthfulness dictates cleanliness, and that means not only in clothing and personal hygiene but in clean surroundings in the home, especially in the kitchen where food is prepared. Light or white floors insure cleanliness.

You can restore freshness by laundering draperies, walls, rugs and upholstery by using a soap jelly made by dissolving 1 part soap to 5 parts hot water, letting cool, then whipping to a fluff with a beater.

Best Food Storage in Outdoor Cellar or Cave

Storeroom Style Depends On Contour of the Land

The most nearly ideal food storage space on the farm is the outdoor, underground cellar or cave.

It is set all or part way into the ground, banked over with earth, floored and lined with masonry, and fitted with one or more ventilators for air movement. This type of storage provides the best natural conditions for canned fruit, pails or other tightly covered containers, as well as for whole fruits and vegetables. It also serves as a storm cellar for the farm family.

In some areas the bank cellar may be the best solution to the storage problem this fall. The bank cellar belongs on rolling ground. The lower part is masonry construction and is set back into the sloping ground. The upper part may be made of lumber, insulated in the upper walls and roof with sawdust or commercial insulation.

Another useful storeroom—and usually the simplest and best for the home with finished basement—is the special storage room in the basement.

A small room space, five or six feet wide and as long as may be needed, is separated from the rest of the basement by a tight wall. A door is fitted into one of the partition walls. At least one outside window is needed so air circulation can be maintained and the temperature controlled to some extent. It is important that the basement room be insulated overhead and in the partition walls to cut off all possible heat transfer from the basement or from the room above.

Hundreds of grain elevators similar to this one at Grafton, Ohio, are holding grain from thousands of farms across the nation.

Agriculture in Industry

By FLORENCE C. WEED

Wormseed

In one corner of Carroll county in the state of Maryland, farmers have been growing Wormseed for more than 100 years. Western farmers would likely not even recognize the plant if they saw it growing, although in its uncultivated state, it can be found in weedy areas over the entire country.

From Wormseed is distilled "Baltimore oil" or wormseed oil which is used in the manufacture of disinfectants and sprays, in paints and lubricating oils, in the treatment of hookworm, and as a vermifuge for cattle.

The plant is an annual which is sown in seedbeds in the early spring. In June, when the plants are six to eight inches high, they are set out in the fields, either by hand or with a mechanical planter which digs a small trench, drops the plant and waters it, then covers it with soil, all in one operation. The usual rate of planting is 3 feet by 14 inches, making about 2,400 plants to the acre.

Frequent cultivation keeps the weeds down until the plants ripen and the seeds turn brown and black. The plants must be harvested at just the right time, when not too green to have a high content of ascaridole, and not ripe enough to shatter. After curing several days, the plants are hauled to the still and made into oil.

Farm Lease Essentials

In farm leases, essential points are the date when the lease is drawn, the beginning and ending of the farm lease term, method of renewal or extension, accurate description of the real estate and other property affected by the lease, reservations such as right of landlord to enter to inspect the property and make improvements, and, finally, a definite and agreed price of rental and the time and manner of payment

On the Home Front

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE illustration shows what became of a mirror and piano stool. To the mirror and stool were added two wooden boxes from the grocery. These were placed on end about 18 inches apart and a shelf of half-inch plywood was screwed to the top. A frame was then screwed to the back of the boxes as shown. A curtain rod was placed across the top and the mirror hung lengthwise under it. An arm was then hinged to the front of each box. Paint was next. White, because white furniture is smart and because it matched the woodwork. The flowered chintz in tones of rose and blue-green with narrow frills of the plain blue-green tone matched the window curtains.

The dressing table skirt was made with a one-inch heading at the top and tacked along the ends of the table and the hinged arms with thumbtacks through a double strip of the plain material.

Can You Win Freedom From Constipation?

Too many folks go on suffering from constipation when there's no need in the world for them to do so! Why? Simply because one of the commonest causes of constipation is lack of "bulk food" in the diet. In such cases, cathartics and purges can give only temporary relief!

If this is your trouble, you can expect lasting relief from constipation — simply by eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN daily. This crisp, delicious cereal supplies the "bulk" you may need—gets at the cause of your trouble and corrects it. Start eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN today and drink plenty of water. See what a wonderful difference it makes when you correct the cause instead of trying to "remedy" the result! ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, it's wise to see a doctor.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE HELD AT M. E. CHURCH

On Sunday evening a very impressive service was held at the local Methodist Church.. Following a short song service and rather brief sermon by the pastor, Rev. C. D. Dearing, a candle lighting installation service for the officers and teachers of the church school was held.

The pastor led the service lighting his candle at the foot of the cross. The superintendent and his assistants followed, lighting their candles from the pastor's candle.. Next came the teachers each followed by their pupils each of whom lighted his or her candle from his teacher's candle.

As the candles were lighted each teacher in turn led her class to a position in the side aisle of the church.

When all the class members had lighted their candles, any visitors present were invited to take a candle and join the group as they stood in a circle around the church and joined in singing "At the Cross, At the Cross, Where I First Saw The Light."

The superintendent of the school is Mr. Clay Myers; the asisstants are adult, Miss Emma Jane Miller; young people, Mrs. Mary Stephenson; children Mrs. Myrtle Carlisle; teachers, adult men, Mr. E. V. Roberts; adult women, Mrs. D. E. Bedinger; adult women 2, Mrs. J. C. Bedinger; young adult (mixed), Rev. D. E. Bedinger; senior-intermediates, Mrs. Clay Myers: junior, Mrs. W. O. Rouse; primary, Mrs. Jessie Pruett; beginners, Mrs. Ida Simpson.

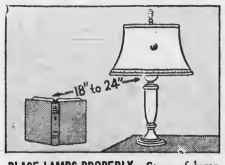
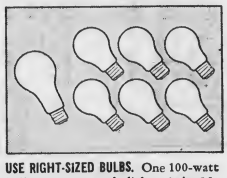
SIX WAYS

TO GET MORE LIGHT FOR YOUR MONEY

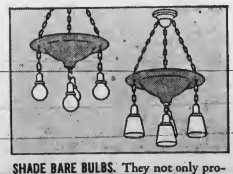


Good light is cheap but that's no reason for wasting it. Get all the light you're paying for by following these suggestions for making the most of your present equipment.



KEEP EQUIPMENT CLEAN. Washing bulbs and bowls will give you 30% to 50% more light. Use damp cloth and be careful not to get moisture into sockets or connections.

REPLACE DARK SHADES. Shades with dark or yellowed linings soak up light like a sponge. Replace with clean, white-lined shades and get up to 50% more light. Dust shades often.



PLACE LAMPS PROPERLY. Stem of lamp should be within 18 to 24 inches of seeing task. A difference of 12 inches the wrong way can reduce the light you get by as much as 50%.

USE RIGHT-SIZED BULBS. One 100-watt bulb gives as much light as six 25-watt bulbs and uses one-third less current. Use one large instead of several smaller bulbs whenever possible.

ELIMINATE COLORED BULBS. Flame-tint and amber-orange bulbs give a soft effect but waste light. Use inside frosted white bulbs of same wattage for more light.

SHADE BARE BULBS. They not only produce harmful glare but are wasteful where downward light is desired. Shades control and direct the light where it is needed.

COMMUNITY PUBLIC SERVICE CO.

INCORPORATED

GOOD LIGHT IS SPEEDING WAR PRODUCTION 24 HOURS A DAY

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT APPEALS TO THE PUBLIC FOR COOPERATION

The Christmas season for domestic mails begins December 1. The exigencies of war are bringing many and varied problems. These will tax to the utmost the ingenuity, the resourcefulness, and the ability of every Postal establishment if we are to maintain the kind of service that we have in the past.

The demands upon the Postal Service are greater today than ever before. We are confronted with the gigantic task of handling the mails, both personal and official, for the members of our armed forces, and for business enterprises engaged in the production of war material—ships, tanks, planes and guns. This task cannot and must not be neglected. Current trends indicate, furthermore, that Christmas mailings will be the heaviest in many years.

Thousands of our experienced employees are in the military or naval forces, more will be called and replacements, when they can be secured, must be trained. There is already an acute shortage of personnel in many post offices. Trucks and other essential equipment are difficult, if not impossible, to obtain. Train service is irregular and railroad storage cars, in which the parcel post mail is usually transported, are now largely diverted to war needs. These conditions will be aggravated by added traffic during the Christmas season.

In the past it has been necessary to recruit more than 200,000 additional persons, and to obtain some 12,000 vehicles to handle the Christmas mails.

You may aid us in meeting this emergency by refraining from asking Postal employees to stamp your mail, wrapping your parcels securely, address mail completely, and mail early. You should mail gifts and cards at least 20 to 25 days before Christmas, depending upon distance. You should have money order applications properly prepared before presenting them to the postal employee.

We have been asked by the Post Office department to appeal directly to our patrons and I am sure that the finest cooperation can be expected from the patrons of this office.

CONCLUDING SESSION OF WEEK OF PRAYER HELD LAST FRIDAY

The concluding session of the Week of Prayer of the Walton Methodist Church was held on Friday in the home of the president, Mrs. Robt. Conrad.

Devotional period was led by Mrs. J. C. Bedinger; prayer by Miss aLttle Roberts.

Articles were read concerning the schools to which the week's offering will be assigned. The Wesley Community Center in Oklahoma City, and Wood Junior College in Mathiston, Miss., of the home department and several schools in Uruguay and Brazil in South America, foreign department are the schools designated.

At noon a covered dish luncheon was served to eighteen members and guests.

The afternoon devotional was led by Mrs. Sallie R. Miller. Continued reports on schools were given and an offering taken. Dismissal by sentence prayers concluded by Rev. D. E. Bedinger.

To Save Sugar

By KATHARINE FISHER and DOROTHY B. MARSH
Authors of The Good Housekeeping Cook Book

THE sugar-rationing program may prove to be a blessing in disguise. For while refined sugar is packed with energy, it lacks all other food factors. Then too, many of us have been eating far too much sugar—oftentimes at the expense of an adequate daily diet which should include milk, cereals, vegetables, fruits, eggs, meat, cheese, fish, etc.

You will find it easier to stay within your sugar quota, if you remember the following points:

1. Serve fewer desserts requiring sugar. Instead serve fresh fruits, sweetened sparingly or not at all, and canned fruits, as well as fresh and canned fruit juices frequently—they're all rich in natural sugar, and delicious as desserts.
2. When you do make desserts, try using less sugar. Puddings, custards, ice creams, sauces, etc. often call for more sugar than they really need, and so the family will probably never miss the sugar you cut out of them.
3. Urge your family to use less sugar in coffee and tea, and to stir it well. Sugar left unstirred in the bottom of the cup is a waste. Try corn syrup, honey or canned sweetened condensed milk as the sweetener.
4. Serve waffles, griddle cakes, or French toast, with maple syrup, waffle syrup, honey, molasses, jam or jelly for dessert.
5. Serve cheese, crackers and jelly, jam or fruit for dessert.
6. Buy and serve packaged prepared puddings, gelatin desserts, gingerbread mixes, rennet custard desserts, pie fillings, commercial ice creams, quick frozen strawberries and peaches, canned fruits and fruit juices, packaged cookies, and other ready-to-serve dessert items. By so doing you conserve your sugar supply.
7. Encourage the family to sweeten cereals with molasses, honey, corn syrup, maple syrup, waffle syrup, etc.

Sugarless Pie Meringue
(Page 798)

Beat 3 egg whites until frothy. Gradually beat in 3 tbsp. white corn syrup, and beat stiff. Heap on pie; bake in a slow oven of 300° F for 30 min.

Sugarless Two Egg Cake

2¼ c. sifted cake flour
2¾ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
½ c. shortening
1 tsp. grated orange rind
1 c. white corn syrup
2 eggs, unbeaten
½ c. milk
1½ tsp. vanilla extract

Sift dry ingredients together 3 times. Work shortening and rind together with back of spoon until fluffy and creamy. Add syrup gradually, while beating thoroughly with a spoon. Add ¼ of flour mixture, and beat until blended with a spoon. Add unbeaten eggs, one at a time, beating well after each. Add remaining flour in thirds, alternately with milk in halves, beating thoroughly with a spoon after each addition. Add vanilla. Turn into 2 greased floured 8" layer cake pans. Bake in a moderately hot oven of 375° F 30 min., or until done.

NICHOLSON—

"How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" The only possible escape is acceptance of the Saviour, here and now, but many do not realize the importance of their day of opportunity nor of the "last time," for when the door is closed, all hope is gone—nothing will avail.

Friends everywhere are deeply grieved to learn of the critical illness of Rev. E. Howard Cadle, Indianapolis, Ind., nationally known pastor-evangelist and earnest solicit prayer from Advertiser readers for his complete restoration and that long he may be spared to bless the world. His helpful, inspiring Gospel messages now are heard over his greatly enlarged network from coast to coast, reaching million in all parts of the world. His room has been a floral bower, Mr. Powell Crosley and WLW staff having sent an elaborate remembrance in addition to those from other friends. Last Sunday morning he delivered a soul-stirring message from his sick bed from the dear familiar text, "The Son of man is come to seek and save that which was lost." and during his illness, most ably, Dr. Lakin, the former Associate Pastor of the famous Bable Tabernacle, brings instructive spiritual messages at the early broadcast hour of the Nazarene's Family Period.

CHAPTER I

Old Early Bill Cole knew full well in the fullness of his years that his days, held by some filled with iniquity and general hell-raising, were numbered and his sands were running fast. He had known for six months and with a sort of devilish flicker of glee in all that he did, had gone about making the final arrangements. He was a rare old lone eagle and in him was a stripe of Satan a yard wide, at infrequent times something almost saintlike, and on many a joyous occasion a dash of Santa Claus.

"Even if I got to die like other fool folks," he consoled himself, "I'm going to get me my mite of fun out of it! Hell's bells, yes, sir!"

With his preparations pretty well in order, Early Bill Cole of the King Cole Ranch still estimated that his course had a few weeks to run, but that was before this particular morning had blossomed in shining gold out of the pleasantly cool, shadowy dawn. It was always his habit to be astir before the new day. He had no great fondness for the night time. The things he loved with all that wild old heart of his were the good earth and green things growing, and the earliest hours with the last stars winking out rather like the twinkle in his old, hard, steely blue eyes, and the little dawn breeze and the sunup and the glorious unfolding. And of late he was up and out of his enormous old adobe ranch house each morning earlier than was even his habit. He didn't want folks to see him and realize what he was up to. For each day he was telling some part of his wide spread acres, the whole of his world, a last adios.

For many the year he had inhabited all alone the ancient, picturesque adobe building which long before his days had been the home of the Spanish-California Estradas.

At first, being younger and even wilder then than at the end, he had always had a house full, and very colorful accounts of proceedings under the red tiled roof and within the thick white earthen walls leaked out. But now, no. A quarter of a mile from the old adobe, beyond a big grove of cottonwoods, were outbuildings, stables and corrals and barns and quarters for hired hands. His later years he wanted to be alone, like an old wolf, except when he himself went out in quest of company.

Thus, this morning, he should be sure of going about whatever his own business might be, with no fear of a spying eye. He stepped along under the fading stars with his horny thumbs hooked into his cartridge belt, his battered old black hat pushed far back on his thatch of white hair, his high-heeled boots stepping briskly. He was darned if he'd crawl about like an old man, seen or unseen.

The house was on a gently bosomed site with big oaks all about it; to the west, miles away, towered the mountains; between the house and the mountains were little rippling green hills where many a tall pine and many a tight clump of young pines grew. He walked toward the nearest hill with the three nobly tall pines on its crest. Here was a place of vantage well above the slopes where chaparral and manzanita wove themselves into thickets for rabbits to hide in.

It was still half dark when he came to the one pine which, with no one in the least suspecting it, he had loved with a deep, still, fragrantly romantic love for nearly forty years. There was a reason, locked away in his own heart. In the half dark, and with no eyes to see, he pulled off his hat and looked up at the one star, still bright, laughing down at him through the branches. He put his long, thin, sinewy arms as far as he could about the tree. He pressed his grizzled cheek against the bark, so rough yet to his feeling so tenderly soft—

Then a rifle shot, clear and vicious, cracked through the still loveliness of the hour, and old Early Bill Cole felt a stab of pain. For a moment he clung to the pine tree, gripping it tight for support. Then, quick and erect, he stepped free of it and as he did so dragged both of his old guns, almost as old and worn and deadly as himself, up from their loose leathers.

His shrewd old wintry eyes barely discerned a puff of smoke like a wisp of vanishing mist hanging above the thicket where a fiercer animal than brush rabbits was hiding this morning. And not waiting for any sure target he started blazing away with both guns. What amazed him was that no second shot was winged his way.

So still was the hour that small sounds carried far and distinct; he heard a man crashing his way through the bushes, and prayed through clenched teeth for a fair sight of him. None was afforded however until his assailant, having run to a horse tethered under the crown of the slope, went up into the saddle. The distance was great, the light none too good; Early Bill leaned against his old pine and steadied himself and was very deliberate about his next shot. And then, with a catch in his throat, he laughed; there were times when the old man could laugh like a wolf snarling.

He had come within an inch or two of shooting the other man through the head; he had shot his hat off! That's what made Early Bill, contending with the pain of a bullet in him, laugh. The man threw up his hand and by a lucky chance caught his hat in the air—and then departed like something shot out of a gun.

Early Bill holstered his weapons, set his long, lean back against his tree and cursed, and when old Bill Cole cursed in such rage as now his words would have drawn rapt attention from a congress of mule skinners. What made him mad wasn't so much having a man try to dry gulch him; hell's bells, he had been used for a target more than once in his stretch of years. But that a man should sneak up on him and hide and spy on him when he thought himself alone with memories and an old pine—

It was a wickedly wrathful Early Bill Cole making his staggering, lurching way back to the house. The return over the brief distance which had taken him some few minutes required a tortuous hour. He got his door open, got halfway into his living room and fainted.

After a time—it must have been upward of an hour, for the sun was glancing in at his windows—he heaved himself up, moved shakily to a big chair, slumped down with a grunt and closed his eyes. Presently he stiffened will and body together and got his shirt open. He had lost a lot of blood that he could not afford to lose. The wound was through his side, down low through the lower ribs. Lucky, he judged, that he hadn't already bled to death.

Then quick and erect, he stepped free of it.

Without getting up he ripped off his shirt and with badly shaking hands contrived a bandage of sorts. Then, half swooning, he sat for a long time, feeling light headed yet as grim of determination as he always was to get the better of a bad deal. Finally he rose and made his way like a drunken man to the door opening upon the old Spanish patio whence he could look down to the cottonwood grove just beyond which the outbuildings were. He saw a faint smudge of smoke above the tree tops. He filled his lungs and tried to yell; he snorted, though feebly, in disgust as the result. He dragged out his guns; there was a shot left in one, two in the other. He fired all three shots, spacing them, and let the guns slip out of his hands. Then he sat down on the old green bench to wait. Though the earlier shots had evidently gone unheard, the distance now was less and the hour later, and he had hopes.

It was one of his Mexican hands, young Gaucho Ortega, who came slouching up the slope, wondering what was afoot, and found him.

"For the love of God!" cried the boy in his native tongue.

Old Bill licked his lips and beckoned the boy closer.

"Get on a horse, Gaucho," he said thickly, "and ride into town. Tell Doc Joe I want him real bad. Now, wait a shake! Darn you, can't you stand still until a man finishes? Then you find the Judge. I want him, too."

"Sí, sí, Senor!" cried the excited boy. "I'll ride Slim Jim, and I'll go like the wind! But, Senor! The first thing, I must get you to bed!"

"Look you, Gaucho," said the old Bill, of a sudden patient, taking into consideration the boy's youth and excitability, "if I've got to cash in, I can do it standing up. And if I'm going to live, what the heck would I want a bed for? Now get out of here!" A wry grin twisted his hard old lips, and he added, "I'll be here when you get back."

The little town of Bald Eagle, squatting untidily in its place in the sun with the cattle country lying to the south and southwest, and the hectic mining country in the broken lands to the south, was as lively as any cricket most nights and many a gala afternoon, but profoundly somnolent before what was conventionally termed first drink time. This morning you wouldn't have seen a horse tied to any of the hitching rails, nor a puff of dust in the road not playfully stirred up by the half-heated morning breeze, nor would you have heard anywhere the aching thump and jingle of spurred boots on the crazy wooden sidewalks. But on the porch of the Bald Eagle Hotel two old men sat in their rocking chairs and smoked their after breakfast stogies and looked with mild, complacent eyes across all that was to be seen of their town's stark ugliness.

These were the two man for whom Early Bill had sent. They were alike in many respects and in some were like old Bill Cole himself, though they never could measure up to his stature. Younger than Bill, they were, too, by some few years. "Doc Joe," who had been christened Joseph Daniel Dodge; the "Judge," for the other, Bald Eagle's one and only lawyer at the moment, bankar besides, and christened Arthur Henry Pope. Like old Bill, though some inches below his six foot two, they were lean and wiry and gray. Doc Joe was as bald as a door knob, the Judge's glinting white hair was long like a mane and both wore fashionable flowing white mustaches. One an old bachelor, the other a widower for so many years that it was as though he, too, had never known a home life, they lived at the hotel, had their three meals together, and did their porch-sitting in the two chairs which the community conceded were their particular property by right of homesteading.

They were sitting brooding, smoking ruminantly and digesting their hearty breakfasts when the Mexican boy from the King Cole Ranch came racing into town. He saw them as he turned into Main Street, and began yelling at them before they could hear a word that he said.

"Hmf!" grunted Doc Joe. "Something must have bit him."

"It's that half-breed from Early Bill Cole's place," the Judge said, with his shaggy brows perked up. "And he's riding old Bill's favorite saddle horse. Must be something wrong, Joe. Else Bill wouldn't let any breed that ever lived fork Slim Jim."

Gaucho slung himself out of the saddle and poured out his story in a deluge of words. The two old men didn't stir, didn't say a thing until he had finished. Then Doc Joe said quietly, "Take it easy, Gaucho. Now tell me—" And this time he got the essentials. He and the Judge regarded each other with poker faces, and for a time no one spoke. Gaucho, jerking about, started to tell the whole thing over when Doc Joe interrupted him.

"Here's four bits, kid," he said. "You go buy yourself a drink. You'll want to let your horse blow ten minutes. Then you ride back to the ranch and tell your hoss that we're coming. Pronto, kid."

"Sí, Senor," said Gaucho and touched his hat and moved away.

And still the two old men sat as still as the ancient hills behind Bald Eagle. They didn't look at each other again.

The Judge cleared his throat; sounded as though some of that dust had settled in it. He tossed his cigar away, only half-smoked though it was, and gnawed off a hunk of his plug cut.

"Looks like the old buzzard must be in pretty bad shape, and knows it," he offered. "Well, the old fool didn't have much longer to live anyhow. I always told him I'd outlive him; fact is, we've got a bet on it."

"I know," muttered Doc Joe. He looked his cigar over carefully, but instead of throwing it away started chewing it. "Same with him and me; we've got a bet. Five hundred, like yours."

Then he did stand up and hurl his cigar clean across the street.

"I'll go bet my little old black poison hag," he said cheerily. "You better fetch pen and ink and papers and any other legal junk a dying man might want." Then he let out a whoop, calling back Gaucho Ortega who had progressed only as far as the near-by saloon door. "Get along first to the livery stable, Gaucho. Tell Luke to let me have those two young grays to a light buckboard."

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for November 8

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

CHRISTIAN NURTURE IN THE FAMILY

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 6:4-9, 20-25; II Timothy 3:14, 15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it.—Proverbs 22:6.

The religious life of the home is a determining factor in the life of the child, for it is in the home that the child's whole existence centers and from which he receives the repeated impressions, day by day, which determine character and destiny. Then too, it is in the home that the parent has the opportunity to demonstrate the reality of the faith professed in the church and to show the child that Christianity really counts in the ordinary experiences of life.

I. By Recognising God's Word (Deut. 6:4-9).

Twice a day the orthodox Jew repeated the words of verses 4 and 5, "the Shema," in his time of prayer, morning and night. It was the foundation of his faith, declaring the oneness of God in a world of many heathen gods, and calling for complete and absolute devotion to Him.

But it was not enough that these words should be repeated in the service, they were to be taught with all diligence to the children and to be a normal and natural part of their daily conversation.

Here is a matter of great significance to us. The faith which we profess in the church must be effectively brought into the home. It is not enough to carry a Bible on Sunday, it should be in use in the home througbout the week; not only in family worship, but in the incidentals of daily life.

The family altar has gradually disappeared, and it is regrettable that it has, for the testimony of generations indicates that in family worship some of the most useful men and women of all ages bave received the direction of life which made them great for God.

Let us not readily assume that it is not possible for us to have a family altar simply because of the difficulties of time, place, etc. But if we cannot have such worship regularly, let us show our children that we have a real interest by reading our Bibles, by sbaring some blessing found therein with them, and by making prayar the natural thing in the home at all timas, not just in hours of trial or adverarity. Let us recognize God's Word in our family life.

II. By Remembering God's Blessing (Deut. 6:20-25).

The nation that forgats its past will have no future worth remembering. The Israelites were to recall that the glorious history of God's loving kindness toward them bore testimony to the truth of His Word and to the faithfulnes with which He had kept them. Their young people would thus be encouraged to trust God for the future. "Hitherto the Lord bath helped," means that henceforth we may count on Him.

In every nation there are those occasions of history where only God could delivar—and He did. The recollaction of such events in a way which will give the glory to God rather than to man will strengthen faith and cause men to look to God in the bour of need, and to thank Him in the day of victory.

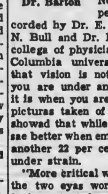
In the family too, we should cultivate the sacred memories of God's deliverance, of His blessing, of the joy of His fellowship in bright as well as threatening moments. Children who hear such matters gratefully rehearsed in the home have an effective anchor in a time of storm.

III. By Continuing in God's Grace (II Tim. 3:14, 15).

That which we learn of Christ and of God's Word is to be translated into living for Christ. The experiences of grace and the remembrance of God's blessing of childhood are not for that period of life alone but for a continuing in God's grace. This carries our thought a bit beyond the responsibility of the parent to provide the proper surroundinga and training, and strasses the duty of the child to apply, perfect, and continua that experience of Christian truth and testimony.

Too many careless individuals, who because of the desires of their own wicked bearts bava abandoned the church and the Book, blame it on the parents. "They were too strict. We had to go to churcb' too much. They made me go to Sunday school"—such are their excuses. Of course, we know that they are only excuzas, not reasons. They are the refuge of the hypocrite who is not willing to face his own terrible responsibility.

The obligation is on each one of us to continue in the things we have learned, and if we do not, the judgment must come upon us. If we do, salvation and blessing will come to us, and we in turn will pass it on to others.



May this lesson turn many an American home back to God's way.

TO YOUR Good Health

by DR. JAMES W. BARTON

RAGE AFFECTS VISION

We have all beard the expression regarding some individual who was "blind with rage" when he did something that he would not have done had he not been blind with rage.

Dr. Barton

What about being blind with rage? Does rage really cause blindness or interfara with eyesight?

As a matter of scientific fact rage or fear can blind you. In Science News Letter, experiments are recorded by Dr. E. I. Strongin, Mrs. N. Bull and Dr. B. Korchin of the collega of physicians and surgeons, Columbia university, which show that vision is not the same when you are under amotional strain as it is when you are relaxed. Motion pictures taken of the ayas reading showad that while 36 per cent could sae better when emotionally aroused, another 22 per cent became worse under strain.

"More critical was the test of how the two eyes work together. This is important for the motorist who is trying to judge the speed of an approaching car, or for the airplane pilot who is bringing his ship in for a landing." He must be able to judge distance and depth. From 14 per cent to 22 per cent of those tested became worse under stress of emotion. Only 4 per cent improved under the excitement.

These research workers therefore recommendad that men whose duties require them to use their eyes under powerful emotional strain, as in fighting or any hazardous situation, should have their vision tested under emotion, not while they are sitting calmly in the quiet of a doctor's office.

"Many of the crashes which involva army pilots occur when the flier is returning from an exciting and fatiguing flight and tries to land his speeding plana in a small field. In this situation ability of the eyes to work together is put to a severa test."

Pilots in the last war, after making poor landings, bave been found to have infection of teeth or tonsils. After removal of the infaction, their landings were again parfect. Tiredness manufacturas fatigue products that can cause muscles to be slow in reaction.

Just why the emotions upset the eyesight is not stated by these research workers but that it does is undoubtedly true.

Treatment for Painful Shoulders

As I have had ligaments in both shoulders torn and the left shoulder blade broken, I make it a morning habit to "loosen up" the muscles and ligaments of both shoulders by circling my arms in various directions, elbows straight, keeping arms above shoulders most of the tima.

I also try to lie with my arm above shoulder with band behind head or under cheek. I was interested therefore to read the raport of Mrs. R. G. Spurling and E. G. Grantham, Louisville, Ky., in the Missouri State Medical Association Journal. These physicians state that about 75 per cent of all patients with painful shoulders and arms, seen early, have been improved or made free of symptoms, after the usual treatment, by keeping the arm up above the level of the shoulder with the hand behind the head as much as possible during waking hours, and, if possible, sleeping with arm above shoulder level. Tying the wrist to the head of the bed is a good way to keep arm above shoulder level during sleep.

The application of heat (infra-red lamp) over the shoulder muscles is also advised. Diathermy may be used if convenient.

The pain and stiffness in this region is caused by irritation or pressure of a nerve as it passes over the first rib between certain muscles. The symptoms are pain beginning in the shoulder, extending into upper and lower arm, right down to hand and fingers; numbness; coldness and sweating of the hand and sometimes blanching or even ulceration of the fingers. The pain is increased by use of the arm in certain positions. Sometimes the only sign is tenderness of the muscle. In other cases wasting of the muscles is the only sign.

If the simple treatment of keeping arm above level of shoulders and the use of the infra-red lamp or diathermy do not give relief, operation may be necessary.

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, nerves, aching, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of how the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

IN LOVING MEMORY

Of my beloved mother, Gertrude Aylor, who passed away Nov. 7, 1941.

One year has passed since that sad day,
The evening star shines on the grave
Of one we loved but could not save,
God took her home, it was His will,
But in our hearts we love her still,
Her loving smile, her gentle face
No one can fill her vacant place.
Sadly missed by her loving daughter,

WILLA HARTMAN.

THIS IS WORTH FIGHTING FOR

The right to govern ourselves

BRAVE AND DETERMINED Americans left bloody footprints in the snow at Valley Forge, to give us the priceless right to run our country as the majority of us think it should be run.

Today, equally resolute and courageous Americans are fighting to preserve that hard-won heritage—for themselves and for their children. They know that in the Axis nations people are mere puppets bowing to the brutal whims of fanatical dictators.

That's why Americans are fighting. And, as they fight on to certain Victory, they are inspired by an unshakable determination that this government shall continue to be "of the people, by the people, and for the people."

The Southern Railway System, because of its strategic location, is playing a tremendously vital role in the transportation of war materials and fighting men. But it is doing more than that. It is also helping to keep the wheels of our national life rolling in defense of the home front. It is grimly but willingly taking on burden after burden—because it's a rich privilege to serve the nation in times like these.

When private automobile travel began to be curtailed by tire and gasoline rationing—the kind of travel that normally accounts for more than four-fifths of all inter-city travel—the railroads took on the thankless job of providing substitute transportation. That meant more trains, more cars per train, more locomotives, crowded stations, and a thousand headaches! But the job is being done—on top of the major task of handling hundreds of thousands of Uncle Sam's soldiers, sailors and marines.

When the oil shortage developed in the eastern states, the railroads said that they could move 200,000 barrels a day to meet the emergency. They are now moving more than 800,000 barrels a day. In the first eight months of this year, the Southern Railway System alone handled more than 19,000,000 barrels of oil to the North and East.

These are simply examples of how one railroad is doing its bit to protect our way of life; our heritage of freedom; our right to govern ourselves.

From this experience, a better Southern Railway System will emerge—more efficient and more useful to the people it serves than ever before—because, even during these trying times, we are taking advantage of every opportunity to improve our services, facilities and methods; every opportunity to plan for a better tomorrow when Americans will continue to hold their heads high as free men, proud in the knowledge that their children, too, will enjoy the blessings inherent in a nation of self-governing people.

That is worth fighting for!

President.

WARNING-DANGER

The approaching date for the National rationing of gasoline may induce certain persons to buy an extra supply in advance and store it in their garage, basement or even in their dwelling house. You should use every means at your command to warn all the people of your locality against this extremely dangerous practice.

Handling gasoline in ordinary containers is hazardous. One pint of gasoline under certain conditions is as powerful as two sticks of dynamite. One gallon of gasoline has the same potential explosive power as one hundred pounds of dynamite. Gasoline fumes are heavier than air and will accumulate in basements, low places and on the floors of rooms. Any tiny spark—even the spark produced by switching on or off an electric light, will ignite these fumes and cause a destructive explosion and a dangerous fire.

A fire started from gasoline generates intense heat and besides being able to cause horrible bodily injuries often resulting in death, it gives fires such a start they do great damage in a short time.

The state fire code provides that the storing in any dwelling house, more than six gallons in any other building more than ten gallons outside above ground is illegal punishable by fine and imprisonment. In case any gasoline is stored it must be in approved safety cans of not more than one gallon capacity.

Remember—We can't win this war with asbest Today every fire helps Hitler!

Deputy State Fire Marshal.

READNOUF MAKES 500 GALLONS MOLASSES

Otis Readnour of Walton boasts of being the largest sorghum molasses maker in the county. He finished on Monday of this week making his 500th gallon this year. He reports that sales have been good and that todate he is completely sold out.

His last run Monday was a large run off of the Williams variety which Readnour states was the finest molasses he ever made. The Williams variety is reported the best variety identified by the Kentucky Experiment Station. The seed were secured by the Boone County Extension Service the past spring from Mr. Roger W. Jones, Superintendent of the Quicksand Sub-Experiment Station.

Mr. Readnour states that he will do custom work next year for local farmers who wish to grow sorghum, provided they will contract with him up to his capacity before planting time. Sorghum is one of the finest and most nutrious of our sweet foods.

Increased use of sorghum is an excellent nutritious way of meeting in part the sugar shortage.

VERONA 4-H NEWS

The Verona Willing Workers 4-H Club met on October 29, 1942 at the Verona School house at 2 p. m. We had from the County Agent's office, Mrs. Moore, the Home Demonstration Agent, who made a very nice talk on the 4-H Club Motto which is "Make the Best Better," and why we should live up to it in getting our records completed as it counts 1,000 points toward getting, if we can, the Bankers' trophy. Mr. Frazier, our Assistant County Agent, also made a fine talk on how we can obtain points for our club.

Mr. Frazier and Mrs. Moore, above all, recognized two of our now prominent members, Mary Hope Chipman and Norma Jean Easton, one of ou ryounger members, who made a fine display and won several prizes. We repeated the pledge to the Flag and adjourned.

David King, Reporter.

Our fighting men are doing their share. Here at home the least we can do is put 10% of our income in War Bonds for our share in America.

Woman's Literary Club Entertained

At Home of Mrs. Robert Conrad—Wednesday.

Mrs. Robt. Conrad, assisted by her sister, Mrs. Lena Stears of Williamstown was the charming hostess to the Walton Woman's Literary Club on Wednesday afternoon. Presiding over the business session was the president Mrs. Clayton Jones. Mrs. Pearl R. Johnson of Lexington gave a Thought for the day, "Things Man Cannot Destroy", example the singing of the bird, the ripple of the brook, Man's faith in God. Mrs. Robt. Conrad gave a Thanksgiving Poem. The guest speaker of the program was Mrs. John Martin of Florence who was introduced by Mrs. Nell C. Blankenbeker. Mrs. Martin gave a book report from "Missions to Moscow" by Joseph E. Davis, which was quite capably done and brought all to a better feeling and higher regard for Russia. Mr. Davis was ambassador to Russia in the 1930's for a number of consecutive years and his book "Mission to Moscow" is actual records taken from his letters and files, and were entirely different from common opion.

At the close of the program the hostess served a delicious salad plate.

Members and guests present were: Mrs. John Martin, Mrs. Nell Blankenbeker of Florence, Mrs. Pearl R. Johnson of Lexington, Mrs. Lena Stears of Wiliamstown, Mrs. John Myers, Mrs. Grover Ransom of Verona, Mrs. Jane Sleet, Mrs. Anna McCabe of Beaver Lick, Miss Anna Hudson, Miss Mattie Hudson, Mrs. Mable Stansifer, Mrs. Bessie Conrad, Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, Mrs. C. Scott Chambers, Mrs. Anna P. Gaines, Mrs. Clayton Jones, Mrs. D. H. Vest, Mrs. Louise Rouse, Mrs. D. L. Lusby, Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. B. W. Franks, Mrs. C. J. Alford, Mrs. Olivia Wills, Mrs. E. Bruce Wallace, Miss Emma Jane Miller and the hostess, Mrs. Conrad.

Friends of Rev. C. G. Dearing were pleased to learn that he had returned from Christs' Hospital, Cincinnati on Saturday where he had gone for observation in his recent illness, and that he was able to fill his pulpit on Sunday both morning and evening.

Charles Brown Wins State Contest

Has Been Member of Kenton 4-H Club for Several Years.

According to J. W. Whitehouse State Leader in 4-H club work Mr. Charles Brown, Kenton County 4-H club member from the Bracht section has been selected by the 4-H club Department at Lexington as the State 4-H Garden Contest Champion.

Charles has been in 4-H club work for several years. In 1936 he was county champion and again he was the winer in the garden contest for the county, in 1942.

He has been selected as the State 4-H garden champion for 1932, because of his excellent 4-H garden work.

His record of 4-H garden work has been sent to Chicago where he will complete in the National 4-H Garden contest.

CORRECTION STENOGRAPHICAL ERROR-

Value of Tobacco Stalks.

In the last weeks issue of The Walton Advertiser an article appeared stating that stalks from the present tobacco crop, properly preserved and spred on the land would be worth $1,000,000 to Kenton farmers.

A stenographical error was made in copying this article and it should have been "a saving of $1,000,000 to Kentucky farmers," because the figures were intended for the state of Kentucky as a whole instead of Kenton county.

Woman's Christian Temperence Union.

The November meeting of the W. C. T. U. met in the Methodist church Friday, November 6, 2:30 o'clock with 11 members present. The leader was Mrs. D. K. Johnson. Rev. C. J. Alford giving the devotional 1st Timothy, 1st chapter, basing his remarks from this chapter and the Hymn "Since Jesus Came Into My Heart," and informing the members on developments in recent meetings he has attended. Some clippings from the "Union Signal" and White Ribbon" were read by different ones in the group.

Since there are thousands of women in Ky. who are opposed to alcoholic drink and the liquor traffic, the year ahead should be filled with activity. It is urged that each organized district start a campaign for organizations of new unions in every county of the District. 71 of the states 120 counties have voted dry, Kenfucky is the greatest distilling state in the country.

Liquor takes from the people over four billion of dollars annually in the direct cost of alcoholic liquors and another four billion to take care of the poverty, insanity, and destruction caused by drink.

This is not only Christian Work but is patriotic work, that we can help win the war.

Those who attended the meeting were: Mrs. R. E. Ryle, Mrs. Eleanora Hodges, Mrs. R. O. Hughes, Mrs. Shirley Guard, Mrs D. E. Bedinger, Mrs. Wm. Sturgeon, Mrs. Lula J. Hudson, Mrs. Lotta Powers, Mrs. D. K. Johnson, Mrs. J. L. Jockey, Rev. C. J. Alford.

4-F Men Needed In War Work

Opportunity For Men To Do Part In War Effort.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Plan have been launched here for the vocational rehabilitation of large numbers of men who have been deferred from military service because of physical handicaps.

"It's the patriotic duty of every man who has been given a 4-F classification because of physical disabilities to avail himself of the vocational rehabilitation services," says Robert C. Goodwin, regional director of WMC, covering the states of Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky.

"The country needs all available manpower. It is essential that all agencies concerned with ehabilitation correlate their services to the end that every possible worker be placed in a productive job.

"The labor shortage and the demand for trained workers have opened the door of opportunity for the physically impaired. Industry appreciates and understands the patriotism of the men who have been rejected by Selective Service because of hanicaps, and war industries are using physically impaired persons in ever increasing numbers."

Meeting with manpower officials here, vocational rehabilitation authorities of the three states have agreed to stage an intensive campaign to inform physically handicapped persons of the state-federal rehabilitation service, through which ach individual's case is studied. It may be found necessary to arrange for physical corrections, artificial applicances and vocational training in order to place the handicapped person in a productive job. Attempts will be made to expand the service in all states of this region.

Attending the conference here were Daniel L. Goldy, assistant to the regional director of WMC; Miss Tracy Copp, of the Office of Education, Washington, D. C.; Marlow B. Perrin, Columbus, O., director of the vocational bureau of the Ohion Department of Education; H. Earle Correvont, Lansing, Michigan, chief of the Michigan vocational rehabilitation work; and Homer Nichols, Frankfort, Kentucky, supervisor of vocational rehabilitation in Kentucky.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Rommel Rout Lifts Middle East Peril, Paves Way for Drive in Mediterranean; WPB 'Budget' Plan Speeds War Output; Allies Drive Japs Back in New Guinea

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

With Allied forces in New Guinea steadily pushing the Japs back to their seaport bases, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's recent tour of inspection was a happy occasion. The Pacific commander in chief is shown riding in the front seat of a jeep, while in the rear seat, scrutinizing the troops is Gen. Thomas Blamey, commander of Australian land forces.

NORTH AFRICA:
Rommel Routed

Wily Marshal Rommel's North Africa corps had been driven back on previous occasions. But never before had its reverses reached the proportions of a disastrous rout.

Yet rout it was as Lt. General Montgomery's British Eighth army climaxed a 13-day slashing drive by shattering Rommel's Egyptian defense line and pursuing his fleeing armies back along the coastal road toward Libya.

The decisive nature of the Nazi's defeat was indicated by General Montgomery's statement that the Allied desert offensive had resulted in a "complete and absolute victory" and that the Axis was "completely finished" in North Africa. Such a victory would mean a freeing of the Mediterranean and the chance to strike at the Axis soft spot—Italy.

Military experts pronounced the defeat the worst the Axis had yet suffered. Unofficial estimates placed Axis losses at 40,000 troops killed, wounded or captured. A Cairo communique reported the capture of 9,000 Axis troops.

The extent of the Allied victory was further indicated by the fact that 260 Axis tanks were knocked out, 270 heavy guns destroyed, 600 Axis planes downed and 100,000 tons of shipping crippled. A communique reported that Italian troops had suffered so severely in one sector they had asked for a truce to bury their dead.

Yanks Keep Coming

While Allied planes had harrassed the retreating Axis forces and land units pushed forward, it was officially revealed that 7,000 fresh American troops had arrived in Egypt. These units comprised ground crews for the air forces, technicians, engineers and members of the quartermaster's corps.

Thus had the Axis threat to the Alexandria naval base and the Suez canal been removed. Gone, too, was the menace of a junction of Rommel's armies with the Nazi forces threatening the Middle East via Trans-Caucasia.

NEW GUINEA:
Japs in Reverse

Three key points remained in Jap hands in northern New Guinea. Only by their capture would the Allied forces claim control of the area. These were Buna, Lae, and Salamau—all seaports.

Allied troops had made a good start by recapturing the inland base of Kokoda only 50 miles from Buna, after a hard-fought drive over the crest of the Owen Stanley mountains. This latest Allied success underscored the quick-change character of the war, for only five weeks before the Japs had been within 32 miles of Port Moresby.

That the Japs did not underestimate the dangers of their present position was shown by their attempt to land two transports with 7,000 soldiers at Buna to bolster their retreating forces. Allied heavy and medium bombers prevented the landing and drove the convoys off.

AXIS SPY-HUNT:
Latin America Acts

As a far-reaching cleanup of Axis espionage in Latin America was under way with the deportation by the Chilean government of 12 German and Italian agents, a report detailing the operations of the spy ring responsible for the torpedoing of United Nations ships was made public by the Advisory Committee for the Political Defense of the American Nations. The report was issued in Montevideo, Uruguay.

WAR MATERIALS:
New Allotment Plan

The United States moved closer to total war economy with civilian production cut to the vanishing point when War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson announced the genesis of a "Controlled Materials Plan."

Under the plan's operation, scarce materials will be strictly budgeted to uses that will harm the Axis the most. Production generally will be limited to military needs, shutdowns will be prevented, the output of war commodities stepped up and nonessentials eliminated.

So drastic will the control be that allotments of steel for civilian use in 1943 may represent only 1¼ per cent of the nation's total steel production, according to Leon Henderson, director of the Office of Civilian Supply. The civilian share of copper will be less than three-quarters of 1 per cent.

WPB Chief Nelson said war production would reach its peak by July, 1943.

ELECTIONS:
All Eyes on 1944

Politicos turned their eyes toward 1944 as they pondered the results of the wartime national elections.

To Republicans the results were far above their highest expectations. Not only did the GOP capture four governorships and nine senate seats from the Democrats, but they gained 43 seats in the house of representatives in an upsurge that rolled from coast to coast.

The result was that the Democrats controlled the house by the precarious margin of 8 votes—a margin so slim that any coalition could upset it. The lineup was: Democrats, 220 seats; Republicans, 208; Progressive, 2; and Farmer-Labor and American-Labor, 1 each. In the senate the Democrats retained a majority of 18, holding 56 seats to the Republican's 38.

Significant among Republican victories was the election of Thomas E. Dewey as governor of New York. It marked the first time in 20 years the opposition party had carried the state. Gone from the senate after January 1, would be the veteran independent, George Norris of Nebraska, as well as Democratic Senators Brown of Michigan, Herring of Iowa, Lee of Oklahoma, Smathers of New Jersey and Schwartz of Wyoming.

SOLOMONS:
Tailspins for Japs

Heartening was Vice Admiral William F. Halsey's report that 520 Japanese planes had been shot down thus far in the Solomons by navy, army and marine pilots. American losses, the commander reported, had been comparatively light.

Meanwhile, with Jap naval concentrations withdrawn from the Guadalcanal area after air and sea engagements with the American fleet, ground fighting was comparatively light.

Marines and U. S. army units did, however, push the Jap invaders several miles back from strategic Henderson air field. Big guns of naval vessels subjected Jap mountain strongholds to heavy bombardment.

Although Round 1 of the crucial engagements for the Solomons' control was settled in favor of the American defenders, Secretary of Navy Frank Knox warned the nation not to be overoptimistic, predicting that the Japs would come back for more.

HULL:
Backs Vichy Policy

More verbal brickbats have been hurled at the state department for its handling of relations with Vichy France than for any other diplomatic policy. But through thick and thin, grave-faced Secretary of State Cordell Hull has stuck to his guns in continuing recognition of Marshal Petain's regime.

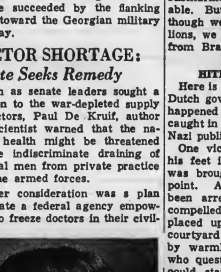
Latest evidence that Mr. Hull intended to continue that policy and had President Roosevelt's backing came in the form of an assertion that the "State department and the administration are entirely satisfied with the government's policy toward Vichy France and the way that policy has been pursued."

Mr. Hull's remark was in reply to a request that he comment on Wendell L. Willkie's recent statement that the administration's "lack of courageous leadership . . . nowhere is more plainly illustrated than by its continued recognition of the vicious and subversive Vichy government."

RUSSIAN FRONT:
Trans-Caucasia Next?

Balked at Stalingrad and on the defensive in the northwest as the bitter Russian winter swirled down from the steppes of the Don, the Nazi command had shifted its main operations southward to the Caucasus. Here Hitler's generals relied on a strategic device that had served them well in the past—that of concentrating overwhelming force at one single objective. That objective was Ordzhonikidze on the Georgian military road leading south through the Caucasus mountains. Russian defenses stiffened and slowed down.

The Nazi thrust first forced a Russian withdrawal from Nalchik, 60 miles northwest of Ordzhonikidze. It was estimated that 50,000 German and Rumanian mountain infantry, armored troops and tank detachments had then edged toward the snow-sheathed Caucasus mountains.



The Nazis' goal of the strategic Georgian highway from Ordzhonikidze to Tiflis would give them a rapid entry to the oil fields of Trans-Caucasia and bring them menacingly close to the Turkish border and the Middle East.

Elsewhere in the Caucasus the Nazis were reported on the defensive. Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, estimated that 38,000 Germans had been killed, wounded or captured in September and October during their vain effort to break through the Mozdok region—an offensive succeeded by the flanking drive toward the Georgian military highway.

DOCTOR SHORTAGE:
Senate Seeks Remedy

Even as senate leaders sought a solution to the war-depleted supply of doctors, Paul De Kruif, author and scientist warned that the nation's health might be threatened by the indiscriminate draining of medical men from private practice into the armed forces.

Under consideration was a plan to create a federal agency empowered to freeze doctors in their civilian status, order them to areas where shortages exist or draft them for military service.

Surgeon General Thomas Parran . . . Not ready to freeze.

Rural areas face the most acute shortage because so many doctors in these regions are entering military service, according to Dr. Frank Lenby, national chairman of the Central Board of Procurement and Assignment.

Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the United States Public Health service went on record as opposed to compulsory assignment of doctors at present. "We may have to come to it eventually to alleviate the serious depletion of doctors in many areas," he said, "but I am not now prepared to recommend it."

MISCELLANY:

WASHINGTON: The five-cent cigar was added to the list of war victims with the announcement by the Office of Price Administration that the ceiling price on nickel stogies would be six cents hereafter. Increases averaging 20 per cent in retail prices of all cigars were allowed by OPA to cover higher wartime excise taxes and increased costs of labor and production.

RUBBER MIRAGE

Unfortunate, inside fact regarding our grandiose plans to get rubber from the Amazon Valley is that we aren't going to get any more than a driblet this year. About 4,000 tons have been produced, against an expectation of around 50,000 tons.

Part of this failure is due to the jealous tug-of-war between Jesse Jones and the Board of Economic Warfare. Jones' Rubber Reserve at first delayed doing anything about Brazilian rubber. Later the BEW stepped in.

This situation, bad as it may be, is insignificant compared with the handicaps of nature. For in the jungles of the Amazon, nature has erected the most difficult barriers conceivable to protect her rubber.

Here is the tragic, inside story of what has happened.

First, the BEW, working in cooperation with Jesse Jones' Rubber Reserve, offered a higher wage to rubber workers, with the result that they flocked to the jungle. But this took men away from the lesser paid work of farming and wood-cutting, so that river steamers lacked wood fuel, and the jungle settlements lacked food.

Starve in Jungles.

The result was that a great many men actually died of starvation in the jungles. A few had been given shot-guns, but ammunition was so scanty that they were scarcely able to shoot monkeys.

Later the people in the towns from which the rubber workers were recruited heard that their friends and relatives starved to death. Now these towns won't send any more workers.

One factor contributing to the tragic situation was that a ship bringing food, firearms and more equipment to the Amazon was sunk by a Nazi submarine.

Also it takes a tremendous number of tin cups to collect rubber. A cup is tied to each tree, and catches the rubber as it slowly oozes from the trunk.

However, the chief shipment of tin cups got held up on the dock in southern Brazil, missed the boat, then were further delayed by submarine warfare, and now have missed the current rubber season.

A lot of these handicaps, such as submarine warfare, are insurmountable. But the net result is that although we are spending many millions, we will get almost no rubber from Brazil this year.

HITLER'S NEW ORDER

Here is an authentic account from Dutch government sources, of what happened to Hollanders who were caught in the act of printing an anti-Nazi publication in the Netherlands.

One victim was forced to place his feet in a tub of water, which was brought slowly to the boiling point. Another patriot, who had been arrested in mid-winter, was compelled to undress and was placed upon a chair in the open courtyard of the prison, surrounded by warmly dressed Gestapo men, who questioned him as long as he could stand it.

Whenever he fainted, they poured hot drinks down his throat and rubbed his numb body until the interrogation could be continued.

Still another Hollander had his fingernails torn out; and a very common method of torture was the use of dazzling light directed upon the eyes of the suspect.

When the Nazis first took over they gave orders to their troops to deal gently with local populations. But with continued local resistance, the plans are off. Men and women all over Europe are learning the true meaning of the "new order" now promised by Germany.

SENATOR DOXEY'S RAILROAD

The subway train between the Capitol and the Senate office building is a great help to senators shuttling back and forth to their offices, but Senator Wall Doxey of Mississippi would be the first to admit that it can prove a political liability.

Doxey seldom uses the little tramway, preferring to walk. Nonetheless, Mississippi farmers call it "Doxey's Railroad," and according to friends, it had something to do with the Mississippian's primary defeat. Here's the story:

James Eastland, who defeated Doxey, made a practice of inquiring, during speeches in farm communities, if there was a railroad nearby.

"Nope," someone would reply. "Nearest one's ten miles."

"What a shame," sighed Eastland. "You know, Senator Doxey has a private railroad in Washington which he uses to ride back and forth to his office."

War Man Power Problem Is Still Far From Solution

National Service Act Held Back; McNutt-Hershey Conflict Complicates Situation; Competition Keen as Ever.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

"Sorry, sir," said the waiter on the dining car, "we can only serve you one cup of coffee."

"Sorry, sir," said a somewhat weary voice of the hotel room service, "we can't serve you ham with your eggs, this is a meatless day."

And so a simple, wandering Washingtonian, who had stepped outside of the capital for a brief interlude, found out there was a war going on. Back in the shadow of the Capitol dome, I began to wonder whether, before long, when Uncle Sam passed his plate for a second helping the farmer would say: "Sorry, sir, this is helpless day on the farm, we aren't furnishing food any more."

When that happens, perhaps we'll get that national service act.

Behind the delay in settling the farm-labor problem and the other problems which have arisen because the government hasn't had the nerve to tell anybody but the soldiers where to go, what to do and when to do it, is a lot of honest uncertainty, some inter-departmental friction but chiefly plain fear of stepping on the public's toes.

Many believed that the public aren't afraid of their toes and are only waiting to be told what to do and the real solution may be the one offered by Wendell Willkie when he said in his report to the nation that "it is up to us to make our leaders give us more to do."

Distribution Problem

We have plenty of people to "do," but we are not distributing them properly, not giving the right people the right jobs. We are still letting people decide themselves what they are going to do, not telling them what is the thing they must do to win the war. When I reported last on the man-power problem I felt sure that by this time a national service act would be before congress. Congress has drawn up several of these acts but administration spokesmen have told them "not yet"; meanwhile piecemeal measures are offered.

The story behind the conflict between Paul McNutt's Man-Power commission and General Hershey's Selective Service system is an example of how and gets into the gearbox when the President doesn't clamp down the lid and give orders.

Some of the New Dealers began to worry about the danger that McNutt might grow too big politically and it might be a harder job to sidetrack him at the 1944 Democratic national convention than it was last time. And goodness knows it was a painful process then. So they contrived to hand him the hottest potato, the job that would make more enemies than any other, head of the Man-Power commission. The presumption, according to these not altogether nonpartisan friends of McNutt, was that he would either fall down on the job or do it so well nobody would like him.

Meanwhile the theory was that he was bound to come into conflict with General Hershey. One or the other had to select the men for service: either McNutt would be given the power to tell Hershey whom he couldn't take for the army or Hershey would be given power to tell his draft boards whom they could take. So the battle was on.

No Separate Systems

Since then McNutt has come out and stated that he did not believe it was necessary to set up a separate system of selection—one for military, which already exists in the draft boards, and another to classify civilian service. But, under White House orders, he made it plain that he had no bill to submit to congress. His labor-management committee submitted its report directly to the President.

While all this has been going on the Selective Service system has been pacing the floor outside the Man-Power commission's door. The commission is supposed to advise Selective Service but for many months it refused to say aye, yea or no.

According to Selective Service officials the moment they had the opportunity they submitted a plan to take care of the one sore thumb of the man-power problem that threatens to interfere with our eating, farm labor. The plan would:

1. Tell the farmer boys their patriotic duty is on the farm, that they must stay there. If they leave they would immediately be drafted.

2. Stop all voluntary recruiting.

That, according to General Hershey, would at least stop the drain of farm labor and save the boys from the stigma of remaining in civilian clothes when other boys in non-essential jobs were joining up.

According to the Selective Service officials that proposal was sat on for six months while the cries of the farmer rose higher and higher.

Complaints to Hershey

Most of the complaints were directed at General Hershey. But his aides point out that Selective Service has taken far less men from the farms than the other two sirens that lure the men away from their prosaic jobs: One is the recruiting sergeant and the other is industry. The recruiting sergeant offers adventure with a patriotic background. Industry offers big pay and bright lights.

And to show how the competition for manpower still goes on among government agencies itself, Selective Service officials charge that the United States Employment service, which recruits men and women for industry, has been just as energetic as those handsome army, navy and marine sergeants, in recruiting the boys on the farm.

When, just before the elections, both Man-Power Commissioner McNutt and Selective Service Director Hershey both testified that there was no immediate need for a man-power bill they were probably glad that they could do so—which meant that it had probably been strongly indicated from higher up that they had better do so. For neither gentleman would care to make a blanket recommendation for a measure which might give the other the real authority in administering.

The measure will probably remain something to do tomorrow until it becomes clear that tomorrow's ham and eggs may depend on action today.

OWI Proves Boon To Capital Writers

A stranger coming to Washington and watching the men and women filing into the White House executive offices for the semi-weekly press and radio conference with the President; or visiting the senate or the house of representatives on a day when important news is breaking when the press and radio galleries above the respective rostrums are filled, would think that Washington is pretty well covered for news.

There are more than 600 members of the press and radio galleries. There are many, many more reporters and broadcasters whose duties do not make them eligible for these groups.

But in addition to these men and women whose job it is to write about what is happening in your capital, 4,000 people who are spending between a million and two million dollars a month are hired by the government to disseminate information. The Office of War Information has 3,500 employees.

There are some 200 persons in the army public relations bureau and a hundred or so in the navy public relations. The Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, Nelson Rockefeller, has more than a hundred members in its public relations department. The persons doing similar work for the War Production board and the Office of Price Administration have a hundred and fifty more.

Of course, the old line agencies have their public relations staffs but we are just talking about the war news agencies.

As far as my own contact with the Office of War Information goes I must say its members have been a great help to me. If I run into a snarl of official dispatches, question able rumors, I do what other newsmen do, call up the OWI and usually get a very straight and satisfactory story.

But nursing us newsmen along is only half their job—the rest is disseminating information abroad—where it will do the most good—and don't ask who and when and where—that's not for publication.

Woman's Rights Champion

THE recent election of Mrs. Myra Bradwell to the Editor's Hall of Fame at the University of Illinois, because she was the first woman to become a member of the Illinois Press association, was an event of more than local significance. For Mrs. Bradwell, the able editor of the Chicago Legal News who was three times elected vice president of the state press association, was also an attorney and as such she became a national figure as one of the pioneers in the fight for equal rights for women.

Born in Manchester, Vt., on February 12, 1831, Myra Colby emigrated to Illinois in the early 1840s. She was educated at a "ladies seminary" in Elgin, Ill., where she later became a teacher.

After teaching school for a time in Memphis, Tenn., she returned to Chicago where she met and married Judge B. Bradwell. With no idea of becoming a practitioner, she began studying law under the tutelage of her husband. Later she decided that she might be a valuable assistant to Judge Bradwell in his business, so she applied herself vigorously to her studies and passed the Illinois bar examinations. But she had to obtain a formal license, since the Illinois statutes provided that no "person" could practice law in the state without obtaining a license from two of the justices of the supreme court. Therefore in 1872 she presented her application and was surprised to learn that she was not a "person."

As a married woman, Mrs. Bradwell could not make a contract, the court said. Since she could not make a contract, she was not a person! "And, even if the legislature did not exclude women from the practice of law, it must have intended to do so because we adopted the common law of England and for a woman to have entered the courts of Westminster hall as a barrister would have created hardly less astonishment than if she should be elected to the house of commons" the learned justices continued.

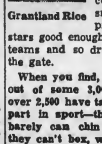
But Myra Bradwell was not convinced by this logic. She cited the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, enacted four years earlier, which said that no law could abridge the privileges and immunities of a citizen of the United States. She was a citizen of the United States, then why should her privilege to practice law be abridged? Evidently the Illinois justices didn't recognize the Fourteenth amendment for they refused to grant her a license.

Thereupon Mrs. Bradwell sued out a writ of error against the state of Illinois in the Supreme court of the United States. Her case was argued by United States Senator Matt. Carpenter of Wisconsin, but the Supreme court not only upheld and approved the ruling of the Illinois court but made some additions of its own. Instead of only one opinion being handed down, there were many affirming the decision.



However one was different. At the conclusion of all the opinions was this notation: "The Chief Justice, Samuel Portland Chase, dissented from the judgment of the Court, and from all the opinions." But that was small satisfaction to Myra Bradwell. She had appealed to the highest court in the land for justice and it had been refused. She never again renewed her application for a license to practice law. Several years later she was much surprised to receive a certificate of admission from the Illinois supreme court, the very court that had first refused her original application! Thus she also became the first woman member of the Illinois Bar association.

Mrs. Bradwell established the Chicago Legal News, the publication which won her membership in the Illinois Press association, in 1869. It was the first weekly legal newspaper ever published in the western states and Mrs. Bradwell was both its editor and business manager for many years. The Illinois state legislature gave her a special charter for her paper and passed several acts making its contents evidence in the courts and a valid medium for the publication of legal notices. She was also "a leader in promoting professional ideals in journalism."

Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

THERE are enough problems confronting the country today without trying to dig up any new ones. But there is one we should meet now, and take care of in future years.

Grantland Rice

This is the matter of far better physical training and development on the part of millions on the younger side.

We have been rated a great athletic nation. But apparently this has concerned only a small percentage of picked people—of stars good enough to make big-time teams and so draw big crowds at the gate.

When you find, for example, that out of some 3,000 young recruits over 2,500 have taken practically no part in sport—that most of these barely can chin themselves; that they can't box, wrestle, swim, play baseball or football with any skill; that they are quickly exhausted; that they are clumsy—you begin to get part of the answer.

I know of one district where, out of 81 draftees, 66 were turned down on the physical side earlier in the war. There is something entirely out of focus with our form of athletic life.

The Younger Side

What this country must have is enforced athletic training, nation-wide, from the ages of 13 to 16 or 18. Above all, it should include hiking, running, jumping and swimming.

Before the war we were facing a legless country, where kids live on wheels.

The program also should include such competitions as boxing and wrestling, basketball and baseball. A rough, body-contact game, such as football, should not be compulsory before 15 or 16. Kicking, passing and touch football fit in nicely—not hard tackling or blocking.

I believe that Texas, for example, overdoes high-school football. Too many hard games for undeveloped kids can do more harm than good. Six or seven games a season for those under 18 or 19 is quite enough.

But Texas, at least, has erred on the right side. In too many other states the kids are undertrained, not overtrained.

An Example

I got an eyeful of this poor condition while walking around with Lieut. Jack Dempsey of the coast guard. The coastguardsmen were volunteers. There were several thousand from all over the map. They were keen, dead game, willing. But most of them had known little physical training before they came to camp. I'd say about four out of five.

As Jack pointed out: "They'll tackle a bulldog. But many of them don't know their left hand from their right hand when they first come here, and they have a hard time chinning themselves just once.

"I never saw a more willing bunch, though. They just never had a chance to learn. It's a shame we've had an athletic system that developed a comparatively few stars, instead of giving every kid a chance. It means a lot in more ways than one, and I don't mean on the physical side alone, which, of course, is important. There's also the mental side, which means self-confidence.

"A young fellow who can handle himself also believes in himself," the ex-champ went on. "If he can fight a little, wrestle a little, swim or play some game fairly well, his head is up. But when he knows he is no good at any game, it is only natural that he has no confidence in himself."

Youth Training

So, how about a national program of athletic training for all between the ages of 12 and 18? After that they'll take care of themselves.

This training, in almost any sport, will help develop stamina, speed, a certain amount of skill and self-confidence.

There are no finer developing exercises than walking, running, swimming, jumping and climbing.

For hand exercises use a small rubber ball—or any small object—to be gripped and squeezed to develop finger strength. Ask Lefty Grove or Charlie Keller about this.

In the way of competitive games there are basketball, baseball, touch football, track and field, swimming.

Scoring Rules

We never yet have been able to see any sense in the scoring rules or regulations whereby long gains for touchdowns are not scored as first downs also. If a back runs 12 yards and is stopped, he registers a first down. If he runs 40 yards and scores, there is no first down.

The present system can be quite confusing. There was a game not so far back in which one team piled up a 40 to 0 score, and yet was not credited with a first down. All scores were made on long runs or passes.

PREPAREDNESS

A NATION at war must guard its health. One sure guard, and one of the best forms of preparedness is proper diet.

Since World War I, the American Red Cross has offered the nation's housewives nutrition courses, designed to teach both men and women how to eat and keep well and strong. But Americans felt that since they were the best fed people of the world, they must also be the best nourished. In that belief they were mistaken.

The army reported that one-third of all applicants for war service were being rejected because of poor health—bad teeth, heart trouble, poor eyesight, skin diseases—all traceable to undernourishment. America's mothers and housewives were shocked into action.

Within the past year, more than 250,000 women have won Red Cross Food and Nutrition certificates by attending these courses held by Red Cross chapters in more than 1,850 counties throughout the United States.

In these Food and Nutrition courses, women learned the importance of preparing and serving the right amounts of the right kinds of foods—foods which contained the needed health protective qualities to keep their husbands fit for jobs in the shipyards, the farms, the mines, the steel mills, and to build their children into physically stronger Americans.

Left-Handedness

Left-handedness occurs twice as often among individuals of twin birth as among those of single birth and with about the same frequency in fraternal as in identical twins. Neither of these tendencies is fully understood by geneticists.

Chinese 'Rights'

In New York city, every Chinese who rents a store or some other business building claims that he has a "basic property right" in it and, therefore, will not allow another Chinese to lease it until the man has purchased this right, says Collier's. When such a demand runs into thousands of dollars, the owner is seldom able to rent the property again to a member of this race.

Smile Awhile

Don't It, Though?

"That's great, Mac, you've holed in one."

"Well, it saves wear and tear on the ball."

Hot or Cold?

A track supervisor received the following note from one of his foremen:

"I am sending in accident report on Casey's foot, which he struck with the spike maul. Now, under 'Remarks,' do you want mine or Casey's?"

The young man burning with love usually makes a fuel of himself.

In His Line

"Any man can find work if he'll only use his brains," said the efficiency expert, "providing, of course, he is ready to adapt himself to circumstances, like a piano-tuner I once met on the Canadian prairie."

"But even if he was adaptable," protested one listener, "he couldn't make piano-tuning pay with pianos so few and far between."

"Admitted," replied the expert, "but he made quite a decent living tightening up barbed-wire fences."

Best Trained

Mother announced that a prize would be given each Saturday to the most obedient member of the family during the week.

Almost with one voice the five children protested: "Oh, that isn't fair. Daddy will win every time."

Folly to Be Wise

"I am told he has more money than he knows what to do with."

"Has he really! Such ignorance must be bliss."

"She says, 'There's young Smith who registered a year ago—they ain't called him up yet.' 'Well,' I says, 'it's easy to criticize, but how d'you know they haven't got enough Smiths?' "

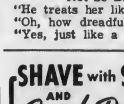
Could Be

A diplomat once told a story about a Chinese committing suicide by eating a gold leaf.

"But," exclaimed one of his listeners, "I can't understand how that could have killed him."

"Probably," the diplomat answered, "he died from the consciousness of inward gilt."

WHAT ASPIRIN SHALL I BUY?



You can't buy aspirin that can do more for you than St. Joseph Aspirin and you can't buy aspirin safer, surer, faster-acting. St. Joseph Aspirin is the world's largest seller at 10c and you get 36 tablets for 20¢, 100 tablets only 35¢. Always demand St. Joseph Aspirin.

Not So Bad

"He treats her like a dog."
"Oh, how dreadful!"
"Yes, just like a lap-dog."

The Date of Hitler's Fall!

Ten years ago, Germany's famous astrologer, Hanussen, predicted the rape of Austria, the Nazi-Soviet alliance, the fate of Poland and the invasion of Germany, and then Hanussen gave the date of Hitler's fall and paid for it with his head. During the past 1,000 years, seven different Prophets foretold all that has already happened, all that is now taking place, and all that is yet to come. All are agreed as to the fate of Germany, Italy and Japan, and four of them agree as to the exact time of Hitler's death. Would you like to know all this and more? Would you like to lift the veil and see what is coming in the months and years just ahead? Read the book, "SOMETHING TO HOPE FOR." Only $1.98, post paid. If cash is sent with order, or C. O. D. plus the postage. Money refunded if not satisfied. Address EUREKA SALES PROMOTION SERVICE P. O. Box 188, Gen. P. O., New York City.

"OUR DAD"

This is the 72nd Birthday of our dearest Dad;
A better father four girls never had.
Changes have come since our last celebration,
Even war is much worse in our grand old Nation;
Many faces are missing in our circle today
Doris a Missionary and Jimmy a Soldier in the U. S. A.
But the one whom we miss far more than any other
Is the smiling face of our precious Mother.
But we know she looks down from Heaven above
And is still very near to the Dad whom we love.

We four girls are blessed to have such a Dad,
We need him to guide us if we ever act bad;
We want him to know he can do more than any other
To take the place of our dear little Mother.
We need his advice in all that we do
For we'ev tried it and found it has always proved true;
We are thankful for seed he has sown by his preaching
And we want to be led by his wonderful teaching;
We love him far more than we ever can say
And we need him in all that we do every day.

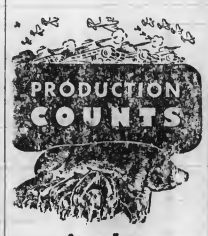
MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR LIGHTING

(No. 1 of a Series)

Keep Equipment Clean



You're paying for light you're not getting when dust and dirt accumulate on lighting equipment. "Before and after" tests show that simply by cleaning bulbs, shades and reflector bowls you can increase light output as much as 30% to 50%. Lamp shades should be dusted, brushed or dry cleaned. Wipe bulbs off frequently with a damp cloth. Reflector bowls, enclosing globes and other lighting glassware may be removed and washed in warm, soapy water. Always dry all lighting equipment thoroughly and do not allow moisture to get into sockets or connections.

If you need new lamps see our stock of I. E. S. Better Sight Lamps. Especially designed for safe seeing, they provide an abundance of both direct and indirect light without glare. Ask for a free trial. See what a difference good light makes!

ACE IN THE HOLE

by JACKSON GREGORY

©GREGORY W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Old Early Bill Cole had known for six months that his days were numbered. Of late he had been up and about each morning earlier than usual, telling some part of his wide-spread acres, the King Cole Ranch, a last adios. It was still half dark one morning as he was walking through his beloved pines, when a rifle shot rang clear through the stillness, and Early Bill felt a stab of pain. Leaning against an old pine he blazed away at a man crashing through the bushes. Then he laughed, for he had shot the man's hat off! Staggering home Early Bill sent Gaucho Ortega, one of his Mexican hands, for "Doc Joe" and the "Judge." New continue with the story.

CHAPTER II

Doc Joe and the Judge were at the King Cole Ranch almost as soon as the young Mexican. They found four of the ranch hands hanging around the house, scraping dirt with the toes of their lop-sided boots, looking as though they didn't mean to look worried. At the sound of speeding hoofs and wheels they jerked up their heads, and one man came out of the house, a small, mahogany-brown man who looked as hard as nails and was harder than he looked, Early Bill's foreman, Cal Roundtree.

"Howdy, gents," he said, and sounded surly as though he resented their coming. "Come on in."

They went in and found old Early Bill sitting in his big chair. He looked more dead than alive.

"You darned old fool," snorted Doc Joe. Ha put his bag down, took off his coat and rolled up his sleeves. "What did you shoot yourself for? Or, far as that goes, why the hell didn't you do it long ago? Think I like to go skallyhooting all over the country for the likes of you?"

"Howdy—Judge," said the old man, by way of most beautifully ignoring Doc Joe and all his words.

"I've got to get you onto a bed, Bill," said Doc Joe. "I can't get at you right, this way, sitting on a chair."

"I ain't going to bed. Most likely working me over, you're going to kill me anyhow, and if I've got to get murdered I'd like it better sitting up."

"If the old buzzard won't go to bed, Judge, being that superstitious and scared of dying because of the devil waiting to grab him," said Doc Joe, "lend me a hand to heave his old carcass up on this here table. Now, Bill, you come off your high horse and do as I say or I'll bat your brains out."

"If I had any brains, you pill-roller," grumbled Early Bill, "do you think I'd let you put your murdering hands on me?"

The two helped him to stand and, with what small aid he could give them, got him stretched out on top of the table. Doc Joe's skilful hands, whether or not murderous, swiftly denuded him from neck to belly-band and removed the make-shift bandage. Then for a time the physician—and there was not a more skilled within riding range of Bald Eagle—kept his tongue in his mouth and gave himself shrewdly to his work.

The Judge stood by, watching in a detached sort of way as though willing enough to stick around in case a hand were needed, but mildly bored. The men outside stood looking in at the open door; only Cal Roundtree came in; he didn't know that he was walking on tip toes.

Sometime later when Early Bill Cole returned to a misty sort of consciousness he made out that he was in his bed, undressed, bound about with what he judged to be a couple of miles of bandage, and stuffed into one of his long-tailed night gowns. At the moment somehow ha didn't care.

He had stirred very slightly and on the instant the two old cronies of his popped into his room.

"Well?" ha demanded as sharply as he could manage.

"You sure bled like a stuck hawg," Doc Joe told him. "Who shot you, Bill?"

"I wouldn't know, Doc; that's the hell of it. Say! If you boys happen to see a feller wearing a light-colored Stetson with a hole in it—or wearing no hat a-tall—or one brand new out of the store—But let's taka up business before pleasure, as the feller says. Got my come-uppance for certain this trip, huh, Doc?"

"I sort of reckon, Bill," he said, pulling at his lower lip, "that it won't be all-fired long now before this is a better, cleaner world—and me and the Judge will be winning a couple of bets."

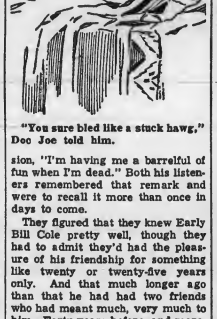
"Hmf!" said Early Bill. Then that crooked and somehow endearing old grin of his came back, just a ghost of what it used to be but still there, like a flicker of winter sunlight. "Might be you lose out yet, you two scums of creation. Might be your horses runs away and breaks your damn necks before I check out!"

Nobody said anything for a little while. Early Bill was resting, Doc Joe stepped out to bring him something to swallow, mostly hot whisky, and the Judge appeared to be taking matters judicially under advisement. They lifted Early Bill and got his drink down him. Then they had one apiece.

The draft brought the sick and wounded man a flush of strength. He spoka more clearly.

"Squat, you boys, and listen. Me, I'll do the talking."

They dragged up chairs.



"First, Doc, let's know where we stand. I need a little time and a mite of stren'th. I'm not going to pop off in a hurry like a candle blown out, am I? I feel pretty good after that drink."

"You're a tough old bird, Bill," said Doc Joe thoughtfully. "If you hadn't been on the skids anyhow, this thing wouldn't have done you in. It's just hurrying things along some. No, there's no rush. Say the word and I can keep boosting you along—Oh, how do I know? Anyhow, shoot the works and take your time."

"Fair enough and gracias, amigo," said Early Bill. "Here we go."

It was a fairly long, one-sided talk, with Bill Cole now and then forced to silence and rest, and before the conference was over every man of them had taken several drinks. And pretty nearly every time that Doc Joe went for the drinks the Judge got up and went outside, and nearly every time the Judge played Hebe, Doc Joe stepped out into the patio.

Fortunately both Doc Joe and the Judge knew pretty well what Early Bill Cole had in mind, though the definite thing the old fellow was going to do had yet to be told. Merely taking into consideration the facts of the case, the whole thing should be simple enough, since it was merely the making of a will. But they saw the old familiar gleam in Early Bill's eyes and were dead sure that right up to the last he was plotting some sort of devilment. Hadn't he said to them on ona occasion, "I'm having me a barrelful of fun when I'm dead." Both his listeners remembered that remark and were to recall it more than once in days to come.

"You sure bled like a stuck hawg," Doc Joe told him.

They figured that they knew Early Bill Cole pretty well, though they had to admit they'd had the pleasure of his friendship for something like twenty or twenty-five years only. And that much longer ago than that he had had two friends who had meant much, very much to him. Forty years before, and more, there had rioted through the mountains a small company known far and wide as Hell's Triplets: Early Bill Cole, Busty Lee, Buck Cody. Busty Lee and Buck Cody were happily dead these many years, having been swept away together in a night of violence, and about all that they had left behind them was their various offspring. Busty Lee had left a daughter with little dower save her loveliness, and Buck Cody had bequeathed to the world a son and not much to go along with him. They knew that little Ann Lee was teaching school somewhere or another and living with her Aunt Jenifer—her aunt living with her, rather; and that young Cody was trying to make a mining engineer out of himself. All this they knew because old Bill had told them—and that, with the first creeping of the shadow over him some months ago, he had piled into the stage and had been away for a couple of weeks—and had come back with that devil-saint-Santa Claus gleam in his eye.

"I looked 'am both over," ha announced triumphantly. "And they didn't know ma from Adam's off ox either, because I didn't happen to speak up. They're aces, Busty's and Buck's pups, and me, I'm going to have me some fun with them!"

"After you're dead!" they grunted at him.

"Yep!"

And now he was getting ready for his fun.

"In a minute, Judge, you're going to make me a couple of wills—"

"Hold on there, Bill! Just because there are two legatees you don't need two wills!" He looked at Early Bill narrowly; maybe the old devil was too far gone already to know enough to make any sort of will! Then in that case, everything, lock, stock and barrel would go to Rance Waldron as nearest of kin—the only kin, so far as Early Bill knew, though luckily distant.

"Who's doing this?" Early Bill grunted. "I'm leaving everything I got to young Cody and the Lee girl. He's an upstanding young he-wildcat and she's the cutest trick and the nicest and—well, the sweetest you ever laid eyes on. So they get the works. The whole of the ranch and the whole of the cash. The money's in your bank, Judge, if you haven't stole it yet, anyhow a couple of hundred thousand dollars—about two five now, I reckon, in case the interest hasn't et up all the principal, or you haven't been losing heavy at draw!"

The Judge, eyeing him, thought, "He knows what he's talking about."

"Now," went on Early Bill, "I've got a job for each one of you horn toads, and I'm paying each one of you a dollar a day and found, high wages for you two, Judge, you go in there and hunker down at the table and write me those two wills. Make 'em just the same, giving, granting and disposing and so forth all I got. In one will, give everything to her. In the other give everything to him. And you date 'em both the same, as of today. You, Doc, you move that old trunk of mine to one side and yank up a couple of loose boards and hand me what you find. Let's go! Wages start when you start getting busy!"

Doc Joe shoved aside a battered old leather trunk, scrabbled in the corner, got a couple of loose boards up and after some further scrabbling came up, red-faced with a small iron lock-box in his dusty hands. The box was eighteen inches long, about six inches in the other dimensions, and was provided with two locks, each set about six inches from the end.

"I think it was that box of mine put the whole idea into my head," Early Bill said. "Having two locks like, notice? Look at 'em good, Doc?"

"What about 'em," demanded Doc Joe. "They're just two locks—"

"By the way," said Early Bill, "when you boys go out, send Cal Roundtree to me. Tell him to bring Gaucho. I've got me a great hunch! It's my ace in the hole!"

"You're crazy like a hoot owl," anorted the Judge. "Doc just asked you a question: What's this about two locks?"

"Look at 'em good!"

"I am looking—They're different, that what you mean?"

"Takes two different keys to open 'em!" said a triumphant Bill Cole.

To two old porch-sitters in front of the Bald Eagle Hotel came a young man on horseback. The two, watching everything that went on, smoking their after supper stogies, took stock of him when he first rode into town down at the far end of the street. He rode straight to the hotel, dismounted and approached. He was young and lean and brown and tall. In the saddle he had been loosely graceful; one felt that for all that seeming carelessness in his way of riding, that if his horse had of a sudden sought to leap out from under him he would still have been sitting there in the saddle, confident and vaguely arrogant. Here where men dressed as they pleased, this young man struck a note. From flashy, high-heeled boots to the silk bandana, bright red, around his brown throat and on up to his forty dollar hat, he displayed a touch of elegance. A handsome young dark devil, too, when they saw his face.

"Howdy, gents," he greeted them, and sat on the porch, holding his horse's reins. He removed his hat and ran his fingers through his hair that was inclined toward length, rich darkness and curliness.

Civilly they returned his greeting. "Howdy," they said.

"I'm a stranger here," he told them. "You look like you belonged here. Maybe you can tell me the way to Bill Cole's ranch?"

They directed him, telling him it was a couple of hours' ride, indicating the short cuts to take on horseback. He said, "Thanks," rolled a cigaratte, smoked half of it, tossed the butt into the dust and stood up.

"Only," said Doc Joe, "I don't know as they're wide open for company right now. Bill Cole's sick."

"Sick? Say—What's wrong? Nothing bad, is it?"

"He ain't feeling any too good," said Doc Joe.

Tha young man ayed him in a penetrating sort of way.

"You might be the doctor?" he judged. And Doc Joe nodded. "Well, all the more reason I should ride along. You see I'm his nephew. My nama's Ranca Waldron."

Waldron tarried a moment as though thinking some word might be added. When none was forthcoming he swung up into the saddle again, lifting easily and somehow gracefully, a man full of strength and youth and vitality, and rode away.

They watched him out of sight.

"Hmf," said the Judge then.

"He had a hat," mused Doc Joe.

"Yep. Wasn't any hole in it, though."

"Rance Waldron, huh?" brooded Doc Joe. "Do you know, Judge, that old fool Bill Cole has sometimes struck me as a pretty fair judge of folks. This young Waldron, I don't cotton to him much. I don't like the cut of his eye."

"Me neither," agreed the Judge. "I noticed we were both sorry he didn't have a hole in his hat. Let's go get a drink."

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for November 15

THINGS THAT MAR FAMILY LIFE

LESSON TEXT — Genesis 27:30-36; Matthew 6:31, 32; Luke 12:15-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ.—Galatians 6:2.

Home is what you make it! Oh, yes, there may be circumstances which hinder us from doing what we would like—such as poverty, illness, unemployment, etc. These are things we cannot control and certainly we do have a bearing. But man or woman when of the right spirit can triumph over such matters and make even the poorest home the gateway to heaven. It is a matter of the attitude of heart and mind. Our lesson then is very practical, for it deals with those sins which mar family life.

Whatever our circumstances may be, we can and must turn away from sin—and in this case, the sins which hinder the home from being what it ought to be. God has provided victory over sin through Christ for all who believe in Him.

What then are the sins which stand as the enemies of the home?

I. Deceit (Gen. 27:30-35).

Whatever the circumstances of the home may be, there can be a sbolute honesty and candor in the dealings between members of the family.

Our recent study of the story of Jacob and Esau showed us the sad consequences of the deceit practiced by Jacob and his mother in defrauding Esau. Many elements entered in, the favoritism of the mother toward one son, the envy that the brother had of his elder brother's birthright, the wicked scheming of mother and son to outwit the aged father—all a very distressing picture of a home shot through with deceitfulness. To build anything of permanent value on such a foundation was quite impossible.

The family in which deceitful means are used by husband or wife to gain some advantage for self or a favored child is heading for the rocks and needs to turn about and get into the channel of truth and uprightness before it is too late.

II. Divorce (Matt. 5:31, 32).

One of the most destructive elements of modern life is that of divorce. Terrifying statistics could be quoted, but they are not nearly as moving as the knowledge most of us have of broken homes, delinquent children, decadent morals, etc., ad nauseam. The victims of this deadly evil are primarily the children who are sent on into life with disordered minds and hearts.

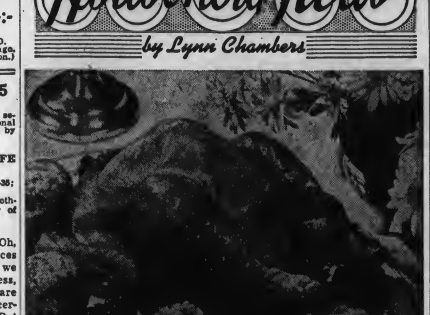
Jesus declared that the decree of divorcement allowed by Moses was not an abrogation of God's original law in this matter. Because of the "hardness of their hearts" (Mark 10:4) Moses permitted it, but the standard of God was and (note this please!) is unchanged.

Marriage, as we saw in our lesson of November 1, is God's plan for the perfect union of the man and woman whereby the two become one in the sight of God. That means that tha tie is not one to be dissolved at will or on some purely legal ground; it is an inseparable union.

The only exception recognized by Scripture (v. 32) is that act of unfaithfulness which is such a breach of the holy union as to virtually destroy it. Perhaps it might be called a recognition of the breaking of the union rather than an exception. Adultery is a heinous sin, an extremely serious violation of God's law. Let us press that fact homa today when it is so lightly regarded in our sinful generation.

III. Desire (Luke 12:13-15).

Money is necessary and may be a blessing, but the "love of money is the root of all evil" (I Tim. 6:10). That is not just a verse in the Bible. It is the true picture of the thing which has destroyed the happiness of millions.



Here was a quarrel over an inheritance, and in meeting it our Lord laid down a principle which would solve all the money quarrels in every home—and they are endless in number and great in bitter destructiveness.

"Man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (v. 15). Write it large over the minds and hearts of the boys and girls in our homas! Let it control in the attitude of father and mother toward money. It will solve not only the money problems of the homa, but will send the children forth into life with a foundation philosophy that will bless them to the end of their days.

Notica verse 14. It is the desire for money that most often makes man desire to be a judge over his brother. The big eyes of envy cause him to look with bitter desire upon what his brother has and ha wants. The fina principle of sharing tha family's possessions would do much to knit the home into a unit—happy, strong and useful to both God and man. The point is to say "ours" rather than "mine," and to ask, "What can we do?" not, "What can I get?"

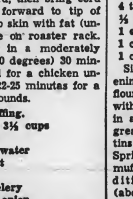
Serve the Festive Bird—Plump With Stuffing
(See Recipes Below.)

Day of Praise



Now that the frost-nipped days hava come and wa've gathered tha harvest, Thanksgiving tima is here again. It really is a Thanksgiving, for a year of plenty if not of peace, and it's to be celebrated with a dinnar symbolic of tha plenty of harvest. Your family will feel a deep and heartfelt satisfaction if you place yellow-gold and deep crimson autumn leaves over the mantel, or provides a blazing fira and have bowls of lush colored grapes, crisp shelled nuts, blushing pears and apples within comfortable reach.

The Bird Itself.

Select tender chicken for roasting. Pick dry. Singe and take out pin feathers with tweezers. Cut around vent and make split almost to tip of breastbone. Insert hand and take out entrails carefully from back and sides. Pull out. Be sure lungs are removed. Push back skin of neck, and cut off neck close to body. Remove windpipe. Separate gizzard, heart and liver and cut away gall bladder which is attached to liver, being careful not to break it. Cut through gizzard and clean. Remova oil sack from tail.

Wash outside with cold water. Wipe inside with damp cloth. Sprinkle inside with salt and then stuff loosely. Insert toothpicks or metal pins across opening and lace them with cord. Fold skin of neck over back and fasten with toothpick. Fold wings across back. Tie ends of legs together with a cord, then bring cord around tail and forward to tip of wings to tie. Rub skin with fat (unsalted) and place on roaster rack. Roast uncovered in a moderately slow oven (325-350 degrees) 30 minutes to the pound for a chicken under 3½ pounds, 22-25 minutes for a chicken over 4 pounds.

Stuffing.
(Makes 3½ cups

- ⅛ cup rice
- 3 cups boiling water
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup fat
- ½ cup diced celery
- ¼ cup chopped onion
- 2½ cups oven-popped rice cereal
- 3 tablespoons minced parsley
- 1 tablespoon poultry seasoning
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup stock

Wash rice thoroughly in a sieva. Drain well. Add rice to boiling water slowly as water continuas to bubble. Boil rapidly about 20 minutes until rica is tender, then drain in sieve.

Brown celery and onion in fat. Stir in rice and mix well. Crush oven-popped rice cereal into coarse crumbs, add parsley, seasonings and stock. Combine with rice and mix thoroughly.

Yams With Oranges.
(Serves 6)

- 2 to 2 pounds yams
- 2 oranges, peeled
- ½ cup brown sugar
- 1½ cups pineapple juice

Peel raw potatoes and slica into buttered casserole. Lay sliced oranges between yam slices, sprinkle brown sugar over all, then add pineapple juice. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 1 hour or until tender.

Brussels Sprouts.

Cut off wilted leaves, leave whole, and wash thoroughly. Cook covered in a small amount of boiling, unsalted water for 10 to 15 minutes. Flavor with melted butter, salt, pepper and mix in ¼ cup chopped chestnuts.

A hot muffin with the tang of fall—these spicy apple muffins ara guaranteed to whet the most listless—if there be such on Thanksgiving day—appetite:

Apple Muffins.
(Makes 20)

- 2¼ cups sifted flour
- 3½ teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- 4 tablespoons shortening
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1 cup evaporated milk (undiluted)
- 1 cup finely chopped, raw apples

Sift dry ingredients. Cream shortening and sugar, stir in egg and add flour alternately with milk. Fold in applas and fill greased muffin tins almost full. Sprinkle tops of muffins with additional sugar (about 2 tablespoons in all) mixed with a dash of cinnamon and nutmeg. Bake in a moderately hot (425-degree) oven 20 to 25 minutes.

Busy homemakers like to use prepared, packaged or canned mincemeat for pies, but thera ara still many of you, who I am sure will like putting up soma right in your own kitchan. Here's how:

Grandmother's Mincemeat Pie.

- 2 pounds beef neck
- 1 pound suet
- 4 pounds tart apples
- 4 cups sugar
- 2 pounds currants
- 2 pounds seedless raisins
- ½ pound citron, cut
- Juice and grated rind of 2 oranges
- Juice and rind of 3 lemons
- 1 pint cider
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1½ teaspoons nutmeg
- 1½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon mace

Cook beef slowly in hot water for 3 hours. Cool and forca through food chopper with suat and apples, using coarsa grinder. Add remaining ingredients, blending thoroughly. Cook slowly ona hour, then seal in sterilized jars. This makes 6 quarts.

Line pie tin with pastry, then pour in mincemeat. Top with criss-cross or lattica crust and baka in a hot oven 35 minutes.

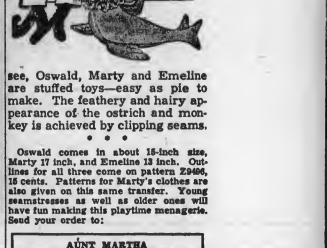
Lynn Says:

Speaking of Stuffings: Tha old-fashioned bread dressing is easily adapted to many variations. Here is the basic idea: To 1½ pounds of dried bread cut in one-inch cubas add ½ to 1 cup melted butter, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon white pepper, ½ cup minced onion, cooked but not browned, and 2 tablespoons of poultry dressing. Toss lightly and stuff fowl.

If you like crisp celery tasty dressing, add 2 cups finely chopped celery to the bread dressing.



On the other hand, if you like the crispness of chestnuts, add 1 pound of chestnuts, chopped and cooked.

Giblets go well with bread dressing, cook and chop and toss into bread dressing. Mushrooms are distinctive, if simply chopped and sauteed in butter and added to bread stuffing.

Oysters make a tempting dressing. Use 1 pint, chopped and heated until edges curl in 3 tablespoons butter.

OUR COMIC SECTION

COMMENTARY

"So you were at the Gray-Bell wedding, eh?"
"Yes."
"Who gave the bride away?"
"No one. She married money."

Disastrous

The usual gossip was being enjoyed over the back-garden fence.

"Did you hear about the row at No. 17 last night?" said the lady at No. 3.

"No; what was it?" asked her neighbor at No. 5 eagarly.

"Well, she broke a chair over her husband's head, but I hear she's very sorry for it now."

"Pity she didn't think before she did it then."

"Yes," sighed No. 3; "it was one of her best chairs."

TIP OFF

"I know I'm not half good enough for you, darling."

"Well, I'll marry you if you'll promise to maintain that same attitude after we're married."

Farm Topics

Army, Navy in Need Of Goose Feathers

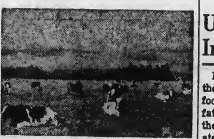
Plucking Live Geese Will Help Farm Income

Plucking live geese is one way farmers may be able to help their country in wartime and at the same time pick up some extra money.

Geese feathers are in considerable demand for use in making flying suits for aviators and in other ways to protect American soldiers and sailors against the cold.

The feathers are now bringing a good price.

Poultry raisers usually pluck the feathers from live geese prior to molting. A few pick as often as every six weeks during the spring, summer, and early fall, while others pick only once or twice a year, either in the spring or fall.



In Jefferson county, Wisconsin, George Schlesner was busy pitching alfalfa hay on the farm owned by the Schlasner brothers there. Schlesner is seeing to it that the farm's soil is getting the proper amount af nitrogen because of his previous alfalfa planting.

Feathers are plucked only when the quills appear dry and do not contain blood. Both young and old geese are plucked. About a pound of feathers may be plucked from a goose during a year.

Feathers are never pulled after November 15, or the geese will not be in full feather for marketing; neither are they picked during the breeding season.

In plucking, a stocking is usually put over the head of the goose and tha soft feathers on the breast, back, and abdomen are pulled.

An excellent herd of cattle in pasture at Clatsop county, Oregon.

Not more than five quill feathers should be pulled from each wing. Enough short feathers to provide support underneath the wings are always left.

Feathers are partly cured before they are shipped by placing them in sacks of loosely woven material hung in the loft of a building where there is good air circulation. Feathers in the bags are stirred occasionally during this curing period.

Scrap in Barnyard

Suppose you stood in your barnyard and watched plane after plane fly over and drop in the nearby pasture a 100-pound bomb every second of every minute of every hour of every day for more than three years.

Well, there's enough scrap iron and steel on the farms of the United States (1,250,000 tons) to enable Uncle Sam's airplanes to drop that number of bombs on the enemy throughout the world.

Farmers are urged to aid the nation's program of victory by collecting and selling all their old scrap iron and steel.

If the 1,250,000 tons of scrap iron and steel on American farms were collected and used in the making of battleships there would be enough to make more than twice as many as there are today.

Recent reports coming in from rural area scrap-collecting headquarters show that, despite the shortage of farm help, the longer hours being faced by the farmers, scrap is being collected in amounts which, although satisfactory, could be doubled easily enough if everyone did his bit.

Agricultural Notes

As the 1942 cotton picking season gets underway, farmers are confronted with grade and staple premiums and discounts entirely different from those of recent years.

PHYSICAL TESTS

It will be hard to convince some fathers and mothers that any good thing can come from this war. We who are parents can well understand that. However, already from the physical standpoint, there is occurring a great saving in health and life itself because of the thorough physical examination which recruits must undergo.

Dr. Barton

Just one instance—"In a program to re-establish or rehabilitate selective service men rejected or deferred on account of tuberculosis, the Illinois state health director, Dr. Roland R. Cross, announces that so far out of 591 man rejected for tuberculosis since November, 1940, the state health department has found only 21 who previous to this army examination had been reported as having tuberculosis."

Just think of this for a minute. Of nearly 600 men rejected for tuberculosis, only 21 knew they had tuberculosis or were known to have tuberculosis.

What will be done with this large number of cases?

Those with active tuberculosis will be treated by the state board of health in institutions for tuberculosis and those with inactive tuberculosis will be referred to their own physician for medical supervision. "Dr. Cross states that a man is not accaptable to the army for active military duty if he has fiva or more calcified spots on his lungs; however, such men can safely carry on ordinary civilian activities without undue fear of relapse." A calcified spot is a healed spot with hard lime tissue around it.

Another instance is tha psychologic testing in tha British army. It is under the direction of a naw army department, tha general service corps, in which recruits undergo their basic training and tha corps for which they are best suited is determined.

Recruits for an armored formation were tested and a list was made of tha men found unsuitable for service with tanks. Aftar thraa months the list was compared with practical experience and found to agraa within 5 per cent of error.

Use of Proteins In Reducing Diets

Nutrition experts, by measuring the amounts of the different kinds of food eaten—protains, starches and fats—ara able to tell how much heat these foods will manufactura or create in tha body. Tha amount of haat created should equal the amount of food eaten.

However, it is found that this amount of heat is actually more than can be accounted for by the amount of food consumed, that is, if, as should be the case, all the food is completely burned.

Why is more heat created than the amount of food aaten can create?

This extra haat is almost entiraly due to the protein in the food and hardly at all to the fat or starch. Tha means that tha protein—meat and fish—has a special action—special dynamic action—not possessed by the starch and fat foods.

Now, as this extra heat does not come from the food it must coma from somewhere and that somewhare is tha tissues of the body. In other words the burning of tha protein foods causas a burning of the body tissuas thus creating more heat. And the cells or tissuas burned are those made up of fat and starch.

It is for this reason that all reducing diets do not cut down on tha proteins, in fact, some diets allow an increased amount of protein. Tha protein not only burns up the excess fat, but causes the individual to feal more like exarcising or working, thus burning up more fat tissue.

In his book "Science and Nutrition," A. L. Bacharach, professor of biochemistry in the University of London, says:

"This stimulating effect of food protein on the burning up of body tissue has an important result. It shows clearly that a high protein diet should be effective in enabling the body to burn up its existing storas of fats and starchas (carbohydrates). A diat of lean meat and lean fish must therefore be a 'slimming' diat while hardly at all depriving tha body of necessary food materials."

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Please giva ma soma suggestions ragarding cause and cure of lumbago. I am having a great deal of trouble with it.

A.—Lumbago is due to injury or infection. If pain is present during the night, it is likely due to infection—teeth, tonsils, etc. Try to find cause. If it gets worse when walking, some injury may be present. Cut down on starch foods—potatoes, bread, sugar, pastry, candy as much as possible.

Tell me a Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PADDY THE BEAVER PLANS A HOUSE

PADDY THE BEAVER sat on the dam he had built deep in the Graan Forast and his eyas shona with happiness as he looked out over tha shining water of the pond he had mada. All around the edge of it grew the tall trees of the Green Forast. It was very beautiful and very still and very lonasome. That is it would have seemed lonesome to almost anyona but Paddy tha Beavar. But Paddy is never lonesome. You see he finds company in the trees and flowers and all the little plants.

He loves the Forest's quiet heart
Where strife and worry have no part.

It was still, very, very still. Over on ona side was a baautiful rosy glow in the water. It was the reflection from jolly, round, red Mr. Sun. Paddy couldn't see him because of the tall trees, but he knaw exactly what Mr. Sun was doing. He was going to bed behind tha Purple Hills. Pratty soon the little stars would coma out and twinkle down at him. He loves the little stars and always watched for tha first one. Yes, Paddy the Beaver was very happy. He would hava been parfectly happy, but for

"But what's tha use af worrying aver troubles that havan't come yet, and may never come?"

ona thing. Farmer Brown's Boy had found his dam and pond that very afternoon and Paddy wasn't quite sure of what Farmer Brown's Boy might do.

"But what's the use of worrying over troubles that havan't coma yat, and may never come? Time enough to worry when thay do coma," said Paddy to himself, which shows that Paddy has a great deal of wisdom in his little brown head. "The thing for me to do now is to get ready for winter and that means a graat daal of work," he continued. "Let ma sea, I've got to build a house, a big, stout, warm house where I will be snug and safa when my pond is frozen over."

With that Paddy slipped into the water and swam all around his new pond to make sure of just tha best place to build his house. Now placing ona's housa in just the right place is a very important matter. Some people ara dreadfully careless about this matter. Jimmy Skunk, for instance, often makes the mistaka of digging his house (you know Jimmy makes his house under ground), right where avery one who happened along that way will see it. Parhaps that is becausa Jimmy is so independant that he doesn't care who knows whare he lives. Johnny Chuck used to be careless until ha met Polly Chuck, and then when he built a house for her he was vary careful.

But Paddy tha Baavar never is earalass. He always chooses just the vary best place. Ha makas sure that it is best before he begins. So now, although he was quite positive of just where his house should be, he swam around the pond to make doubly sura. Then when he was quite satisfied ha swam over to the place ha had chosen. It was where the watar was quite deep.

"There mustn't be the least chance that the ice will ever get thick enough to close up my doorway," said he, "and I'm sure it nevar will here. I must make the foundations strong and the walls thick. I must have planty of mud to plaster with, and inside, up above the water, I must have the snuggest, warmest little room, where I can sleep in comfort. This is the place to build it and it is high tima I was at work.

With that Paddy swam over to the place where he had cut the trees for his dam and his haart was light, for he had long ago learned that the surast way to be happy is to be busy.

Preserve Iron Work for the Duration

With everything made of iron assuming an unprecedanted value dua to the wartime shortage of metal, iron gatas, fencas and matal railings call for serious attention in the autumn months to save them from damage or loss by rust. They should be well cleaned of rust spots and dirt, and then thoroughly painted. This treatment, if properly given, will protect iron work for the wartime period ahead, in which replacements will be highly difficult if not impossible.

A Gentle Way to Treat Constipation!

Get up and cheer, constipation sufferers! If you are one of the millions of people with normal intestines who suffer due to lack of "bulk" in the diet — here's news of a gentler, pleasanter way to win welcome relief!

You see, many medicinal laxatives prod the intestines in to action or draw moisture into them from other parts of the body. But KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, a crisp, delicious cereal, acts quite differently. It works principally on the contents of your colon, helping you to have easy and normal elimination. Eat it often and drink plenty of water. ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped, by this simple treatment, see your doctor.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Japan now controls about 90% of the rubber plantations of the world.

Regardless of whether synthetic rubber is made from petroleum, grain, shrubs or chemicals it will be many times before car owners will be able to purchase synthetic rubber tires. War purposes have first call.

A tombstone marks the spot near Seneca, Regional, where a tire that had served its owner 15 years was ceremoniously buried.

300 rubber parts, not including tires and tubes, are used in the modern automobile. Without rubber the car would truly be a "jalopy" wagon.

There is talk these days of recapping 25,000,000 tires a year! Quite a jump from the 4,000,000 recapped - rut-raaded mark of 1937.

Automobiles were on over 80% of all U. S. farms in 1940; 18.5% of the farms had motor trucks and 23.1% motor tractors.

Important Notice To Car Owners

Washington, Nov. 10th, Autoists who expect to apply for supplemental rations to enable them to drive to and from work should make plans now to share rides with others needing transportation to thier jobs, R. E. Brugh, Chairman of the local War Price and Ration Board, declared today.

"Car sharing has been made an integral part of the mileage rationing program because it is the most effective means of providing essential transportation on a minimum amount of rubber," said R. E. Brugh. "To get more than the basic A ration a car owner must form a car-sharing club to carry at least three other persons to and from work, or prove that he cannot do so."

The rationing board chairman suggested that car owners get together with their neighbors on some car sharing plan, or with fellow employees at the plant or office. If two or more cars are to be used in the club, members may divide up the use of those cars to suit their convenience. Supplemental rations will then be issued each vehicle for mileage to meet its obligations

The club must be formed before the application for a supplemental ration is submitted to the board. In fact, signatures of all members must appear on the application, and applicants must certify that they will carry through their part in the club agreement.

Supplemental applications, R. E. Brugh, emphasized are not to be presented registrars at school houses on November 18th, 19th and 20th. These registrars will be authorized to issue only the basic ration books—A books for passenger car owners, and D books for motorcyclists.

However, vehicle operators who feel they will need more mileage than the basic books provided may ask the registrar for a supplemental application. This is to be filed out later and sent to a local War Price and Rationing Board.

The basic books will provide mileage for 240 miles a month. If the person to whom the ration is issued intends to use his car for driving to work, or in connection with his work, he will be expected to consider 150 miles a month of his ration available for such driving. The remaining 90 miles a month may be reserved for such essential family travel as driving children to school, or sick persons to the doctor, etc.

Applicants for supplemental rations will first need to prove that they need more than the 150 miles of occupational driving provided in the A book. Secondly, they will need to show that they have formed a car club. If they do not form such a club, they must prove they cannot do so, and that alternative means of transportation are inadequate.

"All applicants for a supplemental region will use the same form," R. E. Brugh pointed out. "The board will decide whether the ration granted should be in the form of a "B" o ra "C" book, in addition to the A book provides for a maximum of 470 miles of occupational driving a month. Mileage for more than 470 miles a month requires a C. book. But only drivers performing services regarded as essential to the war effort or the public welfare will be eligible for C rations."

Those drivers entitled to preferred mileage through C rations must meet the car sharing requirements, the same as other applicants for supplemental rations, R. E. Brugh said.

Washington, Nov. 10th, Boone County autoists who fail to dispose at once of any tires they own in excess of the permissable five per car face the inconvenience of a delay in getting their mileage rations, R. E. Brugh, chairman of the local War Price and Rationing Board, warned today.

"Passenger car owner showing on their applications that they still own more than the five tires per car will not be issued basic mileage ration books when they register at school houses on November 18th, 19th, and 20th said R. E. Brugh. "They will be told they must get rid o fthose tires first.

"Unless they dispose of those tires before the registration period ends, they will have to go to the local rationing board. They must wait, however, until after rationing actually begins. Because of the work to be done in connection with issuing all other types of mileage rations, rationing boards will be unable to consider applications for basic rations until November 24, unless an applicant shows some good good reason why he shouldn't be made to wait that long.

"When he does apply he will have to present proof that he has disposed of the excess tires he reported on his application form.

A receipt showing that he has turned them over to the Railway Express Agency wil be acceptable as such proof. Or the applicant may show that he has turned in unserviceable tires for scrap.

"But it's a great deal simpler and easier for all concerned to sell the tires in advance of registration," R. E. Brugh pointed out.

All excess tires, even scrap tires must be disposed of. Under the Government's idle-tire-purchase plan, the local office of the Railway Express Agency will collect all serviceable tires, and leave a recipt. The Government will send a check later covering the price of the tire or tires. Tires beyond repair should be disposed of through a local scrap dealer or salvage committee.

VOLUME 29—NUMBER 3

Geo. W. Baker Leading Member

Of Carrollton Tobacco Warehouse Company.

In this issue appears an advertisement of the Carrollton Tobacco Warehouse Company which will open its five warehouses on December 8, 1942.

The leading member of this firm in this community is George W. Baker who will again this season, manage all sales for the Company. He has been manager of the company since its organization and has contributed much to its success.

In addition to being manager of this tobaco industry he is President of the Dixie State Bank of Walton; operates two truck lines, and conducts an extensive farming industry at Beaver Lick.

In addition to all these business enterprises, he is and has been since it formation, Chairman of the Draft Board of Boone county. He is a busy man for which any of his numerous friends will readily vouch.

Mr. Baker recently made an extended trip through the tobacco belt in Georgia and the Carolinas and predicts for the coming season a very satisfactory price for tobacco at the Carrollton market.

Red Cross To Benefit From Sale of Boone Co. Tobacco At Carrollton.

The Boone County chapter of the American Red Cross benefitted to the extent of $380.98 because of the fact that Boone County farmers sold their tobacco on the Carrollton Market during the 1941-42 season.

Officials of the Carrollton market announced that the practice of giving the local Red Cross a donation from the proceeds of the sale of the Boone County tobacco crop will be continued during the 1942-43 season, and because of the larger crop and anticipated higher averages it is expected that the Red Cross check will be much larger this year.

The three warehouse companies in Carrollton will open to receive tobacco on November 23, and the first sale is scheduled for December 8th. Lewis Harris, of the Marshall-Harris Tobacco Warehouse Co., has expressed the opinion that the average on the Carrollton Market this year may reach an all-time high.

Methodist Women's Society Of Christian Service To Meet.

The Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church, including Circles, one and two, also the Local Division (or Ladies Aid), will be entertained on Friday, November, 20th at the home of Mrs. W. O. Rouse. At this time the Annual election of officers will take place, thus all members are urged to attend. Come, bring covered dish for the noon luncheon.

Home Stoarge Structures And Equipment.

At this season of the year, with the approach of heavy freezing weather many persons are caught without ample storage space to protect their fruits, vegetables, potatoes and other garden products from freezing.

Good storage structures needed on every farm. Every farm and home should be prepared to store their winter food supply. This is doubly important and needed during this war emergency when there is a shortage of many kinds of foods. The rationing of gasoline will make it impossible to drive to the market place to buy food items as we have been used to during past years. And in many cases the trip would be useless because the shortage in some lines make it impossible to buy articles of food as in the past.

If you do not have a good and ample storage structure to store your fruits, vegetabels, potatoes and other food crops plans should be made to prepare such a structure be fore another season comes around. In the mean time you can use temporary structures to store your potatoes, cabbage, turnips and other foods in "Mounds and Banks". These methods are described in the Extension Circular 266, revised which tells about Home Storage Structures and Equipment. Get a copy from your Agricultural Extension Agent and study the best methods to store and protect your food supply.

Ventilation Important

Ventilation is important in good storage. This is also explained in the Extension Circular No. 266.

Every year when we have severe freezing, much food is lost because of improper protection from zero and sub-zero weather. Make plans now to protect your food supply. Help win the war by protecting your home food supply this winter.

Quail And Rabbit Season Opens Nov. 24

Quail And Rabbit To Be Plentiful Over The State.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov.—Nimrods have silenced their guns on doves and squirrels and are now making check-ups on hunting equipment preparatory to the opening of the quail and rabbit season which begins in Kentucky on Nov., 24 and extends through January 9, 1943.

S. A. Wakefield, Director of the Divison of Game and Fish, pointed out today that the only game that can be hunted at the present time is ducks and geese. All other game is now protected by closed seasons until the rabbit and quail season opens on the 24th of November.

According to reports received from pratically every section of the state, quail are quite plentiful this year, due to the restocking program carried out last spring by the Division and the sportsmen, and to the favorable nesting and rearing seasons which the quail found during the late spring, summer and early fall months. Rains in recent weeks have assured ample water supplies for the game birds and other forms of wildlife. Shortage of manpower on the farms during the past months has not permitted the harvesting of some crops of wheat, hemp, sorgum and other types of crops which provide food for wild life and neither has the shortage of labor permitted the cutting of weeds along fence rows or pastures and this has provided a lot of good cover for both wild animals and birds.

The cotton-tail rabbit is reported plentiful in a good many counties in the state.

Wakefield calls the hunter's attention to the fact that the Bob White Quail CANNOT BE BOUGHT OR SOLD ANYWHERE IN KENTUCKY AT ANY TIME and anyone caught doing so is liable to arrest. The bag limit is 12 a day or not more than two days bag limit—24 in possession. Rabbits MAY BE BOUGHT OR SOLD ANYWHERE IN KENTUCKY DURING THE HUNTING SEASON but no person may have more than 16 rabbits in possession at any time. The daily bag limit is 8 with possession of 16—two days bag limit.

Missionary Society Entertained.

The Missionery Society of the Walton Christian church met on Thursday, November 5th, at the home of Mrs. Mable Groger, with Mrs. Irene Bush as co-hostess. County Homemakers' Advisory Council Held Meeting At Florence Town Hall.

The County Homemakers' Advisory Council met in the Town Hall, at Florence, Tuesday, Nov. 10th. There were representatives from most every Homemakers' Club in the county.

Mrs. Mary Scott Moore, County Home Demonstration Agent and Miss Lula Logan, Asst. State Leader of Home Demonstration Agents, from the extension department of the University of Kentucky, Lexington, met with the group.

Many vital problems were discussed and certain goals were set up for a very definite "war work" program.

Plans are being made to sponsor an honor roll of Boone County service men, to be placed at the Court House in Burlington, also to investigate the possibility of establishing an active U. S. O. center at Florence.

The meeting inspired the members with greater feeling and attitude in attacking the problems in their own local clubs.

4-H Achievement Meetings Scheduled.

Achievement meetings have been scheduled for community 4-H Clubs in Boone County according to Mary Scott Moore, Home Demonstration Agent, and Franklin Fraizer, Assistant County Agent.

Certificates will bed awarde during these meetings to members who have sucessfully completed project work, and metals will be given to the five County 4-H garden winners.

Each club will review accomplishments of their organization during the past year, giving emphasis to their activities in good production, and other parts of the War Program.

The schedule for Achievement meetings is as follows:

Burlington	Dec. 2	11:35 a. m.
Florence	Nov. 19	10:15 a. m.
Hamilton	Nov. 20	10:00 a. m.
Hebron	Nov. 20	12:20 p. m.
New Haven	Dec. 3	12:45 p. m.
Walton	Dec. 4	3:30 p. m.

Parents, leaders and friends are invited to attend.

Payment Made On Floral Hall

By Boone County Homemaker Clubs.

The Floral Hall Building on the new Boone County 4-H and Utopia Fair Grounds is a project of the County Homemakers' Association. Plans for the financing of the project over a three year period were made last Spring, soon after the purchase of the Grounds. The first payment amounting to $149.14 has been paid to John Conner, Treasurer of the 4-H Council, Mrs. Mary Scott Moore, Home Demonstration Agent, stated last week.

The Homemakers have raised this money by holding community socials and suppers or from donations from club treasuries. Special mention is given to the clubs at Burlington, Florence, Taylorsport and Verona for the splendid work they did in planning and executing recreational activities for the benefit of their communities, as they contributed proceeds to this worthwhile project. All who saw the building and the exihibits it held during the Fair can appreciate the value of this worth while citizenship work. Executive officers of the Homemakers' Association are: Mrs. Alan Gaines, Walton, President; Mrs. Johanna Mae Terrill Petersburg, Vice-President; Mrs. W. B. McCormick, Verona, Sec.-Treas. and the following Presidents of local clubs: Mrs. John Martin, Florence; Mrs. Hess Vest, Walton; Mrs. Vernon Pope, Burlington; Mrs. Wm. Hill, Bullittsville; Mrs. Joe Hogan, Hebron; Mrs. Jake Cleek, New Haven; Mrs. Herma Matthews, Petersburg; Mrs. Walter Ryle, Rabbit Hash; Mrs Thomas Kenyon, Constance; Mrs. G. C. Ransom, Verona; Mrs. Earl Morehead, Taylorsport.

Christmas Seal Chairman Appointed

R. V. Lents to Head Tuberculosis Campaign.

R. V. Lents, Principal of the Constance School has been appointed county chairman of the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal campaign by the Kentucky Tuberculosis Association. Mr. Lents has appointed a committee to have charge of the sale of the seals in each community, The committee appointed is as follows: F. D. Caton, Edwin Walton, Chester Goodridge, W. F. Coop, Rachel Pottinger, M. K. Toadvine, Edith Caudill, and John Masters.

"Every effort is being made to have the coming seal sale the most successful ever held. in Boone County", Mr. Lents stated to a representative to the Advertiser. the Boone County Protective Association has full charge of the seal sale in Boone County. "The association will need more funds during 1943 in order to carry out the expanded program now planned to keep tuberculosis under control during war time," stated Mr. Lents.

The seal sale will open Monday November 23, and continue until Christmas. You may receive a block of 100 or more seals through the mail from Mr. Lents. He states that these are not for you to sell but for you to purchase. The school children in every school in the county will be selling the seals, but Mr. Lents requests that you purchase the seals that you receive through the mail, and that those who do not receive seals through the mail to get them from the school children. The children will be working for prizes, but when you mail your check to Mr. Lents, just state the name of the pupil and the school he represents, and that child will be given full credit for the sale, which will be the same as if that pupil had sold the seals to you.

Be sure that you buy some seals Use them on your mail and packages. Every cent of the net proceeds of the sale of the seals will be used to protect the health of our citizens especially those that have T. B. Many of our citizens have benefited by this seal sale, and many more could have been aided had funds permitted it.

Mr. and Mrs. Omer Atha of Big Bone were business visitors in Walton, Saturday.

4-H Tobacco Sales Cancelled

Crops Below Volume Necessary to Conduct Sale.

According to recommendations made by Mr. E. E. Fish, District Agent in 4-H Club Work and the Manager of the Kenton Lose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse Inc., the 4-H Club Tobacco Sale for Northern Ky. Counties will be cancelled for this year.

After getting a report from the various counties that usually take part in the sale, it was found that the number of crops promised to enter the sale were below the required volume necessary to successfully conduct the sale. Because of the limited numbers of crops reported to take part in the sale this year, the labor shortage on the farms, gas rationing, the war situation it was considered best to cancel the 4-H club sale for this year.

4-H Tobacco Club Members in Boone, Campbell, Pendleton, Grant, Kenton, and Clermont County, Ohio can pass this information to their local tobacco club members so that they will know that the 4-H Club Tobacco Sale for Northern Ky. at Covington, Ky. has been cancelled for this year.

THE FUTURE OF THE FARMER IS THE FUTURE OF THE NATION

By Ken E. Huddleston

The following article appeared in this months Kentucky Farmers Home Journal and was written by Ken E. Huddleston, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Johnson, Walton, Ky.

There always have been critics, and there always will be. But, to the digust of the critic and the chronic griper, nothing can be said against the just laurels that belong to the American farmer for his gigantic production of food and crops for 1942.

With one million less workers in the field as compared with last year, the farmers of this nation have hit the greatest production figure ever attained in the history of this or any other country.

Less Workers

Last year, there were eight million farmers tilling the soil of our land; this year, there were but seven million. Only half a million farm boys have been called into the armed services so far. The other half have forsaken the farm and security for momentary financial gain in the throbbing war industries of a nation at war.

The farmers of our country are due all the "E's" in existence for the criterion production record just attained. But, there was a lot on the farmer's side of the fence. There might not be so many advantages next year. There was a 6% above normal weather condition this year. There was the ability for hard work this year. One farmer expressed that he had worked harder this year than he had in the past fifteen, and he had enjoyed it. The condition of the land was unusually good. This was the aftermath of the soil building and soil conservation measures furthered by the farmer in cooperation with the efforts of the Agricultural Adjustment Agency of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The formula for high food and crop production is . . . Manpower x Plant x Weather x Planning.

Manpower

In most cases the United States is six t oeighteen months behind legislative and labor activities as compared with Great Britain. It might be well to glance at what the British have accomplished on the farm labor shortage.

Great Britain, which imported more than 60 percent of her food in peacetime, was the first of the United Nations to tackle the problem of farm labor shortage. Twelve million acres were under cultivation before the war. Today, with parks, grasslands and pastures growing food, acreage has been increased nearly 50 percent. Naturally, demand for labor was up and supply was down.

Farmers pay the bills with help of higher food prices and government subsidies granted to assure food production.

The Minister of Labor can direct any person to do any job, including agricultural work.

The Woman's Land Army was organized in September, 1939, first month of the war. Members got special training before going to work.

This land army has grown from 15,000 members a year ago to 40,000 members today.

All good conduct prisoners of war who know something about farming are used.

Five thousand schoolboys of 15 and 16 years of age are stationed in farm camps for 6 to 25 boys each in rural areas. Boys get special minimum wages and work during holidays and after school.

Whether within eighteen months we will come to that point, only time can tell.

PROHIBITION laws are designed to prevent the sale of alcoholic beverages. Such laws do prohibit legal sales in licensed places—but they do NOT and never have prevented illegal sales by bootleggers. The history of Prohibition—federal, state and local—is one of complete failure.

Here is a concrete example: consider the experience of Clark County, right here in Kentucky. In 1938, Clark County voted dry. In June, 1941, it held another election, and this time voted for legal control.

According to records of the Clark County Court and the Winchester Police Court, during the last 11 months that Clark County was "dry", 28 persons were convicted of drunken driving and 11 were convicted of bootlegging. During the first 11 months since Clark County has restored legal control, drunken driving convictions were cut 60%, and only one was convicted of bootlegging.

This is the record where prohibition has been tried and rejected. Doesn't that record speak for itself?

TEAMWORK FOR VICTORY
YOU know how sometimes a team of five men, or nine men, or eleven men, gets inspired—how everything clicks and it can beat any team in the world?
Well, the same thing has happened to a team of more than 700 separate railroads, large and small.
For twenty years these railroads have been training for any transportation job that might come along—laying heavier rail, speeding up trains, getting more work out of every freight car. They've been rehearsing "new plays" which make the most of teamwork—not only teamwork among railroads, but also teamwork among railroads and the shippers and travelers who use them. And now, when the test has come, this railroad team is playing the kind of ball that coaches dream about.
Since long before Pearl Harbor, the railroads have taken on one "impossible" assignment after another as shortages of ships and rubber have placed abnormal loads upon them. And they are keeping all this added traffic moving with the smooth efficiency of an experienced and thoroughly trained team.
Railroads and shippers alike have a right to be proud of the job they have done. It's a great example of unity—of what American industry can accomplish by teamwork for victory.

Freakish Styles

Shoes with pointed toes one to two feet long were favorites with English men during Edward IV's reign. The points were tightly stuffed with hay or moss. But they were out-pointed by the men's shoe points in Richard II's reign. Those were so long the toes had to be fastened by chains to the knees or waist so the men could walk!

Fans were two feet wide in 18th century England, and large enough to shelter an entire family in a rainstorm. Men, as well as women, carried them. The dresser lads liked theirs frilly, with ruffles and mirrors.

If you have any doubt at all what to give that fellow in the service, send him a carton of Camel cigarettes for Christmas. According to latest surveys, cigarettes top his gift list, with Camel his favorite cigarette, according to actual sales records from Post Exchanges and Canteens. If he smokes a pipe, send him a pound of Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco — the National Joy Smoke. Local dealers are featuring Camels in the Christmas-wrapped carton and also in a holiday box of four "fat fifties" (either way you give 200 Camels). Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco in the pound canister is handsomely gift-wrapped making other gift wrapping unnecessary.—Adv.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. North African Occupation Seen As 'Springboard' for European Front; Hitler's Seizure of Southern France Thins Axis Forces for Russ Campaign

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Territory in North Africa occupied by U. S. expeditionary forces under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will be used as a springboard for offensive action against Italy, the Adriatic Balkans and possibly southern France, military experts believe. Principal features on above map show (1) American control ever Atlantic ports in French Morocco; (2) Mediterranean ports of Oran and Algiers in American hands; (3) strategic Bizerte in Tunisia, which would complete Allied control of the south Mediterranean; and (4) Vichy-held Dakar, which military experts expect to be taken over by Allies.

BLITZ TIMETABLE: Beats Schedule

Two immediate jobs had remained for Gen. Dwight D. ("Iron Mike") Eisenhower's American invasion forces after they had completed their spectacular blitzkrieg of French Morocco and Algeria in the record time of 77 hours.

One job was to secure control of rectangular Tunisia, a French protectorate jutting northward into the Mediterranean and offering via strategic Bizerte an ideal stepping stone toward the Axis "soft spots" of Italy and the Adriatic Balkans.

The other job was to complete with their British Allies the nutcracker drive into Libya to smash forever Marshal Rommel's all but extinguished Afrika Korps.

The capture of Morocco and Algeria had given the Americans control of 1,300 miles of precious North African seacoast on the Atlantic ocean and the Mediterranean sea, including the key ports of Casablanca, Rebat, Oran and Algiers. Significantly enough, it was Adm. Jean Darlan, French chief of all defense forces who had given the "cease-firing" order to the French North-African colonies. Darlan was now in a new role of collaborationist with the United Nations, after secret negotiations with American army officers. The welcome of the American forces by the French-African inhabitants hed been warmed by the presence with them of heroic Gen. Henri Giraud, dramatically flown to Algeria from France after a secret rendezvous with British airmen.

Neighboring Tunisia was of key importance not only because of its strategic value for future offensives against Hitler-dominated Europe, but because of the concentration there of Axis air-borne troops and combat planes. Hitler had not intended to give up North Africa without a struggle. His hold upon it would not heve been possible without Tunisia. Possession of the port of Bizerte, best equipped French Mediterranean naval base, by the United Nations would mean that the Allies would heve relatively easy access to Sicily and the Italian mainland and an effective springboard to nearby Tripoli, former "powerhouse" of Axis North African activities. Success of the AEF operetions prompted President Roosevelt to raise Gen. Mark Clark, second in command, to the rank of lieutenant general.

ROMMEL: 'Nutcracker Bait'

Like a groggy prize-fighter backpedaling before a knockout punch, Marshal Rommel's shattered Afrika Korps had scurried across Libya pursued by General Montgomery's conquering Eighth British army.

The chase had been nip and tuck with Rommel trying to reach Tripoli, his main base near Tunisia in an effort to use his remaining strength to make a stand. But Tripoli meant no rest for Rommel, for oncoming American armies from Algeria in the west and Montgomery's battering ram from Egypt in the east would converge in a mighty nut-cracker movement to annihilate Axis power in North Africa.

HITLER: Seizes All France

Military observers agreed that Hitler's seizure of unoccupied France meant a further lengthening of his lines and a weakening of his forces.

The Fuehrer had no other choice than to try to close the "back door" to prospective Allied invasion by ordering his own legions southward to the Mediterranean and the Spanish frontier and those of his Italian "stooge" northward to the Riviera. Corsica, island birthplace of Napoleon, was likewise seized.

But Hitler's move into southern France meant thet 20 to 30 Axis divisions would be tied down in occupation duties, thus weakening the English channel invasion coast and also his forces along the far-flung Russian front where action was at a stalemate. He had likewise enlarged the area where the Nazis would be saboteged as they already have been elsewhere in occupied Europe.

Reports from Russia indicated the Nazis had already begun to withdraw troops to build up their defenses elsewhere in Europe. These were further substantiated by word from Greece indicating the arrival of fresh German units at key seaport bases.

Significantly, Hitler had first stopped his occupetion forces 30 miles short of the French naval base at Toulon, designating it as a "camp retranche" to be by-passed and set apert from occupation. Center of speculation since the 1940 armistice, the French fleet comprising 62 warships was the prize at stake with the Axis standing on the neer side of the Mediterranean and Allies on the other. Now an Allied "collaborationist" in Africa, Adm. Jean Darlan had added his voice to that of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in a request for the French fleet to join him in Algeria.

ALLIES OPTIMISTIC: Channel Thrust?

From both sides of the Atlantic official optimism over the war's future outlook was expressed by leaders as a result of the Allied successes in North Africa.

President Roosevelt predicted the Axis' inevitable defeet, and welcomed the increasing number of Frenchmen who are joining the United Nations' cause.

In London Prime Minister Churchill for the first time since the bleak days of 1940 told the British public to rejoice. Mr. Churchill pointed out that a direct thrust across the English channel was coming in due time. He suggested that the day would be nearer as soon es it was evident that Germany was becoming "demoralized." The prime minister said that the Allied drive in Africa had as its primary objective the "exposure of the underbelly of the Axis, especially Italy, to heevy attacks."

The extent of the armada that had carried American and British forces to the shores of North Africa was disclosed by Oliver Lyttleton, British minister of production, who said that 500 transports and 350 warships had comprised the mammoth invasion fleet.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

LA VALETTA, MALTA: British forces in Malta opened a new airdrome with ceremonies presided over by Viscount Gort, commander in chief. Lord Gort said he was looking forward to the day when the island which has withstood so many Axis aerial attacks would become an advanced base for an offensive against Italy in movements from North Africa.

HAVANA: President Fulgencio Batista of Cuba will pay an official visit to the United States, arriving in Washington December 5, it was announced here. The Cuban chief executive will confer with President Roosevelt and then visit various American cities. General Batista will make the trip on the invitation of President Roosevelt and will be a White House guest overnight.

Accidents Cost People $4,000,000 During '41

"I knew I shouldn't have done it," is a remark often made by accident victims after the damage has been done. And because the war now makes the full working ability of every man and woman more important than ever before, greater accident-prevention care should be taken.

Accidents cost the American people $4,000,000 in wages, medical expenses, insurance, and property damage last year. A total of 102,500 persons were killed, 350,000 permanently disabled and 8,850,000 temporarily injured.

Much has been written on how to prevent accidents, but the best remedy is individual care and thoughtfulness.

Common among the causes of accidents is placing hands between gears, chains, cutter knives, or other parts of machinery in motion. In addition to avoiding this danger, ether precautions are listed as follows:

Do net eat toward yeurself when using a knife.

Do not climb a ladder until it is properly placed, firm and steady.

Use a safety repe er strap when climbing a tree fer pruning.

Drive tractor and car carefully.

Field machinery will last longer if operated at moderate speed. Farm machinery and equipment, as well as industrial machinery, are now provided better than ever with safety devices.

Agriculture in Industry

By FLORENCE C. WEED

Tung Nuts

Back in 1904, Dr. David Fairchild of the government bureau of plant industry secured a quantity of Tung nuts from China. They were planted widely in this country, in all except cold climates, and from this beginning, has sprung a new industry which aims to furnish essential quick-drying oil to the paint industry.

A bumper crop in 1940 previded 5,000,000 pounds of tung nuts with a million dellar income to growers. A narrew belt in the southern states, 50 to 100 miles wide, has been found best suited to growing tung trees.

These come into bearing in the third year. They yield nuts with woody hulls the size of small apples inside of which are from three to seven seeds. Machinery used in crushing the seeds is similar to that used for crushing oil from cotton seed, peanuts and soybeans. The residue left is pressed into cakes and returned to the grower who uses it for fertilizer.

During the last ten years, before the outbreak of the war with Japan, oil valued at ten million dollars was imported from China each year. Much of this was of inferior grade and adulterated with other oils. It has sold from 5.1 cents to as high as 27.3 cents per pound in barrels at New York. With this foreign supply unavailable, the superior American product is finding a ready market.

Mills equipped for dehulling and crushing tung seed have been established in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Is Your Food Poundage Up?

In a population of 133 million, appetites vary tremendously. There may be dainty eaters while others are hearty eaters, but adding machine experts have calculated that each of us would have had on the average, 1,422 pounds of food in a year if all the food were evenly divided in the five-year period 1920-1924. In the "prosperity" years 1925-1929 the average went up 52 pounds to 1,474 pounds.

—Buy War Bonds—

BILL BRADY handled Jim Corbett when the pompadeured stylist beat John L. Sulliven 50 years ago. Later on the able Mr. Brady directed Jim Jeffries, enother of the old-time greats.

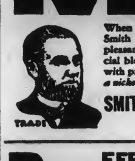
For more than 50 years Mr. Brady has kept in close touch with boxing and the fight geme in general, but he admits now that no one can guess what might heppen beyond the fege of war.

Grantland Rice

"The length of the war will be a big fector," Bill says, "and who can say how long this wer will last?

"We know that after another year or twe in the army that neither Joe Louis ner Billy Conn can hope to be what they were at their peak ferm. I am referring to speed, skill, timing and reflexes. They may be just as healthy and just as powerful, but there is almost sure to be a dull edge on their sharpness.

"This doesn't mean, however, thet they will be outclassed if they return to ring action. For who is coming along to show much more?



The Difference

"This war is different from the first World war," Mr. Brady continued. "The kids of 18 and 19 now are going into service. There is more boxing now, and there will be mere and more boxing than any extended sweep of army and navy camps ever knew. This applies to millions.

"There will be a big average improvement on the boxing side. More men will know how to handle their fists and use their feet in the ring. But developing a champion under war conditions is another matter. It can be done, but it will take time—plenty of time after the war.

"We might take the cese of Gene Tunney," Mr. Brady went on. "He went from the marines to the heavyweight title. He was a fine all-around fighter.

"But don't forget thet the armistice came in November, 1918, and

Gene Tunney

1926 had arrived before Tunney reached the top. Here wes a smart, hard-working fellow who trained perfectly. Yet he needed eight years to get there. Three years after the war Gene was still just another floundering heavyweight, es he proved against Soldier Jones—I think thet wes the name—on the Dempsey-Carpentier card.

"Gene's boxing improvement came after he left the marines—and you won't find es many ambitious, determined young fellows as Tunney was in his eight-year campaign. And on his way up he had to weether one of the worst beatings in ring history —from 160-pound Harry Greb."

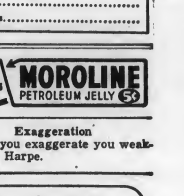
Someone—But Who?

"As I said before, there are several millions taking boxing lessons new from good instructors all over the country—camp by camp," Bill said. "The majority from this big group never would have boxed if it hadn't been fer camp training. Naturally, many of these will shew undeveloped talent that may lead to something after the war."

Jack Dempsey brought out this point at his ceast guard station.

"We have severel thousand kids here taking boxing lessons, learning at least how to stand and how to use their hands," he said. "Naturally, the great majority of these never could be good fighters in the ring. It would be the seme if you taught the fundamentals of golf to severel theusand youngsters. From this group you might get five or six possible champions — maybe not even that many. But you would get a few who could take high ranking.

"It is the same way in boxing. I don't think many people know how many have been trying to get someplace in the ring game—up in the thousands—but less than 1 per cent ever get anywhere.



One of the Toughest

"Boxing is one of the toughest games in the world to face. When you have a heavyweight champion, for example, you rarely have more than one er two challengers who are any good at all. Baseball and football and golf are full of stars, but there are never many good fighters —I mean topnotchers.

"I agree with Bill Brady," the Manassa Mauler went on, "that out of several millions who are being given intensive training under many good instructors, we should be able to dig up many more good ring fighters than we have had before. But this is something that belongs to the future, not to the present. We won't have the answer for some time, but it must be on the side of youth when we get it. Just as in any other game, the younger they get started the better chance they have." The truth of Dempsey's statements will be preved in the future.

HERE is a hooked hearth rug that may some day grow up to room size. So far every female member of the family has hooked at least one square, and the males are all represented by materials from cast-off suits, socks and sweaters. The turquoise flowers and red cherries in the alternate squares are from dyed pieces of the old cream colored wool blankets.

Twelve-inch squares of burlap overcast around the edge made the foundation pieces. Patterns for the repeat design were cut from paper and the burlap was marked by drawing around these with wax crayon. Loops of fabric strips were drawn through with a steel rug hook. Red was used for the curved lines shown at the upper left. Tones of brown for the flower and gray for the cherry background. Mixed colors for the rest of the design.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears has prepared a special pattern for the rug in today's sketch with detailed directions for beginners. So, even if you have never made a hooked rug, you can start now making squares for a rug of any size you wish.

Book 7 in the series of homemaking booklets contains 31 of these sketches with instruction text; also descriptions of the series. Send your order to:

Treat Constipation This Gentler Way!
Many folks say that almost as bad as constipation are harsh cathartics and purges. That's because many medicinal laxatives work this way: they either prod the intestines into action or draw moisture into them from other parts of the body.
Now comes news of a gentler and pleasanter way of treating constipation, for the millions of people with normal intestines whose trouble is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. This way is by eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, a crisp, delicious cereal, and drinking plenty of water. ALL-BRAN, unlike many medicinal laxatives, acts principally on the contents of the colon and helps you to have easy, normal elimination. ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not helped by this simple treatment, better see your doctor.

'Devil's Door'

Centuries ago many English churches had a "Devil's Door" near the front so that the master of evil could make a quick exit during a baptism when the sponsors "renounced him and all his works" in the name of the child, says Collier's. One such door still exists today in the church in Mullion Town on Lizard Head in Cornwall, England.

County To Be Served By Mobile First Aid Fleet.

Pictured are Joseph Bracke and Charles Schaiper, driver-salesmen for the Coca-Cola Bottling Works Company serving this county as certified Red Cross "first aiders", ready to start out in their unit of the Coca-Cola Mobile Emergency First Aid Fleet, largest fleet of its kind in the entire Eastern area of the United States! You can tell by their Red Cross arm bands that these men have successfully completed both standard and advanced Red Cross first aid training. The official Red Cross insignia above the truck license plate shows that the truck carries required Red Cross equipment to become an authorized first aid unit. This equipment, which the men are carrying in the picture, includes a Red Cross first aid kit, traction splints and a blanket—all of which are stowed in a protective case when they are inside the truck.

On November 1st the Colo-Coa Mobile Emergency First Aid Fleet started to function with 65 trucks traveling daily over the territory including this and 21 nearby counties. Each truck has been completely equipped for first aid duty by the Coca-Cola Bottling Company, and with each truck at all times will be at least one qualified first aider, ready to give first aid in all emergencies including road accidents, fires and other peacetime disasters, as well as calamities of war. Ready for service are 76 Coca-Cola driver-salesmen, each of whom is an advanced Red Cross first aid graduate, with eight members who are qualified first aid instructors as well. Their training was completed under the instruction of Mr. Sam J.Gilliland, head of the Red Cross Division of First Aid and Water Safety for Hamilton County, Ohio, shown at the left of the picture.

MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR LIGHTING

(No. 2 of a Series)

Replace Dark Shades

If your lamp shades are not white or very light-colored on the inside, you're losing a lot of valuable light. Dark colors soak up light like a sponge—in some cases as much as 50% of the light is lost. Clean your lamp shades regularly, or if they're too dark or discolored with age, replace them with fresh, new, white-lined shades. You'll get a lot more light from the same bulbs—light that you need for safer, easier seeing.

AN EFFICIENT GLARE CHASER is this plastic, screw-in adaptor. Designed to replace bare bulbs on drop cords or in single-socket fixtures, it provides an abundance of glareless, evenly-distributed light that's kind to eyes. It's easy to install—screws in like a light bulb—and costs only $1.65 complete with 150-watt bulb. Ask for a free trial.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The government's goal is to produce synthetic rubber at a rate of more than 800,000 tons per year by the end of 1943.

Even without a war program requiring tremendous quantities of rubber, the U. S. used 645,000 tons of rubber in 1940.

Any tire made in the last two or three years is good for eight to ten years if not worn out in service.

In 1933, 900 farm tractors were sold with rubber tires and 3,000 steel wheeled tractors were changed over to rubber. Six years later 161,500 rubber tired tractors were bought by American farmers and in addition 45,300 were converted to rubber wheels.

Following a steadily advancing position, tire life in the U. S. has roughly doubled in each of the past decades.

THE STORY SO FAR: Old Early Bill Cole, whose days were numbered, had been shot from ambush early one morning by a man who escaped with only a bullet hole through his hat. Early Bill staggered home and sent his Mexican hand, Gancho Ortega, for his friends Doc Joe and the Judge, who arrived without delay at the King Cole Ranch. Early Bill needed the doctor to attend his wound and the Judge to make his will. However, Old Bill thought it would be fun to make two identical wills. One bequeathing his ranch and money to Ann Lee, daughter of his old friend Rusty Lee; and the other leaving the same to Cole Cody, son of another old friend. Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER III

Werm es the early summer evening was, e thundering log fire wes making the rocks blazing hot in the living room fireplace at the King Cole Ranch. Drawn up before the hearth in his most commodious big cheir sat old Early Bill with his long legs tucked under e heevy red wool blanket, with his overcoat on and buttoned to his chin, with his het on, too. His only attendant, the only person he would tolerate in the house, his foreman Cal Roundtree, stood es far es he could from the fire, his face glistening with sweat.

Cal mopped his forehead with e blue bandane already sopping, and hed his sey, not for the first time, either.

"Bill," he said explosively, "I tell you you're crazy! You'd ought by rights to heve some kind of a nurse here with you; me, I couldn't nurse e sick colt. A woman anyhow. Somebody to—"

"Dry up, Cal," snepped the old man. "Go get me a drink. Get yourself one, too. And quit bellering like e bull calf."

Cal Roundtree, growling like a beer with a sore paw, started kitchenwards but stopped abruptly as he heard the lively recket of a horse's hoofs coming on to the house. The sounds stopped et the front door; then there wes a lusty knocking.

"Come in, you fool!" yelled old Eerly Bill.

Rance Waldron stepped in, just across the raised threshold, and stopped there looking about him, taking in everything at a sweeping glance. Then his look centered probingly upon the man in the chair.

"This the King Cole Ranch?" he seid.

"You're Mr. William Cole?"

"Shut the door, Rance," seid Early Bill, and all of a sudden his voice wes quiet end all but toneless. One speaks of a poker face; well, his voice now was a poker voice.

Rance Waldron closed the door, pulled his hat off and ceme closer; standing at the side of the chair he put out his hand. Eerly Bill took it slowly, let it go with a degree of alecrity.

"You never saw me before," said Rance Waldron, puzzled. "How did you know me?"

"Oh, I saw you once, two-three months ego, Weldron. Four months ego, maybe. You mighin't remember. Me, I don't forget. Over et Bantam Springs, it was."

Until he finished speaking it was hard to make much of his face, whet with the effect of the flicker of the fire, an affair of light and shadow commingled, and with his broad het brim pulled low. Now he lifted his head and shoved his het back and looked up into his kinsman's eyes.

Even so for another moment Rance Waldron remained puzzled, "But—but—" Rance stuttered. "At Bantam Springs, that night! Of course I remember. There was a cerd game—we had a few drinks together—But I didn't know who you were! I didn't know your name—they just called you Bill—Why didn't you tell me?"

"Better get a move on and bring thet jug, Cal," said Eerly Bill, and left the young man utterly to his own devices.

But Cal Roundtree didn't budge; he stood stock still, staring in fascination et the visitor's face. Rance was bare-headed; the fire glow seemed to make his face ruddier end ruddier until it grew bright red. Or wes it just the fireglow, Cal wondered? Yes, Rance Waldron was remembering! That poker game at Bantam Springs! An old man, a stranger, sitting in! What a run of luck the old fool had had! He had been so clumsy; he seemed only halfway to know what he was doing; he fumbled with the cards when he shuffled; he made crazy bets and lost—and yet, by some mirecle, in the end he won everything in sight! And Rance Waldron lost his shirt that night; lost more than he could afford to lose, expecting with every new hand to clean the old fool down to his bootheels; had lost more than just money, because he had lost his head, too, and had flown into a rege and had said things—Just what had he said? And the old fool was Early Bill Cole, keeping his neme hidden the way he did an ace in the hole—and all the time Early Bill knew who Rance Waldron was!

But this consternetion, holding him tongue-tied and et utter loss, was only momentary. He was a young man of perts, wes Rance Waldron, hard to down and harder to keep down. Of a sudden, startling both Eerly Bill and Cal Roundtree, he began laughing.

"Bill Cole, you old heller!" he shouted when he grew articulate. "I might have known at the time that it was you! I've heard about you all my life, the sorts of things a man might expect from you—only he'd never know what to expect!" He sobered. "Me, I didn't show up very well thet night, did I? Guess I must have been halfwey drunk—and your style of playing drove me crazy—and to top it off, I lost pretty nearly every cent I had in the world. Just you weit until I can get into enother game with you!"

"Sure — Say, Cel! Where's thet jug?"

"I'll go put up my horse," seid Rance Weldron.

Agein Early Bill Cole seid, "Sure," end lay back in his chair end pulled his hat brim down. He sat there very still, looking into the fire. A queer little smile, e heppy sort of smile with some strange sort of tenderness in it and a flick of humor—a flick of devilishness, too, maybe—touched his lips . . .

When Cal, first to return, came back into the room he thought the old man was asleep. So he wes. Old Early Bill Cole, full of years and of wickedness and of a rare sweetness, was taking his ease in his last long sleep.

It wes hard to catch a glimpse of the girl's eyes, so wide and drooping wes the brim of her pink strew het, so long and inclined to lower themselves baffiingly were her lashes. Her cheeks, too, were pink, and there was a laughing dimple in one of them. She scarcely lifted her fluffy skirts an inch when she stepped up into the stage; there wes just the flesh of an out-peeping tiny foot, the merest suspicion of a pink-stockinged ankle, and about her a wisp of fragrance as though she had just bathed and sprinkled herself with Floride Water.

Little Miss Ann Lee, accompanied by Aunt Jenifer, fragile and tremulously smiling under her poke bonnet, had taken the first stage from Bentam Springs, arriving at the small crossroads settlement of Top Notch in the early evening. There she and her aunt tarried overnight at the very respectable boardinghouse operated by a local celebrity, Big Belle. And there they spent the following day and night waiting for another stage to take them a day's journey through the mountains to the King Cole Ranch, some miles on the nearer side of Bald Eagle.

All this, of course, was because of the letter she wes carrying with her now, a most mystifying communication from a Mr. William Cole—intriguing, even beyond its mere mystification, because of the hundred dollar yellow back that had come with it. A huge sum of money—but with certain strings to it.

And, upward of a hundred miles from Bantam Springs at the trading post where he went now and then, a young man named William Cole Cody had received a very similar letter. He considered the thing some sort of e hoax—but then the hundred dollar "expense" money enclosed was real dough. It was a long trip across the mountains to Bald Eagle; he had heard of the place as had most men within a pretty considerable radius. Why the devil should he pick up and travel because some no doubt crack-brained individual beckoned? Why? Well then, because a thing like that gets a man's curiosity stimulated until it won't let him rest; because it is a simple thing for youth to scent adventure over the next hill. And, when he is handed a key, it's sheer human nature for a man to wonder what lock it fits!

So in the end Cole Cody slid into his newest boots and hat, decorated himself with his most flamboyant bandana, looked to his guns and through Black Rock Pass, and came in due course to the stage stop at Top Notch. He stabled his horse, had supper and went to bed. In the morning he'd saddle and ride on.

But a man never knows!

He had ridden late last night and would have slept late this morning had he not been awakened by the commotion out in the yerd attendant upon the stage preparing for departure. He hedn't thought anything ebout a stage, having a good saddle horse, and had ridden by way of Top Notch simply because it lay on his line of travel. Now, being ewake, he yawned comfortably end stretched and ceme close to dozing off egain. Then through the other, coerser sounds of men swearing at horses end trace chains jangling, he heard another sound, and he thought dreamfully that it fitted far more pleasantly into the early daylight hour. Little Ann Lee, very gay and electric this morning, was laughing.

He got up then, dressed and ran his fingers through a wild thatch of dark red hair, cocked his het on et an angle which bespoke an interest in life and full epproval of it, and stepped elong outside. And just es he got outside the door Long Peters, the stage driver, wes celling down from his high seat.

"All aboard, folks. Here we go."

It wae then thet Cole Cody saw Ann Lee stepping up into the stage. He did catch the most fleeting of glances from her eyes under the long, demure lashes, and noted how the pink of her cheeks was as soft es the softest of apple-blossom colors tinting the eastern sky.

"Hold on there!" shouted Cole Cody, and bore down on the stage et a run. He called beck to the hostler who had just lent a hand with hitching up, "Keep my horse until I come beck," and jerked the stage door open.

"If you're comin' along, perdner," said Long Peters, his whip poised ready for the long snaking out of the lash into the pistol-like crack that would start his team off like a shot, "climb up hers. No more room inside."

Cole Cody didn't make out clearly who the other inside passengers were; he didn't even see Aunt Jenifer. He saw nothing but the girl with the big pink strew hat. It drooped on each side of her lovely face and there were ribbons streaming from the brim. He almost made her a bow; not quite, but he did take off his hat. She almost smiled, but then she looked away very quickly and began talking hurriedly to her companion. The driver called out e second time impatiently, Cole Cody climbed up on the high seat, the whip snapped at last and they were off.

The girl was seying softly into her aunt's ear, "Did you see him, Aunt Jenny? Isn't he—I mean—"

Aunt Jenifer had a queer little trick of smiling, tucking in the corners of her clean, pink-lipped mouth and letting her eyes drift sideways. She spoke for her thrilled niece's ears alone: "Yes, I know, Pet. Really quite handsome and dashing and all that. To be sure. And I noticed something else!"

"What?"

"He saw you!"

Cole Cody, generally as forthright as a flying arrow going places, was inclined to a certain circuity this morning. He remarked on the horses first of all, not being in the least interested in them, yet singling out the off leader for remark; and in return got a thumb nail sketch of that animal's career, character and pedigree. He spoke of Top Notch; of a high mountain town he knew they would pass through, Tap Rock; then of Bald Eagle. Of what a fine day it was. And finally—of the inside passengers.

"Folks that live around here? Or strangers?"

Long Peters swung his equipage around a bend, down into a shallow, dry creek, cracked his whip again and started them briskly up a sharp slope with the lifting mountains looming steep and black ahead. First disposing of those of his cargo whom he knew, he got around at last to Ann Lee and Aunt Jenifer.

"We're cerryin' a couple nice ladies, too," he said. "Don't know much about 'em. They come this far with Hank Roberts day 'fore yestiddy; I only saw the two of 'em breakfas' time. They're a Miss Edwards, that's the old lady and she ain't real old at that, and her niece, Miss Ann Lee. They come from somewhere way down yonder; around Bantam Springs some place, Hank says. And they never been up this way before; goin' to see some of their folks. Jus' visitin'."

"Going far?" young Cody asked casually.

"All the way through to Bald Eagle. We get there early tonight." He eased his straining horses down to a walk as the slope steepened and tha road nerrowed and roughened. "How about you, stranger? I ain't ever seen you any place."

"Me? I'm headed on to Bald Eagle, too. No, I've never been up this way. My stamping ground's down around Dutch Skill'e Trading Post."

"Glad to know you. My name's Peters; Tom Peters."

"Glad to know you, Mr. Peters. I'm Cody; Cole Cody."

Long Peters proffered his hand, the taut reins still in its grip, and they shook that way.

Almost immediately they entered a great, silent and glooming wilderness.

MOTIVES THAT STRENGTHEN FAMILY LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 2:1-4; Joshua 24:14, 15; Ephesians 5:28-31; 6:1-4.
GOLDEN TEXT—Love never faileth.—I Corinthians 13:8.

Last week we sew the things which mar the life of the family, now we turn to those things which give strength to the home and to daily life. This is e lesson much needed just now when so much of our normal home life is thrown out of joint.

We begin et the right place when we sey thet there must be a

I. Recognition of God in the Home (Exod. 2:1-4; Josh. 24:14, 15).

Failure et this point is without question the great mistake of our day. Christianity touches every phese of life, but nowhere is its blessed influence of greater importance than in the home.

Our lesson suggests thet this is to be done in two ways in our homes.

1. By Feith in God (Exod. 2:1-4). The story of the birth of the babe who was to be Moses, possibly the greetest civic, social and religious leader of all time, reminds us that the Jewish people, who had found favor in the eyes of the Pharaohs in Joseph's time, were now being persecuted. A decree hed gone out that all boys were to be destroyed at birth.

Here were two parents feced with the awful fact that their baby boy was condemned to death. Did they weep in fear and despair? No, they trusted God and sent the little one forth on a venture of faith, the charming story of which follows the verses of our lesson. God honored their faith by using their enemies to serve them.

2. Service for God (Josh. 24:14, 15). Joshua, who followed Moses as the God-appointed leader of Israel, was giving his last admonition to his people. He knew how they had repeetedly turned from God in unbelief end sin; yes, thet even now some were worshiping false gods.

He pleads with them to turn to the one true God, but notice that his plea is made effective by the fact that he and his house were serving the Lord. Every men who has a position of leadership in this world is responsible for the use of that place of power, as a testimony for God. Now and then we hear of a high public official in our own land who loves and serves Christ in sincerity, and our hearts rejoice. The faith of a whole nation may thus be strengthened.

Every one of us has a sphere of influence, and our family life counts for or against God in our own community and among our own friends.

The members of a family that recognize God have a high

II. Regard for One Another in the Home (Eph. 5:28-31; 6:1-4).

It is pure hypocrisy for the family to parade an outward show of religion which does not effectively touch the relationships within the home. Incidentally, it is the kind of hypocrisy which is strikingly ineffective—men see through it too easily.

What then does Christianity do for the home itself? It determines, directs, sweetens—yes, glorifies the relation between

1. Husband and Wife (Eph. 5: 28-31). This passage puts marriage on the highest plane, comparing it to the relationship between Christ and the church. Thus marriage is the joining of man and wife in a sacred union which calls forth love in its highest and noblest sense.

This means thet the husband cherishes his wife es his own body, against which no man would do any harm, and for which he makes every possible provision for its comfort, health, usefulness and attractiveness. Such love between parents will lead the entire home life along in a serene, happy and wholesome way. It will not only double the joy, but will give strength in the hour of sorrow, dividing the griefs and burdens of life.

It will set the pattern for the right reletion between

2. Parents and Children (Eph. 6: 1-4). The first, and one might almost say the only, law of childhood is obedience. It is God's way to joy and a satisfying life experience for the child in the Christian home. The command to obey carries with it the understanding that the parents are "in the Lord." What father or mother is competent to direct a child apart from faith in Christ?

Notice too, that the parent has an obligation to deal intelligently and kindly with the child. We need a greet deal of improvement, and perheps instruction, at that point. Authority asking obedience is necessary, but it can be wise and kind.

Above all, there is to be a divine nurture, a guiding of the tender child life in the ways of God. Here is life's greatest opportunity and its mightiest challenge. How surprising that fathers (and mothers) who are looking for the greatest measure of usefulness to their generation fail to see it in the privilege they have to rear intelligent, godly children.

ADVERTISING
. . . is as essential to business as is rain to growing crops. It is the keystone in the arch of successful merchandising. Let us show you how to apply it to your business.

United States Agencies Need Warehouse Managers, Nurses.

Agricultural warehouse managers are sought, the U. S. Civil Service Commission announces, to fill Federal positions paying $2,000 to $4,600 a year. Broadened opportunities in Panama and in the United States are also announced for graduate nurses.

Warehouse managers will be recruited to supervise cold or dry storage of agricultural products. They are not required to take a written test. From 3 to 7 years of appropriate management experience in a warehouse storing agricultural products is required of applicants without college training. Persons with college training may qualify if they show from 1 to 3 years of the type of experience specified. There are no age limits.

Nurses for anaesthetic, general staff, and psychiatric duty in the Panama Canal Zone and in the United States are being recruited by the Commission. The previous announcement was open only to those who would accept duty in Panama. The maximum age limit for nurses in the Canal service has been raised from 35 to 40 years. For positions in the United States, there is no maximum age limit. Positions in Panama start at $168.75 a month; in the United States at 1,800 a year.

Qualifications required of nurses are: successful completion of a nursing course in a recognized nursing school requiring at least 2 years' residence in a hospital of appropriate size and character. Applicants for the anaesthesia option need an additional year of postgraduate work in that field. Applictions will be accepted from senior nursing students.

Applications for these positions must be filed with the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., and will be accepted until the needs of the service have been met.

Full information as to requirements, and application forms may be obtained from the Secretary of theBoard of U. S. Civil Service Examiners at first and second-class post offices, or from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Applications are not desired from war workers unless higher skills would be utilized in a change of position. War Manpowder restrictions on Federal appointment of persons engaged in certain critical occupations in specified areas are given in Form 3989, posted in first and second-class post offices.

CLUB WOMEN HELP NEW MEMBERS CAN

In their state-wide food conservation program, members of many homemakers' clubs in Kentucky helped non-members can fruits, vegetables and meats.

Rachel Rowland, home demonstration agent in Calloway county, tells how women who accompained their husbands to help neighbors cut tobacco, took pressure cookers with them. After the dinner was prepared and served the men, the women spent the afternoons canning. Several hundred jars of vegetables, fruits, chicken, soup mixtures and other products were put up in one community.

In Grayson county one member of a homemakers' club helped six families with their fall canning, including a widower with five children.

Members of clubs in Bourbon county gave the families of non-members enough vegetables and fruits to make 558 quarts.

NICHOLSON
(Delayed)

"The way of the wicked shall perish", plainly does the Bible teach that the end of a godless life is eternal night, the greatest of all sins is the rejection of the Saviour.

"A word spoken for the master, a little act of kindness, a loving and noble deed, are radiant pearls along life's way."

Lieutenant and Mrs. John Butler were week-end guests of relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Riggs of near Kenton, were recent callers. The names of these friends of long standing have for many years graced our "Helping Hand" thist and their additional gifts from time to time have cemented forever the ties of friendship which exist.

Heartest thanks are extended to Mrs. Hugh Heminway for a lovely gift, and to Mrs. Ralph Jump, Sidney and Ruth for a delicious apple pie, potato chips, popcorn balls, bananas and crackers.

Mrs. Sherman Barberick called on friends Monday afternoon.

PULLETS LAY EARLY

Mrs Ray Cocanougher of Texas community, Washington county, received $48.86 from the eggs laid by 92 pullets last month. The pullets laid an average of 13 eggs. P. L. Staton of the same community cleared $30.72 from his flock, which averaged 12 eggs for the month. At the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington production is being stimulated by turning electric lights on in the hen house at 5 o'clock in the morning.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

The Perry County Milk Cooperation made up of local farmers delivered approximately 190 gallons of milk per day last month.

Mrs. Louis Greer of Nelson county, who has 135 pullets and 60 hens, sells 40 dozen eggs a week and still has plenty for her family of nine to eat.

Farmers of Ballard county seeded about 61,000 pounds of rye grass and 6,000 pounds each of vetch and crimson clover this fall.

In Grant county there is a definite shortage of farm labor, with farm operations suffering accordingly.

Homemakers in Fulton county have dried 597 gallons of fruit and 207 gallons of vegetables this year.

Henderson county harvested its largest crop of soybeans this fall.

All high schools in McLean county have been provided with blue-prints for the construction of food storage cellers for school lunch programs.

In Logan county, homemakers have made 97 tailor's cushions and 70 sleeve boards for use in the making of their winter costumes.

Fred A. Ramsey of Montgomery county has marketed his third ton-litter of the year, the last one of 13 pigs weighing more than 2,300 pounds in 151 days.

Members of homemakers' clubs in Barren county are contributing canned fruit and vegetables to the community hospital in Glasgow.

Indications are that 25,000 pounds of vetch will be seeded on 1,000 acres in Fleming county this year, compared with 12,000 pounds on 450 acres last year.

In Union county, a nutrition program is being promoted through the cooperation of the county home demonstration agent, teachers and other agencies.

HOW'S BUSINESS AMONG HOME FOLKS?

AFTER all, when you do business in your home town or your home State, you help both yourself and your neighbor—because you help to keep your money at home, where it has a better chance to come back to you. . . . So shop at home, this year. If, by taking this advice, you refrain from coming to "The Brown"—we'll miss you, of course. But still we say: For a merrier Christmas, let's do our shopping at home!

Trapping Season Opens November 24th.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov.—The open season for trapping skunk, muskrat, mink, raccoon, and opossum will begin in Kentucky on November 24 and will continue through January 9, S. A. Wakefield, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, announced today.

The trapping season for the red fox is set for the entire month of December while the grey fox is unprotected at all times.

Wakefield pointed out that every trap set shall be visited every 24 hours after setting, and an animal found therein killed instantly, or liberated unhurt. No person shall set any trap on the land of another without written permission from the owner of the land. And that there is a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $50 as the penalty for any violation of this trapping law.

There is no open season for beaver and Otter in Kentucky. The resident state trapping license costs $1 while the non-resident state trapping license sells for $10.50. The state fur buyers or dealers license sells for $2 while the non-resident fur buyers or dealers license sells for $75.

U. S. CIVIL SERVICE RECRUITS CIVILIANS WITH SPECIAL SKILLS.

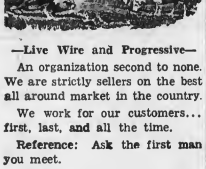
Federal officers in Washington, D. C., need teletype operators and office appliance repairmen, the U. S. Civil Service Commission announces. In addition, Federal laboratories throughout the United States are in need of Junior Chemists and Chemical Aids.

Operaters of multiplex, simplex, or teletype machines may qualify for the Washington positions if they have had at least 2 weeks of appropriate training or experience and can type accurately by touch 35 words a minute on a communications machine. Positions pay $1,440 and $1,620 a year.

Office appliance repairmen with 1 year of experience maintaining, repairing, and overhauling typewriters, calculating machines, addressograph and graphotype machines, folding machines, teletype machines, or similar office equipment may qualify for Washington jobs that pay $1,860 a year. Typewriter repairmen are especially needed.

In the field of synthetic rubber, particulary, expanded research may double the demand for chemists during the coming months, the Commission reveals. Many Junior Chemists and Chemical Aids must be recruited for Federal service therefore, and college men and women, especially women, with appropriate chemistry training are urged to file their qualifications with the Commission.

Four years of college training with 30 semester hours in chemistry is required of applicants for the $2,000 Junior Chemist positions. Three years of college training with 24 semester hours of chemistry is required of applicants for the $1,800 Chemical Aid jobs. Applicants will be accepted from senior and junior students who expect to complete the specified requirements within 4 months after filing.



There is no written test and no maximum age limit for any of positions. Applications should be filed with the United States Service Commission, Washington, D. C., and will be accepted until the needs of the service have been met.

Fingerprint classifiers are requested to note the closing of the U. S. Civil Service examination for Assistant Fingerprint Classifier. Applications for this position must be filed with the Commission's Washington office on or before November 21, 1942.

Full information as to requirements, and application forms, may be obtained from the Secretary of the Board of U .S. Civil Service Examiners at first—and second-class post offices, or from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Applications are not desired from war workers unless higher skills would be utilized in a change of positions. War Manpower restrictions on Federal appointment of persons engaged in certain critical occupations in specified areas are given in Form 3989, posted in first-class and second-class post offices.

Christmas Mail Must Be In By Dec. 1st

If Deliveries On Time Are To Be Assured.

The bulk of Christmas mail must be in the post office by December 1 this year if deliveries on time are to be assured, according to Smith W. Purdum, Second Assistant Postmaster General. Mr. Purdum is responsible to Postmaster General Frank C. Walker for smooth and efficient air and railway mail service.

Unprecedented wartime demands on the postal and transportation systems, plus a prospective record volume of Christmas mailings, were cited by Mr. Purdum as necessitating earlier mailings than ever before. "It is physically impossible for the railroads and air lines, burdened with vitally important war materials, to handle Christmas mailings as rapidly as in normal times", Mr. Purdum said. "If the bulk of parcels are greeting cards are held back until the usual time—the period of about December 15 or 23—they simply cannot be distributed in time, and thousands of gifts will reach their destinations after Christmas."

In 1941, about 21,950 mail cars were required between December 12 and 24 to deliver Christmas mails—enough cars to make a train 270 miles long. This year, the extra cars needed to move holiday mails are largely being used by the armed services, and a sereve shortage is in prospect.

The postal service usually borrows about 2,500 trucks for the Army and other Government agencies, and rents about 10,000 from private owners, to handle the Christmas mails. This year, it will be extremely difficult to obtain enough of these vehicles to meet even a substantial part of the need. The Army needs its own trucks and private owners are reluctant to let someone else use their tires.

Railroads are cooperating by converting some hundreds of steel box cars and similar equipment for mail transportation, and Joseph B. Eastman, Director of Defense Transporation, has ordered that unnecessary travel be curtailed to the limit during the holiday season. But these measures cannot assure deliveries of gifts on time unless the public cooperates by mailing early and thus spreading the transporation load over a longer period than usual.

Mr. Purdum called attention to the task of the Post Office Department in moving millions of pieces of mail every day to and from soldiers, sailors and marines throughout the world. This extraordinary job must be kept current, even while the holiday rush of mailing is handled. Also he pointed out, the postal establishment is operating with many thousands of inexperienced personnel, employed to take the place of men called to the armed services. The new employees naturally cannot handle the holiday mail jam with the smoothness and speed of the postal veterans whom they replace.

In view of all these handicaps to the service, Mr. Purdum added postal patrons should mail their gifts by December 1 if they wish to insure that their friends will not be disappointed at Christmas.

Navy Man To Be In Walton Wed., Dec. 2nd.

A representative of the U. S. Navy Recruiting Station, Covington, Kentucky will be in Walton at the post office at 11:00 a. m. Wednesday, December 2, 1942 to interview prospective applicants for the Navy and Naval Reserve. All men interested should see the recruiter at this time.

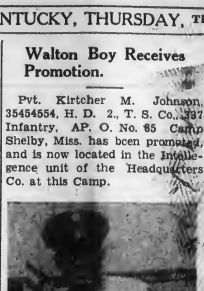
Russ, George Cook, Florence; B. F. Bedinger, Beaver; H. E. White, Earl Smith, Burlington; George Walton, Waterloo.

New members signed up at the Friday meeting were: H. R. Forkner, O. R. Russ, W. W. King, Lloyd Sieckman, J. C. Bedinger, Lloyd D. McGlasson, John D. Crigler, O. W. Chinn, S. D. S. Ranson, C. Liston Hempfling.



Membership fees are $5.00 per year of which $2.50 goes to the County Organization, $2.00 to the State Organization and 50 cents to the National Organization.

The American Farm Bureau Federation and the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation are the largest and most active farm organizations in the country today. They have sponsored in the State and Nation practically all major legislative improvement programs affecting the farmer today. The organization is purely non-political and has for its purposes the protection of farmers' rights and the improvement of agriculture.

All farmers who wish to become affiliated with the work of the Farm Bureau Organization are urged to see their local precinct chairmen or temporary County officers and sign up today.

Burley Price Hearings Now In Progress

Johnson Against Ceiling Price On Tobacco.

As a result of protest by Governor Keen Johnson against the proposed price ceiling on tobacco, hearings by the tobacco division of the OPA, scheduled for November 21st were postponed until this week and are now in progress in Washington.

Representing burley growers at the hearing are Senators Alben W. Barkley and A. B. Chandler, Kentucky's eight Congressmen, Wesley Vick Perry of the Kentucky Department of Agricplture and Dr. H. B. Price of the U. of K. College of Agriculture who is is the offiical representative of the Governor.

In a statement yesterday concerning the proposed ceilings, Lewis O. Harris of the Marshall-Harris Tobacco Whse. Co., Carrollton, Ky., said, "Burley growers have always taken the bitter with the sweet. They have placed their burley on the auction market and have accepted the best bid be it high or low. Now they have a chance to make a profit on an unusually expensive crop and I think they should be allowed to have as much as they can get.

"Deliveries to our five warehouses continue heavier than they were last year, however, the wet weather has had an effect on the rate of delivery," Mr. Harris added.

Food Project Training School To Meet.

There will be a Foods Project Leaders' Training School on Friday, November 27th, beginning at 10:30 A. M., E. W. T., in the lunchroom of the Burlington School, according to Mary Scott Moore, Home Demonstration Agent. The subject of the meeting will be "Interesting and Delightful Menus from Home Canned and Stored Foods".

This will be the material for the Dec. Homemakers' meetings. It is very important that all foods project leaders attend. The noon lunch will be prepared at the meeting.

Mrs. Rollie Farris spent Sunday and Sunday night with her parents and family of Petersburg.

Leaf This Year Weighing Light

Say Warehousemen; Expect Increase Over Last Year's $30.42 Avg.

The Cynthiana Tobacco Market officially opened to receive tobacco Monday, Nov. 23. All of the four warehouse companies in Cynthiana have received some deliveries of the golden leaf from growers in this section who are anxious to get their money crop on the opening sales on Tuesday, Dec. 8th.

Acording to Cynthiana warehousemen, some crops are weighing onethird short of the poundage last year, and generally speaking this year's crop will fall short of the estimated poundage. However, a higher price is almost assured for the 1942-43 offerings.

Last year the Cynthiana Market sold 12,719,344 pounds for an average of $30.42, which was one of the best averages in the entire Burley Belt.

The same four warehouses companies, which operated the nine houses last season, again this year will have experienced tobacco men in their personnel who will be anxious to see that every leaf grower marketing his crop there receives the high dollar. J. W. Cole, Danville, Va., will be the ticket marker this year. Following are the operators and personnel of the four firms:

Wiglesworth
Tob. Whse. Co.

The Wiglesworth Tobacco Warehouse Co., operated by W. G. Wiglesworth, will have Joe Miner as sales manager and H. C. Current as assistant, Will T. Payne as head bookkeeper, W. K. Taylor, W. M. Layson, Arnold Faulkner as members of the personnel and W. L. (Little) Penn will be the auctioneer. This firm will operate its No. 1 House on N. Main St. and the Big Burley House on S. Church St.

Independent
Tob. Whse. Co.

The Independent Tobacco Warehouse, operated by L. C. McLoney, Doy Nunley and Douglas McLoney, will operate again this year the two floors of the big Independent House on S. Church St. J. G. VanDeren Jr., Charles Rorer and Dave Garnett comprise the office force and "Buck" Barker will cry the sales.

Pepper-Peak-Florence
Tobacco Warehouse Co.

R. C. Pepper, J. Roy Peak, Virgil D. Florence, W. B. Tucker, Frazer D. LeBus and Clarence LeBus will operate their four houses LeBus No. 1 and No. 2 and the Stockyards House on S. Church St. and the Cynthiana House on N. Main St. Members of this company's personnel include C. D. Linley, Catherine Humphrey, Mrs Fred McIlvain and Corinne Maffett, office force; Richard Fryman, Newton D. Kearns, Carl Moore, Floyd (Soup) Barlow and W. H. Roberts, floor managers; and Thomas Hickman and R. O. Haviland Jr., weighmen.

Harrison
Tob. Whse.

The Harrison Tobacco Warehouse, operating the biggest floor in Cynthiana at the north end of the viaduct, is owned by J. K. Ammerman, Herbert Moore, J. W. Switzer, Mcshane Shropshire, John L. Cummins and G. E. Moore. T. W. Marshall and Burgess Berry will be the sales managers, while comprising the operating force will be Jim Thompson auctioneer; L. L. Kirby, Julian McKee, J. Will Snodgrass, J. Lewis Judy, Keller Lake, W. C. Walton, Nelson Fryman, Edgar Scott, Huffman Doyle, H .L. McKinney, John H. Conyers and Sarah A. Florence.

Staffordsburg 4-H Girl Winner Of War Bond.

Marjorie Binder, a 4-H Club member of Staffordsburg, was one of three girls scoring highest in the State in the special Victory Garden and Canning Contest sponsored by Sears, Roebuck Co., and by the Home Economics Department, University of Kentucky. Each state winner was awarded a $25.00 War Bond, and will exhibit her entry at a special display during the 1942 National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, November 29th to December 2nd.

Farmers Urged To Grade Tobacco

To Secure The Full Market Value Of Thier Crops.

Charles E. Campbell, Federal Tobacco Grader, in addressing farmers at two grading demonstrations in the County last Tuesday, urged farmers to use greater care in stripping their tobacco crops. Greater care will enable farmers to secure the full market value of their crops.

All Burley tobacco is manufactured into four main kinds, namely: (1) Flyings or Spuds—which are the lower thin leaves that are too ragged to be stemmed and are ground up to make cigarette sack tobacco. (2) Trash and lugs—which are stemmed by machine and cut to make ready-made cigarettes. (3) Bright leaf—that is used to make canned pipe tobacco. (4) Red leaf and tips that are used to make plug and srap chewing tobacco.

Tobacco grades that are stripped according to uses have more advantage of price on the market.

Mr. Campbell stated that ready-made cigarette consumption is now breaking all previous records and is exceeding production. The price prospects are excellent and the Boone County crop is of better than average quality.

Kacaba—Howard

Miss Virginia Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Howard of North Main St. and Sergeant Stanley Kacaba of Camp Breckenridge, Ky. were married Nov. 13th at Evansville, Ind.

At Kenton Loose-Leaf

Herbert Whitley who is serving again this year as General Manager of the Kenton Loose-Leaf Tobacco Warehouse, Second and Scott Streets, Covington.

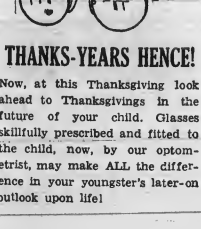
Mr. Whitley has a host of friends throught, Boone County, and surrounding territory as well as Kenton County who are pleased to see his smiling face as they deliver their tobacco.

Bearcats Defeat Burlington 19-13

In First Game On Local Floor.

The W.-V. Bearcats opened the 1942-43 basketball season at Walton last Friday night, with a 19 to 13 win over the Burlington Eagles. The locals were on the long end of a 8 to 2 score at the half. Bearcat scoring was divided as follows: Huey 7, Pennington 4. Berkshire 3, Piner 3 and Elliot 3. Jarrell led the Burlington attack with 9 points.

The Bearcats were without the services of their two stars from last year, Welsh and DeMoisey both being out. These boys both will be back in action soon and with the help of the new boys who made such a fine showing Friday night will again give the Walton-Verona School one of best teams in the state.



The Bearcats will play New Haven Friday night, November 27th at New Haven.

BRAZIL AND U. S. OFFENSIVE

Though the landings on North Africa were a carefully guarded military secret between high British and American officials, one other country let in on the secret was Brazil.

In fact, Brazil, through Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha did some important spade work for the United States in regard to vital Atlantic islands, the Azores and Madeiras. These lie along the route of the American supply line to North Africa, the Madeiras close to the African coast.

Therefore, it was considered possible that the Germans might attempt to use these islands as submarine or even air bases, or that the United States in turn might need the islands for emergency bases.

Both island groups are Portuguese. So, long ago, Brazil, which looks to Portugal as its mother country, made informal diplomatic soundings to make sure that these islands would line up with the United Nations in case of emergency.

SOLOMONS vs. AFRICA

One thing that got under the skin of high U. S. army officials during the weeks just before the North African landings was the navy's policy regarding the battle of the Solomon Islands.

Though all the details had not been worked out, it had been definitely agreed with Churchill and the Russians to start some kind of second front operation this summer. However, the navy also claimed that it could start the Solomon Islands campaign simultaneously without taking any ships out of the Atlantic or disturbing the Second Front preparations. The admirals promised the war department that the number of ships used in the Solomons would be very small indeed.

But before the Solomons operations had lasted many weeks, the navy had used several times as many ships as it expected—some of them sent to the bottom of the Pacific. Ships were taken off the supply lines to Russia, despite definite promises made to Russia. Ships were also taken off the supply lines to England to such an extent that supplies to England dwindled to a driblet.

LESSON FROM ALEUTIANS

Inside the navy it is pointed out that one of the best jobs Admiral Nimitz ever did was to let the Japs get into the tip end of the Aleutian Islands. This proved to be a beautiful decoy, like flies to molasses. The Aleutians were too exposed for the Japs to defend safely, too near our bases.

As a result, the Japs lost 10 destroyers—a big chunk out of any navy—and we are continuing to whittle them down with no loss to ourselves. U. S. bases are now so close to Kiska that U. S. planes bomb the Japs every day without fail—and bomb them so badly that recently no Jap fighter planes have been put in the air. Apparently they are all smashed.

But in the other end of the Pacific, army strategists fear that we may have got ourselves in the same position as the Japs have in the Aleutians—with our necks so far stuck out that, despite current successes, we have lost more ships than the Solomons were worth.

CHRISTMAS TRAVEL

The railroads have been negotiating with the schools and colleges to extend their Christmas holiday period so that it will begin before the usual Christmas home-going dates and extend beyond the usual returning dates. The purpose was to get rid of the school and college traffic before taking on the burden of the furlough movement of soldiers, going home for Christmas.

This longer vacation would be okay with a lot of girls and boys, but most of the schools and colleges have turned thumbs down. They said they could not change their schedules.

Result is that the American railroads will carry the greatest burden in history during the period from December 15 to January 5. The peak will come between December 20 and 24, when the railroads will have to carry:

(1) Home-going students; (2) the usual heavy civilian Christmas travel; (3) soldiers on furlough; (4) soldiers on week-end passes; (5) the normal troop movement, which will not be suspended for Christmas.

So between December 15 and January 5, civilians are asked to stay off the railroads!

AFRICANA

Frenchmen listening to Roosevelt's broadcast to the French people in the French language wondered who wrote his speech. They said it contained grammatical errors and sounded like schoolboy composition. Roosevelt's accent, however, was good.

General Giraud, new French commander in North Africa, is the first Frenchman to use motorized units in cleaning up North Africa. He waged a successful campaign against the Riffs.

Sportlight

by GRANTLAND RICE

THE top word and the most misused word and what should be the rarest word in the language is the word "best." This is a word that covers more ground than we can follow, using an airplane and a telescope.

By this we mean such phrases as "the best team"—"the best passer"—"the best receiver"—"the best kicker"—"the best line"—referring here to football. For example, some days ago Major Jablonski, one of the leading Army coaches, rated Angelo Bertelli of Notre Dame as "the best passer."

Lou Little naturally countered with Paul Governali of Columbia. Both are fine passers. But what about Frankie Sinkwich of Georgia or Eddie Prokop of Georgia Tech? Or Glenn Dobbs of Tulsa? They all work under different conditions, with varying support, through widely different schedules.

Lou Little

Of the lot, Governali, Columbia's able sniper, has the hardest handicap to overcome so far as team protection is concerned. Most of the better passers work on teams that also can run. Columbia's only scoring passage is through the air, and every opponent knows it.

The Top Man

Football's three best passers are Sammy Baugh, Cecil Isbell and Sid Luckman. You can have them in any order so long as Baugh is No. 1.

Taking a crack at our earlier angle about the word "best," football has never known a pass receiver close to Don Hutson. Hutson has grappling hooks for hands and the speed of a cheetah. He also has a deceptive method of faking the enemy out of position.

Baugh is an amazing athlete. "I weighed 180 pounds when I played with Texas Christian several years ago," he told me recently. "I still weigh exactly 180 pounds. I don't figure I've changed as much as two pounds in any recent year."

I can recall few athletes who have kept in such fine physical shape for so long a time.

Back to the Collegians

How many would run far and pass well against such teams as Minnesota, Alabama, Wisconsin, Ohio State, Georgia, Georgia Tech or Notre Dame?

For example, Wisconsin has two of the star backs of the year, but look at that Badger schedule! It included Notre Dame, Missouri, Great Lakes, Purdue, Marquette, Northwestern, Ohio State, Iowa and Minnesota. How many new records could the best of backs set up against this opposition?

The caliber and quality of opposing teams too often is overlooked. And there is many a potential star who is also overlooked on some of the poorer teams, with which he has little chance to operate.

Hard to Compare

It takes no starry-eyed expert to announce that Boston College and Alabama, two of the country's greatest lines, including depth of material. They can't be stormed along the ground—just too many big, fast men.

But it is harder to compare such passers as Governali, Sinkwich, Prokop, Dobbs and others. Governali hasn't anything like the manpower support the others have. There is a large difference between working or playing with Columbia and playing with Georgia or Notre Dame.

A good running game can be a big help to any passing game. After all, Baugh has Dick Todd, and you may recall the time he had Cliff Battles—two of the best runners working with a great passer. And Luckman has had some of the greatest backs in football history with the Chicago Bears—Standlee, McAfee, Osmanski, Nolting and others. Sinkwich has his own running ability to call on in addition to other fast backs. Bertelli has all the running help he needs.

The best single exhibition I've seen this year came from Sinkwich in his two-touchdown march against Alabama's strong defense — something like 11 passes completed out of 13 tossed in that final period.

Apparently no set of adverse figures ever can prove to the racing bettor that he is up against a bit more than he can digest.

For example, the case of Whirlaway serves our point. Long Tall is the biggest money winner of all time. He has had an amazing record of running and winning. Yet, if someone had bet $5 on Whirlaway in every race of his career, said better would be behind financially.

The answer is that Whirly has lost too many races when he was an odds-on choice.

After his first few races there was little chance to make any money backing Man o' War. There were times when he was 1-to-100 or 1-to-90.

Second Contestant Was Runner-Up to the Worst

Both were very proud of their vocal abilities: for months they had squabbled over the question as to which possessed the better voice. At last, to settle bets they had made with each other, they arranged to give a recital before an eminent professor and abide by his judgment.

When they had concluded, the professor turned to the first, shaking his head sorrowfully.

"You're the worst singer I've ever heard," he said.

"Hurrah!" shouted the other. "Come on! Pay me that fiver!"

"One moment, please," said the professor, quietly. "You—er—well, you can't sing at all!"

Will-o'-the-Wisp

In marshy country decaying vegetable matter gives off inflammable gases, and these sometimes become ignited. The light is called a Will-o'-the-Wisp, and used to be regarded as a ghostly being. Science is not quite certain as to the way in which these fires are started, but there is no doubt about their existence and their nature.

Time Changeth

Keeping up with the changing times, we think the army's new time system deserves a note. The army is now operating on a 24-hour-clock system. Four digits—0000 to 2400—represent the 24 hours from midnight to midnight. Six a. m. is 1600; noon is 1200; 11:35 p. m. is 2335.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Geraniums should be kept in a very sunny window if you wish them to live through the winter.

• • •

Brown stains can be removed from the kitchen range with a cloth dipped in turpentine. A little pressure will help here.

Artificial fruit may be cleaned easily if dipped in and out of white soapsuds several times, then rinse in clear water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added.

• • •

A teaspoon of celery salt added to cracker crumbs in which oysters are rolled before frying improves their flavor.

Some meat loaves call for bacon strips on the top. To prevent the bacon from becoming too brown before the loaf is done, arrange it during the last 20 minutes of baking.

Since quilts are expected to last a long time, sometimes become heirlooms, and entail quite a bit of work for even the simplest, use only new cloth and good, strong thread.

In buying iodine for the medicine closet never buy any solution stronger than 2 per cent. A 2 per cent solution is specified by the Red Cross First Aid Manuals as strong enough for those other than doctors to use.

If you smoke, you know how welcome it is to receive a Christmas Carton of Camels or a pound of rich-tasting Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco for your pipe. That works both ways. For those smokers on your list, send them the favorites: You'll have your choice of Camels in the gift-wrapped Christmas Carton or the gay "Holiday House" containing four boxes of "flat fifties." Either way you give 200 mild, flavorful Camels. Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco is richly packaged in the pound canister. None of these packages requires any other wrapping. And don't forget the men in the service. Cigarettes are their favorite gift—Camel their favorite cigarette. Your local dealer is featuring them now.—Adv.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

A BATTERED side chair, a scrap of plywood, part of a can of flat paint, and a can of delphinium blue enamel; a piece of blue and white ticking and a strip of coarse white material that was raveled out to make narrow fringe. Combined, these odds and ends made an attractive chair.

The old chipped white enamel was rubbed with coarse and then fine sandpaper until smooth. The new seat came next; then flat paint which was allowed to dry 24 hours before applying enamel. Next, the cover was made with a straight two-inch fringe trimmed band and ties around the uprights of the back.

4-H Club Complete Salvage Survey.

Boone County, 4-H Club members and leaders are completing this week a farm to farm salvage survey throughout the County, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. This survey is being made at the request of the County Salvage Chairmen. Considerable scrap material still remains on many farms and every effort will be made to assist farm people in placing this material where it will be of greatest benefit to our war effort.

All scrap material will be listed in the survey under one of three headings, according to the wish of the farmers, namely:

(1) Donation to the 4-H Fair Grounds, Red Cross, U. S. O., or other worthy organizations.

(2) Scrap farmers will send to junk dealers direct.

(3) Scrap farmers request the W. P. A. to haul and pay for at the farm.

The 4-H members are especially anxious to receive donations for the County Fair Grounds' Building Fund which at the present time is approximately $1,500.00 in the red. While the 4-H Club members will not be able to pick the scrap up over the farms, they will arrange to pick the scrap up at the farm lot, the school, or other central location. All contributions to the 4-H Clubs in this work will be greatly appreciated.

MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR LIGHTING

(No. 3 of a Series)

Eliminate Colored Bulbs

Amber-orange and flametint bulbs in round or flame shape give a mellow, amber lighting effect, but there is a considerable loss in light to obtain it. Replace them with inside-frosted lamps of the same wattage and you'll get a lot more light from the same amount of current. It's a good idea, too, to see that bulbs are equipped with shades to prevent glare and to direct light where it is needed. We'll gladly help you in any way we can to make the most of your lighting.

For Home Study . .

. . . an I. E. S. Better Sight Study Lamp equipped with a 100-watt bulb provides abundant, soft, glareless light that helps youngsters finish their lessons quicker and easier. Get one for your child today. Better light means better grades.

Had a nice number out at S. S. in spite of the bad weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Ballinger entertained the Young People's Divison on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs Paul Watson spent Sunday with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Klein.

Mr. and Mrs. Norris Waston of Dayton were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Keeney on Thursday.

Harley Hanna visited for a short time Sunday with his perents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hanna.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Rapp and son were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lybran Richarson.

Miss Ruth Keeney who has been stationed in Maryland, has been removed to Dade City, Florida where she is an inspector in a fruit canning factory.

Jno. Klein is able to be out again after a few days illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Giles spent Sunday with his parents in Harrison county.

A number of women of the church here have been canning fruit for the orphans home, both here and at Versailis, Ky.

We are glad to know that Mrs. Wade H. Cordwell our pastors wife is recovered from her recent illness.

Come out to S. S. The very practical lessons are a help to all who avail themselves of the opportunity. Won't you be one to come.

FAMOUS ALL-BRAN MUFFINS. EASY TO MAKE. DELICIOUS!

They really are the most delicious muffins that ever melted a pat of butter! Made with crisp, toasted shreds of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, they have a texture and flavor that have made them famous all over America.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN MUFFINS

2 tablespoons shortening	¾ cup milk
¼ cup sugar	1 cup flour
1 egg	½ teaspoon salt
1 cup All-Bran	2½ teaspoons baking powder

Cream shortening and sugar; add egg and beat well. Stir in All-Bran and milk; let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Sift flour with salt and baking powder; add to first mixture and stir only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven (400°F.) about 30 minutes. Yield: 6 large muffins, 3 inches in diameter, or 12 small muffins, 2¼ inches in diameter.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

In the modern automobile there are 32.5 pounds of rubber in addition to that used in tires and tubes.

Last summer's national scrap rubber drive brought out 6.57 pounds per capita. Even this gratifying amount represented only a scraping of the surface of the scrap littering the backyards, cellars and attics of the country.

There are some 3,045,000 miles of roads in the United States of which 40% are of the surfaced highway type. Many improved roads them any other country in the world.

There are more than 10 motor vehicles for each mile of highway in the United States. Five-car rationing Sundays made this ratio seem like 10 cars to each 100 feet of road.

In 1940 it was estimated that the total value of passenger cars in the U.S. was $7,209,000,000; trucks had a value of $1,165,000,000.

THE STORY SO FAR: Old Bill Cole, having been fatally shot by an unknown assailant, decided it would be fun to make two identical wills, leaving his money and the King Cole Ranch to Ann Lee and Cole Cody, children of his two old cronies, Rusty Lee and Buck Cody. This done, he was sitting before a blazing fire in the living room at the Ranch when Rancer Waldron stepped in. After threatening Old Bill he stepped outside to tend his horse. When he returned, Old Bill was dead. Meanwhile, both Ann Lee (accompanied by her Aunt Jenifer) and Cole Cody were on their way to the Ranch by stage. Neither knows why the other is there.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER IV

Toward midday they stopped at Stage Stop in a bit of alpine valley where they nooned, ate at a long oilcloth-covered table and changed horses.

Then piling back into the stage and, with a crack of Long Peters' whip, they were again on their way. On the high seat, rolling his cigarette, Cole Cody looked well pleased with the world. He had handed the two ladies up into the coach.

They swirled away through Fiddler's High Pass, curved hazardously along the steep sides of Indian Mountain, made a descent with brakes squealing into Long Valley, and then began climbing again, and so the bright afternoon slid away and shadows began running out across their way and, from the gloom of Dark Canyon, they saw a star.

But it was daylight again when they crested the next rocky ridge, and Long Peters, flinging out his whip and sending his horses along with a rush where there was a stretch of downhill slope, said to Cody,

"Look sharp, way down there and straight ahead, and maybe you'll see the sun flash on windows in Bald Eagle. It's only twenty mile from here. And inside the hour, when we start down the Georgia Road you'll see it again, only it'll be lamps by then. Hold your hair on, young feller!"

Once Cody thought that he did see a flash of light on twenty mila distant windows, but it was merely a wink and a glint and he might have fancied it. The sun was almost down; it was hidden by a pine-studded shoulder of the mountains as they rockated down into another steep-sided little valley.

It was gone for the day when they swept upward again, and the stars were out in earnest. Even yet there was no deep dark, a thickening dusk, rather, closing in about them, with the stars at their shining best. Cole Cody put back his shoulders and breathed deep, the glory of the oncoming night a lovely thing, the night air strong and clean and heady, the tang of pines upon it like spice.

Then all of a sudden and without warning, startling him out of a reverie fit for the hour, the stage driver cursed explosively and jammed on his brakes and leaned back against his reins until ha pulled his horses back on their haunches, bunched and struggling, with the front wheels against the wheeler's rumps. Quick cries of alarm burst from the coach's interior. Cody stared wondaringly at what he could see of the driver's face.

"There's a tree across tha road," muttered Long Peters. And Cody, leaning out and peering closely at last saw it; not ten feet ahead of tha leaders. Long Peters had seen it first, and in time before the coach had piled up on it, it being Long Paters' business to keep his eyes on the road for—Well, for things like a fallen tree.

"Now, that's funny—"

"Sit tight! Not so damn funny, Cody. That tree didn't put itself there. It's a hold-up. Some damn fool must have thought I was carrying a Wells Fargo strong box. Well, I ain't."

A voica, a deep, rumbling, roughly umpleasant voice called,

"Take it easy, driver. It's a hold-up."

It was hard to make out where tha voice came from. On one side of the road was a steep slope pitching brokenly down into the dark depths of a ravine whence rose the rush and swirl of a hidden stream; on the other side was the rising flank of the mountain, made a secret place with its timber and with clumps and thickets of manzanita and chaparral and mountain laurel. So it was clear enough that the highwayman was somewhere on the upper side, but there were a hundred shadowy spots there to harbor him.

"If I could only get a glimpse of that—" Cody heard him muttering to himself, his voice hushed with yearning.

"You heard me!" the voice called again.

"Yes, I heard you!" Long Peters called back, moving his body a little to one side and the other, craning his neck, praying for that longed-for glimpse. "You must be crazy. This is the Bald Eagle stage, hombre, and there's no strong box on it. You ought to know that much."

"I'm not after any strong box. Do what I tell you and nobody won't get hurt. You've got a passenger I want to talk to. Tell him to step along and I won't even hurt him. But he'd better bring with him what he's carrying, or I'll cut his damn ears off. It's Andy Jenkins. Get a move on and you can get goin' again."

"Andy Jenkins?" said Cole Cody under his breath. "Who's Andy Jenkins?"

"That little scraggy, buck-toothed feller. I don't know anything about him." He turned slightly to call back over his shoulder. "You, Jenkins? Hear what the road agent says? What's it all about?"

From the stage's dark interior Andy Jenkins answered gravely in a very quiet voice, cool and collected, not the least hurrying.

"Tell him, Peters, all I've got on me is about fourteen dollars, silver, and a gold watch and chain and some smoke tobacco. That what ha wants? He's sura welcoma."

Long Peters relayed the answer. Before he had spoken tha last word there was a red flash from a point high up the slope and the reverberating crack of a rifle, and a bullet whizzed a yard or so above his head.

"That's just to show I mean business," the voice called sharply. "Get a move on you, Jenkins! I know what you've got and where you got it and how much. Step lively."

Cole Cody said softly to Long Peters, "There are anyhow two of them. That shot came from higher up; not from the man talking to us."

The driver nodded. "I wish I could get a sight of him—"

Jenkins scrambled down out of the coach.

"There's nothing much we can do, is there? If wa didn't have these ladies along—"

Thera was the sound of his light tread, then they saw him passing on beyond the horses, climbing over the log, stepping along briskly with something in his hand; carpet-bag, no doubt.

Long Peters' carbine cracked and spat fire and hot lead.

Neither Cody nor Long Peters watched his progress; both with straining eyes were probing into the dark among the pines, trying to locate the man who had issued his orders and the man who had fired the warning shot. The latter, they knew, would be standing well-concealed behind one of the big-boled pines. They could not make out where the other was.

The little man's figure began to blur in the darkness as he kept along in the road and when they glanced swiftly after him it took a moment or two to find him.

The horses, beyond tossing their heads and stamping with an occasional snort, were quiet enough. From within the coach came voices again. Aunt Jenifer was getting down; she wanted to see whatever was to be seen. Her niece started to follow and Aunt Jenifer commanded her to stay where she was. Ann Lee paid her not the slightest attention, and in another moment was in the road with her aunt.

Cole Cody started to climb down. Again the bull-throated voice roared out,

"Stay where you are! Up on the seat there! All of you, or—"

Long Peters' carbine cracked and spat fire and hot lead, and cracked again and the third time: He had spotted the othar man, tha one who had stood behind the pine, who now moved slightly but enough to come within range of those shadow-piercing eyes of the trate stage driver. Cody, with one foot on the wheel, whirled; for a moment he couldn't see anything, not even the little man with the carpet-bag.

Long Peters' shot drew quick answering fire from two quarters. Cody saw the spits of flame but even yet couldn't see a fair target. He heard the heavy thud of a bullet in flesh, and Long Peters gave issue to a sound halfway between a choked squeal and a grunt and dropped his weapon—it clanged against iron, falling—as he folded up on the seat. The frightened horses began again to rear and plunge.

Cody leaped down, careened into the paunchy man, said curtly, "Grab the horses' heads or there'll be hell to pay!" He broke into a run, following the way Andy Jenkins had gone, leaping the fallen tree, stooping and running on along the road. Like Long Peters before him he was ardently if mutely praying for even a fleeting glimpse of one of the highwaymen.

The paunchy man—his name was Bert Nevers—had the leaders by the bits and was steadying them; a man to take orders. With Ann it was different; when it came to issuing orders she'd rather be issuing them.

Then, ten steps ahead of him, Cody saw Andy Jenkins. The little man had dropped his bag and had a gun in each hand and was blazing away with both. Then he, too, dropped, just as Long Peters had folded up. And then at long last Cole Cody got his glimpse of the man with the deep voice, and saw the bulk of him, looking like a squat giant with the shadows about him.

The target was none too good, yet there was a murderous devil to shoot at and Cole Cody set to work with all the grim joy in life. Tha bulky man stood his ground a moment, firing back, and Cody heard the hiss of bullets fanning his ears. Throughout this he was vaguely conscious of other sounds; voices shouting behind him, Ann's among the others; the quick beat of a horse's hoofs, pounding up a small thunder. There in swift flight went the other man, the one who had fired the first shot from behind a pine tree. But Cody's present duty lay straight in front, and he sent bullet after quasting bullet, striving to beat down the black bulk before him. He heard also the heavy booming voice yelling at his companion, "Hey you! What the——" Cody steadied and fired again, and this time heard a cry stricken out of his man, and exulted; he had put at least one shot home! Then in the general blur he lost sight of his quarry and heard his running boots crashing through the brush, and an instant later heard the pounding of a second horse's flying hoofs. He emptied his guns into the dark, sending after them a yell of angry mockary. No further shots came back. The wild staccato of running hoofbeats died swiftly away and for an instant the starry night was filled with the hush of the vast wildarnass silence.

Then there was another sound; light running footsteps coming up behind him, and Ann Lee was clutching his arm.

"You're all right? You're not hurt? Oh, you were splendid!"

"Run back to the stage, Ann! We're not sure yet; there may be more of them—"

Head down, ha was busy fingering cartridges up out of his belt, shoving them in hot haste into his two guns. He stood a moment, straining his aars against the silence. There was not a sound that did not come from behind him, from the stage, its occupants and nervous horses. It would seem that the party was over. He was sure that one of the bandits was wounded; possibly the other, too? He walked to where the little man, Andy Jenkins, had fallen.

Jenkins was sitting up, one hand a prop on the ground, the other pressed against his side. By the time Cole Cody stooped over him, the girl was with him.

"Hurt bad, Jenkins?" asked Cody.

"Yep, hurts plenty. And I'm bleedin' buckets of blood. I'm all right though; lend me a hand to stop the bleedin'."

Cody stooped and picked the little man up, cradling him gently in his arms.

"Get his carpet-bag and his guns," he told the girl. "Then run ahead and get a lantern lit."

It was the slight and delicate looking Miss Jenifer Edwards who was the greatest help from then on. After Cody had lifted the little man into the stage and Ann had brought the lantern, Aunt Jenifer, with her skirts tucked up really scandalously high to be quite out of the way, and her poke bonnet tossed aside and her sleeves rolled up on her slim white arms—and the corners of her mouth tucked in—set to work methodically and yet swiftly, and skilfully withal.

"Ha'll be all right," she said calmly as she cleared the way for action and examined and cleansed the wound. (The paunchy man, Bert Nevers, had a bottle of whisky which was used copiously both externally and internally.) "Get the driver in here."

Long Peters brought himself in, cursing savagely at every step and sounding hale and hearty in the process. He had been shot through the gun arm; that was what made him mad!

Cody and Bert Nevers, using their hands and the stage ax, cleared away the tree; the wounded men were stowed inside; Cody climbed to the high seat and gathered up the reins—and when he called out, "All aboard!" he saw someone climbing up over the wheel to sit with him. The paunchy man, of course. Only it wasn't Bert Nevers or anyone in the least resembling him in any respact whatever!

Cole Cody threw out his whip in a long hissing flourish, bringing it up with a snap like a pistol shot.

Best to Train Bull When It's Still Young

Age of Two Weeks Not Too Early to Begin

Are you afraid of bulls? Prof. Raymond Albrectson of the New York State college of agriculture has the handling of a herd sire down to a science.

These Midland, Texas, cowboys, Don Houston (left) and Bell Houston, on the Schanbauer ranch No. 1, are as fully acquainted with the scouring effect of Bang's disease as are farmers throughout the United States.

A bull can't talk intelligibly, but he still had sense and feelings, according to Profassor Albrectson who gives the following advice about handling these masters of the cow family.

The bull is a creatura of habit and aarly training can establish desirable traits. Teach a bull calf how to behave in public at an early age.

A two-week old bull calf is not too young to be taught good behavior.

At six or eight months bull training is almost impossible. First teach the bull to lead at your side. Do not let him trail bahind four or five feet. A bull with a running start has made many trainers the undignified part of an uplift movement. Do not let him get his head down or get in front of you.

Be firm, but not harsh. Make the lessons alike so that the bull won't need to remember too many things. Make leading a habit.

At eight months old insert a light ring in the bull's nose. Let the nose heal before educating the bull to lead with the ring. Keep the halter on him in the early stages of ring training, then teach him to lead on a staff.

"Well, is this any of your business?" seems to be what Mem Cow is saying to the photographer as he took this picture of Mom and her two day old calf on the Carl Wooster farm, Union Hill, N. Y.

Teach the bull to offer his ring by rewarding him with an apple, carrot or any tidbit he likes. When handling his ring do it firmly but avoid harsh handling unless the bull is very headstrong.

Professor Albrectson's final advice is that the best way to handle a mature bull is—very little.

Special Roosts Train Chickens

It doesn't take long to get chicks started on the roost, if roosts are built on frames with cross pieces made of lath. These framas at first are placed on the floor. They are only two inches high and the chicks go on them at once. After a few nights they are suspended from the ceiling by wires and lifted a few inches off the floor. To steady the frama one edge can be placed agaihst the sida of the building. The roosts are lifted gradually until the dasired height is reached.

Dried foods, called dehydrated by the highbrows—are coming to the fore. Their advantages for both storage and transportation are greatly reduced bulk and weight.

THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:15-17; Acts 1:8; 2:42; 6:1-4; 11:27-30; 13:1-3; I John 1:3.

GOLDEN TEXT—As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.—John 20:21.

The church is the greatest institution in all the world, with the most widespraad membership and influences. That is true from a purely secular or worldly standpoint. Then when we realize that here is more than a human organization, for it is in fact a divina organism; that it is tha means through which God is now manifesting this power toward men, we see the supreme importance of undarstanding the church and our relationship to it.

This week we stress the mission of the church. We note seven things.

I. Holiness of Life (Matt. 18:15-17).

In a time when general standards of decency and honesty are low, and no one wants to be his brother's keeper, the church needs to be reminded that part of its mission is to maintain holiness in life and the relationship of one to another.

Notice that man's attituda toward his fellowman is first a matter for personal attention, then it becomes of real interest to the church, and if no response is found thare, the offending individual is excluded and put in the hands of God. Be sure to observe that all this is done to "gain" or win him back, not for revenge or in bitterness.

II. Witness in Divine Power (Acts 1:8).

The witness bears tastimony to that which he has experienced, and in the case of Christian experience he is assured of divina power in carrying out his sacred task.

The world would have laughed (and possibly did) at the idea of a small group of bumble believers making the gospel effectiva simply by telling others about the Saviour—but it worked, because God's power was in it.

III. Unity in Faith and Practice (Acts 2:42).

The early church had not yet been split up by the philosophies of men and the vagaries of doctrine, which have since divided God's people. It was His purpose that His people should be one in Him, something we should recall before we divide them just to promote some theory of interpretation.

Unity is not only a matter of belief, it must reach into the practice of daily life. They were steadfast not only in doctrine, but in communion and prayer. A bit more unity there might bring us closer togather in belief.

IV. Service, Spiritual and Social (Acts 6:1-4).

The church rightly put the emphasis on the spiritual. The leaders who had gifts for ministry of the Word did not permit themselves to be diverted into social service. Too many in the church have failed at that point. Even the good may be the mortal enemy of tha best.

At the same time the early church did not neglect social needs. Men were appointed to care for them. In all too many instances the modern church has failed to minister to the social needs even of its own people and has weakly (and one fears gladly) turned them over to social agencies. What a pity!

V. Love—in Deed as Well as in Word (Acts 11:27-30).

Talking about the need of others, wishing them God's blessing, saying a desultory prayer asking God to bless and help them, is not sufficient, in fact it is not Christian at all (see James 2:14-17).

Love acts. It gives. It serves. It proves faith by works. It transmutes the gospel into a language an unbelieving world can understand.

VI. Obedience to the Holy Spirit (Acts 13:1-3).

God has certain plans for the work of the church in the world, and be sure that they are no small or indifferent plans. His mighty agent in bringing His will to pass in the world is the third person of the Trinity, the Holy Spirit. If the church will respond to His guidance and be subject to His control, the work of God may go on unhindered. But just there, Christian friends, the church has most ingloriously failed.

The early church was directed of the Holy Spirit to set apart Paul and Barnabas for the work of missionaries and evangelists. Knowing as we do the marvelous results of their ministry, we shudder at the thought of what might have happened if the church had disobeyed the Holy Spirit that day!

VII. Fellowship (I John 1:3).

Here is the great secret of spiritual life and growth—Christian fellowship. And notice with care the place for it is in the church. If we do not come to the church we deprive ourselves and others of the opportunity for fellowship. The matter of church attendance (and twice on Sunday is not too much) needs to be put on our consciences lest we by our absence bear an anti-church testimony before our neighbors. But even more important is our own need of fellowship with God's people.

Mrs. Chas Rice spent the day Monday in the city, Christmas shopping.

Rev. Cardwell filled his regular appointment at Staffordsburg Sunday. There was a good attendance at church and Sunday school, all keep coming and try to bring some new ones.

The women of the church met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. J. A. Keeney and canned pears for the Orphans Home.

Richwood Red Cross Members Hold Meeting.

The Red Cross meeting of November 18th was held at the home of Mrs. Bill Abdon.

The guest of honor, Mrs. Geo. Howard was delightfully surprised by a lovely birthday dinner, the members each bringing a covered dish which was very attractively served by our hostess, Mrs. Bill Abdon.

Our president Mrs Cecil Robinson called the meeting to order with a very touching prayer.

We are all thinking of our boys in the service and to honor those in uniform from our community a banner was planned and made for them. It is very nice to see their names embroided in blue with a lovely blue star for each—The banner hangs in our sewing room at Mrs. Robinsons home. A prayer was said for each one and I am sure God was near and heard. The little things we do at home seem small compared to our boys part in this war.

During the day 11 Bed Jockets for twelve year olds, five six year old boy's shirts, five, ten year old gowns and three slips were worked on and completed.

We are very much in need of a sewing machine to further this work—Anyone interested in Red Cross work who wants to help by giving us a sewing machine for the duration may call, Mrs. Geo. Howard of Mrs. L. C. Fisher, we will appreciate the gesture and donor may feel he or she or helping in a big way in a very worthwhile cause.

The roll call was answered by Mrs. R. G. Robinson, Lucy Callan, Frank Parker and daughter Betty Jo., George Howard, George Knox F. A. Decker, G. T. Robinson and daughter, C. A. Wolfe, L. C. Fish and hostess, Mrs. Bill Abdon.

Several songs were sung and of course Happy Birthday for our honor guest Mrs. G. Howard. A very interesting and happy day was enjoyed by all.

The next meeting will be held December 2nd, we trust all members will be present. Roll call will be answered by our favorite tree or shrub.

"Prepare to meet thy God", where we spend eternity is determined by the life we live here.

In commemoration of her sixth birthday anniversary Thursday, November 12th little Miss Jackie Morgan was most happily surprised by lovely tokens of affection, and the glow of happiness lighted up her youthful countenance on beholding them for which she expresses grateful appreciation to her grandmother, Mrs. Bessie Trapp Tiffin, Ohio

Mrs. Hugh Hemimway and Mrs. Kleim, as she has previously given Mrs. Klein kindly sent her gifts in celebration of her own birthday anniversary which occurs on the same date.

In this trying hour of our country's peril and desiring to help the defenders of liberty in hastening the war to a victorious end, Ellis Frakes, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Frakes left Tuesday to join the armed forces, followed by the very best of good wishes of hosts of friends, Mr. Frakes is a vocalist of ability, possessing one of the finest barytone voices heard on the air, liberty and justice are sure to triumph.

Christmas Workers Must Have Social Security Numbers.

Hundreds of temporary workers will be hired for the Christmas shopping season in the area served by the Covington field office of the Social Security Board, it was said today by Frank B. Decker, Jr., manager of the office.

"We know that many of these holiday workers will be serving for the first time in employment covered by old-age and survivors insurance," Mr. Decker said.

"We advise all persons who are about to take such jobs to obtain their social security account numbers and show their cards to their employers when work is begun. The employer should copy the name of the worker and the account number exactly as they appear on the social security card. This information must be given when taxes for the final quarter of 1942 are paid to the collector of internal revenue during January, 1943.

"Persons of all ages are now covered by the Social Security Act. That means a boy of 16 who works part time must have an account number, also a man or woman over 65 who may have retired or been idle for several years. Full time and part time employment are covered and every employer of one or more is required to deduct one percent from the wages of those in his service. A similar tax is paid by all employers in commerce or industry.

"Persons who have lost their social security cards should obtain duplicates before taking holiday jobs. Workers who have changed their names since they were last employed may obtain duplicate cards bearing their present names. All applications should be submitted to our office in the post office building in Covington, Kentucky.

Victory Fund Committee Makes Appeal To Boone County Citizens

December Quota for Boone County $490,000.00—According to A. B. Renaker, Chairman.

The largest quota ever assigned to Boone County, as well as all other counties, was announced by the Cleveland ofice of the Victory Fund Committee a few days ago—the quota being $490,000.00 for the month of December. This means that the banks and the people of this county are expected to subscribe this amount during this month as Boone County's part of the Nine Billion cash needed to finance the war. It is stated that no further request for funds will be made until February of next year, except the Series E. F. and G. bonds, which will also count on our quota in December.

Three new issues of bonds are being offered, beginning November 30th; ⅞ percent bonds due in one year, 1-¾ percent bonds due June 15, 1948, 2½ percent bonds due December 15, 1968.

Banks are not permitted to subscribe for the 2½% issue but individuals may subscribe for all three issues, in addition to the Series E. F. and G. bonds.

There are also two issues of Tax Savings Notes which any one may subscribe for to use in paying income taxes.

The Victory Fund Committee for Boone County is composed of the following: A. B. Renaker, Chairman, John L. Conner, H. R. Hensley, C. E. McNeely. Miss Lillian Bristow, C. F. Blankenbeker, G. C. Ransom and C. W. Thompson.

It is impossible for the members of this committee to call on all those who are able to subscribe, therefore it is highly important that you see some member of this commitee or go to your bank immediately and enter your subscription, if we are to reach our quota.

Our enemies in Berlin, Rome and Tokio are watching the course of this Victory Loan dirve. They want it to fail. They want it to prove their contention that the American people are weak and soft and unwilling to make the effort that war demands. What will Boone County say to them? Do your part by calling at some bank in Boone County and enter your subscription. A subscription made through some bank outside of our county does not help on Boone County's quota.

This may seem to us to be a large task but it is not as large as confronts our boys on the firing line. These boys are risking their very lives—we are asked not to RISK our lives—but to lend our money to our Government at a good rate of interest, and the principal returned to us at maturity. A Government Bond is the safest investment on earth today. If it is not, there is only one that is.—A Jap Bond or a German Bond. Don't delay your subscription. Enter it immediately with some bank in Boone County in order to count on our December quota.

COUNTY QUOTA BY PRECINCTS

In order to raise the quota of $490,000.00 by precincts, based on the taxable property of each precinct, the quota for each percinct would be 3-¾% of the assessed valuation.

Farmers Urged To Increase Production

Of Pork, Poultry, and Dairy Products For 1943.

Our Government is asking for a still larger increase in production of pork, poultry, and dairy products for 1943. Boone County farmers in the near future will be called upon to contribute their part in the face of severe labor, machinery, and other problems.

This increased production, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent, can be secured most economically not through increased numbers of livestock, but through practices.

Research and field reports show that 20% more of the pig crop can be saved through sanitation and good management at farrowing time. More economical gaines are secured if these pigs are raised to at least 100 lb. weight on clean pasture, and full feeding of a good ration will bring further increases in production and greater profit.

The average dairy cow will produce 25% more milk with heavy feeding of good grain mixtures, legume hay, cover crop pastures, and good management. The cheapest and one of the most economical grain mixtures to feed with good legume hay is 300 lbs. of ground corn and cob meal, 200 lbs. bran, and 100 lbs. soybean meal.

Good poultry will not produce their best either without full feeding, good housing and management. These three factors alone will more than double the average egg production for the State.

Good feeding and reasonable management do not materially increase the labor costs. Feed is cheaper in proportion today in relation to livestock prices than in almost any previous period in history. Figuring out the best and most economical ration for the particular livestock and then the liberal use of this ration should pay good returns. Poor feeding, according to the Veterinary department at the College results in the greatest livestock disease loss in the State today.

Simple home-mixed livestock rations and recommended production practices are available at the County Agent's office on request.

W. F. Fogle

M. W. F. Fogle of Petersburg nased away Sunday, Nov. 29th at the State Hospital in Lakeland. His remains were brough to Chambers and Grubbs funeral home. He was a life long resident of Boone County.

His funeral took place Wednesday morning at Petersburg, burial in Petersburg cemetary.

Chambers and Grubbs had charge of funeral arrangements.

Berea College To Start Nursing School.

Berea, Ky., Nov.—In an effort to help meet the urgent war needs for more nurses, the Berea College School of Nursing will start a class for beginning nurses the second semester, opening January 26th, Charles T. Morgan, Director of Admissions, has announced. This is the first time in the history of the institution that a January class has been started. One class a year which begins in August has been the custom.

The new plan is being made in response to the appeal of the National Nursing Council for War Service that 20,000 new students be admitted to the schools of nursing over the nation in the spring of 1943 in order to meet war needs.

The training here is conducted in connection with the modernly-equipped Berea College Hospital. An affiliation with the Cincinnati General Hospital and the Louisville Children's Free Hospital makes possible additional special training. The Berea College Hospital is approved by the American College of Surgeons and is a member of the American Hospital Association.

Applicants for the Berea College School of Nursing must be at least 18 years of age and must be high school graduates, Mr. Morgan said.

Union Services Held At Methodist Church Thanksgiving Day.

Union services were held Thanksgiving morning at the Walton Methodist church. Rev. Geo. S. Caroland, pastor of the local Christian church delivered a very impressive sermon to an appreciative audiance. A union quior rendered sweet music, with Mrs. Sam Hudson at the organ, Mrs. Olivia Wills sang a beautiful solo.

We are all thankful for Christian fellowship and our many blessings in a land of freedom.

Alvin C. Perry

Aivin R. Perry a native of Kenton County died at Chicago Monday November 30th suddenly. He was an accountant and a widower. In his room the name of C. Scott Chambers was found for notification so Mr. Chambers received a telegram and took charge and instructed the body to be shipped to him at Walton. Burial will be at Independence.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed. Mr. Perry is a cousin of Mr. Scott Chambers.

Tom Marshall Leaves For Cynthiana Tobacco Market.

Mr. Marshall has accepted a position as Sales Manager for The Harrison Tobacco Warehouse and left Tuesday to take up his duties there.

Mr. Marshall is well known throughout the Northern District, having been in the tobacco business for over 25 years. He invites all his friends to bring their tobacco to him at The Harrison Tobacco Warehouse, Cynthiana, Kentucky.

Mrs. Pearl R. Johnson of Lexington spent a few days in Walton this week with friends.

Clifford Fleek

Clifford Fleek of Florence passed away Friday Nov. 27th at his home after three days illness with pneumonia.

Mr. Fleek a farmer was 40 yrs. of age, having spent his life in Boone County. He was a member of the Baptist church.

He is survived by his widow the former Martha Anderson, two daughter, two sons and number of relatives.

Funeral services were conducted at the Bellevue Cemetery by the Baptist Minister at 2 P. M. Sunday.

Chambers and Grubbs had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Kuyper of Cincinnati were guests of Mrs. Kuyper's sister, Mrs. Mamie Simpson, Sunday.

Farmers Urged To Continue Scrap Drive

Steel Mills Need More Heavy Scrap Metal.

The Advertiser has received a wire from Washington appealing to the American Farmer to dedicate the remaining weeks of 1942 to an intensified scrap hunt. Steel Mills need more heavy scrap and the farms are one of the sources of this type of metal. We need your further help in this farm drive and aiding our salvage committees to continue this effort throught the next few weeks.

We feel everyone is anxious to help our government in this way. Tell the committees of any scrap you have and they will gladly advise you.

Call Mrs. Allen H. Gaines, Walton 33 or Mr. J. B. Heizer, Walton 1365.

NOTICE TO RESIDENTS OF WALTON

Beginning this month, the garbage will be collected only once a month during the winter—This date will be the second Friday in each month until further notice.

No Mail To Be Handed Out

From Local Post Office Except General Delivery Mail During December.

The Walton Post Office will be open from 8:00 A. M., E. W. T. until 6:00 P. M., E. W. T., closing at 12:00 noon for one hour during the first 15 days of December. The ten day period from December 16th to December 25th, both days inclusive, the office will be open from 8:00 A. M. until 7:00 P. M. and will not close at noon. After the 25th of December the office will revert back to its usual time schedule, that is to open at 7:00 A. M. and close at 5:00 P. M. with one hour for noon.

There will no mail handed out the window unless carrier leaves notice, except General Delivery mail, during the month of December and we suggest, that anyone who cannot wait for the carrier to deliver the mail, will rent lock box for the month. The mail is immediately placed in lock box's when it is sorted. Do not request Postal employee's to stamp your mail or prepare money order applications. Your cooperation in this matter will greatly aid the expeditious delivery of everyone's mail and will enable us to preform our duties in a more efficient manner.

Mail all mail at the earliest possible date, as it is likely that it will not be delivered at the expected time if you do not.

We thank you for your past cooperation.

Farmers Benefit From Live-at-Home Program

According To H. R. Forkner, Boone County Farm Agent.

Farmers are benefiting materially from the Live-At-Home Program conducted the past year, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The Program must be continued through the winter months with the farm family taking full advantage of the home meat, milk, butter, and egg supply.

The farm family should be the best fed family in the nation. Unfortunately this is not always the case. Many farmers are worried whether they should kill their own meat while others say their hogs, butter, and eggs are too high to eat. This should not be the case.

Our State "Life-At-Home" or "Make The Farm Feed The Family" calls for every average farm family of five to provide the following:

Meat Supply-Two hogs, a beef or veal and a lamb or mutton.

Poultry-Twenty-five good pullets given good care.

Dairy-Two cows, one Spring freshening and one Fall Freshening.

Vegetabies-A good vegetable garden with a sufficient supply of home fruits.

The Home Economics Department of the College has worked out a splendid, simple program on the daily food needs of the family that supply an abundance of variety, vitamins, minerals, and other material needs. Rev. H. M. Hauter and the County Nutrition Committee, cooperating with the State and National Nutrition Committees, are doing an excellent job in bringing the need for better nutrition to the school children.

Every farmer should see that his family is supplied with a sufficient farm produced meat, dairy egg, and vegetable supply. This supply should be processed and prepared in the form that will be most nutritious and wholesome. War brings many sacrifices which we gladly accept. It also places on us a duty of doing the best and most intelligent job with our most valuable product — our people.

Information on all phases of producing, processing, and preparing our home food supply is available to everyone through the County Agricultural and Home Economics Extension Services. A well fed people means a strong people.

Boone Co. Mass Meeting To Be Held Sunday Dec. 6th At Florence.

Our Anti-Salon league representative, Mr. Hoshal will be at the Mass Meeting Sunday at the Florence Methodist church to inform us more about the coming vote against liquor. Plan to be there if you are interested in seing this deadly evil removed from our community.

Frank Maddox

Mr. Frank Maddox of Devon age 79 pased away at his home Sunday morning when he suffered a heart attack.

Mr. Maddox was born in Campbell County near Alexandria. The past 15 years he has lived at Devon. He was a member of the Florence Baptist church.

He is survived by his widow Margaret Winston Maddox, one son Grant Maddox of Devon and a brother Edward Maddox, two sisters, Mrs. Sallie Wright and Miss Mary E. Maddox of Alexandria.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock at the Florence Baptist church. Rev. R. F. DeMoisey a former pastor delivered a very appropriate sermon to a large crowd of relatives and friends. Rev. Haroid Wainescott, pastor assisted in the services. Burial was at Alexandria his former home.

Chambers and Grubbs had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Verona Woman's Missionary Society Hold Meeting.

The Woman's Missionary Society met last Wednesday for a mission study class. The book studied was, "If Two Agree," which was taken in preparation for the week of prayer for foreign Missions.

The Society met at the church, Tuesday, for a season of study, meditation and prayer, in observance of "The Lottie Moon Memorial."

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Eubanks entertained on Thanksgiving Day the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. Jas. S. Ryle and Mr. and Mrs. Jas E. Gaines of Warsaw, Mr. and Mrs. Ryle Eubanks and daughters, Misses Mary Katherine, Jean and Elose, and little sons Louis and Wm. Ryle Jr. of Steeles Bottom, Gallatin Co.

Miss Julia Johnson was taken suddenly ill Tuesday, and was taken to Christ Hospital Tuesday evening by Chambers and Grubbs.

Her nephew, Dewey Benson and Rev. R. A. Johnson of Burlington accompained her to the hospital.

500 Men Needed For Merchant Marine

From The Cincinnati Area To Fill Quotas From Now To Dec. 15.

Ensign J. C. JAHN, enrolling officer for the U. S. Maritime Service, Traction Building, Cincinnati, announced today that 500 men are needed from the Cincinnati area to fill quotas for the Merchant Marine from now until December 15th. All are to be sent to the new Maritime Service training station at Sheepshead Bay, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Enlistments are being accepted of men from 17 to 35 who are physically fit. Three months of basic training fit enrollees for draft exempt jobs, on Merchant vessels, starting at $200 a month. Fourteen months of sea duty will make seaman eligible for officer's training, leading to commission and positions that pay more than $400 a month.

All Maritime enrollees are enlisted in Class M-1 of the Naval Reserve, thus receiving a full military status. Receipt of an Army induction notice does not bar enlistment.

Ensign Jahn said that the anticipated growth of the Merchant Marine at the conclusion of the war will assure all enlisted men of lifetime jobs at sea if they care to pursue such a career. However, all may return to their civilian positions at the cessation of hostilities if they so wish.

County Banks To Lower Interest Rate

On Time Deposits—To Be Affective January 1st, 1943.

The Boone County Bankers Association held a dinner meeting at Doc' Piace on the Dixie Highway, near Florence, Wednesday night of last week. Twenty five officers and directors represented seven of the eight banks of the County and the Community Bank of Erlanger were present.

C. F. Blankenbeker, President of the Florence Deposit Bank was elected President, C. W. Thompson, Cashier of the Dixie State Bank Vice-President and John L. Conner, Cashier of the Hebron Deposit Bank, Secretary-Treasurer of the Association for the ensuing year.

The main question for discussion was the interest rate on time and savings deposits now being paid by the banks of Boone County. It was the unanimous expression of every one present that the banks could not continue to pay 2% on deposits, plus the State tax and the F. D. I. C. insurance, making the cost 2.22% to the banks, to say nothing of other expenses of operation. Many banks in Kentucky and other states have elimated all interest on deposits, while others have gone to 1%.

Demand for loans is negligible these days and about the only avenue for investment of bank funds is in Government securities and these securities bear such a low rate of interest, mainly from ¾ of 1% to 2%, except on long maturities, as to make it unprofitable to banks to continue paying 2% interest.

The banks of Boone County have always been fair with their customers and when money rates were high they paid a high rate on time and savings deposits. Conditions are now such that the banks have a large portion of their deposits idle or invested in low rate Government bonds. It must be understood that a bank can not invest too heavily in long term bonds which bear a higher rate than short term term bonds, because deposits fluctuate and a bank must be in positions to meet withdrawels at any time and therefore must have most of its funds in short term investments, which bear a very low rate of interest.

Net earnings of banks are the lowest in several years and the prospect for increased earnings is not very favorable in the near future.

Most customers of banks prefer that their bank keep on a safe and sound basis and not try to do the impossible of continuing to pay out more interest than the bank receives.

Notice of the reduction of interest rate on deposits appears in another column of this issue. As we go to press we do not know what the action of the one bank not present at the meeting will be.

Saves Third by Planning Meals.

Mrs. Albert Hill of Muhlenberg county has saved more than one-third the cost of a week's food bill by planning the family's meals for a week and then marketing in advance. A member of the Mt. Zion Homemakers' club, Mrs. Hill has been studing nutrition from Mrs. Pearl Haak, foods specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. By planning a number of days at a time, she is able ot buy in larger quantities and get better values, as well as more varity in her meals. Shs also saves time, for on one trip to market she buys everything needed except the full suppl yof meat.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

In Grayson county, the goal of 19 percent increase in poultry production has been surpassed to an increase of 50 to 60 percent.

Daviess county homemakers' clubs contributed canned fruits and vegetables, sorghum and vegetables for storage to the county home for elderly women and underprivileged children.

The forestry department of the Tennessee Valley Authority has established three new black walnut demonstrations in Calloway county.

C. R. Stinnett of Ballard county harvested 42 bushels of seed which he combined on one and eight-tenths acres planted to hemp.

On ademonstration flock of 96 hens, Joe Rippo of Jefferson county made a profit of $423.66, or $4.41 per hen. All eggs were sold at the farm at retail prices.

A county homemakers' library for the use of its members has recently been organized in Webster county by homemakers' clubs.

Three thousand locust seedlings are being planted on the farm of J. D. Craddock, Jr. and A. B. Thompson in Hart county to prevent erosion.

On approximately 2,500 acres of soybeans harvested in Graves county, yields averaged 12 to 26 bushels per acre.

In Letcher county, W. H. Gibson has a three-acre field of alfalfa which he cut four times, getting approximately five tons per acre.

Homemakers in Warren county are growing herbs to take the place of hard-to-get spices.

One hundred and twenty-six homemakers in Mercer county helped 1,462 families with their gardens by supplying seed, tomato, cabbage or sweet potato plants.

Answer these questions, Yes or No . . Then Make Up Your Own Mind

1: Do people stop using alcoholic beverages if their county votes dry? ☐ Yes. ☐ No.

2: Would liquor be illegally sold by bootleggers and consumed in these counties? ☐ Yes. ☐ No.

3: Is illegal sale of beer or liquor, by bootleggers, better than legal sale by decent, regulated dealers? ☐ Yes. ☐ No.

4: Has Prohibition ever been a success, either locally or nationally? ☐ Yes. ☐ No.

5: Since national Prohibition failed dismally—with the federal government behind it—is it possible to enforce local prohibition today when alcoholic beverages are so easily transported? ☐ Yes. ☐ No.

6: Bootleggers pay no taxes; futile enforcement costs money. Can we afford to substitute this loss for legal beer that pays its way in taxes? ☐ Yes. ☐ No.

7: Isn't it better to control the sale of alcoholic beverages in legally operated places which can be inspected at any time, as against bootleg places which cannot be inspected legally without a search warrant based on sworn evidence of law violations? ☐ Yes. ☐ No.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Until restrictions were placed on gasoline consumption, tires were wearing out eight times faster than they were being replaced.

We're all heard of wooden tires, but tires made of concrete have been, at least in one instance, substituted for the conventional rubber. A Parker Dam engineer had cast reinforced concrete tires on the rims of a portable welding machine. They worked.

As the temperature inside a tire increases, the pressure goes up, but it is poor rubber economy to "bleed" or let the air out of the tire when it is hot. To do so means under-inflation—and rubber waste—when the casing cools.

In 1911 a tire for the then popular make of car cost the motorist $28.30 and gave about 2500 miles. A comparable tire for the present day popular makes of cars can be had (with ration certificate) for about $15. Properly handled it will return close to 25,000 miles of service.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

NOT ONLY A FIGHTER, BUT ALSO A DIPLOMAT

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower has a lot of tough jobs in Africa, and one of them, which doesn't get into the headlines, is to be the diplomatic negotiator among high French officials.

Among other things, he has been very adroit in handling General Giraud, who escaped from France dressed as an old woman and who now is in command of French forces in North Africa.

Actually, General Giraud expected to be commander of all forces in North Africa, both French and American. He is one of the highest generals in the French army, and before France fell, would have replaced General Gamelin as chief of staff had he not been taken prisoner. Therefore, since he outranks Eisenhower and has had much more varied experience, it is not unnatural that Giraud should aspire to be commander-in-chief of the entire North African operation, including the U. S. army.

Eisenhower, however, has a charming personality, a broad grin, a smattering of French, and had little trouble in handling General Giraud.

Another complication was the fact that Giraud hates Admiral Darlan. Yet Darlan, as a member of the cabinet, outranks him. In addition, there is General Nogues, another top-ranking officer. So it has been worked out that Nogues commands the French civil population, Giraud the French army, and Darlan the French fleet.

SIDETRACKED PLANES

When Wendell Willkie conferred with Stalin in Moscow, the Russian leader was critical of the British for sidetracking American lend-lease goods in Scotland and substituting for them inferior British war supplies.

The inside story of this can now be told.

Last summer, a shipment of Airacobras was en route to Russia from the United States and the convoy stopped to refuel in the British Isles. At that time, General Eisenhower, preparing for the second front in Africa, asked that these fast fighting planes be given to him instead of being sent on to Russia.

General Eisenhower was so insistent that he finally went to Prime Minister Churchill personally, who finally agreed that the Airacobras be sidetracked for use on the forthcoming African front.

OVERRULING ROOSEVELT

More and more it looks as if Ferdinand Eberstadt, the Wall Street broker, is becoming the most powerful man in the War Production board and one of the most powerful in the government. It hasn't leaked out yet, but recently he managed to overrule the vice president of the United States, the undersecretary of state, and Lend-Lease Administrator Ed Stettinius.

Some time ago, Eberstadt appointed as chief of WPB export priorities, Major Tom Armstrong, of Standard Oil of New Jersey, who had operated in various Latin American countries. Armstrong had been vigorous in bucking the development of Latin American government-owned oil companies, and the Latin Americans don't like him. Therefore, they aquawked when they heard he would now sit in their all-important priorities position where he could decide whether they could, or could not, receive oil equipment to develop their government-owned industries in competition with Standard and private companies.

Undersecretary of State Welles agreed with the Latin Americans, and protested to the President. So did Vice President Wallace of the BEW, and also Stettinius, who buys lend-lease oil equipment for Latin American governments.

As a result of these protests, Roosevelt ordered Donald Nelson to dismiss Major Armstrong. However, Eberstadt in effect has overruled the President. He insisted that Armstrong remain. And he is still on the job.

Good Care of Tractor Required at Present

Production Limitations Requires Check-up

With limitations on production, it's extremely important that every farmer gets full power and longer life from his tractor by taking the best kind of care of it, says E. R. Gross, professor of agricultural engineering at Rutgers university, in offering tips on making adjustments to the valuable machines.

"In order to get the maximum use out of every ounce of fuel, it is necessary to adjust the carburetor once or twice a year," Gross reminds farmers.

"This should be done with the tractor warmed up and while in operation on a normal belt load. A carburetor is not easy to adjust while on traction load. Too lean a mixture of fuel is as bad as one that is too rich.

"Although the right adjustments vary, you can gauge it accurately if you lean the mixtura first by turning the load needle valve until there is missing or back-firing. Then turn the needle back until the engine carries the load smoothly, and adjust it slowly so that the full effect of changes in the mixture reaches all cylinders. If there is a separate idle adjustment, set it while on no load, but do not change the main needle except while on full load."

Ignition must be right for fuel economy and full power, Gross continues. Plug porcelains must be perfect, not fouled, burned nor broken.

Test the source of electricity. The spark should be continuous and give a good flame when jumping a three-eighths-inch gap. Be sure the plug is of the right type. Use the cold type plug for gasoline and the hot type plug for distillate or heavier fuels.

Time the breaker points, adjust for proper gap, a little less than the plug gap. See that they act freely, meet flatly rather than at a point and separate without a spark.

Wiring may be tested visually but the coil or condenser require a tester set for maximum and minimum capacity.

Study your tractor as you use it.

Wisconsin Researchers Hint Greater Use of Urea

Urea will be post-war cow feed.

Such is the prediction of Wisconsin research workers who are continuously searching for ways to cut the cost of feeding. They believe that if milk prices should drop after the war, farmers will hold one high trump in the form of cost-cutting urea rations, now being tested at the University of Wisconsin.

Heroine of this work is the famous heifer with the "window" in her side, who allows research workers to take samples of partly digested feedstuffs from her paunch. By analysing these samples, it is possible to learn what the animal's digestive system is able to do with the various rations fed to her.

The scientists also tested the opposite extreme of the timothy-urea ration by supplementing the ration with molasses, whose sugars are even more quickly fermentable than starch. That worked all right, but not any better than farm grains.

Accidents on Farms

The National Safety council rates agriculture the most hazardous industry in the United States with 4,200 accidental deaths during the last year on record. Tractors and farm machinery are at the head of the farm-accident list.

Replacement of Cows

About 20 per cent of the 26,000,000 cows that comprise the nation's milk producing factory must be replaced every year.

Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE OLD GUARD REPORTS

IT IS reported to be a "long way to Tipperary." Also, it is a long way from Walter Camp's first All-America football team. That selection was made in 1889, which is a matter of 53 years back in football history or any history. In sport this is something you can call faraway and long ago.

Naturally one gets a thrill when he runs across one of the few left from that old-time outfit, such as Pudge Heffelfinger of Yale, still my top football player. I mean a star in 1889 at the age of 20, and still a star (ask Bo McMillin) in 1922, 33 years later. And I mean a 60-minute star.

Grantland Rice

So there was something of a thrill in meeting Channing of Princeton, and in looking back into the past. Channing of Princeton was also on Mr. Camp's first team—a running mate of Snake Ames, one of the star college athletes of all time, a slender back who had to take the physical beating of mass play for 60 minutes every game.

Then and Now

"There isn't any question at all," Mr. Channing told me, "that modern football is far superior to the game we played. It is faster, smarter, more interesting. It has greater action.

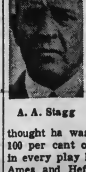
"In those days we never had to bother with forward passes, reverses, spinners, mousetrapping, changing defenses, wing backs, T-formations and a dozen things I might mention that the modern player has to face.

"We had only three factors to consider then—power, speed and durability. We never had to figure in advance all the complex things that might happen to an offense or a defense. Actually, we never had to think much. It was largely a matter of overpowering the other team by power and speed. The modern game is a far better game for everybody—players and spectators.

'We Were Tougher'

"We had just one advantage over this present bunch," 1889 All-America Channing said. "Undoubtedly we were tougher. We could take more. In those days we had no automobiles, no night clubs, no motion pictures, no radios, no distractions. We had only football.

"I'll give you several examples. Pudge Heffelfinger was on that 1889 All-America. Thirty-three years later he played 60 minutes in a professional game with Bo McMillin in Ohio, and he was still the roughest, toughest man in that game. He played against the best pros of 1921 and 1922 and he turned them into tenpins.



"Talk about running guards. Pudge was a great running guard in 1889. And he was 53 and McMillin was 22 when they played together, yet Pudge kept saying to Bo, 'More speed, kid. Don't get in my way.' And McMillin was one of the best and one of the toughest, in a football way, this game ever has known.

"Pudge dislocated his right shoulder in the first play of that game, but still starred through the whole distance.

More Evidence

"I'll give you more evidence that we could take it," Mr. Channing said. "Shep Homans was Snake Ames' substitute at fullback for Princeton, but Shep never got to play a second while Snake was around. After Snake had been graduated, Homans was All-America for two years at fullback, and in 18 games his substitute never got into a game—not even for a play.

"We were 60-minute players then. I mean all of us. Heffelfinger, Hare, Ames, Stagg—don't forget Stagg. At 80 he is still just as active, just as alert, just as keen as he was over 50 years ago.

A. A. Stagg

"I'd like to tell you more about such great people as Brinck Thorne and Frank Hinkey. Hinkey weighed a hundred and fifty pounds, and they thought he was too rough. He put 100 per cent of everything he had in every play he made, and so did Ames and Heffelfinger and Thorne and many others.

"At that time the softening influences of modern civilization hadn't come along to help kill off our legs and our stamina. Certainly, the kids today are just as game as we ever were. And they are football smarter.

"Can you pick from this crop today a Stagg who still will be leading his men at the age of 80—or a Heffelfinger who might be playing in a game at 60, as he did for charity in Minneapolis?

"Yes, they are faster, smarter and more interesting than we ever were. But we were tougher."

Up to This Time Judge Had Not Been Suspected

A man was being tried in the local court for misappropriating a pig, and a conscientious witness, to whom the accused was said to have confided, was on the stand, being examined.

"Now then, can you repeat the exact words in which the prisoner confessed to you to taking the pig?" asked the counsel.

"He said, sir, that he took the pig," replied the witness.

The judge tried to simplify the question: "Did the prisoner say, 'He took the pig,' or did he say, 'I took the pig'?"

"Oh, no, your honor, he said that he took it. Your honor's name wasn't even mentioned."

Protecting Topsoil

To keep the topsoil from shifting in the dry Midwestern states, more than 100,000,000 trees are now growing in 17,000 shelter belts, some of which have already reached a height of 50 feet, reports Collier's. According to experts, these belts lift the prevailing wind up and over the leeward fields for a protective distance that is 20 times the height of the trees.

Federal Agency Needs Wage Hour Inspectors.

Persons with a knowledge of business methods and records, especially records relating to wages and hours, are needed, the United States Civil Service Commission announces, to become junior wage and hour inspectors in 12 geographical regions in the United States.

Positions paying $2,300 a year are available for qualified persons with a legal or voting residence within the respective regions.

Applications must be filed with the Commission's Washington office by January 5, 1943.

Junior Inspectors are employed by the Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor, and are trained in the conduct of Government inspections of business establishments in order to check compliance with the Fair Labor Standards Act. Once they master the requirements of the work, they are given more responsibility in the conduct of investigations.

..Qualifications required are: either 2 years of responsible experience providing familiarity with business methods and records, preferably records relating to wages and hours; or 4 years of study in a resident school of accountancy, a recognized law school, college, or university with at least 12 semester hours in courses such as labor economics, acounting, business organizations, etc. Combinations of experience and such education are acceptable.

There is no written test and no maximum age for these positions.

Full information as to requirements and applications forms may be obtained from the Secretary of the Board of U. S. Civil Service Examiners at first and second-class post offices, or from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Applications are not desired from war workers unless higher skills would be utilized in a change of position. War Manpower restrictions on Federal appointment of persons engaged in certain critical occupations in specified areas are given in Form 3989, posted in first- and second-class post offices.

YOUR TICKETS EARLY!

If you know that you must take a train trip, be an "early bird" and buy your tickets as soon as you can.

By getting your tickets as far in advance of your leaving date as possible, you have a better chance to get the accommodations you want—and you avoid the last minute rush at the ticket window

Better yet—buy a round-trip ticket. It costs less, and saves time at both ends of the trip, both for you and for the ticket sellers.

And if you can't get the accommodations you want—please remember that this is wartime and that the railroads are putting Uncle Sam's transportation needs first.

Thank you!

MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR LIGHTING

(No. 4 of a Series)

Use One Large Bulb Instead of Several Smaller Ones

Offhand it would seem that four 25-watt bulbs would produce the same amount of light as one 100-watt bulb. But such is not the case. A 100-watt bulb produces as much light as SIX 25-watt bulbs; yet uses one-third less current. Therefore, when practical, always use one large bulb instead of several smaller ones of same total wattage and you'll get more light for your money.

An Ideal Gift . . .

. . . for the whole family is an I. E. S. Better Sight Lamp. Direct-indirect models, complete with glare-eliminating diffusing bowl, three-light bulb, heavy metal standard and base, hand-sewn shade and I. E. S. Certificate of Better Light and Better Value, $9.95 up.

Boone County Bankers Association

TO OUR TIME AND SAVINGS DEPOSITORS:

Due to the limited demand for safe loans and the low rate of interest on Government Bonds, the following banks of Boone County feel compelled to reduce the rate of interest on Time and Savings deposits from 2% to 1%, effective January 1st, 1943.

Time Certificates of deposit now outstanding will be permitted to mature at 2%, and Savings accounts will ontinue to bear 2% interest to the next interest paying period of each individual bank. Certificates of Deposit maturing before January 1st will be renewed at 2% for a six months period only.

This step is being taken after mature deliberation and is in line with banks of Cincinnati, Covington and other sections of the country. Banks in many counties of Kentucky and elsewhere have eliminated interest on deposits altogether, but the banks of Boone County wants to pay their customers what they can afford to pay.

The average rate of interest on Government Bonds is about 1½%. The majority of Government issues being ¾ of 1% to 2%, except on long term bonds.

The banks will continue to pay the taxes and the Federal Deposit Insurance on deposits.

Should conditions change in the future enabling banks to revise their interest rates on deposits they will be only too glad to do so.

Floating Ice

Ice floats because, unlike other substances, when water reaches freezing point it ceases to contract as cold things usually do, and inexplicably starts to expand. This, of course, makes it lighter, and so it floats to the surface, because its mass must remain the same.

If water did not expand when it turned into ice the seas and lakes would be permanently frozen, except for a few feet of water at the top, for only the surface receives the heat rays of the sun, and ice that had sunk would never thaw.

THE STORY SO FAR: Old Bill Cole, having been fatally shot by an unknown assailant, made two identical wills, leaving his money and the King Cole Ranch to Ann Lee and Cole Cody, children of his two old cronies, Busty Lee and Buck Cody. Rance Weldron, who claimed relationship, put in an appearance at the Ranch just before Old Bill's death. Meanwhile, both Ann Lee (accompanied by her Aunt Jenifer) and Cole Cody were on their way to the Ranch by stage coach. During the journey the stage was held up by bandits. Long Peters, the driver, and a passenger, Andy Jenkins, were shot, but Jenkins saved the money he was carrying in a carpet bag.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER V

And so, at least in so far as Mr. William Cole Cody and Miss Ann Lee were concerned, all was well and the night was filled with beauty. There was little talk between them; at first just a few words referring to what had just happened, then silence. The high seat of a lurching mountain stage is at no time the ideal spot for any steady flow of conversation; further, just now Cole Cody, driving a team new to him, the horses still of a mood to jam their necks deep into their collars and take the bits in their teeth and run away, had his work cut out for him—then, too, he had to keep his eyes focused watchfully on a road none too good, full of bends and kinks and spotted with chuck holes and crossed by ridges and hollows, a tricky road by daylight to a man familiar with it, far worse than that by nightlight to a stranger.

He had buckled the stage driver's leather belt about him for anchorage; the girl kept a hand locked on the iron guard rail at the back of the seat. But whereas he had to watch the road, she was free to watch him out of the corners of her eyes. There were times when there was a little approving half-smile on her lips. At times with the swaying of the stagecoach her sleeve brushed his; she was warmly aware of the slight contact. She approved of this and the way he walked and talked and bore himself.

Unconsciously she drew a long, quivering sigh—

And it was just at that moment, as the stage having rocked through a bit of starlit clearing was about to plunge into another of the dark, forested canyons, that Cole Cody put on his brakes and pulled his horses down, and said hastily—his voice sounded curt to her,

"Look here! You've got to get down and ride inside!"

"Oh!" she said. She whipped back from him, as far away as the seat allowed. She was having such a wonderful ride! The wind in her face, her hat blown back and the wind in her hair, her lips partly opened to let the cool fresh air stream across them—living only in the moment, looking less at the dark world about her than at the glitter of the heavens above. So she said, "Oh!", an "Oh" like an icicle.

He was still slowing his team down, not looking at her but straight ahead.

"And tell Bert Nevera I want him up here with me. You can help your aunt with the two wounded men."

What a crude sort of beast he really was. She no longer felt the cool air against her face; her cheeks were burning hot. She bit her lip before she spoke. Then her voice sounded gay and it also sounded quite determined.

"But I prefer to ride outside. It was stuffy in there and I like the wind in my face. I was miles away, thinking—"

He had the horses at a restless standstill now and turned briefly toward her.

"I've been a fool," he muttered.

"I wasn't thinking—"

"I've heard that all men are fools," she said brightly. "Are you going to drive on? I am not getting down!"

"I tell you, I wasn't thinking!" He was urgent, and sounded harsh. His eyes had only flicked at her, then turned ahead again, to the road entering the deeper dark in the canyon. . . . "Just because those two highwaymen rode off doesn't necessarily mean that they've gone for good. They may waylay us again. You mustn't be up here! Let Bert Nevers come up; if there's any trouble he can use Long Petera' carbine."

"I won't do it! I am going to stay here. Whether you like it or don't like it, Mr. Cody, I am staying bete!"

"You'll do nothing of the kind. Look here, Miss Lee—"

"I won't look. And I won't go down!"

"I'll make you get down! I'll drag you off the seat and throw you inside!"

She laughed at him, treating him to her scorn at its best.

"You just try it!"

He put one band on her shoulder, the other busied with the reins—and Miss Ann Lee slapped his face. Good and hard. And his temper blew off the lid. Lord, Lordy, this girl was the most unreasonable little chit of a thing that was ever born to drive a man mad.

He yielded to the urge within him and caught her hard and fast in the circle of his free arm and drew her astonished body close to him—and kissed her on the mouth. Good and hard. A kiss every bit as emphatic as a slap.

She gasped and jerked away and scrubbed her mouth with her hand and then with all her might she slapped him again! The blow jarred him; after it was over he could feel the shape of her hand, fingers and all, etched in fire along his cheek and jaw. For an instant he sat rigid. Then again he dragged her to him and again he kissed her, and it was a long kiss, his lips crushing hers, before he would let her go.

"I didn't do that for any fun I get out of it!" he told her in a cold fury. "It's just the best way I know to slap you back, you little wildcat."

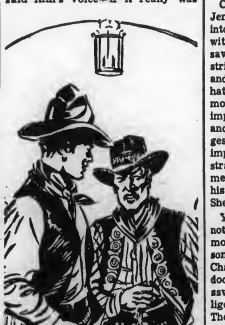
And, making sure that she saw, he scrubbed his lips savagely with the back of his hand . . .

And she slapped him! And, as he was reaching out for her she let the carbine slide off her lap and scrambled out of the seat and half leaped, half fell over the wheel to the ground.

Aunt Jenifer's voice called up, "What's wrong? Why are we stopping?"

He took a long breath to steady himself, then answered.

"I just saw a wildcat— Oh, never mind! We'll be going right on. I want Bert Nevers up here with me. Miss Lee will ride inside after this."



Bert Nevers came as desired, retrieved the fallen gun, climbed up beside the driver.

"What's all this about wild cats?" he demanded.

Cody threw off the brake and started. A scream stopped him. It was Aunt Jenifer.

"Mr. Cody! What on earth! Ann isn't even in yet."

"That's all right, Aunt Jenny," said Ann's voice—if it really was

His slim brown hand ran like the flick of a striking snake to his side.

Ann's! "I could walk from here.—Thank you for waiting, Mr. Cody. I hesitated because I thought I just saw a skunk!"

Then she got into the stage.

And from that spot on into Bald Eagle the stage horses probably made the best time they had ever made in their lives.

The two old porch-sitters in front of the Bald Eagle Hotel smoked and sat in a companionably gloomy silence. They didn't once mention Early Bill Cole. But like the Irishman's parrot who didn't talk, they did a lot of thinking. They had known for a long while that Early Bill had seen his last roundup, had watched his last spring come in and bloom out into young golden summer, and yet now that he was gone they missed him as neither of them had ever realized they could miss an old reprobate like Bill Cole.

It was early dark, a couple of hours after sunset, and fitful music blared and died in the saloons—accordion and music box and somewhere the scraping of an inaccurate, languid fiddle; men went up and down, stopping in small knots now and then for an exchange of old news; everything was quiet yet mildly expectant, for it was stage-day and time now any minute for Long Peters to swing his racing team into Main Street and pull up in front of the hotel in a great billowing volume of dust.

The stage came lurching and rocking around the bend, the four horses at the run, and pulled up at its usual place. That was because Bert Nevers had instructed the stranger-driver. Men caught the horses by the bits; Cole Cody tossed his reins far out to right and left, socketed his whip and got down. He ran briskly up the steps and confronted the Judge and Doc Joe.

"There are a couple of men in the stage who've been hurt," he said crisply. "Where'll I find a doctor?"

"Who are you? Where's Long Peters?" demanded the Judge.

"Long Peters is one of the men that got hurt. Both of them want a doctor right away."

Doc Joe stood up.

"Get the men inside," he said. "I'll go ahead and have a room ready." He went into the hotel.

The Judge threw away his cigar and reached to his pocket.

"Bad hurt?" he asked, and stood up.

"Not Peters. The other man, Andy Jenkins is the other, I'm afraid he's in pretty bad shape." His eyes had followed the departing Doc Joe. "He the doctor?"

The Judge nodded and went down the steps to watch proceedings and to direct. Already the stage doors were open, folks were getting down. He saw a couple of females, didn't pay them any attention. He watched Long Peters descend under his own power. Men standing close lifted little Andy Jenkins out; at first they and the Judge, too, thought him dead already. He was carried into the hotel, Long Peters following.

Men were asking rapid-fire questions: Just what had happened? Where? When? The two women, looking a bit bewildered as so many earnest-eager men milled about them, clung to each other and looked for escape. Upon Bert Nevers, known to many here, fell the duty of giving a running account of the hold-up, and Aunt Jenifer and Ann broke free.

One of the men, though still held here to listen to Bert Nevers, followed the two with their appraising eyes.

Cole Cody, standing on the steps leading to the raised platform before the hotel, looked down over the throng a moment. He himself was accosted and asked to tell about everything; curtly he jerked his head toward Bert Nevers.

"He knows all about it; listen to him," he said, and moved away.

Cody didn't look back to see Aunt Jenifer and Ann Lee make their way into the hotel lobby. Ann, looking with quick interest in all directions, saw his back; in the swing of his stride and in the set of his shoulders and even in the way he wore his hat she read something of the man's mood. He was still furious; he was impatient to be done with the stage and all it contained, all that it suggested to him. She had the swift impression that he was headed straight for the first saloon and meant to wash a lot of things out of his memory with good strong liquor. She was, in this, quite right.

Young Mr. William Cole Cody felt not only desolate and down-in-the-mouth, but mean and ugly. He made something of entering the Last Chance Saloon; he struck the swing door with his shoulder as a man aswarm through his veins with belligerence might smite an enemy. The half-door, flung violently back, struck a man about to depart and all but swept him off his feet.

This man glared and showed his teeth. Those teeth of his were as white as snow, as glistening as a hound's teeth and about as sharp. He was a small, aged Mexican-Indian, Porfirio Lopez by name, a stranger here in Bald Eagle and, tonight in no mood at all to be knocked around. His slim brown hand ran like the flick of a striking snake to his side—just under his ornamental jacket. It would have been with him just then a supreme joy and a perfectly superb relief to allt somebody's gullet from ear to ear.

And then he saw who it was!

"Don Codito!" he cried. He dropped all thoughts of his knife and caught both Cody's hands in the warm Latin way. "Gracias a Dios! Look Senor! Me, all over, I weseshed I was theadi! I ask for to thie! And now! I kees your hands, the two!" All of which meant, Thank God! When I was ready to die, here you are! You!

"You are drunk, Porfirio," said Don Codito. "Go to bed."

Porfirio laughed like a coyote. He pulled his hair, looked at his hands, saw that he had caught some few harsh black strands between his lean fingers and tossed them upward.

"Boracho, Senor?" That laughter of his showed those teeth of his to all advantage; and still in his laughter there was the snarl of a coyote, the threat and surrender of a wounded wolf. He said quite simply, "This is one other time, Senor Don Codito, you save my life. We are going to drink one with the other. You will honor me in this little thing, this thing that is so big, Don Codito?"

Porfirio began, frank and unhidden in all he did, to cry.

"Pretty soon," he confessed, "I am going to cry like one babee. The fines' man in this worl', the fines' man, I am a-tellin' you, is sick; he is pretty sick." (Only Porfirio said "seek.") "He is goin' to die! Ale! I jumped on top my bes' horse, an' I ride 'n I ride an' I ride, Senor. You believe me? More than one hundred, more than one hundred and twenty-five, more than one hundred and fifty (feefty) miles, I ride! An' so, here I am—an' he is already dead!" He put his head down on the bar and let his tears run at large.

"I'm sorry, Porfirio," he said in voice as gentle as his heavy hand.

Porfirio jerked up his head, tossed back his black mane of hair, getting it cleared away from his burning black eyes—and began to laugh.

THE MEANING OF CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Colossians 3:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular.—I Corinthians 12:27.

Church membership means a great deal; a fact which has been obscured by the prevalent idea that joining the church is just like joining any other organization. We need to be reminded again and again that the local or denominational organization has real meaning only as it represents in the world a fellowship of true believers who, by the new birth, have become part of the living and true church, which is the body of which Christ is the Head.

It is likewise essential that believers know what their membership in the church means, so that they may fully appreciate it and properly present it to the world.

I. A New Life (vv. 1-3).

The church member is (or should be) a Christian, that is, one who has passed from death to life through the regenerating work of God in Christ (John 3:6, 7). Thus he has become "a new creature; old things have passed away; behold all things are become new" (II Cor. 5:17).

This new spiritual being has entirely changed interests and desires. The things of the world which he used to love have now become distasteful to him. The things of the Spirit which used to seem strange and not understandable to him (I Cor. 2:14) now become the center of his life. Being risen with Christ in newness of life he seeks those things which are above.

II. A Changed Life (vv. 4-13).

Setting one's heart upon things above means that the life will be changed. There will be a putting off of the things of earth and a putting on of the new man, in practice as well as in creed.

Although the Christian is a new creature in Christ, he bears with him until he dies (or Jesus comes) the old nature, which tries to hold him down, to draw him back to the worldly and fleshly things from which he was saved.

But the Christian is to "make no provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof" (Rom. 13:14). He is rather to "reckon" himself "to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." This calls for an act of his will (and a repeated or continuous act) by which he puts away the sinful things mentioned in verses 5-9. One might sum them up in two groups: (1) sexual indecency and immorality (v. 5), and (2) wicked words and attitudes (vv. 8, 9). The early church had no corner on such sins. They are Christian fellowship now. They ought not do so, for the church member should show the new life of the soul by a changed life before his fellowman.

III. A Gracious Life (vv. 14-17).

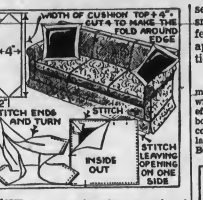
Too often, following Christ—and church membership—has not seemed attractive to the unbeliever, nor has it recommended the grace of God, because it has been a sad, unpleasant, negative thing which God never intended it to be.

To the average non-Christian (rightly or wrongly), the matter of being a Christian seems to be a rather drab affair of denying one's self the interesting and pleasant things of life. Those who feel that way have never seen the real thing, for even if they bad, they would sense (even though they could not understand it) that here was the fulfillment of all that is best in life.

The purpose and plan of God for man is that he should be in fellowship with Him, and thus to be set free from the limitations and the disappointments of human life apart from God. The normal life of the Christian is one of love, peace, joy, fellowship, praise and thankfulness. Let us make it just that in this world of hatred, war, sorrow, division, weeping and ingratitude.

This portion of Scripture merits a closer examination. Note first that love (see "love" for charity in v. 14) is the bond which unites these Christian graces into a whole which is harmonious and well-balanced.

Naturally, the peace of Christ will be the ruling factor in such a life, controlling the heart, the seat of man's emotions and affections.



Such a life is cultivated and developed by the indwelling of God's Word and (note it) "richly." The weakness of many a church is found right here—there is so little teaching and receiving of the Word into the heart.

Christian faith expresses itself in song. "Thou hast put gladness in my heart" (Ps. 4:7), and that means a song. How true it is that hymns and songs teach and admonish us.

The life of the Christian church member is always conditioned by one perfect controlling influence—the will of God. He does all things, even the supposedly little or secular things, in the name of the Lord Jesus, with a constant thankfulness which goes up like a sweet incense to the Father through Christ.

ON THE HOME FRONT

with RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE cost of a handsome pair of cushions will be little if you shop around for remnants of satin or brocade; and for harmonizing crepe or taffeta to make a fold edge as shown here in the sketch. A yard will make two 18-inch cushion tops and the same amount for bottoms. Five-eighths yard of crepe or taffeta will make the fold around both cushions.

If you want to change feathers from old cushions, leave a three-inch opening in the old ticking; sew the larger opening over the smaller one and then work the feathers into the new ticking. Rip apart carefully and sew the new ticking with close stitches.

• • •

NOTE: Smart cushions also may be made by combining smaller pieces of silk with cording and other finishes. Book 4, of Mrs. Spears' series of homemaking booklets, shows how this is done. Book 5 contains grand ideas for cushions of burlap, old silk stockings and gay cottons. Booklets are 10 cents each. Address:

45,000 4-H Club Members Helping In The War Work.

Approximately 45,000 4-H club boys and girls in Kentucky are serving in America in wartime by devoting a large part of their efforts to food production and preservation. At the same time, they are not neglecting their clothing, room improvement and health programs.

Answering Secretary of Agriculture Wickard's plea for more food for the fighting forces, 4-H'ers have produced thousands of dollars worth of pork, poultry, beef, dairy and garden products this year. Ten thousand gardens, totaling 2,500 to 3,000 acres were grown by 4-H club members.

Girls in 4-H clubs not only helped to raise gardens, but they also canned. Now shelves in storage cellers are sagging under the weight of 600,000 quarts of fruits and vegetables canned by the juniors.

Hog production increased by 300 to 400 percent, dairying stimulated by the introduction of purebred Swiss cattle, and a considerable increase in poultry production over last year, indicates the active part 4-H'ers are taking to meet the demand for more food.

In clothing projects, 22,000 girls made an estimated 46,000 articles. In schools all over the state, hot lunches for better health were started during the year. An increase in the use of milk and vegetables was a gratifying result.

Club members have taken an important part in salvage campaigns, 7,000,000 pounds having been collected by them before the October drive. Important also in their goals for the year is the purchase of war stamps and bonds by every club member.

A check-up of the national 4-H club program, of which Kentucky's is a part, shows that 1,500,000 boys and girls have during the past year raised 3,000,000 bushels of vegetables, 6,500,000 chickens, 300,000 hogs, 85,000 dairy cows, and 11,000,000 lbs. of peanuts and soybeans. They have also bought $6,000,000 worth of war bonds, and have canned 14,000,000 quarts of fruits and vegetables.

Women At War

Margaret

Margaret turned off the humming vacuum cleaner, and straightened the slipcovers of the armchair and the daybed that she had pushed up to go over the rug. Then she stood quite still in the doorway and looked at the small bedroom with its southern exposure. It was as neat and impersonal as a pin. It might never have been lived in. The door stood open on the clean, bare closet. There was not a pennant, not a team picture, not even so much as an old Arithmetic book left to show whose room it had once been.

Margaret stared at the walls, the furniture, and deeply, slowly, she realized that no matter what lodgers with their own trinkets and pictures might occupy it, she would always see it the old way. It was the old way that she saw it now. A pair of hard-worn gray pants lay on the floor where they had been dropped. Three baseball bats were stacked with a fishing rod in the corner. A battered red cap with a letter on it lay on the bed. And through the bed, as though it were transparent, Margaret saw another bed, smaller, and with high slatted sides.

She put the vacuum cleaner away and went down to her desk in the sitting-room. She took the fifteen dollars rent that the new lodger had paid that morning in advance for the room, and added to it, from her purse, three dollars and seventy-five cents more. Then she drew out a sheet of paper and began to write on it, slowly, gravely.

"To buy a bond to help train a young man to replace Don, Jr.—killed on June 6th in the Battle of Midway."

Homemakers Test House Equipment.

Homemakers in Anderson county are learning through practical tests of kitchen equipment how time and effort can be saved in everyday jobs, so they can give more time to Red Cross and other war work. For example, at a recent meeting said Miss Elizabeth Donnell, home demonstration agent, five women tried different kinds of egg beaters. The beaten egg whites were then measured and compared to see which gave the best results. A similar test was done on equipment for peeling potatoes, and comparisons were made on the time required and the amount of waste.

Homemakers in Shelby county are united in making their county a garden spot, 13,000 gladiola and 4,000 daffodil bulbs having been planted last year.

In Fleming county, farmers who used heat during the house burning weather added thousands of dollars to the value of their tobacco.

Grows 30 Bushels Soybeans on Acre.

O. C. Whitfield holds the record yield in soybean production in Hopkins county, having produced 30 bushels of Macoupin beans to the acre on bottom land which was phosphated and then seeded with inoculated seed. The average yield per acre in the county is about 17 bushels. More than 100,000 bushels of soybeans, 20 percent of which are yellow varieties, have been sold in the county, but compared to last year, yields are light. Many farmers, says H. W. Whittenburg, county agent, now realize the importance of seed inoculation for best production.

NICHOLSON

"God is our refuge and strength a very present help in time of trouble", He alone sustains when shadows fall.

"There is no death—they only truly live who pass into the life beyond, and see this world is but a school preparative for larger ministry."

The earthly career of Mr. Ernest Jump, 43 of Covington, which recently closed at Booth Memorial Hospital, marked the passing of a highly esteemed citizen. Despite the untiring ministrations of physicians and nurses put forth to restoration and stay the hand of death, he passed peacefully from earth's shadows, following a brief illness a little shadow passed over his placid face like that of a soft cloud upon the serene waters of the lake, with the calm repose of eternal rest upon his brow, his untimely going casts deepest sorrow over a wide circle of relatives and friends, to whom heartfelt sympathy is extended, may they find consolation in the assurance that beyond the grave we live again. Besides his wife and son, Pvt. James J. Jump of Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, he is survived by his father, two sisters, and five brothers. His sister, Mrs. Stanley Heminway and his brother, Mr. Ralph Jump are local residents. Folowing last rites at the Southside Baptist Church, Covington, interment took place in the Independence Cemetary. "Not until the loom is silent and the shuttle ceases to fly shall God unroll the canvas, and explain the reason why the dark threads are just as needful in skillful hand as the threads of gold and silver in the patern He has planned."

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Bearcats Defeat Simon Kenton 35-30

DeMoisey Takes Scoring Honors With 25 Points.

The Bearcats led by DeMoisey defeated the Simon Kenton team 35 to 30, Friday night. This game was a rough and tumble affair from start to finish with four players being elected from the fray. The scoring got under way when DeMoisey of Walton dropped a foul shot through the hoop. The score at the end of the first quarter was 4 to 4, without a field goal being scored, at the beginning of the second quarter, Kelly of S. K. registered the first field goal of the game, the two teams traded baskets until Simon Kenton led at the halfway point by 16 to 14.

Coach Osborn's cagers came back fighting, but it seemed as if they had backfired for S. K. scored two straight field goals, making the score 20-14, at this point the Bearcats called time-out, after that DeMoisey went wild, scoring basket after basket until at the ned of the quarter the score read 27 to 24 in the Bearcats favor

The scoring honor went to DeMoisey of Walton, with 25 of his teams 35 points, Sterling and Breeden were high for S. K. with 7 and 6 respectfully.

Walton's controal of the backboard was the main reason for their victory with DeMoisey and Piner showing their heals to the rest in that department.

In the opion of the writer, DeMoisey put on as fine of a performance as has been witnessed in this section of the country in quite a few years, not only his scoring but the way he handled the young team on the floor and his rebounding off both baskets was superb.

The Simon Kenton reserves defeated the Bearcats 26 to 16 in the second team game.

Friday night the Bearcats go to Hebron for a game with the Cardinals, this promises to be a tough battle, so good luck boys.

Pvt. Thomas Smoot of Camp Forest, Tenn. spent Saturday night and Sunday with his parents. Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Smoot and his sister Stella May Smoot.

Truett DeMoisey spent the week end in Richmond visiting his brother Jean, a student and assistant basketball coach at Eastern State Teachers College.

Bauers was the step-father of Lt. Cornelius L. Regan, U. S. Army aviator, who was killed in action last February.

Buy Christmas Seals Now

To Help Fight Tuberculosis Throughout Nation.

Buy as many Tuberculosis Christmas Seals as you can afford. The Christmas Seal Campaign is one of the oldest health drives in the country, having started in 1907. Tuberculosis is the seventh cause of death in the U. S. In 1912 it was the first cause. Through the sale of bright colored stamps scientific research has reduced from first to seventh the cause of death. Medical research, financed by the Christmas Seal Campaign, is going on in 11 outstanding universities in the U. S.

At least 60% of the money in the Christmas Seal Campaign remains in the county in which it is raised. Every cent of the Christmas seal is spent for health as not single person connected with the sale receives any compensation except a few inexpensive prizes to school children.

The Christmas Seal Campaign is the sole means of support of the organized campaign against T. B. Education is still our chief weapon against T. B. Sience has not yet found a drug for cure or immunization. Christmas Seals pay for health information put in the hands of the people. Science may some time find a drug for the cure of T. B., but it takes funds to carry on scientific research. Help a good cause by purchasing all the Christmas Seals you can. All the schools in the county are selling them. If you have received some seals through the mail send in your check for them at once. Us the seals on all your mail and packages.

A LETTER FROM AFRICA

Dr. C. L. Baker, son of Mrs. Thos. Percival, Walton, Ky., who is a Captian in the Medical Det. of the Anti-Air-Craft Coast Artillery(now stationed in N. Africa) writes the following letter to his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. O'Neal of Walton.

November 20, 1942

Dear Grandma and Grandpa:

Its been too long since I have written to you direct but my letters addressed to mother are sent for you too. It certainly is not because I don't think of you but unless we write in day light we do not have much time as at night we "black out" all we can and believe it or not, go to bed early just because there's not a thing else we can do.

By the time you get this letter you should already know I am in N. Africa, its a lots more pleasant here than I ever imagined. Those who know say its very similar to California in climate and looks.

We are surrounded by the chain of Atlas Mts. (Tell the girls to read up on their Greek story of Atlas, this is the scene of that story.) Remember that book with Bible stories and all the pictures? Well the Arabs here must have been the subject of those pictures—they drive tin mules (the size of Newfoundland dogs) and even ride them. The Arabs are the most ragged people I have ever seen and needless to say are dirty—they seem very Friendly but my French isn't up to talking with them much.

The clouds and climate make those Biblical Stories so much more real here you can actually see the back ground for them even if we are over 1000 miles from Palastine.

We certainly have been on the move—4 new places in a week but maybe now it will settle down quite a bit. I hope so.

We have eaten so many tangerines that we all have the hives. I'm sitting in the sun while I write, even have my shirt off and the sun is hot—Boy, do I enjoy it after all the rain and mud in Scotland. I doubt if it ever gets as warm there as it is here right now. As this is winter the dust is moderate but we are all equipped with dust masks and goggles for dust storms—we have so much equipment hanging on us we look like men from Mars.

I believe I mentioned in my other letter that I came in the day of the attack but did not leave the ship until the following day—I surely had a guardian angle as 2 hours after I walked down the street enjoying the scenery. Snipers cut loose and they had a number of skirmishes but all is quite now and the natives call us brothers. I understand we are giving the French back their arms—really its quite.

A flight of heavy planes just went over with the white star on a blue circle they sure look good they tell us they are flying them directly from home here. General Doolittle has been here and back in fact some of our officers met him. From the looks of things the war is moving our way at last if we just don't have any more casulties than we have had-they have been very few. in fact I have not seen a wounded man so far and no dead men, not even French.

Well I've written a lot—I wish I could hear from you more often but the latest mail I've had from home was dated Sept 25th. I've moved so fast it can't catch up with me—write when you can as eventually I'll get it.

Love to the whole family,

Layle.

Many of Captain Baker's friends at Walton (known to them as Layle) will recall that he graduated from Walton High in 1925. He had his Pre-med work at Ky. Wesleyn, Winchester, Ky and graduated from U. C. Med. College Cincinnati, O. in 1932. He served intership at Grasslands Hospital, New York. and has been located at Cridersville, Ohio since 1933. He leaves a wife and two little boys (one and three years old) they are patiently awaiting his return after the war.

Wilber Strouse left Monday night for Louisville, he had been visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Bethel.

Victory Fund Chairmen Now Active

House to House Canvas Now Being Made to raise Quota of $490.000.00 Bond Sales for Boone County During December

The drive to raise Boone County's quota is now on and it is the patriotic duty of every one to subscribe until it hurts in order that our Government is financed in its war effort. Small subscriptions are of course welcome but if you are able to subscribe for $1000.00 or $5000.00, do not subscribe for $25.00 or $100.00 and feel that you have done your patriotic duty. Our quota can not be raised unless large subscriptions are made in this drive. Our boys are offering their lives, many gave up their business and good jobs to protect those of us who are at home. Our dollars will have little value if we do not win this war and it takes dollars as well as men to win it. In this drive we are not asked to give anything but to lend our money to our Government at a good rate of interest. There is no better investment than a United States Government Bond. Serve notice now on Hitler and the Japs that Boone County, as well as the whole nation, is behind our Government in this war by seeing your precinct committeeman, or go to your bank and make your subscription. If you do not have money now but will have it within the next few months, go to your bank and they will lend you the money at the same rate of interest that the bond bears for a few months until your money is available, so that your subscription will count in this December drive. The bond for which you subscribe will be your collateral for the loan.

Five additional committeemen were appointed last week, making 12 precinct committeemen, in addition to the County Chairman, they being; Thomas Huff, Hamilton; R. L. Green, Beaver; W. H. Presser, Carlton; Liston Hempfling, Constance; C. D Benson, Burlington.

The County Chairman, Mr. A. B. Renaker, is free to work with all precinct Committeemen in any way desired.

No one receives any pay for his services. These men and their co-workers are giving their time and paying their own expenses to make this drive a success. All you are asked to do is to receive them kindly and make a liberal subscription. It takes the combined effort of all of us to win a war. WHAT WILL BOONE COUNTY DO? WE MUST NOT FAIL.

MARSH—RADER

On Friday evening, November 27, Miss Laura Marsh was united in marriage to Pfc. Herman Rader at the Calvary Baptist Church, Latonia, Kentucky by Rev. D. B. Estep in a very impressive manner. Only a few near relatives were in attendence. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Marsh accompained them there.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Marsh of Verona. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Rader of Stephenson Mill Road near Walton. After a 10 day furlough Pfc. Rader will return to his duties at Camp Carrabelle, Florida. The bride will reside with her parents for the duration.

Their many relatives and friends wish them a long and happy life together.

THEY COME AND GO

Vernon Colston, Buddy Whalley and Ray Hoffman, local neighbors and members of Dixie Highway XYZ club are being welcomed home on their furlough from Great Lakes Navy Training School Great Lakes, Ill. On their return they will be assigned to active duty on shipboard.

Other visitors to the Old Home Town, from various camps were James Cleek, Virgil Rich, Buster Webster, Harry Hearne. Each had their own story to tell of Army Life, and all said "I like it fine.

Recent departures for training include Gilbert Ashcraft, Glendale Sidnor, Charles Clinkenberg, Clifford Paul Robinson, Logan Mulligan, Ellis Mullian, Eldred Fisk and Harley Litrell. As soon as they are stationed we expect to be hearing from them, and they in turn will hear from us.

Meat Order Affects Farmers Slaughtering for Others.

Every person in the United States who slaughters and delivers to others even so much as one animal of the sort listed in the meat restriction order of October 1st is subject to the restrictions of the order and to its penalties in case of violation, OPA has advised. Farmers who slaughter animals only for their own use are exempt, and are not subject to any fine. Animals covered are cattle, calves, sheep, lambs, and hogs. Delivery of meat from these animals to civilians is limited so that there shall be enough for the fighting forces of the United States and their allies.

Records of all slaughter for delivery to others must be kept and be available to inspectors of the OPA, by everyone from the country butcher, or the farmer who slaughters meat for others, to the largest packing houses. False statements of the number of animals slaughtered and delivered, or other violations of the restriction order, subject offenders to fines up to $10,000 or ten years in jail, or both.

These facts are stated by OPA emphatically to call attention to the wide scope of the order. All slaughters, including small country slaughters and butchers, and custom slaughters who kill animals belonging to others, are subject to the terms of the order, as are farmers who kill animals expect for the use of themselves and their families.—Anyone, to repeat, who kills and delivers to others, animals from which are obtained beef, veal, lamb and mutton, and pork, is accountable. They must keep records of all they slaughter and deliver, and they must keep within the limits set by the order for deliveries to civilians.

THE MOST IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT
EVER MADE BY THE U. S. TREASURY DEPARTMENT

The 9 Billion Dollar Victory Loan Drive Is On!

This week the United States Government begins the task of borrowing nine billion dollars from accumulated savings and idle funds in the next several weeks as an essential part of winning the war more quickly and more completely.

During these critical weeks you probably will be visited by a representative of one of the securities firms or banks which are contributing their time and effort — without compensation of any kind—to the Victory Fund Committee. He will explain to you, for instance, the benefits that you can obtain from the new Victory 2½'s—available for the first time. Welcome him as a war worker when he calls. If you miss him, ask your banker or securities dealer for full particulars. There is no limit to the amount that you can purchase.

Today many American families are torn apart. Millions have left their homes or their jobs; thousands have given their lives and many more are prepared to do so.

But the government, your government, is not asking you to give anything to this Nine Billion Dollar Drive. It is asking you to lend it all of the money you can possibly invest in what is the safest investment in the world—at a good rate of interest.

When the Victory Fund representative calls, please remember this: it is in your own interest, as well as that of your country, to listen to him—and to invest.

BUY THESE VICTORY 2½'s NOW

Twenty-six year 2½ per cent bonds due December 15, 1968, callable December 15, 1963. Issued in coupon or registered form at the option of the buyer. Commercial banks will not be permitted to hold these bonds until ten years after the date of issue. There is no limit on the amount any eligible investor may purchase. Interest is paid semi-annually, June 15 and Dec. 15. The bonds will be sold in denominations from $500 to $100,000. In the event of the death of a holder, the bonds may be redeemed at 100% and accrued interest for the purpose of satisfying federal estate taxes.

Two series of shorter term obligations: (a) 1¾ per cent bonds due June 15, 1948, and (b) ⅞ per cent certificates of indebtedness due one year after issuance. These securities are open for subscription by banks, and also by all other classes of investors, whether private, corporate or institutional

Other Treasury Securities offered to investors through the Victory Fund Committee are Treasury Tax Savings Notes A and C, and U. S. Savings Bonds, Series F and G.

Farm Bureau Supports Selective Service Amendment.

The American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange and the National Council of Farm Cooperatives rendered strong support to the Tidings Amendment giving deferment to necessary farm workers. Bringing the need of vital farm problems before Congress is one of the duties of a strong Farm Bureau organization.

A release dated November 18th from Major General Lewis B. Hershey, National Selective Service Director, gives the following information on the Tidings Amendment:

"The farm deferment directive makes it plain that Department of Agriculture and County Agricultural War Board advice may be sought in the local boards' determination as to what farms are essential to the war, and what jobs on them are "necessary." But the actual deferment of any given man will still be up to the local Selective Service Boards to decide.

The deferred farm workeres are to be placed in two new classes, II-C and III-C. Those without dependent wives, children or other grounds for dependency deferment will go in II-C, those with dependency to III-C.

The new law does not define or limit "necessary" farming "occupations" and "endeavors," and is not necessarily limited to the same occupations and types of farms defined in the recent War Manpower Commission-Department of Agriculture administrative action, which was started last month in an effort to conserve and recruit manpower on the dairy, livestock and poultry farms.

General Hershey's directive advises the local boards that the Department of Agriculture will provide information to assist the local boards in determining which farm "occupations" and "endeavers" are essential. Meanwhile, until General Hershey has sent out this information, the local boards are asked to seek the aid of the Department of Agriculture's County War Boards to determine which agricultural occupations and endeavors are essential to the war.

The farm worker deferred do not lose their deferment if they change from one "necessary" farm job to another, or from one "necessary" farm to another of the same nature.

But, under a new feature of the law, if the deferred farm worker seeks to move from his "necessary" farm to a job in industry or on a non-necessary farm or elsewhere, he must first obtain the permission of his local board. This permission can be granted only in the form of the local board's "determination that it is in the best interest of the war effort" for him to make the transfer.

Unless such local board "determination" has been made in advance, the board under the law must immediately reclassify those who leave so as to make them available for necessary farm jobs, immediate military service. This regulation has been made immediately effective by direction of the Director of Selective Service.

Undr the Selective Service law, this immediate reclassification for military service, of those leaving essential farm jobs, applies to married men and men with dependents, as well as to single men.

4-Club Garden Winer Gives Talk At Rotary Club.

Charles Brown, Kenton County 4-H Club member made a talk at the Covington Rotary club on the Garden Program, Tuesday December 1st.

Charles was State winner in the 4-H garden contest for 1942. He has been working in the 4-H garden Club Project since 1936.

This year he had an acre garden and several hundred quarts of garden vegetables were canned from his acre garden.

WOMEN AT WAR

Irene

When Irene got home from the airplane factory she was good and tired. This was the hour, after work and before dinner, that she always looked forward to. Her private name for it was "My sissy hour." Into it, these days, she packed all the lazy, luxurious little things she loved—things that used to take up a lot more than an hour of her peace-time days.

She sat down at the little desk in her room. You could tell quite a lot about Irene from that desk. The water-glass filled with the small bouquet of flowers she sometimes bought on the way home. The paper-weight of pink marble. The thin, crackly blue air-mail stationery. And the big, framed photograph of a young man in a corporal's uniform—as good-looking a man as Irene was pretty. On the blotter pad by the telegram that had come that morning just as she was leaving for work.

With those long, well-shaped fingers she reached for a sheet of paper. She nibbled the end of her pen for a bit, and then she wrinkled up her nose at the picture of the soldier and began to write, "Dear Mr. Morgenthau", but the corporal's name was Jackson and she called him Pete. Her round handwriting spread across the page. "My boy friend is with the A.E.F. in Ireland. He has cabled me fifty dollars with which to buy a diamond ring. I've been thinking it over and decided to buy a War Bond to help Uncle Sam instead. This may help to bring my boy friend home sooner, and then he can help me select my ring."

Slowly she began to sign her name. "Irene ——"

(Letter from an actual communication in the files of the Treasury Department.)

VERONA HOMEMAKERS

The Verona Homemakers met at the home of Mrs. W. T. Renakers Friday, Dec. 4th with the chairman, Mrs. G. C. Ransom presiding. Meeting open by repeating the club collect. Mrs. Ransom gave a report of the Executive meeting held at Florence, then came the roll call, reading of the Secretary's report, and transaction of business. The lunch which was planned by the food leader, Mrs. Ira Harris was pronounced excellent—appetizing in appearance, delicious to the taste and beautifully served in the attractive plant adorned dinning room of Mrs. Renaker.

The afternoon session opened with the club singing "Joy to the World" with Mrs. Fred Hamilton at the piano. Mrs. Harris gave a splendid summary of the lesson on foods, stressing the use of home grown, home canned and home stored foods and suggesting variety in serving. After some further discussions the program leader, Mrs. W. B. McCormick produced her program as follows: Solo, "Holy City", Mrs. Moore accompanied by Mrs. G. C. Ransom; A reading befiting the keeping of Christmas, Mrs J. T. Roberts; Son, "White Christmas", Mrs. Moore with Mrs. Ransom accompanist; song, "This is Worth Fighting For"; Mrs. Moore with Mrs. Ransom acompanist; reading, "Jest Before Christmas", Mrs. Hamilton; Reading, "We Rediscovered Christmas", Mrs. McCormack, following this splendid program came a happy exchange of christmas gifts.

The club appointed a committee to send Christmas greetings to local men and boys who have been called into the service.

Those present were Mrs. Mary Scott Moore, Mrs. John Boyer, Mrs. Ernest Dance and baby, Mrs Fred Hamilton, Mrs. Ira Harris, Mrs. Jim Lamn, Mrs. W. B. McCormick, Mrs. J. J. Myers, Mrs. G. C. Ransom, Mrs. W. T. Renaker, Mrs. J. I. Roberts, Mrs. Raymond Stephenson and two sons, Mrs. Gilbert Stewart, Mrs. Jesse Wilson, Mrs. Charles Vest, Mrs. W. W. Hon, Betty Lou and Jimmy Boyer and Relda Powers.

The right to worship as we please

THE CHURCH, to the enemies of America, is a monstrosity to be destroyed. They would padlock its doors and send our children goose-stepping in search of new gods. They would substitute pagan rites for the simple, sustaining beauty of our commemoration of the birth of Christ.

So today America is at war—a war we're going to win. We are determined that our church bells will never be stilled; that every American shall have freedom to worship God in his own way; that Christmas and the spirit of Christmas shall live.

That is the solemn pledge of fighting Americans on the war fronts. That is the solemn pledge of working Americans on the home front. That is the solemn pledge of the Southern Railway System and its officers and employees. To its fulfillment we have dedicated all of our transportation services and facilities, gratefully putting war transportation needs ahead of every other transportation need.

This year, we have carried about two million men in uniform; almost one million in 3,366 special trains; another half million in 13,174 extra cars on regular trains; and still another half million traveling on the low furlough fares granted to all members of Uncle Sam's armed forces.

This year, we have operated 1,592 extra sections of our regular trains, to take care of overflow crowds.

This year, we have handled more tons of freight than we ever handled in all our half-century of service. We have done the job so smoothly and so efficiently as to bring the highest praise from government and army officers, for most of this huge tonnage is war freight.

Above all, we have kept plugging away, day and night, to fulfill the railroad industry's solemn pledge "to meet to the full the demands of commerce and the needs of national defense."

So far we have met these needs "to the full." And we will continue to meet them to the full—if they can be met by the ultimate in devotion, courage, resourcefulness and human strength. For we know that the world will enter upon a happier and a brighter era when Victory comes—an era in which there will be a new concept of the majesty of the soul and the real meaning of "peace, good will toward men."

That is worth fighting for!

Ella Ruth is an "O" Club Member.

"O" for outstanding! Ella Ruth Black, New Haven 4-H Club member received a Certificate of Achievement bearing 10 seals, each a respective recognition for one year of club work satisfactory completed. At the achievement meeting held at the New Haven school last Thursday.

This record deserves special acclaim, and in giving a few of the high-lights of this club career, Mrs. Mary Scott Moore, Home Demonstration Agent states that Ella Ruth Black has attained her place among the top ranking 4-Hers by her determination and earnest effort to make each year more successful than any previous one.

During the 10 years she has completed 16 projects—seven clothing, six canning, one foods, one room improvement, and one poultry. She has entered her work each year in the county fair and six times has sent entries to the state fair.(All state fair exhibits must be county winners.) her records shows 36 entries with 12 first, 21 seconds, and 1 third placing. The winnings show $52.75 in cash, a gold medal and several merchandise orders. Ella Ruth has participated in 15 competitive style revues at community, county, and state events. She has taken part in one team demonstration contest, and has on two trips to the state 4-H Club Convention, Junior Week, held annually at the University of Kentucky. She has also taken part in the county clothing judging contest.

Ella Ruth has held offices in her local clubs but her leadership ability was best shown last year when she assumed the responsibility of conducting a clothing project group of grade school girls at Hamilton to a successful completion record.

In words taken from her recorded report, her most important achievment in 4-H Club work has been "learning to make my own clothing and to sew for other people."

Ella Ruth is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Black of Hamilton. She will continue her splendid work by becoming a member of the Boone County Utopia Club at an early date.

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Cardwell of Staffordsburg were visitors in Walton, Wednesday, where their friends are always pleased to see them.

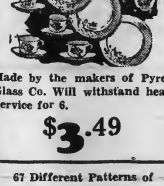
Kidneys Must Work Well—

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.



If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.

Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

WOMEN AT WAR

Janey

Janey closed the bedroom door and locked it. Alone at last! She threw back her head and heaved a deep sigh. Then she peeked out of the corner of her eye at the mirror to see whether she really did look like Hedy LaMarr. Quite a lot, she decided.

And now to business. She drew forth from the bottom of her top bureau drawer the sheet of pink writing-paper and the envelope that she had been saving for this day. She sat down at the table by the window and dipped the pen into the bottle of green ink.

Rose was such a pig about. She wrote, with beautiful arabesques, "Dear Mr. Morgenthau," and held her head back to admire this effort of the best pupil in penmanship class.

"Here are my stamps for a bond. $18.75. I started last Christmas when I got $3.00. Not counting 50 cents, I have earned all the rest, working one or more days a week at a local grocery store, and I'm quite proud to say I worked hard to get it."

Janey stared out of the window at Peterson's house and beyond at the big yard where the kids were playing football. She held her pen elegantly in air.

"Sitting here looking out the window, I see a peaceful little town, and I wonder how the world can be in such a turmoil and the people of this world can have such hate for their fellow men. So I'm proud to send these stamps because I know I'm helping to make the whole world peaceful again like our little town."

She signed her name with an important flourish, not forgetting a conspicuous "Miss" in front of the "Janey." After she had sealed the letter she went on staring out of the window. It really was awfully peaceful. Overhead she heard a plane go humming by through the sunny afternoon air.

Then the voice of her best friend, Betty, called from outside—"Jan-ey!" In an instant Janey was on her feet and tearing downstairs and out. She was not Hedy LaMarr nor a deep philosopher any more, but exactly twelve years old.

WOMEN AT WAR

Betsy

The little girl tugged gently at her mother's sleeve.

"Now, Mother?" she asked. "Now can't we write my letter?"

"Why of course, Betsy," Mrs. Carson grinned. "Are you going to write it or am I?"

"Well," Betsy said. "Maybe you'd better kind of say it to me. Only I'd love to write it."

"All right, then, Miss Carson, take a letter," her mother said, walking slowly up and down the room. "Ready? Dear Mr. Morgenthau: The way I save money for War Stamp buying is to steer all the small household jobs toward my daughter, who is eight years old. She is so keen about buying War Stamps that I know all the money I might have paid to someone else for doing the jobs will go toward Victory when paid to her."

"Now make a list, Betsy. 'Windows washed, 60 cents. Apples picked from under the tree, 25 cents. Emptied trash cans, 4 cents. Sold string beans from the garden, 15 cents. Sold strips of spoiled film to children for sungazing, at one cent a yard, 20 cents. Total, $1.24. Yours helpfully, I hope,'—and then I'll sign it at the bottom."

Betsy was puffing like a grampus from her labors. The tall, painstaking letters tottered bravely across the sheet of paper. Gravely Mrs. Carson took the pen to sign.

"Mother, would it be the proper etiquette if I signed it too?"

"Perfectly proper, I think," Mrs. Carson said without a smile, and handed the pen back to Betsy.

James Polk Elliston Killed By Train

North of Walton L. & N. Depot Tuesday Morning—Funeral To Be Held Friday.

James Polk Elliston, 35 years old of Elliston was found dead by a train crew on the railroad tracts a short distance North of the Walton Depot, early Tuesday morning.

The body was taken to Chambers & Grubbs Funeral Home, until the family could be notified and other necessary plans made. Later J. L. Hamilton & Son of Verona came for the body and took it to their Funeral Home for preparation.

Mr. Elliston lived at Elliston, Ky. and had been to Williamstown to get his marketing card for the sale of his tobacco, as this card was found in his pocket. It is believed he returned to Walton too late to make the evening train home so might have tried to ride a freight or perhaps was walking.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Blanche Alexander Elliston, and two children, Harold and Christine, and two half brothers, Elmer Elliston of Verona and Fred Elliston, who is an Engineer on the L. & N. of Louisville.

Funeral services will be held at the Pleasant View Baptist church Friday at 2 P. M., C. W. T.. Rev. Ransdell of Louisville having charge of the services.

J. L. Hamilton & Son had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Wife of Retired School Head Dies.

Services for Mrs. Lucy Ann Yealey, 66, wife of A. M. Yealey, retired superintendent of Florence School, who died Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Willa House, Florence. following a brief illness, was conducted Tuesday at 2 p. m. at Florence Christian Church, with the Rev. R. H. Carter officiating. Burial was held at the Florence Cemetery.

Mrs. Yealey was a member of the Florence Christian Church and resided in Boone County all her life. Besides her husband and dughter, Mrs. House, Mrs. Yealey is survived by a son, Russell S. Yealey; a sister, Mrs. Eldora Sole; a grandson, George R. Tanner, and a granddaughter, Mary Yealey, all of Boone County.

Funeral arrangements were in charge of Phillip Taliaferro funeral home Erlanger.

Happy Helpers Enjoy Annual Dinner.

The Happy Helpers Class of the Methodist Church Sunday School met in the dining room of the church on Tuesday evening for the December monthly business and social meeting and the annual Turkey dinner and Christmas Party. There were forty-five members and guests present which was far short of previous years.

The menue consisted of roast turkey with dressing and gravy, mashed potatoes, corn pudding, green beans, slaw, pickles, rolles, sliced apple pie and coffee. After the dinner was finished Rev. C. G. Dearing gave a talk on "Christmas" and Its Message."

The business session was conducted by the President, Mrs. Helen R. Bedinger, which consisted mainly of the election of officers for the year 1943. Miss Rebecca Sleet was chosen president, Mr. Sam Hudson, vice-president, Mrs. Jessie Pruett, secretary, and Miss Emma Jane Miller, Treasurer. The usual exchange of toys rather than personal gifts was made after which the toys were collected and sent to the Orphan's Home at Versailles, Ky.

Those enjoying this party were Rev. and Mrs C. G. Dearing, Ruth, Ella Mae and Louise Dearing, Rev. D. E. Bedinger, teacher; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Stephenson and Joe; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Pruett, Beverly, Jimmie, and Tommie Pruett; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Carlisle; Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Bearcats Defeat Hebron 39-34

In Conference Game Played At Hebron Friday Nite.

This game was one of the most highly contested games that the Bearcats have won. The score being 39 to 34.

The game was more on the rough side with several players from both teams being ejected from the battle. Walton-Verona suffered a casualty in the first half when Welsh made a new door through the brick wall in a futal attempt to stop a Hebron score.

Since this game was a conference game, it added to the Bearcats string of victories for the championship.

DeMoisey of Walton was high scorer of the game with 19 points to his credit, Hogan of Hebron was next with 15 points.

The young Bearcats were again defeated by the young but giant Hebron team.

Bearcats Triumphant Over Lloyd

Tuesday night the Bearcats went down to play Lloyd of Erlanger. This school had been undefeated up until this time, but our boys brought home the bacon with a 41 to 30 triumpt.

The first half was almost equal with the Bearcats leading 16 to 15 at the intermission.

After the half the boys seemed revived but the best they could do was to keep the score tied at 23 all.

Lloyd had kept DeMoisey bottled up all night, but as the fourth quarter began, so began DeMoisey, when the final whistle blew the boys were tired but happy with their conquest.

In the writers opinion the game was entirely too rough, this game should have been classified as a football game.

I think all the boys playing did fine jobs, Huey, Berkshire, Elliott and Pennington showed fine ballhandling and defensive work, while on offensive it was DeMoisey, Welsh and Piner.

Congratulations boys, keep playing and the seed will grow.

The kittens went out to win but were (up)set 32 to 24. Some of these days they are going to grow into a victory.

Fidelis Class of Walton Baptist Church Entertained With Christmas Party.

The Fidelis Class of the Walton Baptist Church met with Mrs. B. F. Elliott of N. Main Street on Thursday evening. A lovely covered dish lunch was served after which members exchanged gifts, as is their custom at the Christmas meeting. A special feature of the evening was the guest speaker, Mrs. J. Harlan Barnes of Cincinnati. Members who enjoyed Mrs. Elliotts hospitality were: Mrs. Sharlod Wright, Mrs. Joe Neumeister, Mrs. Lucile Cook, Mrs. William Duchemin, Mrs. Wm. Jarrell, Mrs. Terry Mulford, Mrs. Howard McCubbin, Mrs. Randolph Beach, Mrs. Lawrence Wilson, Mrs. Theodore Neumeister, Mrs. D L. "White Gifts For The King Service"

The Walton Christian church will have their special Christmas program this coming Sunday evening, December 20th at 7:00 o'clock Easter War Time.

It will be a white gifts for the King Service, and every man, woman and child who comes is being asked to bring a gift of canned goods, dried fruits, dried vegetables, potatoes or fruit. The gift is to be wrapped in white, and brought to the alter during the service. The gifts will be used for Christmas baskets in Walton, and the surplus will be sent to the Widows and Orphans Home of the Christian Church at Louisville.

Children under the direction of Mrs. George Caroland, will sing "Away In A Manger."

As a finale for the evening the big Christmas tree will be lighted, and the children of the Sunday School who are present will receive a treat, which is being kept as a surprise for them.

CHAPLIN JOHN G. CHAPMAN

The following article was written by Chaplin John G. Chapman, 1st Lt., 100th Inf. Bn. Camp McCoy, Wisconsin.

Disease, death, war and misery have been the sad lot of many peoples of the earth this year. We have spared many sorrows not because we are better than others but because God willed it thus.

We are living in one of the supreme moments of the world's history. It is interesting to read history, but it is glorious to have the privilege of living and making history.

It is wonderful to know the meaning of the word "sacrifice". Millions of American mothers are offering their sons to God and Country in this crucial hour of human destiny. How glorious for these sons to be living now and giving themselves on the altar of freedom. It is theirs to shape the destiny of the world for ages to come. Generations yet unborn will rise up to call them blessed.

Thank God we have a great Savior for this great age. Mankind is heartsick, weary and hungry. It is crying for bread and too long we have given it a cold stone of materialistic philosophy. The world is hungry for the bread of life today. Hear Him, as He says: "I am the way, the Truth, the Life, No man cometh unto the Father, But by me". God has touched every

According to H. R. Forkner, County Agent.

Many calls were received the past week in reference to a tax on home slaughtered meat according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. There is no tax on home slaughtered meat as to information at the County office no such move is planned. The home meat supply may be taken into consideration later if meat is rationed.

The County Live at Home program calls for producing and using on the farm as much of the home meat supply as possible. Every farmer should strive more today than ever before to produce, preserve a good home supply of meat products. Such a program will not only feed the farm family but will eleminate much of the transportation, marketing and other services if the meat went through commercial channels.

There is an OPA ruling that the slaughterer operators are limited to the sale of civilians up to 75% of their base sale of pork, 70% of beef, 100% veal; 95% lambs, for the corresponding period of 1941. This order would affect the farmer who would turn to commercial slaughtering.

Unusual Chapel Program At Simon Kenton High School

An auction to promote the sale of War Bonds and Stamps was conducted at Simon Kenton High School, Kenton County. This unusual auction was conducted during the Senior High Chapel Period. This was no ordinary auction sale, however. Bids were made on cakes, pies, and candy donated by the students of the Home Economics classes under the direction of Miss Helen Ruth Gardiner. Upon the receipt of the amount of his bid, the highest bidder not only received that amount in War Stamps, but also received the article he bid on.

The Futher Farmers, a prominent organization of the school made the first purchase. Their bid of $100 netted them that amount in War Stamps and a delicious cake. Bids of $60, $45, and $30 were heard for some of the delicacies that followed. A total of $408 in stamps was bought in this novel sale. Another $20 in private purchases was made after the auction.

Those girls who so generously contributed their time and sugar were: Cakes-Lois Schadler, Daisy Mae Martin, Pat Mills, Eileen Cavanaugh, Elsie Watson, and Dolores Wagner. Candy-Betty Banfield, Gladys England, and Reva Richerson. Pies--Juanita Webster, Eloise Irvin, Cleo Carnes, Ruth Sowder, Betty Wilson, Juanita Berryman, and Rose Recker. Miscellaneous—Betty Kline, Audrey Richerson, Ruby Bell, Erma Hardgrove, Anita Hardgrove, and Jean Holzderber and Virginia Honey. Betty Kline was Chairman of the Planning Committee.

This program was under the direction of the Senior Class, Miss Elma Taylor, sponsor Robert Farrell, class president, presided. Eileen Cavanaugh, secretary, and Clifford Weldon, treasurer, were busily engaged in issuing stamps and bonds. Auctioneers were: B. N. Spegal, Billy Snape, Charles Brown, and Franklin Egger.

County Chairman Makes First Report

On Bond Sales—Drive To End December 23rd.

Up to last Saturday night only $146,093.50 has been subscribed for all classes of bonds in the Victory Drive to raise a quota of $490,000.00 for Boone County. The Banks subscribed for $110,000.00 of the $146,093.50 total subscriptions. The banks' subscriptions being in 1-¾% 5¼ year bonds they not being permitted to subscribe for the 2½% bonds. The banks have indicated that they have indicated that they plan to subscribe for $55,000.00 of the ⅞%, 1 year notes, this week which increases our total in sight to over $200,000.00. This leaves $290,000.00 yet to be raised by individual subscription if we are to reach our quota. The large subscriptions entered by the banks have already been included in the above totals.

The precinct Chairmen and their co-workers are out working hard this week to try to put this drive over the top. Are you helping by your subscription?

Our boys in the front lines and in the training camps are not having an easy job and when they come home they are going to ask what we on the home front did to help win this war. The Government must be financed and if we do not subscribe to our limit in these bond drives for funds then we should not complain if heavy taxes are levied on every one to get this money. No one is being asked to give anything in this drive, but to lend our money on the best securify on earth, a GOVERNMENT BOND.

The people of France said it could not happen there and many may feel that it can not happen here but it can happen here if Hitler is not defeated. France has lost every thing and its people are cold and hungry and are being transported to Germany and compelled to work in munition plants or placed in concenration camps if they refuse to work. France and other European countries would gladly give every thing they possessed now if they could be free. Lets not do too little and too late. Our Government is calling us. WHAT ARE YOU DOING? Subscribe liberally now for these bonds. $490,000.00 means approximately $50.00 for every man, woman and child in Boone County. Some can only take a $25.00 bond while others must take $1,000.00. $5,000.00 and $10,000.00 to put this drive over. Get your subscription and cash or check to your bank before next Wednesday night, December 23rd.

Stores Open Until 9 P. M.

HOW'S BUSINESS AMONG HOME FOLKS?

AFTER all, when you do business in your home town or your home State, you help both yourself and your neighbor—because you help to keep your money at home, where it has a better chance to come back to you. . . . So shop at home, this year. If, by taking this advice, you refrain from coming to "The Brown" —we'll miss you, of course. But still we say: For a merrier Christmas, let's do our shopping at home!

Acknowledging God's Blessings

AT THIS TIME of year, many people are recounting their blessings and giving thanks to God for the abundance of good bestowed on man. Some may think they have little for which to be grateful to God, but those who think this are judging His blessings by material things, and not by spiritual values. A kind word, a friendly deed, a loving hand outstretched to one in need, an understanding heart, all these are manifestations of God's love. Such expressions are spiritual, not material. Love, wisdom, and purity are spiritual qualities, and none of them can be destroyed or superseded by the material elements which claim to hold sway. Material things crumble to destruction, but the things of Spirit endure forever. And who will say that this fact is not something for which all can be grateful?

Spiritual understanding, then, is what we most need—a better understanding of God, of the real man, and of the universe of God's creating. . . . Spiritual understanding enables one to see the human need, often even before this need has been outwardly expressed. He who helps to meet such needs is rewarded with spiritual blessing. Even such a seemingly small thing as a happy smile may help to brighten the day for someone, and much good can come from it. Compensation may not be outwardly visible for loving kindness, but increased growth in grace is the richest compensation. Anyone should be happy to be able to bring, even in small degree, some joy to another. And happiness practically calls for gratitude.

Some might wonder what they have to give, particularly those who have no material riches. But what of the wealth of spiritual love that can be given unsparingly, because it comes from eternal and infinite Mind? Who does not at some time need the love which reflects divine Love, the tender compassion which reflects Soul, Spirit? Our need may often seem to be for money, clothing, food, and the other daily necessities. But as we give of our spiritual storehouse, of that wealth which the Father bestows impartially on all His children, not only will our own human needs be supplied, but those with whom we have shared a little of our understanding of the allness of God will also be blessed. They will be enriched in the measure of their increased understanding of spiritual truths, and their human needs will be supplied. Christ Jesus said (Matthew 6:32, 33): "Your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." "All these things" may refer to any need; but God knows what we "have need of," and He supplies all good.

We may think our need is material; but the answer to our prayers, if rightly understood, is always of a spiritual nature and comes in the form of a demonstration of the allness of Love. For instance, the healing may be of unlovely traits of character, sometimes of long standing, which brought only suffering and unhappiness. As we gain a better understanding of God, we gain a better concept of the real man, as His reflection. The overcoming of false traits through more loving, unselfish thinking and living, contributes much to the harmony of the home and the outside world, and is surely cause for thanksgiving. As we know the unreality of such beliefs, and, in the measure of our own Christly example, help others to cast them out, we find real cause for thanksgiving.

Mary Baker Eddy says in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (Pref., p. vii), "To those leaning on the sustaining infinite, to-day is big with blessings." She also writes on page 1, "Desire is prayer; and no loss can occur from trusting God with our desires, that they may be moulded and exalted before they take form in words and in deeds." True prayer is the giving of thanks; thanks to God, the omniscient, omnipresent, omnipotent Being, who heals our sicknesses and sins. . . . —The Christian Science Monitor.

MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR LIGHTING

(No. 5 of a Series)

Shade Bare Bulbs

Glare from bare bulbs wastes light by making the pupils of the eyes contract—like facing bright headlights at night. Bare bulbs are also wasteful where downward light is desired. Shades control and direct light for such purpose. Special shades and diffusing bowls are available at low cost for almost every type of lighting installation. We'll gladly help you select the proper equipment.

An Efficient Glare Chaser

. . . is this plastic screw-in adaptor unit. Easily installed, it screws into drop cords or single-socket fixtures like a light bulb. Only $1.65, complete with 150-watt bulb, it provides abundant, glareless light at low cost.

Walton Homemakers

Mrs. Blanche Franks was the charming hostess to the Walton Homemakers on Friday. Presiding over the business session was the president, Mrs. Hope Vest, all were asked to help on the Victory Bond Committee. The roll call was answered by Christmas quotations—A very interesting reading was given by Mrs. Ralph Carpenter "We Must Re-Discover Christmas" by Dr. Joseph Newton We were then invited out to the hostess dining room where a very bountiful dinner was served. The club then reassembled and the lesson Using Canned Products in Preparing Meals, was presented in a very instructive manner by our leader, Mrs. Pearl Bedinger.

Those present were: Mrs. Fredrica Mann, Mrs. Carrie Rouse, Mrs. Emma Mann, Mrs. Gaynelle Flynn, Mrs. D. L. Lusby, Mrs. Elizabeth Gross and daughter, Mrs. Ralph Carpenter, Mrs. Mollie Sturgeon, Miss Alicia Neuimaster, Mrs. Pearl Bedinger, Mrs. Glena Cleek, Mrs. Nell Campbell, Mrs. Mary Stephenson, Mrs. Hope Vest, Mrs. Edna Vest, Mrs. Allen Gaines, Mrs. Marie Hughes, visitors were Mrs. Kate Noel, Mrs. C. J. Alford, Mrs. Lula Vest, Mrs. Sam Sleet, of New Haven Homemakers and leader Mrs. Mary Scott Moore and hostess, Mrs. Blanche Franks.

Our next meeting will be with Mrs. Carrie Rouse January 8th, 1943. We are asked to answer roll call with Xmas memories of 1942. After our lesson we exchanged gifts among those present and all enjoyed the Xmas spirit and fun. The meeting came to a close with Mrs. Mary Scott Moore and the Pres., Mrs. Hope Vest wishing each one a Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year.

By preventing purchasers of new electric motors from buying motors with more horse power than their work requires, the Government will save about 15 million pounds of copper, 55,000 tons of carbon steel, and 150,000 pounds of stainless steel annually.

The New Orleans fat salvage campaign stresses used fats by telling housewives that waste fat from a half-dozen fried soft sheel crabs makes enough glycerine, processed into explosives, to fire one 37 mm. anti-tank shell.

U. S. Army training and proving grounds are contributing five million pounds of fired cartridge cases a month as copper scrap.

A new design for a metal-lined gunpowder box is saving Army Ordance enough copper every month to fill specifications for 259—155mm. guns.

"Good tidings of great joy"

"AND the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:10, 11). This message from God, which came to the shepherds on the hills of Judea on a still, clear night long ago, is heard today by those who are listening for God's voice. The star of Bethlehem still shines to guide those who are watching and waiting for the appearing of Christ, Truth.

Christmas, to all true Christians, betokens a desire to give. The Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, Mary Baker Eddy, loved Christmas, and explains its spiritual import as the coming of Truth to human consciousness. She begins the Preface to her textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," with these inspiring words (p. vii): "To those leaning on the sustaining infinite, to-day is big with blessings. The wakeful shepherd beholds the first faint morning beams, ere cometh the full radiance of a risen day. So shone the pale star to the prophet-shepherds; yet it traversed the night, and came where, in cradled obscurity, lay the Bethlehem babe, the human herald of Christ, Truth, who would make plain to benighted understanding the way of salvation through Christ Jesus, till across a night of error should dawn the morning beams and shine the guiding star of being."

In his ministry the Master put into practical use his knowledge of God, divine Love, ever-present good. He bade his followers to love one another as he had loved them. The test of true discipleship must always be our understanding and emulation of the love which Christ Jesus manifested in his healing and saving work. . . . The appearing of Christ, Truth, in human consciousness constitutes a continuous unfoldment of spiritual light and joy. Each day of the year we must seek a better and higher understanding of the eternal Christ, Truth, and strive to become more faithful followers of the Great Master and Way-shower, in healing all manner of sickness and sin, thus helping to bring the true light of spiritual being to men.

The question may well be asked, Has the light which penetrated the thought of the humble shepherds nineteen hundred years ago, and which, later on, brought healing and consolation to unnumbered thousands through the loving ministry of Christ Jesus, disappeared? The answer is, No. But men have permitted the mist of false mortal sense to blur their vision of the Christ. . . . Nothing but the Christ, Truth, understood and lived, will eliminate hatred, war, and greed from human consciousness, and establish universal peace.

The purpose of Christ Jesus was to establish the kingdom of God on earth. How did he do this? By showing the falsity of human beliefs. Every healing was a casting out of consciousness of some false belief which has no connection with the real man in God's image. As the turning on of an electric switch eliminates darkness from a room, so the light of spiritual perception or the knowledge of the real man dispels false human belief. Christ Jesus did not recognize evil as real, but proved its unreality through his knowledge of the allness of Truth.

It is natural and beautiful for men to be joyous and steadfast in the reflecting of good. If a tree is good it will bear good fruit, since like produces like. When we begin to understand that all materiality is but the counterfeit, the material concept of that which is spiritual and perfect, we no longer walk in darkness, for the light of Truth illumes the way we are going.

In her Communion Message to The Mother Church for 1898, Mrs. Eddy writes (The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany, p. 122): "Beloved brethren, another Christmas has come and gone. Has it enabled us to know more of the healing Christ that saves from sickness and sin? Are we still searching diligently to find where the young child lies, and are we satisfied to know that our sense of Truth is not demoralized, finitized, cribbed, or cradled, but has risen to grasp the spiritual idea unenvironed by materiality?"—The Christian Science Monitor.

Don't Blitz the boys out of their Xmas furlough
YOU'RE going to see that home-for-Christmas look on many a young man in uniform this year. Let's help him get there!
With travel facilities taxed to the limit, and the usual holiday RUSH swinging in—what more generous gesture could we make than to offer "our holiday seat" to those camp-seasoned soldiers, sailors and marines. We can take our own trip later, when the situation eases.
So let's speed the boys off to the home fires for Christmas. They need it most. Give them a break . . . and a boost . . . and a seat, for our country's morale.

Reduction by 20 per cent in the manufacture of ice cream and frozen desserts will save 3,300,000 pounds of butter in December, or almost three-fourths of a pound apiece for every soldier in the U. S. Army.

Boone County Growers Produce 4756 Pounds Caster Beans.

Boone County growers raised 4756 pounds of Caster Beans on 62 acres, in 1942 according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. All beans produced were sold to the government through the Commodity Credit Corporation. The crops were weighed up and accepted by the local Agricultural Conservation Association.

John E. Crigler, secretary of the local association reports the crop cleared an average of 66% of the grass weighed and averaged $3.77 per hundred net to the grower.

The largest crop in the county was 1303 pounds per acre grown by L. K. Duvall of Florence 4-H Club. The lowest yield was 150 pounds per acre. The average gross income was $28.91 per acre.

The crop was grown by L. K. Duvall, Florence, Norma Mae Wallace, Verona, John Franklin Jones and Bruce Ferguson of New Haven and Earl and Lee Conner of Burlington, all 4-H Club members; Dorothy Souther, Burlington, a Utopia Club member; and Charles R. Willis, Hebron F. F. A. member.

Caster beans are used to produce vital oils in war production. All members grew their crops as a c ontribution to our war program and not for the money returned. The crop would have produced a much larger income had it been planted in April and frost had come later in the season.

Thirty-five hundred bushels of Balbo rye were sowed in Madison county. Two years ago there was none in the county.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS
Tractors and motors will never wholly replace the Army Mule as a factor in the mobile units of our army. The Army Mule is a tradition and the "mule skinner" is a breed unto himself. Army Mules are used by the Field Artillery and the Cavalry in areas where the terrain is rough and tractors cannot operate.

Pack trains in mountainous sectors are often necessary and here the mule, slow but sure-footed, plays an important role. Our Army buys thousands of mules paying from $175 to $190 for each. The mule eats less, carries more, and some declare is smarter than the horse. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps helps pay for these Army Mules. Invest at least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every pay day. U. S. Treasury Department

RYLAND HOMEMAKERS

The Ryland Homemakers Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Mendenhall Tuesday, Dec. 8th for a "Xmas Party".

The president, Mrs. W. Damon called a short business session at which time Mrs. J. C. Brown was chosen a sthe delegate to represent the club at Lexington, Ky., late in January, at the Farm and Home Convention.

A very delightful luncheon planned in harmony with the Xmas season, was enjoyed by the following: Mrs. W. A. Damon, Mrs Oliver Gee, Mrs. W. E. Dickman, Mrs. John S. Murchison, Mrs. J. C. Brown, Mrs. G. A. Damon, Mrs. Clarence Armstrong, Mrs. J. A. Rich and hotess.

After exchanging gifts Mrs. W. Dickman led out in many interesting games for the group. Mrs. John Murchison accompained at the piano, as the singing of Xmas Carols completed the day's program.

The club will meet next month on Tuesday, Jan 5th with Mrs. J. C. Brown.

Kidneys Must Work Well-
For You To Feel Well
24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.
Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

Alpha Beta Gramma

Due to high achievement in Mathematics Pat Recker, Roy Martin, Franklin Breeden, and Wallace Gabriel are eligible for membership in Alpha Beta Grama Honorary Mathematics Club this semester.

The Initiation Ceremonial was conducted in the school library at four o'clock, Nov 20th.

The ceremonial was followed by an informal business meeting. Pat Recker and Roy Martin were elected second vice-president and treasurer respectively.

After a brief intermission the members of the Math Club assembled for a banquet which had been prepared by the Home Ec. Department of Simon Kenton. The tables were decorated in the colors and flower of the club. At the speaker's table was the lamps of knowledge on which was the club motto "To Measure is to know."

The girls of the Homemaking No. 2 class planned, prepared, and served the meal.

There were sixteen members who attended this ceremonial. Miss Taylor, the sponsor was also present.

Guest of Honor were: Mr. Moore-Principal, Mr. Troutman-former teacher who is teaching electricity at the Naval Training School at Morehead.

THIS WEEK ON THE HOME FRONT

When December coal bills go out, people who have been buying at OPA ceiling prices will find 4 cents added to the cost of each ton. This is to pay for the federal transporation tax which became effective December 1. The OPA has ruled that this tax may be passed on and itimized separately.

Nearly 8,000,000 automobile tires has been forwarded to the government under the idle-tire purchase plan up to the close of business November 28. About half are in such bad shape that they cannot be repaired, a sample check indicates. These will be crapped and the rubber reclaimed.

Rubber Director William W. Jeffers has asked the American people to act as 130 million "committees of one" to rid the nation's streets, alleys and highways of broken glass, nails, and other tire hazards.

WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson has urged that factories close on Christmas Day, except for maintenance operations, and work at full blast on New Year's Day.

When J. Q. Public, citizen, and taxpayer, can't always get his favorite brand of candy bar he can be reasonably sure it's on its way to war. Chocolate is an emergency fund for soldiers and sailors.

The man-days of idleness due to strikes in all industry have dropped during a year of war to the lowest level in the last 5 years although the number of persons employed has increased. The percentage of time lost in war industry strikes since Pearl Harbor never has risen above one-tenth of one percent, the National War Labor Board says.

Streamlined procedures have been set up by the ODT to handle appeals from commercial motor vehicle operators who consider the milage and fuel allotments provided in their certificates of war necessity to be inadequate. Appeals will be handled in the ODT's 142 district offices. Farmers may appeal through their County War Boards. The appeals may be filed at once.

The National War Labor Board, asked by the National Retail Dry Goods Association to clarify Santa Clauss status under the wage stabilization law, was overcome by a surge of Christmas feeling and lifted the lid: "Provided that the term fide Santa Claus shall be constructed only such persons as wear a red robe, white whiskers, and other weel-recognized accounterments befitting their station in life, and provided that they have a kindly and jovial disposition and use their high office of juvenile trust to spread the Christmas spirit of goodwill among all men, women, and children."

Men in the United States armed forces aboard can now send gifts or souveniers to the value of $50 back home duty free. Shipments sent to service men abroad are duty-free when addressed through the army postoffice.

An additional 40,000 domestic vacuum cleaners that have been frozen in the hands of manufacturers and private-brand sellers since October 24th have been released. About 145,000 are being kept "on ice" for the armed forces and government services.

Changes in labor-shortage areas Group 1), areas where shortages are anticipated (group 2), and areas where there is a surplus of labor (Group 3) have been announced as follows: OHIO—Columbus, Hamilton, Lima, Lorain, Marion, moved from Group 3 to Group 1; Springfield added to Group 1. Cincinnati, Fostoria, and Mansfield moved from Group 3 to Group 2; WEST VIRGINIA—Point Pleasant moved from Group 2 to Group 1; Charleston and Wheeling added to Group 3. KENTUCKY—Lexington moved from Group 3 to Group 2 and Louisville added to Group 2.

WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson's fifth war production report for October, issued last week, was called "disappointing" by the author. Overall production of munitions increased only 3 per cent during October over the September figure — the lowest monthly increase of the year. Plane production was down 5 per cent, due mostly to special factors affecting deliveries. Machine tool production reached a new high and increased 8.3 per cent over September. Merchant ship production dropped 10 per cent but still was ahead of schedule.

Hayden H. Tracy, 80, has gone back to engineering after a layoff of 20 years—and likes it. Former head of his own engineering company, he is now in the blueprint department of a shipyard in California. One of the improvements that has come to factories during his 20-year retirement is the woman in slacks. "Cute, aren't they? And smart, too," he says.

As a result of the American preparedness program which got under way about the time France was toppling, the United States had spent more money for war purposes three months after its entry into the war then it did during the entire 20 month's participation in the last war.

Heavily-increased consumer demand was described by the chief of the WPB's confectionery rection as a principal factor in the chewing gum shortage, which is prevailing despite the fact that 1942 production almost equals the 1941 record output. Large purchases by the armed forces also are responsible.

The WPB has slashed production of fountain pens and mechanical pencils—as make the ones you have last a long time. It's like this: Fountain pens, 18,000,000 next year as against 50,000,000 in 1941. Wood-cased pencils, 7,365,000 gross next year as against 8,370,000 gross in 1941. And no crude or reclaimed rubber erasers on those wood-cased pencils.

Salesmen of certain listed "essential" commodities may obtain supplemental mileage rations.

Announced casualties of the United States armed forces from the war's outbreak until December 7 total 58,307, the OWI reports.

Rubber Dirctor Jeffers first progress report makes it clear that there is every necessity for continuing through the critical Fail of 1943 a policy of rigid rubber conservation, and that complete exhaustion at that time of even so-called normal inventories of finished products is possible. Even if production hopes are met, the end of 1943 will find only 175,000 tons of rubber on hand in the nation's inventory.

Cancellation of rate increased granted rail carriers early this year has been sought by OPA in a petition filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. The petition states that rail earnings have improved to a point where satisfactory profits positions can be maintained without the aid of the increases. At stake is an estimated $500,000,000 in yearly transportation costs.

FOLSOM

Make a joyful noise into God all ye lands.—Psm 66:1.

Rev Buttler filled his regular appointment at the Vine Rune church and was entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Jump.

Miss Imogene Beach who has been in Covington taking treatments from Dr. Hensil for her head has returned home much improved.

Mrs. Ike Hutton who went to the hospital for a rabbit bone in her throat has returned home.

Mrs. Mennie I aac of this place and Mr. Charlie Webster surprised their many friends by getting married last week. We wish them many years of happiness and success.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Beach and son, Dempsey spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lafferty and sons of Covington and Imogene Beach who had been taking treatments was able to return home with them.

Mr. Chester Deif who left for the army last Saturday and his mother went to Covington to live with her daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thorton.

As it is so near Christmas time I think that we should be much in prayer for our boys that are away in the camps and for those on the battle lines fighting. We should be glad that it is so near Christmas again.

There has been quite a cold spell that has visited this community.

Mr. Ike Tutton spent the week-end at home with his wife and children.

Mrs. Onda Hamilton who has the rabbit fever and has had it for some time is a little better at this writting.

Don't Waste TRANSPORTATION

Of the 6,800 Pullman sleeping cars and 17,500 passenger coaches on the railroads today, a large part are assigned to troop service—and the armed forces have first call on all the rest.

Essential travel on war business—men on furlough—tire shortage and gasoline rationing—all add to the demand for space on the trains.

That demand must be met with the cars we have—other war needs make it impossible to get any more.

So please help the other fellow who must travel—and help yourself—and help us to get the best use out of what we have.

Milk Plan Available To Boone County School Children.

People of Boone County, Kentucky will no doubt be interested in a plan which will enable school children in the County to buy milk at 1c per half-pint. This plan has been used successfully for some time in larger cities. Fortunately it is now available to smaller towns and rural communites.

Everyone knows the importance of milk in the diets of children. War has increased the demand for milk and may in some instances reduce the supply. The School Milk Program helps assure that growing children will secure at least some of the milk they need each day. It will also afford a broader outlet for milk produced in the area, thereby benefitting dairy farmers.

The local School Board may sponsor the Program and sign an agreement with the Agricultural Marketing Administration to purchase an ddistribute the milk to school children. The sponsor makes all arrangements with the dairies and provides facilities needed for serving milk. To meet handling costs, the sponsor may charge each child not more than 1c per half-pint. Those children unable to pay this will be given the milk free, without discrimination or segregation.

The Agricultural Marketing Administration will pay the sponsor the price which milk producers receive from the distributor of from a milk plant in the County for milk they use for drinking purposes in the schools. No milk used other than for drinking purposes can be purchased under the agreement.

It is the responsibility of the sponsor to secure and serve to children milk which meet the Health requirements o fthe State and County Health Departments.

The sponsors may have co-sponsors to assist them in their work. P.-T. A. and other civic organizations are almost always eager to act as co-sponsors and assist sponsors in carrying on such programs.

Further information regarding the School Milk Program may be secured from the State office of the Agricultural Marketing Administration, Frankfort, Ky.

CHAPLIN JOHN G. CHAPMAN

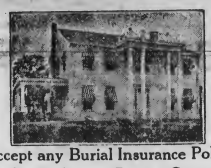
human soul and He has placed there a hunger, a longing which He alone can satisfy. No soul can find peace until that soul's eternal destiny has been committed to Him.

Men won from heathenian and idolatry have often said to me, "In Christ we have something no other religion can offer. That is the living Christ and his personal companionship. It is the impact of a living Christ on a living soul". No other religion has that to offer a sin-sick world. Mohammed died and he is dead. Christians do not worship a dead Jesus but a living Christ.



Above the tumult of War and the shouting of men and nations, let us listen to the still small voice as he speaks to our hearts today. How dark was that world into which Christ had not yet come. How dark is that mind and soul where the light of His love has not yet shown.

Let us thank God for the sweet blessing of home and loved ones Not the least of the sorrows of war are the separtions and disruptions of families that war necessarily entails. Officers and men are thrown together to toil, suffer, and perhaps die thousands of miles from the comfort of loved ones. But they realize this is a war and we cannot fight a war and all live at home and continue to enjoy the comforts of home. It we loose this war, our streets and valleys will resound with the tred of the tyrants marching legions. What family, what home, what church in this land would then escape desecration by the despoilers hand?

An army Captain who had distinguished himself in the Battle of Hawaii sat one night and talked to me about his wife and little daughter in the far away islands. 'My ancestors came from Japan", he said, "But I was born under the American flag. I was educated in American schools. America is the only country I know. It has given me the blessing of freedom and civilization. I love that wife and dear little daughter but I am ready to fight for them and my country. If I fall in battle that will be aright. When the bells of peace ring again and children can play in safety, I would be glad to know my child could stand beside my grave and say, my father gave his life fo rme and the country which he loved. He died that freedom might not perish from the earth."

I walked along the rows of white beds in the hospital ward. There lay very quiety, a dark eyed lad from the Phillipine Islands. I talked to him about the home and family which he had not seen in a long time. He was not in my unit but he had no Chaplin, no friends, and no visitors. I put him on my visiting list. As I bent over him, I read an inscription on the cast which enclosed his body. It said. "Birthday November 26". I made a mental note of that for it was only a week in the future. I shall never forget how those dark eyes danced with joy when I marched in that ward on his birthday and placed a cake, complete with candles on the table by his bed. The other soldier patients began singing, "Happy Birthday to You". He was far from home but he found friends in a friendly America.

I sat by a hospital bed one day and listened to a Japanese lad from Hawaii tell me the story of a broken family. "My parents came from Japan", He said. "But I am an American and so are my brothers and sisters. Some years ago my parents grew homesick and wanted to go back to Japan so they could be buried with their ancestors. But the children were native Americans and America was the only home they knew. They refused to surrender their birthright as American citizens for the bondage and shackles of feudal Japan. The elder sister made a home for the children in Hawaii while the parents returned to their ancestors in Japan." There was a tinge of sadness in his voice but a glow of pride in his face as he said, "I would like to see my parents who are still living in Japan. But I am an American and I count it a privilege to be a soldier in the American Army and fight for my country."

MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR LIGHTING

(No. 6 of a Series)

Let One Reading Lamp Do The Work of Two

By arranging furniture and lamps carefully, you can often make one lamp do the work of two. An I. E. S. Lamp at the end of the divan, for example, can be moved to the center in back of the divan. Or two chairs or a chair and a divan can be grouped with a lamp to serve two persons with good light, as illustrated above. Be sure the lamp is close enough to both pieces of furniture, though. A difference of 12 inches can reduce the light you get by as much as 50%.

Inspect lamp cords where they come out of the lamp base. They fray and crumble quickly at this spot. If too badly worn they should be replaced or repaired to prevent possibility of short circuits.

WHAS To Carry Baptist Radio Hour

From January 3rd Through March 28th Each Sunday.

Dr. George W. Truett, pastor of First Baptist Church, Dallas, Texas and past president of the Southern Baptist Convention and of the Baptist World Alliance, will inaugurate the third annual Baptist Hour series of radio sermons at 7:30 CWT (8:30 EWT) Sunday morning, January 3, over Station W H A S. He will speak on "Christ's Answer to World Needs."

The Baptist Hour for 1943, according to S. F. Lowe, chairman of the Radio Committee of the Southern Baptist Convention, will consist of thirteen sermons by outstanding Southern Baptist pastors and leaders. These will be delivered from January 3 through March 28 over an independent network of 35 stations in 16 southern states, on the general theme, "American Christians amid World Crises." Station W H A S will carry the entire series.

The series has become a popular religious radio feature, according to Dr. Lowe, who reports that the 1942 broadcasts from January through March elicited more than 50,000 letters.

In addition to Dr. Truett, January speakers include: January 10, Dr. R. C. Campbell, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Columbia, S. C.; January 17, Dr. E. D. Head, president of Southwestern Baptist, Theological Seminary Fort Worth, Texas; January 24, Dr. O. T. Binkley, Professor of Religion, Wake Forest College, Wake Forest, N. C.; January 31, Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va.

The speakers for February will be: February 7, Dr. J. Clyde Turner, pastor of First Baptist Church, Greensboro, N. C.; February 14, Dr. Turner; February 21, Dr. Turner; February 28, Honorable Pat M. Neff, president of Southern Baptist Convention.

The speakers for March will be: March 7, Dr. R. G. Lee, pastor of Bellevue Baptist Church, Memphis, Tenn.; March 14, Dr. Lee; March 21, Dr. Lee; March 28, Dr. Ellis A. Fuller, president of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Kentucky.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Alphin were callers at the home of Mrs. Alphin's parents, Rev. and Mrs. R. F. DeMolsey on Sunday afternoon.

Woman's Missionary Society Hold Meeting.

The woman's missionary society of the First Baptist church held the December meeting at the church.

Business session at 11 o'clock with Mrs. C. J. Alford, president in charge. Yearly report showed a increase in all lines of endeavor, also good reports from various organizations of the W. M. U.

Covered dish lunch was served at noon, followed by the social hour. Program at 1:30 with Miss Mollie Chapman as leader in the absence of Mrs. Tom Percival. Topic for the month "These Things Do," "What Can We Do." Miss Chapman gave a very inspiring talk at the close of the program on doing our best, comparision the tiny stream that flows into the large stream and then into the mighty ocean.

Members present were: Mrs. C. J. Alford, Mrs. Francis Brittenhelm, Mrs. Lucy Breeden, Mrs. Bess Conrad, Miss Mollie Chapman, Mrs. Minnie Davis, Mrs. B. W. Franks, Mrs. F. E. Fisher, Mrs. Ed Hankerson, Mrs. Elnora Hodges, Mrs. D. K. Johnson, Mrs. Kenneth Johnson, Mrs. T. W. Jones, Mrs. Susie Norman, Mrs. Nathan Northcutt, Mrs. Kate Noel, Mrs. Levi Penington, Mrs. R. E. Ryle, Mrs. Brayan Rector, Mrs. Will Soden, Mrs. Wm. Sturgeon, Mrs. Lula Vest, Mrs. Margaret Moore., the visitors were Mrs. Sharon, and Rev. C. J. Sharon.

Supervisors Meet

The supervisors of the Boone County Soil Conservation District met at Burlington Thursday to outline their 1943 soil conservation program.

The supervisors, assisted by Mr. H. R. Forkner, County Agent, outlined a program whereby more farmers would be reached with simple conservation practices during the coming year.

The conservation measures recommended were, the proper selection of land to cultivate, contour cultivation, liming, phosphating, conservation and use of manure and tobacco stalks, proper grassland seeding mixtures, winter cover crops, pasture management and improvement, diversion terraces, and stock water development.

Victory Loan Drive Continues

The total bonds sold up to last Saturday night, was $294,000.00 worth, this amount is $196,000.00 short of our quota.

After December 23rd. no subscriptions can be taken on the 2½% bonds of 1963 & 1968 nor on the 1¾% or the ¾% bonds.

The series E. F. & G. will be sold until the close of the month. These sales will count on our quota.

Some precincts have gone over their quota while others are lagging. Chairmen are requested to put forth every effort this week to close the gap between our sales and our quota.

Don't wait for a solicitor to call, but go to your bank and buy a bond.

Mr. B. W. Johnson spent the week end with his son Edmond Johnson and family of Cincinnati, Ohio..

Richwood Red Cross

The members of the Richwood Red Cross met at the home of our president, Mrs. Cecil Robinson, Dec. 16th.

The meeting was called to order by the president, who read a poem, "In the Land of Beginning Again," and its answer. Our president told us how she enjoys reading this poem as the old year nears its end and the joy and hope of a new year is so near.

Roll call was answered by our favorite tree. We are so very grateful to Mrs. Elmer Carpenter of Florence, Ky. R. D. 2, for a very much needed Singer Sewing Machine, work speeded along much faster—thanks to our friend.

The members worked on shirts at this meeting and hope to finish this project before the new year.

No Advertiser To Be Published Next Week.

As has been the custom for the past few years, we will suspend publication next week, for a short vacation, and to get things in order after the Christmas rush.

To our faithful correspondents, subscribers, advertisers and friends we want to express our appreciation for your co-operation during the past year.

We have done our best to serve you and hope that we may be of greater service to our community in the coming year.

May each of you have a pleasant Christmas Season. We'll be seeing you again on Jan 7th.

Christmas Program

The Christmas program of the Methodist Sunday School under the direction of Mrs. C. G. Dearing and Mrs. Mary Stephenson was given on Sunday evening December 20th.

The program consisted of recitations by the children, a drill and a pageant by the young people. The pageant was entitled "Christmas Around the World." At the close of the program Old Santa put in his appearance and distributed gifts found under the pretty Christmas tree as well as bags of candy, nuts and fruit for everyone. Attendance awards were presented to Rosaline Ballinger, Joe Stephenson, Faye Brakefield and Mary Bell Alexander.

Nelson County Has Big Canning Record.

A total of 67,128 quarts of fruits and vegetables have been reported canned by 225 members of homemakers' clubs in Nelson county this year. Mrs. Milton Brown of the Stringtown club has canned more than 1,000 quarts for her family of six. The Bolland club reports canning 4,000 quarts of fruits and vegetables, 908 quarts of pork, 132 quarts of beef, 58 pints of liver, and storing 261 bushels of potatoes, beans and apples.

Retired Road Contractor Claude E. Harris of Erlanger Passes.

Claude E. Harris 66 of 87 Thos. Street, Erlanger died early Sunday at his home.

Mr. Harris had been sick about three years, he is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Harris, a son, Jay Harris of Memphis, Tenn., and a sister, Mrs. Mary Wadham of Bardenton, Fla.

Mr. Harris was a member of the Bardenton, Fla. Christian church, having lived there before moving to Erlanger. He was a nephew of the late Mrs. Lamb Hopkins of Walton and has many friends in this community.

Funeral services were held in Erlanger with burial at Independence Cemetery.

Women's Missionary and Ladies Aid Society Meet.

The Women's Missionary Society and Ladies Aid Society of the Christian church, met last Thursday with Mrs. Georgia Arnold at her home in North Walton.

An interesting program was given under the leadership of Mrs. Lotta Powers, with Mrs. Walter Pennington presiding over the business meeting. Christmas gifts were exchanged.

FORGET ANYTHING?

Have you forgotten to buy Tuberculosis Christmas Seals? If you have, it is not too late. All school children have them to sell.

Have you sent H. V. Lewis, County Chairman of the sale, the dollar for the seals he sent you? If you have forgotten this, do so now.

Mr. Lewis said, "The county's part of the proceeds will be 65% of the sale if $410 is reached." Help to reach the goal.

Planning The Farm Program For 1943

Sacrifices Must Be Made By Everyone In Order To Bring About National Victory.

For 1943 farmers must consider new conditions which will considerably affect their plans of operation. Consider the products which are more urgently needed, the higher prices, and the labor and supplies which are more difficult to obtain. Sacrifices must be made by everyone, in order to bring about national victory. In order to make the the best of the emergency situation it is well to realize which of the regular farm operations can, to some extent, be neglected for the time being. All farmers have a choice of whether to spend a given amount of time and money for present production or as investment for some future production.

What Can Be Delayed?

The expenses and work which can best be delayed just now are those not needed for immediate production. Permanent improvements, long-time investments and the contracting of long time debts can be delayed. A few examples are suggested. Others can be added.

Building and fences must be neglected or they may be repaired during periods when labor is not needed in productive work. Land clearing and complete terracing may be delayed a few years longer. The reclaiming of fields of doubtful productivity should wait. Beautification and pride-satisfying work must be delayed. New expensive equipment should not be purchased unless it is indispensible to needed production now. Long rotations on level land may be shortened by using a good cover crop and plowing the same field two years in succession so as to save costs and labor. Save time and supplies by putting limestone, fertilizer and seeds where they will give the best results quickly. Use the present opportunity to pay debts and build up a better financial reserve for doing a more complete job later.

What Cannot Be Delayed?

There are some tasks that must be done, even if others have to wait. They include the operations which are vital right now to the increased production, saving of labor and saving of materials needed for military defense. Again a few suggestions are listed. Others can be added.

Machinery must be kept repaired. Farm and community blacksmith shops may become a necessity. High crop production must be maintained by: cover crops used, all manure, tobacco stalks, etc. carefully saved and used; fertilizer and limestone used where needed, now; pastures improved and carefully used; and high quality seeds used. Livestock production must be increased by: better feeding and management practices; maintaining the productive animals; increased feed production including ample winter pastures; and disposal of non-productive animals including unnecessary horse stock.

War Hero Coming to Kentucky Farm and Home Meeting.

Sergeant Alvin C. York of Tennessee, a hero of the first World War, will be one of the speakers at the annual Farm and Home Convention at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics January 26-29. He will speak at the men's session and also at the meeting for homemakers.

Other speakers will include Roy Hendrickson of Washington, administrator of the Agricultural Marketing Administration, and Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Discussions of the food and labor situations will feature the convention. Because of the labor situation, more women will go into the fields and otherwise help with the farm work next year. Women, therefore, will be interested in quicker and easier methods of running the house, preparing the meals, sewing and cleaning.

Plans now under consideration include the use of town boys on farms, and town girls to take the place of women who will be working outside the home.

The general theme of the conventions will be the part which Kentucky farmers and farm women are taking in the war.

SUGAR CREEK

We take this opportunity to extend Christmas Greetings to the Advertiser and it's many readers, and may our New Year be a victorious and Happy one.

Robert Clifton, Heber Story and George Spencer delivered their tobacco crop to the Carrollton Market Saturday.

Mrs. Polly Baldwin, of Glencoe is staying with Mrs. Lucy Ryle who is very ill.

Charles Miskell, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. John Clifton, was inductd into the U. S. Army last week and is still stationed at Ft. Thomas at the present time. Charles is a fine young man and we're sure he will serve his country bravely and faithfully. We are very proud of our local boys who are now serving in the armed forces and our sincere hope is that they will return safely.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Powell of Covington spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Shelton.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Henry Ellis received a letter from their son Frank, who is in the Navy. To friends who would like to send him a card, his address is as follows: Frank Lee Ellis, 9th Bat, Co. 1850, U. S. N. T. S. Great Lakes, Illinois.

Jack Story has been assigned to duty on a Destroyer and was at Boston, Mass., at last communication.

No word nas been received from Dallas Wallick E. M. 2-c, for quite some time. However we feel that he is safe, but is probably on some secret active duty and cannot write due to circumstances.

Mr. and Mrs. Karsner of Covington spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Wallick.

Mr. David T. Clifton spent Wednesday night with his sister Mrs. Raymond Miller of Dry Creek.

Miss Roberta Clifton spent Tuesday night and Wednesday with the Miskell sisters at Glencoe.

THIS YEAR OF 1942 has been one of world tribulation, but nevertheless, many good things have come our way. Chief among them is your continued patronage, for which we thank you very earnestly now, and wish you a very

As Christmas times is drawing near
We miss you more each year
Seven long years this Christmas day
Since we layed you away
Our thoughts are sad as Christmas comes
Our hearts heavy yet with grief
We miss you more each year
A loving mother like we had.
We miss your smiles, your dear old face
That greeted us each morn
Tis like the sun gone from our lives
And left us alone.
While Christmas bells ring out
Good will to men on earth
There is a memory always dear
Of one whose love we valued more
With each succeeding year.

Making Plans For 1943—
Time To Take Farm Inventory.
—Farm Records Needed
More Than Ever.

The keeping of farm records in 1942 will be of much help to farmers in making our returns and to supply other needed information.

In 1943 farm records will be needed more than ever to supply information and to keep a record of the receipts and expenses incurred in carrying on the farming operation.

The Farm Management Department of the College of Agriculture University of Ky. have prepared a farm account book which is being used by many farmers in the county. A number of farmers are already getting copies for keeping their records for the coming year. When you close your 1942 book, it is a good plan to have a new book and begin the years records for the coming year.

The Ky. Farm Account book can be obtained from your County Agricultural Agent at a small charge to cover printing cost.

Use Egg Profits to Remodel House.

With the income from a large flock of chickens, Mrs. Tom Rowland and family of Simpson county have been able to remodel their 80-year-old home. They began by changing a hallway into a bedroom for the two children. Then they made a door into a window, and on either side built a clothes closet. Paint and paper were purchased not only for this room but others as well.

To make a too-small kitchen and a too-large dining room of better proportions, the partition between the two rooms was moved, making the kitchen larger, lighter and better ventilation. A re-arrangement of equipment and furniture made an efficient, step-saving kitchen.

With all the remodeling, Mrs. Rowland and her family have bought a number of war bonds.

Kentucky Girls Win in National Contest.

National 4-H club winners in the Sears Roebuck garden and canning contest include three Kentucky girls. They are Marjorie Binder of Latonia, Beverly Hines of Paducah, and Willa Dean Rose of Lexington. Miss Hines received a war bond for $50, and Miss Binder and Miss Rose for $25 each.

Awards were made at the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago.

All three participants had previously won $25 bonds in the state garden and canning contest. Ninety-five 4-H club girls from four counties in the state took part.

Disillusioned Santa Reveals Everything In Last Appearance

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—"I'm tired now. In fact, every year around this time I'm very tired." That is what Santa Claus (a professional one though, for the real one doesn't ever get tired) had to say recently as he was taking off his red and white suit, preparatory to going home.

As he pulled off his white whiskers wearily, he continued: "Besides, this business of being a jolly old fellow is highly seasonal work. Just a couple of weeks' work in December, then something over 11 months' vacation. It is a good thing I am an electrician. I'd possibly starve to death." (The kids should have heard such heresy!)

A few seconds followed while he put on his dark green knit tie before he continued his slightly weary talk: "It was all right at first and the pay was good—$4 for a party appearance or a club or a lodge. Or $2 for a private home call. But I guess I can't take it anymore. Anyhow, the kids won't miss me. (Imagine that, the kids not missing Santa Claus!)

Comes next year there will be one ex-Santa who isn't filling stockings, and putting presents under trees, or telling pop to take it easy with son's electric train. That retired Santa will be just sitting in his own home—not, definitely not, at the North Pole—listening to the Christmas carols on the radio, and wiggling his toes. For his shoes will be off.

Christmas Stories Revealed by History

Fortunately, the "idea" in the minds of some to tell the truth to the kiddies—that there isn't a Santa Claus—isn't catching on as well as they hoped.

Everybody—and this includes the kids—enjoys a good story, especially around the Christmas season.

Down through the years have come many beautiful stories, jammed with the kindness of the best in humanity. It is from such stories that many of our Christmas customs have come. For the observance of such customs the United States is indebted to many lands. Palestine, Egypt, Turkey, Italy, Germany, England and Holland all have done their bit to contribute to our added enjoyment of Christmas customs and traditions. To the Holy Land, more than any other, all civilization is indebted for the matchless history of the Christ child.

One writer who has investigated the observance of the birth of the Christ Child has noticed one curious fact. That is, Christmas was not among the earliest festivals of the church. Irenaeus and Tertullian, early church fathers, omitted it from the list of feasts. According to what Origen noticed in the Bible, only sinners, not saints, celebrated their birthday.

It was in the year 200 A. D. that evidence of the feast of Christmas was first noted. This was in Egypt. And it wasn't until years afterwards that December 25 was decided upon as being the date for the celebration of Christ's birthday. During that time Christmas was celebrated on various days, one of the dates being as late as May 20. Eight hundred years after the first feast of Christmas, church authorities used the term Christes Maessi, from which comes the English word Christmas. This was in 1038.

Ancient Yule Customs Still Live in England

Many ancient customs prevail in England at Christmas, according to present day records. One custom that goes back to Saxon times is still observed at Okehampton, Devon. Here a "market" is held the Sunday after Christmas at which a man may speak to or kiss any girl who takes his fancy. Mistletoe definitely is not necessary.

In the village of Cam on the day after Christmas the poor are again remembered. For, according to the will of Margaret Trotman, one of Cam's former citizens, any parishioner is entitled to the gift of a loaf of bread. Also, the first 50 widows who apply are given money.

Chinese Copy Custom

Chinese children start Christmas day by folding their hands on arising and wishing each other a good day before opening a single gift. The Chinese have adopted American Christmas customs.

To all our old friends and acquaintances, and also to the many fine new ones we have made during 1942, we send sincere Christmas greetings and the wish that the holidays will be as happy as possible.

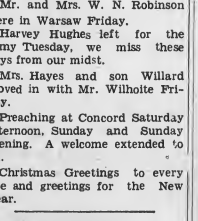
All Kentucky Youth to Have Opportunity to Help Win the War.

Every rural boy and girl in Kentucky will have an opportunity to do something definite in helping to win the war according to plans underway at the State College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Already 48,000 4-H club boys and girls living on farms are engaged in producing and conserving food for our armed forces and those of our allies. But many more are needed.



Now all non-rural boys and girls those who do not live on farms, will also be given the chance to enlist in the campaign for the production of more food, and in this way to become full-fledged 4-H club members.

If a boy or girl is not so situated that he can actually raise a garden and livestock, he can by doing 150 hours of labor on the farm home earn the coveted badge of 4-H club membership.

It is estimated that a total of 200,000 boys and girls from 10 to 20 years of age will be engaged in some form of wartime food production this year. Interest among rural and non-rural youth to help in this vital food production is high. For example, in Caldwell county, the total enrollment of 4-H club members for 1943 has increased to 641, which is double that of this year, and more neighborhoods are yet to be heard from.

Boys and girls enlisting in the campaign may take part in as many types of work as they are able to carry. The plan is to have quanity production. A garden which will feed at least three people, poultry for the production of eggs and meat for both home and market, and the production of corn, seed hemp, castor beans, hogs, beef cattle and dairy cattle and sheep are war-time projects to receive major emphasis.

Of special interest to girls will be the selection and preparation of foods, home baking, school lunches, and the growing, canning and storing of garden products. Making, mending, washing and storing of clothing will also be stressed.

Roving Reporter Checks Oldest Christmas Gifts

In Chicago, a roving reporter for a daily newspaper was given the assignment to go out and ask various persons what were the oldest presents they had saved from past Christmas holidays.

What he learned from a young musician was that when he was 12 years old his parents gave him a red, white and blue decorated snare drum. That very drum started him on his professional music career. The musician said it was more than "just a gift" for it had influenced his whole life.

Then the roving reporter asked a housewife what gift she had saved from her early days. She replied that it was a doll given by her mother. Since her mother is dead, she keeps it in her memory for it has great sentimental value.

Another woman, a "collection correspondent," told the reporter that when she was eight years old an aunt gave her a doll. She, too, as a fitting remembrance of her aunt, has kept the doll even though little of the original remains, having had to replace its head and clothes. It still retains its charm, she said.

Another young man, a cutter by trade, was stopped and asked what he had saved. He said that the Christmas following the death of his mother, his father gave him her ring. He had it made over to fit his finger and has worn it ever since. He has hopes of passing it on to a child of his own.

Gay Christmas Plants Will Appeal to Mother

Here is a suggestion for the young men and ladies, around 10 or 15, who have been saving their money for mother's Christmas present, yet don't know what to get for her: Get her a Christmas plant!

She'll enjoy it as much as any of the many others. Of all the Christmas plants, the one which truly reflects the season of the year (almost as much as the Christmas tree) is the poinsettia. This red-leafed plant has a soft, yet forceful, beauty to it that has, as yet, failed to attract the eye of those who are susceptible to any form of color.

Other red flowers are popular, too, but not as easily obtainable as the pleasant poinsettia. There is the Jerusalem cherry, the red cyclamen.

If you do purchase mother a poinsettia set it in an attractive colored pot (wrap it in colored Christmas paper) and tie a little red ribbon with a bow on it. That will put the "finishing touch" to a Christmas gift that is different.

Here Is a Festive Hard Sauce to Go With Yule Pudding

Even the tasty hard sauce now comes to the table in a gala dress. For instance here are these holiday hard sauce pinwheels to serve with your favorite steamed pudding.

Hard Sauce Pinwheels.

¼ cup butter
1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
½ tablespoon cream
2 teaspoons orange juice
½ teaspoon grated orange rind
Orange food coloring

Cream butter until soft and gradually beat in sugar. Divide mixture in half and add cream and grated lemon rind to one portion and the orange juice and rind to the other portion. Add food coloring to orange flavored portion to tint a delicate orange. Spread lemon flavored portion on a cold damp cloth and spread orange mixture over it. Roll as for jelly roll and place in refrigerator. When hard, cut in slices and serve with steamed puddings or mince pie.

Not Santa, but 'Nisson' Visits Danish Children

The Danish children do not have a Santa Claus, but instead a Christmas brownie, called "Nisson," a little old man with a long, gray beard who supposedly lives under the ground.

The chief features of a Danish Christmas dinner are roast goose, rice and apple fritters.

When the storks have left their nests in autumn, boatloads of coarse brown crockery in the shape of little pigs, with a slit in the back, are brought to Denmark and bought by the children. They are savings banks into which the children drop their pennies. The image is not broken till Christmas time.

A LETTER FROM ONE OF OUR BOYS IN THE ARMY

The following article was written by Corpal Franklin Lipscomb, 877 Caml. Co. Air Operation Barksdale Field, Shireveport, La. U. S. Army. This letter was received by Mr. Linton local barber in Walton, Mr. Linton writes to several of the boys in the army and gives all soldier boys no matter who they are free haircuts, shaves and etc. in his shop.

We wonder why America has to be pulled into another war and the shinning light of civilization be dimed by the blood thursty Barbarions who would like to rule the civilized parts of Europe, Asia, and the Americas.

We wonder why our sons have to leave their happy homes to the call of arms and once again develop the iron clad determination to put down those barbarious nations who desire to inslave our people and destroy an intellegent way of living. To destroy Democracy and inject into the viens of our Government the filthy vermin of dictators.

America there is only one answer for this, you are destroying the Christianity which our forefathers gave their lives, suffered hardships and heartaches to bring to us. We are supposed to be a Christian Nation but we have grown rather weak in Christ and I as other people who try to live Christian lives hope our Nation wakes up and comes to the realization that our President, State Governments nor National Governments cannot do their best if we are not behind them 100% with our prayers.

We can sacrifice food and clothing, give every piece of scrap we can find, but if we leave God out we have failed.

America have you stopped in your swift movements of evil and thought just for a moment that God could be doing this to wake our nation up?, to bring them to their knees in prayer and thanksgiving for having a country as great as this one?

America your sons and our Country I believe, has this evil disaster visited upon us because we have lived worldly too long and have forgotten Christ completely.

For the past 15 years you can notice very easily that our churches have been rather empty. The majority of the people were leading fast lives. The road houses and liquor joints were filled not only with our young men but young women too. A Christian Nation does not live in the scum and filth of the devil.

We must remember that the word of God tells us to raise a child up in the way he is to go and when he is old he will not depart there from. Have you raised your son in a Christian way? You are making the sacrifice maybe because Satin has won your heart.

Let us as one combined organization of recooperated Christians rise up against the devil and his workers in the name of God and shortly have peace again. Don't work for Satin, you can see the evils of hell being demonstrated by the dictators now.

Give your scrap, buy all the bonds you possibly can and for the sake of freedom and civilization come to your knees in prayer. It may protect and give strength to your son to carry on his part in a heroic way.

At a recent meeting of the Dorcas Class held in honor of Mrs. Susie Norman's birthday the following poem was written and given by Mrs. Mollie Chapman:

MY TEACHER

I have a friend she's so good and true
I'm sure all who know her will say so too
She is the teacher of the Dorcas Class
And has been for many years past
I try to be early but sometimes I'm late
But she always greets me with a smile on her face
She teaches the word, the plain gospel truth
She lives it each day and has from her youth
She is patient and thoughtful for those living in sin,
And she tries so earnestly their souls to win
Her father before her was a servant of God,
His soul stirring messages will live on and on
When he was my pastor little did I think then
His daughter would be my teacher and friend
But we come today to this meeting
To say to her "birthday greetings"
We cannot and we will not say she's any older
She's just a brave little soldier
With a youthful spirit of heart and mind
"Happy Birthday dear teacher and friend of mine."

Eastern Kentucky Gives Men, Women to Serve Country.

Eastern Kentucky is contributing men and women to the armed services and to war production in large numbers, according to a survey now being conducted by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station in collaboration with the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. The population of a typical magisterial district in Owsley county has declined 31 percent since the U. S. Census was taken in 1940. The population of another typical district in Carter county has declined 26 percent. These declines are accounted for by movement of young men into fighting units, and of both men and women into war industries.

Most of the population decline in these agricultural areas has been in ages under 45. For example in the Owsley county district the number of men between 35 and 45 declined 23 percent; the number between 25 and 35 declined 63 percent, and the number between 15 to 25 dropped 65 percent. Even the number of women 25 to 34 had declined by one-third and the number 15 to 24 by one-half. The corresponding losses in the Carter county area are approximately the same as those in Owsley county.

In both areas, a reduction of nearly 30 percent in the number of children under 15 years old reflects the outward migration of many family groups in which the parents are under the age of 40. Representatives of the Experiment Station say that these figures indicate possibly the largest outward flow of population from some of the agricultural areas in Eastern Kentucky since the area was settled many generations ago.

The study is being conducted also in representative districts of Leslie, Pulaski and Martin counties, as part of an effort to appraise the manpower resources in Kentucky.

"Here is the living tree with no stain of blood upon it, that shall be the sign of your new worship. Let us call it the tree of the Christ Child. You shall go no more into the shadows of the forest to keep your secret rites of shame. You shall keep them at home with laughter and song and rites of love."

This is a statement attributed to St. Boniface, the English-born apostle of Germany who had saved a young child from sacrifice in the early days when Thor was worshipped by the Germanic peoples. The tree the Saint referred to was a young fir, growing nearby.

Such is just one of the many stories connected with the origin of the Christmas tree. The origin of the Christmas tree custom is obscure, notes Dr. Donald Bond, instructor in English at the University of Chicago, for he can quote authorities claiming the Christmas tree's origin in France, Scandinavia, Egypt, England and also Germany.

Only one of all the legends connects the Christ Child with the Christmas tree. This story goes back to the manger at Bethlehem where trees from all over the world had come to do honor to the new born babe. Very little attention was paid to the diminutive fir by the other more beautiful, statelier, and majestic trees. Suddenly, though, star upon star fell upon the little fir until it shone with all the brilliance of heavenly light.

A Scandinavian tale of woe traces the Christmas tree to that land. Two star-crossed, unhappy lovers dramatically died. From the spot where they died, it is related, a tree grew which on Christmas night gleamed with brilliant lights.

German immigrants to the United States in 1843 are said to have introduced the decorated Christmas tree. According to claims of historians, the practice of decorating the tree at Christmas time originated in Alsace in 1605. At that time the natives brought fir trees into their homes and decorated them with homemade decorations and sweets.

Despite the origin of the Yuletide tree, the sale of trees has developed into an extensive, profitable business. Likewise, tree furnishings become an enormous business in itself. From records available, it has been learned that over 111,000,000 electric Christmas tree bulbs were sold in America every year. Possibly the amount will not be as large this year as last, but you can be sure that Americans will have their Christmas tree with decorations and lights on them.

CHRISTMAS QUIZ

1. Where do children receive Christmas gifts from a camel?

2. What famous Christmas character originated in America?

3. If you want a Christmas tree that drops its needles early, what kind would you select?

4. What important event took place on Christmas day almost two thousand years ago?

5. When was Christmas proclaimed a national holiday?

6. Where did the early Christians obtain their Christmas trees?

7. What is the most widely known Christmas story ever written?

ANSWERS
To Christmas Quiz

1. Syria. The youngest of the three camels bearing the Wise Men distributes the gifts.

2. Santa Claus. The Dutch brought St. Nicholas (Sint Niklass) to America where he was gradually transformed into Santa Claus.

3. Spruce. The Fir holds its needles the longest.

4. Christ was born.

5. There are no "national holidays" in the United States. The Federal government proclaims holidays only for federal employees.

6. Early Christians didn't have any. Christmas trees weren't used generally until the 16th century.

7. With the exception of the Bible accounts of the birth of Christ, Dickens' "Christmas Carol" is the most widely known Christmas story.

OH, SANTA!
Christmas Stockings Once Feminine Trick

Christmas just wouldn't be Christmas to American boys and girls without a visit from St. Nick.

According to history, St. Nicholas in real life was the Archbishop of Myra and lived during the Fourth century. In the Middle Ages, he makes his first traditional appearance in the legends of the Northland.

One legend concerns St. Nicholas eve, which originally was celebrated on the sixth of December. Young ladies, it seems, would hang up their stockings in hopes that St. Nicholas would fill them with dowries. After a time, St. Nick and the stocking-hanging custom was incorporated into the celebration of Christmas.

Another legend says that on Christmas eve the spirit of St. Nicholas rode across the land on a great white horse followed by the hosts of innocents slain in Bethlehem by the order of Herod. Children of the Northland filled their wooden shoes with oats for the Saint's horse and set them outside of the door; in the morning, providing the children had been good, the oats were gone and the shoes were filled with nuts and apples.

Eventually, the boys and younger children, the wives and husbands, and even the grandparents, decided the girls were getting too much the best of things; so, they all joined the International Society of Stocking-hangers.

Our ancestors brought St. Nick to America, where he has grown round and fat and jovial, traded his great white horse for eight magic reindeer, and his pack bulged bigger and bigger.

This year Santa's pack may be minus a few luxury products and mechanical gadgets, but that doesn't matter as long as there are mamma dolls, sleds and drums and picture books, toys for the children.

For the Soldier

Are you wondering what to send to your friends and members of your family who are serving with the armed forces? A lot depends on where they are stationed. But there are some things all service men want, and here they are:

House slippers	Tooth brushes
Wrist watches	Tooth paste
Handkerchiefs	Sewing kits
Pocket knives	Clothes brushes
Scrap books	Metal polish
Tan shoe polish	Fountain pens
Nail files	Postage stamps
Soap	Lighters

Dear Santa: Bring Present, or Else . . .

Among the thousands of letters addressed to Santa which never get to North Pole, one—showing faith in Santa's kindliness—was mailed by a youngster in Brooklyn.

The young one's name was Mike. He definitely didn't want Santa Claus to miss him. From his associations with the neighborhood gang, Mike thought he knew how to get results.

He sat down and with pen and ink wrote a letter to the white-bearded old fellow. After listing the toys he wanted, he added: "You better bring all this stuff or I'll beat you to a wood pulp."

Intimidation is not so good. But do you think Mike got what he wanted?

Lesson

Across the expanse of the centuries comes this lesson of Christmas: "Peace on earth to men of good will."

Tobacco Seed to Bear State Tag.

The Kentucky Legislature, at its regular 1942 session, passed an amendment to the Kentucky Pure Seed Law which requires the tagging of tobacco seed sold in quantities of one-fourth of an ounce or more with the official Kentucky tag. Certified seed, however, may carry, in lieu of the Official Kentucky tag the seal of the Kentucky Seed Improvement Association.

Farmer to farmer sales, where the seed is not advertised and is not delivered off the premises by the grower, is exempt from the provisions of the amended law.

Doubles Yield of Corn in Two Years.

How W. H. Coke of Todd county almost doubled his corn yield in two years is told by County Agent Stuart Brabant.

In 1939, Mr. Coke bought a field adjoining his farm which had grown up in bushes. The following spring he plowed and fertilized it, then planted Ky.39B hybrid, which made 25 bushels to the acre. He disked the corn down that fall, and applied two tons of lime and 200 pounds of 47 percent phosphate per acre. Then he sowed the field in barley.

In the spring of 1941, he sowed the field in sweet and alsike clover and in May of this year turned it without apply more fertilizer. Planted to U. S. 13 hybrid corn, he got 45 bushels to the acre.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Ninety-one percent of the members of homemakers' clubs in Campbell county report using enriched flour for all their baking.

Brown Redford of Laure county grew 34 varieties of vegetables in his fifth-of-an-acre garden this summer.

The use of hybrid corn in Livingston county has increased approximately 25 percent this year.

The plant-a-tree campaign started by homemakers' clubs in Oldham county resulted in 175 trees being set out in November.

Approximately $100.00 worth of war bonds were sold in Franklin county on victory pig day.

Due to unusually bad weather in Lincoln county, it is estimated that one-third o fthe hemp seed crop was lost.

Christmas Greetings
TO ALL OUR FRIENDS

IN times like these, friendliness and neighborliness take on a new and deeper meaning. We are all drawn closer together and we realize anew that cordial and mutually helpful relations with our fellow men have a value far above material things.

It is with this thought in mind that we extend our thanks to you, not only for your patronage, but for the friendship and courtesy you have shown us. We have enjoyed the privilege of serving you and we hope we have done it well.

Our warmest best wishes go out to you and yours this Christmas season and in our hearts is the hope we know finds an echo in yours—that 1943 will be the year of final victory and that "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men" will again be restored to the world.
